I do refer me to the oracle:
Apollo be my judge.

1 Lord. This your request
Is altogether just. Therefore, bring forth,
And in Apollo's name, his oracle. [Exeunt Officers.
Her. The emperor of Russia was my father:
O! that he were alive, and here beholding
His daughter's trial; that he did but see
The flatness of my misery, yet with eyes
Of pity, not revenge!

Re-enter Officers, with Cleomenes and Dion.
Offi. You here shall swear upon this sword of justice
That you, Cleomenes and Dion, have Been both at Delphos; and from thence have brought
This seal'd-up oracle, by the hand deliver'd
Of great Apollo's priest; and that, since then,
You have not darr'd to break the holy seal,
Nor read the secrets in't.

Cleo. Dion. All this we swear.
Leon. Break up the seals, and read.

Offi. [Reads.] "Hermione is chaste, Polixenes blame-less,
Camillo a true subject, Leontes a jealous tyrant, his innocent babe truly begotten; and the king shall live without an heir, if that which is lost be not found."

Lords. Now, blessed be the great Apollo!

Her. Praise!

Leon. Hast thou read truth?

Offi. Ay, my lord; even so
As it is here set down.

Leon. There is no truth at all in the oracle.
The sessions shall proceed: this is mere falsehood.

Enter a Servant, in haste.
Serv. My lord the king, the king!

Leon. What is the business?

Serv. O sir! I shall be hated to report it:
The prince your son, with mere conceit and fear
Of the queen's speed, is gone.

Leon. How! gone?

Serv. Is dead. [Hermione returns.
Leon. Apollo's angry, and the heavens themselves
Do strike at my injustice. How now there!

Paul. This news is mortal to the queen.—Look down,
And see what death is doing.

Leon. Take her hence:
Her heart is but o'ercharg'd; she will recover.—
I have too much belief'd mine own suspicion:—
Beescuch you, tenderly apply to her
Some remedies for life.—Apollo, pardon
[Exeunt Paulina and Ladies, with Hermione.
My great proclamations against thine oracle!—
I'll reconcile me to Polixenes,
Now woo my queen, recall the good Camillo,
Whom I proclaim a man of truth, of mercy;
For, being transported by my jealousies
To bloody thoughts and to revenge, I chose
Camillo for the minister, to poison
My friend Polixenes: which had been done,
But that the good mind of Camillo tardied
My swift command; though I with death, and with Reward, did threaten and encourage him,
Not doing it, and being done: he, most humane,
And fill'd with honour, to my kingly guest
Paul. Woe the while! O, cut my lace, lest my heart, cracking it, Break too!
1 Lord. What fit is this, good lady?
Paul. What studied torments, tyrant, hast for me?
In lead, or oil? what old, or newer torture
Must I receive, whose every word deserves
To taste of thy most worst? Thy tyrannous,
Together working with thy jealousies,—
Fancies too weak for boys, too green and idle
For girls of nine. — O! think, what they have done,
And then run mad, indeed; stark mad, for all
Thy by-gone foolishities were but spices of it.
That thou betray'dst Polixenes, 't was nothing;
That did but show thee of a fool, inconstant,
And damnable ungrateful: nor was 't much,
Thou wouldst have poison'd good Camillo's honour,
To have him kill a king; poor trespasses,
More monstrous standing by! wherefore I reckon
The casting forth to crow's thy baby daughter,
To be or none, or little; though a devil
Would have sted water out of fire, ere don't:
Nor is 't directly laid to thee, the death
Of the young prince, whose honourable thoughts
(Thoughts high for one so tender) cleft the heart
That could conceive a gross and foolish sire
Blemish'd his gracious dam: this is not, no,
Laid to thy answer: but the last,—O, lords!
When I have said, cry, woe! — the queen, the queen.
The sweetest, dearest creature's dead; and vengeance
for 't
Not dropp'd down yet.
1 Lord. The higher powers forbid!
Paul. Say, she's dead; I'll swear 't; if word, nor oath,
Prevail not, go and see. If you can bring
Tinure, or lustre, in her lip, her eye,
Heat outwardly, or breath within, I'll serve you
As I would do the gods.—But, O thou tyrant!
Do not repent these things, for they are heavier
Than all thy woes can stir; therefore, betake thee
To nothing but despair. A thousand knees
Ten thousand years together, naked, fasting,
Upon a barren mountain, and still winter,
In storm perpetual, could not move the gods
To look that way thou wert.
Leon. Go on; go on;
Thou canst not speak too much: I have deserv'd
All tongues to talk their bitterest
1 Lord. Say no more:
How'er the business goes, you have made fault
I the boldness of your speech.
Paul. I am sorry for 't:
All faults I make, when I shall come to know them,
I do repent. Alas! I have show'd too much
The rashness of a woman. He is touch'd
To the noble heart.—What's gone, and what's past help,
Should be past grief: do not receive affliction
At repetition, I beseech you; rather,
Let me be punish'd, that have minded you
Of what you should forget. Now, good my liege
Sir, royal sir, forgive a foolish woman.
The love I bore your queen,—io, fool again!
I'll speak of her no more, nor of your children,
I'll not remember you of my own lord,
Who is lost too. Take your patience to you,
And I'll say nothing.
Leon. Thou didst speak but well.
When most the truth, which I receive much better
Than to be pitted of thee. Pr'ythee, bring me
To the dead bodies of my queen, and son.
One grave shall be for both: upon them shall
The causes of their death appear, unto
Our shame perpetual. Once a day I'll visit
The chapel where they lie; and tears shed there
Shall be my recreation: so long as nature
Will bear with this exercise, so long
I daily vow to use it. Come, and lead me
To these sorrows.

SCENE III.—Bohemia. A Desert Country near the Sea.

Enter Antigonus, with the Babe; and a Mariner.

Ant. Thou art perfect, then, our ship hath touch'd upon
The deserts of Bohemia?

Mar. Ay, my lord; and fear
We have landed in ill time: the skies look grimly,
And threaten present blusters. In my conscience,
The heavens with that we have in hand are angry,
And frown upon us.

Ant. Their sacred wills be done!—Go, get aboard;
Look to thy bark: I'll not be long, before
I call upon thee.

Mar. Make thy best haste, and go not Too far i' the land: it's like to be loud weather:
Besides, this place is famous for the creatures
Of prey that keep upon't.

Ant. I'll follow instantly.

Mar. I am glad at heart
To be so rid o' the business.

[Exit Ant.] Come, poor babe:—
I have heard, (but not believ'd) the spirits of the dead
May walk again: if such thing be, thy mother
Appear'd to me last night, for ne'er was dream
So like a waking. To me comes a creature,
Sometimes her head on one side, some another;
I never saw a vessel of like sorrow,
So fill'd, and so o'er-running: in pure white robes,
Like very sanctity, she did approach
My cabin where I lay, thrice bow'd before me,
And, gasping to begin some speech, her eyes
Became two spouts: the fury spent, anon
Did this break from her.—"Good Antigonus,
"Since fate, against thy better disposition,
"Hath made thy person for the thrower-out
"Of my poor babe, according to thine oath,
"Pleads remote enough are in Bohemia,
"There wend, and leave it crying; and, for the babe
"Is counted lost for ever, Perdita
"I pr'ythee, call 't: for this ungentle business,
"Put on thee by my lord, thou ne'er shalt see
"Thy wife Paulina more?"—and so, with shrieks
She melted into air. Affrighted much,
I did in time collect myself, and thought
This was so, and no slumber. Dreams are toys
Yet for this once, yea, superstitiously,
I will be squar'd by this. I do believe,
Hermione hath suffer'd death; and that

1 my petition: in f. e. 2 becoming: in f. e. 3 weep: in f. e.
Apollo would. this being indeed the issue
Of king Polixenes, it should here be laid,
Either for life or death, upon the earth
Of its right father.—Blossom, speed thee well !

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

Enter Time, the Chorus.

Time. I, that please some, try all; both joy, and terror,
Of good and bad : that make, and unfold error,
Now take upon me, in the name of Time,
To use my wings. Impute it not a crime
To me, or my swift passage, that I slide
O'er sixteen years, and leave the growth untied
Of that wide gap; since it is in my power
To o'erthrow law, and in one self-born hour
To plant and o'erwhelm custom. Let me pass
The same. I am, ere ancientest order was Or what is now receiv'd: I witness to

The times that brought them in; so shall I do
To the freshest things now reigning, and make stale
The glittering of this present, as my tale
Now seems to it. Your patience this allowing,
I turn my glass, and give my scene such growing,
As you had slept between. Leontes leaving
Th' effects of his fond jealousies, so grieving
That he shuts up himself, imagine me,
Gentle spectators, that I now may be
In fair Bohemia; and remember well,
I mention'd a son of the king's, which Florizel
I now name to you; and with speed so pace
To speak of Perdita, now grown in grace

Description 1. Swallowed ships as drinkers swallow flasks and grog—small substances floating on liquor, which were swallowed born a—
SCENE II.—The Same. A Room near the Shepherd's Cottage.

Enter Autolycus, singing.

When daffodils begin to peep,—

[1 Time]

With, heigh! the daisy over the dale,—

Why, then comes in the sweet of the year;

For the red blood reigns in the winter's pale.

The white sheet bleaching on the hedge,—

With, heigh! the sweet birds, O, how they sing!—

Doth set my priggings' tooth on edge;

For a quart of ale is a dish for a king.

The lark, that tirra-lirra chants,—

With heigh! with heigh! the thrush and the jay.

Are summer songs for me and my aunts,

While we lie tumbling in the hay.

I have served prince Florizel, and, in my time, wore three-pile*, but now I am out of service:

But shall I go mourn for that, my dear? [2 Time,]

The pale moon shines by night;

And when I wander here and there,

I then do must go right.

If tinkers may have leave to live,

And bear the sous-skin burden,

Then my account I well may give,

And in the stocks avouch it.

My traffic is sheets: when the kite builds, look to lesser linen. My father named me Autolycus; who, being, as I am, littered under Mercury, was likewise a snapper-up of unconsidered trifles. With die and drab, I purchased this caparison, and my revenue is the silly cheat. Gallows, and knock, are too powerful on the highway: beating, and hanging, are terrors to me: for the lie to come, I sleep out the thought of it.

*Enter Clown.

Clo. Let me see:—Every 'leven wether told's: every tod yields—pound and odd shilling; fifteen hundred shorn, what comes the worth of it?*

Aut. [Aside.] If the springe hold, the cock's mine. Clo. I cannot do without counters—Let me see: what am I to buy for our sheep-shearing feast? “Three pound of sugar; five pound of currants; rice.”—What will this sister of mine do with riez? But my father hath made her mistress of the feast, and she lays it on. She hath made me four-and-twenty nosegay for the shearsers; three-man song-men all, and very good ones, but they are most of them means and bases: but one Puritan amongst them, and he sings psalms to hornpipes. I must have saffron, to colour the warden's pies; mace,—dates, none; that's out of my note: "nutmegs, seven: a race or two of ginger": but that I may beg:—"four pound of prunes, and as many of raisins of the sun."

Aut. O, that ever I was born!

Groveling on the ground.

Clo. I' the name of me!—

Aut. O, help me, help me! pluck but off these rags and them, death, death! Clo. Alack, poor soul! thou hast need of more rags to lay on thee, rather than have these off.

Aut. O, sir! the loathsomeness of them offends me more than the stripes I have received, which are mighty ones, and millions.

Clo. Alas, poor man! a million of heating may come to a great matter.

*smelling in f. o. *Not in f. e. * priggings in f. e. * Fine select. * * Not in f. e. * A red in twenty-eight pounds of woo

* Singers of songs for three voices. * A large, hard pear.
SCENE III.—The Same. A Shepherd's Cottage.

Enter Florizel and Perdita.

Flö. These, your unusual weeds, to each part of you
Do give a life: no shepherdess, but Flora
Peering in April's front. This, your sheep-shearing,
Is as a meeting of the petty gods,
And you the queen on't.

Per. Sir, my gracious lord,
To chide at your extremities it not becomes me;
O! pardon, that I name them: your high self,
The gracious mark of the land, you have obscure d
With a swain's wearing, and me, poor lowly maid.
Most goddess-like prank'd up. But that our feasts
In every mess have jolly, and the feeders
Digest it with a custom, I should blush
To see you so attir'd, so worn, I think,
To show myself a glass.

Flö. I bless the time,
When my good falcon made her flight across
Thy father's ground.

Per. Now, Jove afford you cause!
To me the difference forgos dread; your greatness
Hath not been us'd to fear. Even now I tremble
To think your father, by some accident,
Should pass this way, as you did. O, the fates!
How would he look, to see his work, so noble,
Vilify bound up? What would he say? Or how Should I, in these my borrowed flamis, behold
The sternness of his presence?

Flö. Apprehend
Nothing but jollity. The gods themselves,
Humbling their deities to love, have taken
The shapes of beasts upon them: Jupiter
Became a bull, and bellow'd: the green Neptune
A ram, and bleated; and the fire-robb'd god,
Golden Apollo, a poor humble swain,
As I seem now. Their transformations
Were never for a piece of beauty rarer,
Nor any way so chaste; since my desires
Run not before mine honour, nor my lusts
Burn hotter than my faith.

Per. O! but, sir,
Your resolution cannot hold, when 'tis
Oppos'd, as it must be, by the power of the king.
One of these two must be necessities,
Which then will speak—that you must change this purpose,
Or my life.

Flö. Thou nearest Perdita,
With these fore'd thoughts, I pr'ythee, darken not
The mirth o' the feast: or I'll be thine, my fair,
Or not my father's; for I cannot be Mine own, nor any thing to any, if
I be not thine: to this I am most constant,
Though destiny say, no. Be merry, girl;
Strangle such thoughts as these with any thing
That you behold the while. Your guests are coming
Lift up your countenance, as 'twere the day
Of celebration of that nuptial, which
We two have sworn shall come.

Per. O, lady fortune.
Stand you auspicious!

Enter Shepherd, with Polixenes and Camillo, disguised; Clown, Mops, Dorcas, and others.

Flö. See, your guests approach:
Address yourself to entertain them sprightly,
And let's be red with mirth.
Scene III.

The Winter's Tale.

Shep. Fie, daughter! when my old wife liv'd, upon
This day she was both panter, butler, cook;
Both dame and servant; welcome all; serve all;
Would sing her song, and dance her turn; now here.
At upper end o' the table, now, it the middle,
On his shoulder, and his; her face o' fire.
With labour, and the thing she took to quench it,
She would to each one sip. You are retir'd,
As if you were a feasted one, and not
The hostess of the meeting: pray you, bid
These unknown friends to's welcome: for it is
A way to make us better friends. more known.
Come; quench your blusses, and present yourself
That which you are, mistress o' the feast: come on,
And bid us welcome to your sheep-shearing,
As your good flock shall prosper.

Per. [To Pol.] Sir, welcome.
It is my father's will. I should take on me
The hostess-ship o' the day:—[To Cam.] You're welcome, sir.—
Give me those flowers there, Dorcas.—Reverend sirs,
For you there's rosemary, and me; these keep Seeming and savour all the winter long:
Grace, and remembrance, be to you both,
And welcome to our shearing!

Pol. Shepherdess,
A fair one are you well you fit our ages
With flowers of winter.

Per. Sir, the year growing ancient,—
Not yet on summer's death, nor on the birth
Of trembling winter,—the fairest flowers o' the season
Are our carnations, and streak'd gillyflowers;
Which some call nature's bastards: of that kind
Our rustic garden's barren, and I care not
To get slips of them.

Pol. Wherefore, gentle maiden,
Do you neglect them?

Per. For I have heard it said,
There is an art which, in their pithness, shares
With great creating nature.

Pol. Say, there be;
Yet nature is made better by no mean,
But nature makes that mean: so, o'er that art,
Which, you say, adds to nature, is an art
That nature makes. You see, sweet maid, we marry
A gentler scion to the wildest stock,
And make conceive a bark of baser kind
By bud of nobler race: this is an art
Which does mend nature,—change it rather; but
The art itself is nature.

Per. So it is.

Pol. Then make your garden rich in gilly-flowers,
And do not call them bastards.

Per. I'll not put
The dibble in earth to set one slip of them.
No more than, were I painted. I would wish
This youth should say, 't were well, and only therefore Desire to bred by me.—Here's flowers for you;
Hot lavender, mints, savoy, marjoram;
The marigold, that goes to bed wi' the sun,
And with him rises weeping: these are flowers
Of middle summer, and, I think, they are given
To men of middle age. You are very welcome.

Cam. I should leave grazing, were I of your flock,
And only live by gazing.

Per. Out, alas!
You'd be so lean, that blasts of January
Would blow you through and through.—Now, my fair'rt friend,

I would, I had some flowers 't the spring, that might Become your time of day; and yours, and yours,
That wear upon your virgin branches yet
Your maidenheads growing:—O Proserpina!
For the flowers now, that, frightened, thou let'st fall
From Dis's waggon! daffodils,
That come before the swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty; violets dim
But sweeter than the lads of Juno's eyes,
Or Cytherea's breath; pale primroses,
That die unmarried ere they can behold
Bright Phoebus in his strength, a malady
Most incident to maid's; bold oxlips, and
The crown imperial; lilies of all kinds,
The flower-de-luce being one. O! these I lack,
To make you garlands of, and, my sweet friend,
To strew him o'er and o'er.

Flora. What! like a corse?

Per. No, like a bank, for love to lie and play on,
Not like a corse; or if,—not to be buried.
But quick, and in mine arms. Come, take your flowers
Methinks, I play as I have seen them do
In Witsun-pastorals: sure, this robe of mine
Does change my disposition.

Flora. What you do
Still better what is done. When you speak, sweet,
I'd have you do it ever: when you sing,
I'd have you buy and sell so: so give alms;
Pray so: and, for the ordering your affairs,
To sing them too. When you do dance, I wish you
A wave's the sea, that you might ever do
Nothing but that: move still, still so,
And own no other function: each your doing,
So singular in each particular,
Crowns what you are doing in the present deeds,
That all your acts are queens.

Per. O Doricles!
Your praises are too large: but that your youth,
And the true blood, which peeps so fairly through it,
Do plainly give you out an unstain'd shepherd,
With wisdom I might fear, my Doricles,
You wou'd me the false way.

Flora. I think you have
As little skill to fear, as I have purpose
To put you to 't.—But, come: our dance, I pray.
Your hand, my Perdita: so turtles pair,
That never mean to part.

Per. I'll swear for 'em.

Pol. This is the prettiest low-born lass, that ever
Ran on the green-sward: nothing she does, or says,
But smacks of something greater than herself;
Too noble for this place.

Cam. He tells her something.

That makes her blood:—look on it. Good sooth, she is
The queen of curds and cream.

Clo. Come on, strike up.

Dor. Moses must be your mistress: marry, garliek,
To mend her kissing with.—

Mop. Now, in good time—

Clo Not a word, a word: we stand upon our man-ers.—

Come, strike up.

[Music

Per. Pray, good shepherd, what fair swain is this,
Which dances with your daughter?

Shep. They call him Doricles, and boasts himself
To have a worthy breeding: but I have it
Upon his own report, and I believe it:
He looks like sooth. He says, he loves my daughter
I think so too; for never gaz'd the moon
Upon the water, as he'll stand, and read.
As tw'ry, my daughter's eyes; and, to be plain,
I think, there is not half a kiss to choose,
Who loves another best.

Pol. She dances fealty.

Shr. So she does any thing, though I report it,
That should be silent. If young Doricles
Do light upon her, she shall bring him that
Which he not dreams of.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. O master! if you did but hear the pedlar at the door, you would never dance again after a tabor and pipe; no, the bagpipe could not move you. He sings several tunes faster than you'll tell money; he utters them as he had eaten ballads, and all men's ears grew to his tunes.

Clo. He could never come better: he shall come in.
I love a ballad but even too well; if it do be doltful matter, merrily set down, or a very pleasant thing indeed, and sung lamentably.

Serv. He hath songs, for man, or woman, of all sizes;
no milliner can so hit his customers with tunes. He has the prettiest love-songs for maids: so without bawdry, which is strange: with such delicate burdens of "diddles" and "fadings"; "jump her and thump her;" and where some stretch'd-mouth'd rascal would,
as it were, mischievously, and break a foul jape in the matter, he makes the maid to answer, "Whoop, do me no harm, good man;" puts him off, slights him with "Whoop, do me no harm, good man;"

Pol. This is a brave fellow.

Clo. Believe me, thou talkest of an admirable-conceived fellow. Has he any embroidered wares?

Serv. He hath rubinds of all the colours in the rainbow; points, more than all the lawyers in Bohemia can learnedly handle though they come to him by the gross: inkles, caddisses, cambrics, lavis: why he sings them over, as they were gods or goddesses. You would think a smock were a she-angel, he so chants to the sleeve-band, and the work about the square on't.

Clo. Pr'ythee, bring him in, and let him approach singing.

Per. Forewarn him, that he use no scourious words in'tunes.

Clo. You have of these pedlars, that have more in them than you'd think, sister.

Per. Ay, good brother, or go about to think.

Enter Autolycus, singing.

Lawn, as white as driven snow;
Cyprian, black as ever was crow;
Gloves, as sweet as damask roses;
Masks for faces, and for noses;
Bangle-bracelet, necklace amber,
Perfume for a lady's chamber;
Golden quills, and stomachers,
For my lady to give their dears;
Pins and poking-sticks of steel,
What would lack from head to heel.
Come, buy, my lady, come; come, buy, come, buy,
Buy, lad's, or else your lasses cry:

Clo. If I were not in love with Mopsa, thou shouldn't have no money of me; but being enthral'd as I am, it will also be the bondage of certain rubinds and gloves.

Mops. I was promised them against the feast, but they come not too late now.

Dor. He hath promised you more than that; or there be liars.

Mops. He hath paid you all he promised: you may be, he has paid you more, which will shame you to give him again.

Clo. Is there no manners left among maids? will they wear their placlets, where they should bear their faces? Is there not milking-time when you are going to bed, or kiln-hole, to whisper off these secrets, but you must be little-tattling before all our guests? 'Tis well they are whispering. Charm your tongues, and not a word more.

Mops. I have done. Come, you promised me a tawdry lace, and a pair of sweet gloves.

Clo. Have I not told thee, how I was cozened by the way, and lest all my money?

Aut. And, indeed, sir, there are cozeners abroad;
therefore, it behoves men to be wary.

Clo. Fear not thou, man, thou shalt lose nothing
here.

Aut. I hope so, sir; for I have about me many parcels of charge.

Clo. What hast here? ballads?

Mops. Pray now, buy some: I love a ballad in print d'life, for then we are sure they are true.

Aut. Here's one to a very doleful tune, How a usurer's wife was brought to bed of twenty money-bags at a burden; and how she longed to eat adders' heads, and toads carbonadod.

Mops. Is it true, think you?

Aut. Very true: and but a month old.

Dor. Bless me from marrying a usurer!

Aut. Here's the midwife's name to, one mistress Taleporer, and five or six honest wives that were present. Why should I carry lies abroad?

Mops. 'Pray you now, buy it.

Clo. Come on, lay it by; and let's first see more ballads: we'll buy the other things anon.

Aut. Here's another ballad, of a fish, that appeared upon the coast, on Wednesday the fourscore of April, fifty thousand fathom above water, and sung this ballad against the hard hearts of maids: it was thought she was a woman, and was turned into a cold fish, for she would not exchange flesh with one that loved her.
The ballad is very pitiful, and as true.

Dor. Is it true too, think you?

Aut. Five justices' hands at it, and witnesses more than my pack will hold.

Clo. Lay it by too: another.

Aut. This is a merry ballad, but a very pretty one.

Mops. Let's have some merry ones.

Aut. Why this is a passing merry one, and goes to the tune of, "Two maids wooing a man." There's scarce a maid westward but she sings it: 'tis in request, I can tell you.

Mops. We can both sing it: if thou 'lt bear a part, thou shalt hear; 'tis in three parts.

Dor. We had the tune on't a month ago.

Aut. I can bear my part; you must know, 'tis my occupation: have at it with you.

Song.

Aut. Get you hence, for I must go,
Whither fits not you to know.

Dor. Whither?

Mops. O! whither?

Dor. Whither?

Mops. It becomes thy oath full well,
Thou to me thy secrets tell.
Before this ancient sir, who, it should seem,
Hath sometimes lov'd: I take thy hand; this hand,
As soft as dove's down, and as white as it,
Or Ethiopian's tooth, or the fam'd snow, that's bolted
By the northern blasts twice o'er.

Pol.

What follows this?—

How prettily the young swain seems to wash
The hand, was fair before! —I have put you out.—

But, to your protestation: let me hear

What you profess.

Flo. Do, and be witness to't.

Pol. And this my neighbour too?

Flo. And he, and more

Than he, and men; the earth, the heavens, and all;
That were I crown'd the most imperial monarch,
Thereof most worthy; were I the fairest youth
That ever made eye swerve; had sense, and knowledge,
More than was ever man's: I would not prize them,
Without her love: for her employ them all,
Commend them, and condemn them, to her service,
Or to their own perdition.

Pol. Fairly offer'd.

Com. This shows a sound affection.

Shep. But, my daughter,

Say you the like to him?

Per. I cannot speak

So well, nothing so well; no, nor mean better:
By the pattern of mine own thoughts I cut out
The purity of his.

Shep. Take hands; a bargain: —

[Joining their hands]

And, friends unknown, you shall bear witness to't.

I give my daughter to him, and will make Her portion equal his.

Shep.

Flo. O! that must be

I' the virtue of your daughter: one being dead,
I shall have more than you can dream of yet;
Enough then for your wonder. But, come on;
Contract us 'fore these witnesses.

Shep.

Come, your hand:

And, daughter, yours.

Pol. Soft, swain, awhile, beseech you

Flo. Have you a father?

Pol. I have; but what of him?

Flo. Knows he of this?

Pol. He neither does, nor shall.

Pol. Methinks, a father

Is at the nuptial of his son a guest

That best becomes the table. Pray you, once more:
Is not your father grown incapable

Of reasonable affairs? is he not stupid

With age, and altering rheums? Can he speak? hear

Know man from man? dispose' his own estate?

Lies he not bed-ridden? and again, does nothing,
But what he did being childish?

Flo.

Ne, good sir:

He has his health, and ampler strength, indeed,
Than most have of his age.

Pol.

By my white beard,

You offer him, if this be so, a wrong

Something unlawful. Reason, my son

Should choose himself a wife; but as good reason,

The father, (all whose joy is nothing else

But fair posterity) should hold some counsel

In such a business.

Flo.

I yield all this;

But for some other reasons, my grave sir,

Which 't is not fit you know, I not acquaint
My father of this business.

Pol. Let him know't.

Flo. He shall not.

Pol.

Flo. Prythee, let him.

Pol. No, he must not.

Shep. Let him, my son; he shall not need to grieve
At knowing of thy choice.

Flo. Come, come, he must not.—Mark our contract.

Pol. Mark your divorce, young sir,

Whom son I dare not call: thou art too base
To be acknowledg'd. Thou a sycophant's heir,
That thus affect'st a sheep-hook!—Thou old traitor,
I am sorry, that by hanging thee I can
But shorten thy life one week.—And thou fresh piece
Of excellent witchcraft, who of force must know
The royal fool thou cop'st with—
Per. O, my heart!

Pol. I'll have thy beauty scratch'd with briars, and made
More homely than thy state.—For thee, fond boy,
If I may ever know, thou dost but sigh
That thou no more shalt never see this knack, (as never
I mean thou shalt) we'll bar thee from succession;
Not hold thee of our blood, nor of our kin,
Far than Ducalion off.—mark thou my words.

Follow us to the court.—Thou, churl, for this time,
Though full of our displeasure, yet we free thee
From the dead blow of it.—And you, enchantment,—
Worthy enough a herdsman; yea, him too,
That makes himself, but for our honour therein,
Unworthy thee,—if ever henceforth thou
These rural latches to his entrance open,
Or hoop his body more with thy embraces,
I will devise a death as cruel for thee,
As thou art tender to't. [Exit.

Per. Even here undone!
I was not much afraid; for once, or twice,
I was about to speak, and tell him plainly.
The self-same sun that shines upon his court,
Hides not his visage from our cottage, but Looks on alike.—Will 't please you, sir, be gone?
[To Florizel.

I told you, what would come of this. Beseech you,
Of your own state take care: this dream of mine,
Being now awake, I'll queen it no inch farther,
But milk my ewes, and weep.

Cam. Why, how now, father?

Shep. I cannot speak, nor think,
Nor dare to know that which I know.—O, sir,
[To Florizel.

You have undone a man of fourscore three,
That thought to fill his grave in quiet; yea,
To die upon the bed my father died,
To lie close by his honest bones; but now,
Some hangman must put on my shroud, and lay me
Where no priest shovels in dust.—O, curse'd wretch!

Cam. [To Perdita.

That knew'st this was the prince, and wouldst adventure
To mingle faith with him.—Undone! undone!
If I might die within this hour, I have liv'd
To die when I desire. [Exit.

Flo. Why look you so upon me?
I am but sorry, not afraid; delay'd,
But nothing alter'd. What I was, I am:
More straining on, for plucking back; not following

My leash unwillingly.

Cam. Gracious my lord,
You know your father's temper; at this time
He will allow no speech, (which, I do guess,
You do not purpose to him) and as hardly
Will he endure your sight as yet, I fear:
Then, till the fury of his highness settle,
Come not before him.

Flo. I not purpose it.

I think. Camillo?

Cam. Even he, my lord.

Per. How often have I told you 't would be thus?
How often said my dignity would last
But till 't were known?

Flo. It cannot fail, but by
The violation of my faith; and then,
Let nature crush the sides o' the earth together,
And mar the seeds within.—Lift up thy looks:—
From my succession wipe me, father; I
Am heir to my affection.

Cam. Be advis'd.

Flo. I am; and by my fancy: if my reason
Will thereto be obedient, I have reason
If not, my senses, better pleas'd with madness,
Do bid it welcome.

Cam. This is desperate, sir.

Flo. So call it; but it does fulfill my vow:
I must needs think it honesty. Camillo,
Not for Bohemia, nor the pomp that may
Be theretofore gladd'd; for all the sun sees, or
The close earth wombs, or the profound seas hide
In unknown fathoms, will I break my oath
To this my fair belov'd. Therefore, I pray you,
As you have ever been my father's honour'd friend,
When he shall miss me, (as, in faith, I mean not
To see him any more) cast your good counsels
Upon his passion: let myself and fortune
Tug for the time to come. This you may know,
And so deliver.—I am put to sea
With her, whom here I cannot hold on shore;
And, most opportune to our need, I have
A vessel rides fast by, but not prepar'd
For this design. What course I mean to hold Shall nothing benefit your knowledge, nor Concern me the reporting.

Cam. O, my lord!
I would your spirit were easier for advice,
Or stronger for your need.

Flo. Hark, Perdita,—
[To Camillo.] I'll hear you by and by. [They talk apart.

Cam. He's irremovable.

Resolv'd for flight. Now were I happy, if
His going I could frame to serve my turn;
Save him from danger, do him love and honour,
Purchase the sight again of dear Sicilia,
And that unhappy king, my master, whom
I so much thirst to see.

Flo. Now, good Camillo,
I am so fraught with serious business, that
I leave out ceremony.

Cam. Sir, I think,
You have heard of my poor services, i' the love
That I have borne your father?

Flo. Very nobly
Have you serv'd; it is my father's music,
To speak your deeds; not little of his care
To have them recompos'd, as thought on.

Cam. Well, my lord
If you may please to think I love the king,
And, through him, what’s nearest to him, which is your gracious self, embrace but my direction, (If your more ponderous and settled project May suffer alteration) on mine honour, I’ll point you where you shall have such receiving As shall become your highness; where you may Enjoy your mistress; (from the whom, I see, There’s no disjunction to be made, but, By heavens forefend, your ruin) marry her; And (with my best endeavours in your absence) Your discontenting father strive to qualify, And bring him up to liking.

Flo. How, Camillo, May this, almost a miracle, be done, That I may call thee something more than man, And, after that, trust to thee.

Cam. Have you thought on A place whereto you’ll go?

Flo. Not any yet; But as th’ unthought-on accident is guilty To what we wildly do, so we profess Ourselves to be the slaves of chance, and flies Of every wind that blows.

Cam. Then list to me: The points now. If you will not change your purpose, But undergo this flight, make for Sicilia, And there present yourself, and your fair princess, (For so, I see, she must be) fore Leontes: She shall be habited, as it becomes The partner of your bed. Methinks, I see Leontes, opening his free arms, and weeping His welcomes forth; asks thee, the son, forgiveness, As it were i’ the father’s person; kisses the hands Of your fresh princess: o’er and o’er divides him ‘Twixt his unkindness and his kindness: th’ one He chides to hell, and bids the other grow Faster than thought, or time.

Flo. Worthy Camillo, What colour for my visitation shall Hold up before him?

Cam. Sent by the king, your father, To greet him, and to give him comforts. Sir, The manner of your bearing towards him, with What you, as from your father, shall deliver, Things known betwixt us three, I’ll write you down: The which shall point you forth at every sitting What you must say, that he shall not perceive, But that you have your father’s bosom there, And speak his very heart.

Flo. I am bound to you. There is some sap in this.

Cam. A course more promising Than a wild dedication of yourselves To unpath’d waters, undream’d shores: most certain, To miseries enough: no hope to help you, But, as you shake off one, to take another: Nothing so certain as your anchors, who Do their best office, if they can but stay you Where you’ll be loth to be. Besides, you know, Prosperity’s the very bond of love, Whose fresh complexion, and whose heart together, Affliction alters.

Per. One of these is true: I think, affliction may subdue the cheek, But not take in the mind.

Cam. Yea, say you so?

There shall not, at your father’s house, these seven years, Be born another such.

Flo. My good Camillo,

She is as forward of her breeding, as She is i’ the rear of birth.

Cam. I cannot say, ’tis pity She lacks instructions, for she seems a mistress To most that teach.

Per. Your pardon, sir; for this I’ll blush you thanks.

Flo. My prettiest Perdita — But, O, the thorns we stand upon! — Camillo, Preserver of my father, now of me, The medicine of our house, how shall we do? We are not furnish’d like Bohemia’s son, Nor shall appear ’t in Sicily.

Cam. My lord, Fear none of this. I think, you know, my fortunes Do all tie there: it shall be so my care To have you royally appointed, as if The scene you play were true. — For instance, sir, That you may know you shall not want. — One word.

[They talk apart

Enter Autolycus.

Aut. Ha, ha! what a fool honesty is! and trust, his sworn brother, a very simple gentleman! I have sold all my trumpery, not a counterfeit-stone, not a riband, glass, pinnace; a brooch, table-book, ballad, knife, tape, glove, shoe-tie, bracelet, horn-rings, to keep my pack from fasting; they thronged who should buy first; as if my trinkets had been hallowed, and brought a benediction to the buyer: by which means, I saw whose purse was best in picture, and what I saw, to my good use I remembered. My clown (who wants but something to be a reasonable man) grew so in love with the wenches’ song, that he would not stir his petitiones, till he had both tune and words; which so drew the rest of the herd to me, that all their other senses stuck in ears: you might have pinched a placket, it was senseless: it was nothing to give a codpiece of a purse; I would have filed keys off, that hung in chains: no hearing, no feeling, but my sir’s song, and admiring the nothing of it: so that, in this time of lathargy, I picked and cut most of their festival purses, and had not the old man come in with a whoo-bubba’ against his daughter and the king’s son, and scared my thoughts from the chaff, I had not left a purse alive in the whole army.

[Camillo, Florizel, and Perdita, come forward

Cam. Nay, but my letters, by this means being there So soon as you arrive, shall clear that doubt.

Flo. And those that you’ll procure from king Leontes?

Cam. Shall satisfy your father.

Per. Happy be you!

All that you speak shows fair.

Cam. Whom have we here? [Seeing Autolycus. We’ll make an instrument of this: omit Nothing may give us aid.

Aut. If they have overheard me now. — Why hanging.

Cam. How now, good fellow! Why shakest thou so? Fear not, man; here’s no harm intended to thee.

Aut. I am a poor fellow, sir.

Cam. Why, be so still; here’s nobody will steal that from thee: yet, for the outside of thy poverty, we must make an exchange: therefore, use thee instantly, thou must think, there’s a necessity in’t) and change garments with this gentleman. Though the penuriousness on his side be the worst, yet hold thee, there’s some book.

Aut. I am a poor fellow, sir. [Aside. I know ye well enough.

Cam. Nay, pr'ythee, dispatch: the gentleman is half dayed already.

Aut. Are you in earnest, sir?—[Aside.] I smell the truck of it.

Flo. Dispatch, I pr'ythee.

Aut. Indeed, I have had earnest: but I cannot with conscience take it.

Cam. Unbuckle, unbuckle.—[Flo. and Aut. exchange garments.]

Fortunate mistress, (let my prophecy

Come home to you!) you must retire yourself
Into some covert: take your sweetheart's hat,
And pluck it o'er your brows; muffle your face;
Dismantle you, and as you can, dislike
The truth of your own seeming, that you may,
(For I do fear eyes ever) to ship-board
Get undescribed.

Per. I see, the play so lies,

That I must bear a part.

Cam. No remedy.—

Have you done there?

Flo. Should I now meet my father,

He would not call me son.

Cam. Nay, you shall have no hat. [Gives it to Perdita.]

Come, lady, come.—Farewell, my friend.

Aut. Adieu, sir.

Flo. O Perdita! what have we twain forgot?

Pray you, a word. [They talk apart.

Cam. What I do next shall be to tell the king

Of this escape, and whither they are bound;
Wherein, my hope is, I shall so prevail,
To force him after: in whose company
I shall review Sicilia, for whose sight
I have a woman's longing.

Flo. Fortune speed us!—

Thus we set on. Camillo, to the sea-side.

Cam. The swifter speed, the better.

[Exeunt Florizel, Perdita, and Camillo.

Aut. I understand the business; I hear it. To have an open ear, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, is necessary for a cut-purse; a good nose is requisite also, to smell out work for the other senses. I see, this is the time that the unjust man doth thrive. What an exchange had this been without boot! what a boot is here with this exchange! Sure, the gods do this year connive at us, and we may do any thing extempor. The prince himself is about a piece of iniquity; stealing away from his father, with his clod at his heels. If I thought it were a piece of honesty to acquaint the king withal. I would not do't: I hold it the more knavery to conceal it, and therein am I consistent to my profession.

Enter Clown and Shepherd.

Aside, aside:—here is more Matter for a hot brain. Every lane's end, every shop, church, session, hanging, yields a careful man work.

Clo. See, see, what a man you are now! There is no other way, but to tell the king she's a changeling, and none of your flesh and blood.

Shep. Nay, but hear me.

Clo. Nay, but hear me.

Shep. Go to, then.

Clo. She being none of your flesh and blood, your flesh and blood has not offended the king; and so your flesh and blood is not to be punished by him. Show those things you found about her: those secret things, all but what she has with her. This being done, let the law go whistle; I warrant you.

Shep. I will tell the king ail, every word, yea, and his son's pranks too; who, I may say, is no honest man. Neither to his father, nor to me, to go abroad to make me the king's brother-in-law.

Clo. Indeed, brother-in-law was the furthest off you could have been to him; and then your blood had been the dearer, by I know how much an ounce.

Aut. [Aside.] Very wisely, puppies!

Shep. Well, let us to the king: there is that in this fardeal will make him scratch his beard.

Aut. [Aside.] I know not what impediment this complaint may be to the flight of my master.

Clo. Pray heartily he be at palace.

Aut. [Aside.] Though I am not naturally honest, I am so sometimes by chance:—let me pocket up my pedler's excrement.—[Takes off his false beard.] How now, rustics! whither are you bound?

Shep. To the palace, an it like your worship.

Aut. Your affairs there? what? with whom? the condition of that fardeal, the place of your dwelling, your names, your ages, of what having, breeding, and any thing that is fitting to be known? discover.

Clo. We are but plain fellows, sir.

Aut. A lie: you are rough and hairy. Let me have no lying: it becomes none but tradesmen, and they often give us soldiers the lie; but we pay them for it with stamped coin, not stabbing steel: therefore, they do not give us the lie.

Clo. Your worship had like to have given us one, if you had not taken yourself with the manner.

Shep. Are you a courtier, an't like you, sir?

Aut. Whether it like me, or no, I am a courtier. Seest thou not the air of the court in these endplings? hath not thy gait in it the measure of the court? receives not thy nose court-odour from me? relick I not on thy baseness court-contempt? Think'st thou, for that I insinuate, or touze from thee thy business. I am therefore no courtier? I am courtier, cap-a-pie; and one that will either push on, or pluck back thy business there: wherupon, I command thee to open thy affair.

Shep. My business, sir, is to the king.

Aut. What advocate hast thou to him?

Shep. I know not, an't like you.

Clo. Advocate's the court-word for a pleasante'; say, you have none.

Shep. None, sir: I have no pleasante, cock, nor hen.

Aut. How bless'd are we that are not simple men! Yet nature might have made me so as these are, Therefore I'll not disdain.

Clo. This cannot but be a great courtier.

Shep. His garments are rich, but he wears them not handsonely.

Clo. He seems to be the more noble in being fantastical: a great man, I'll warrant; I know, by the picking on't teeth.

Aut. The fardeal there? what's in the fardeal? Wherefore that box?

Shep. Sir, there lie such secrets in this fardeal, and box, which none must know but the king; and which he shall know within this hour, if I may come to the speech of him.

Aut. Age, thou hast lost thy labour.

Shep. Why, sir?

Aut. The king is not at the palace; he is gone aboard a new ship to purge melancholy, and air' himself: for, if thou be'st capable of things serious, thou must know, the king is full of grief.
Scene I.—Sicilia. A Room in the Palace of Leontes.

Enter Leontes, Cleomene, Dion, Paulina, and Others.

Cle. Sir, you have done enough, and have perform'd A saint-like sorrow: no fault could you make, Which you have not redeem'd; indeed, paid down More penitence than done trespass. At the last, Do as the heavens have done, forget your evil; With them, forgive yourself.

Le. Whilst I remember Her, and her virtues, I cannot forget Her blenishes in them, and so still think of The wrong I did myself; which was so much, That heless it hath made my kingdom, and destroy'd the sweetest companion, that e'er man Bred his hopes out of: true.

Paul. Too true, my lord: If one by one you wedded all the world, Or from the all that are took something good, To make a perfect woman, she you kill'd Would be unparalleled.

Le. I think so. Kill'd! She I kill'd? I did so; but thou strik'st me

Act V.

Sorley, to say I did: it is as bitter Upon thy tongue, as in my thought. Now, good now Say so but seldom.

Cleo. Not at all, good lady: You might have spoken a thousand things that would Have done the time more benefit, and grace Your kindness better.

Paul. You are one of those Would have him wed again.

Dion. If you would not so, You pity not the state, nor the remembrance Of his most sovereign name: consider little What dangers, by his highness' fail of issue, May drop upon his kingdom, and devour Incontinentlookers-on. What were more holy, Than to rejoice the former queen is well? What holier than, for royalty's repair, For present comfort, and for future good, To bless the bed of majesty again With a sweet fellow to 't?

Paul. There is none worthy, Respecting her that's gone. Besides, the gods Will have fulfill'd their secret purposes; For has not the divine Apollo said,
Is't not the tenour of his oracle,
That king Leonatus shall not have an heir,
Till his lost child be found? which, that it shall,
Is all as monstrous to our human reason,
As my Antigonus to break his grave
And come again to me; who, on my life,
Did perish with the infant. 'Tis your counsel,
My lord, should to the heavens be contrary,
Oppose against their wills.—Care pot for issue;
The crown will find an heir; Great Alexander
Left his to the worthiest, so his successor
Was like to be the best,
Leon. Good Paulina,—
Who hast the memory of Hermione,
I know, in honour,—O, that ever I
Had squar'd me thy counsel!—then, even now,
I might have look'd upon my queen's full eyes,
Have taken treasure from her lips.—
Paul. And left them
More rich, for what they yielded.
Leon. Thou speakest truth.
No more such wives; therefore, no wife: one worse,
And better us'd, would make her painted spirit
Again possess her corpse; and, on this stage,
(Where we offenders now appear) soul-vex'd,
Begin, "And why to me?"
Paul. Had she such power,
She had but cause.
Leon. She had; and would incense me
To murder her I married.
Paul. I should so:
Were I the ghost that walk'd, I'd bid you mark
Her eye, and tell me for what dull part in't
You chose her? then I'd shrick, that even your ears
Should rift to hear me, and the words that follow'd
Should be, "Remember mine?"
Leon. Stars, stars!
And all eyes else dead coals.—Fear thou no wife;
I'll have no wife, Paulina.
Paul. Will you swear
Never to marry, but by my free leave?
Leon. Never, Paulina: so be bless'd my spirit!
Paul. Then, good my lords, bear witness to his oath.
Cleo. You tempt him over-much.
Paul. Unless another,
As like Hermione as is her picture,
Affront his eye.
Cleo. Good madam, I have done.
Paul. Yet, if my lord will marry,—if you will, sir,
No remedy, but you will—give me the office
To choose you a queen. She shall not be so young
As was your former: but she shall be such
As, walk'd your first queen's ghost, it should take joy
To see her in your arms.
Leon. My true Paulina,
We shall not marry, till thou bidd'st us.
Paul. That
Shall be when your first queen's again in breath:
Never till then.

Enter a Gentleman.
Gent. One that gives out himself prince Florizel Son of Polixenes, with his princes, (she
The fairest I have yet beheld,) desires access
To your high presence.
Leon. What! with him? he comes not
Like to his father's greatness: his approach,
So out of circumstance and sudden, tells us
'Tis not a visitation fram'd, but fore'd
By need, and accident. What train?
Gent. But few,
And those but mean.
Leon. His princess, say you, with him!
Gent. Ay; the most peerless piece of earth, I think
That e'er the sun shone bright on.
Paul. O Hermione!
As every present time doth boast itself
Above a better, gone, so must thy grace!
Give way to what's seen now. Sir, you yourself
Have said and writ so, but your writing now
Is colder than that theme—She had not been,
Nor was not to be equal'd;—thus your verse
Flow'd with her beauty once: 'tis shrewdly ebb'd,
To say you have seen a better.
Gent. Pardon, madam:
The one I have almost forgot, (your pardon)
The other, when she has obtain'd your eye,
Will have your tongue too. This is a creature,
Would she begin a sect, might quench the zeal
Of all professors else, make proselytes
Of whom she did but follow.
Paul. How! not women?
Gent. Women will love her, that she is a woman
More worth than any man; men, that she is
The rarest of all women.
Leon. Go, Cleomenes;
Yourself, assisted with your honour'd friends,
Bring them to our embracement.—Still 'tis strange.
[Exeunt Cleomenes, Lords, and Gentleman]
He should thus steal upon us.
Paul. Had our Prince
(Jewel of children) seen this hour, he had pair'd
Well with this lord: there was not full a month
Between their births.
Leon. Prythee, no more: cease! thou know'st,
He dies to me again, when talk'd of: sure,
When I shall see this gentleman, thy speeches
Will bring me to consider that, which may Unfurnish me of reason.—They are come.—
Re-enter Cleomenes, with Florizel, Perdita, and Others.
Your mother was most true to wed-lock, prince,
For she did print your royal father off;
Conceiving you. Were I but twenty-one,
Your father's image is so hit in you,
His very air, that I should call you brother,
As I did him: and speak of something, wildly
By us perform'd before. Most dearly welcome!
And your fair princess, goddess!—O, alas!
I lost a couple, that 'twixt heaven and earth
Might thus have stood, begetting wonder as,
You, gracious couple, do. And then I lost
(All mine own folly) the society,
Amity too, of your brave father; whom,
Though bearing misery, I desire my life
Once more to look on him.
Flo. By his command
Have I here touch'd Sicilia; and from him
Give you all greetings, that a king, as thy friend,
Can send his brother; and, but informity
(Which waits upon worn times) hath something seiz'd
His wish'd ability, he had himself
The lands and waters 'twixt your throne and his Measure'd to look upon you, whom he loves
(He bade me say so) more than all the sceptres.
And those that bear them, living.
Leon. O, my brother!
Good gentleman, the wrongs I have done thee stir
A fresh within me; and these thy offices,
So rarely kind, are as interpreters
Of my behind-hand slackness.—Welcome hither,
As is the spring to thy earth. And hath he, too,
Expos'd this paragon to the fearful usage
(At least ungentle) of the dreadful Neptune,
To greet a man not worth her pains, much les'
The adventure of her person?

Flo. Good, my lord,
She came from Libya.

Leon. Where the warlike Sinalus,
That noble, honour'd lord, is fear'd, and lov'd?

Flo. Most royal sir, from thence; from him, whose dughter
His tears proclaim'd his, paring with her: thence (A prosperous south-wind friendly) we have cross'd,
To execute the charge my father gave me.
For visiting your highness. My best train
I have from your Sicilian shores dismiss'd,
Who for Bohemia bend, to signify,
Not only my success in Libya, sir,
But my arrival, and my wife's, in safety
Here, where we are.

Leon. The blessed gods
Purge all infection from our air, whilst you
Do climate here! You have a noble father,
A graceful gentleman, against whose person,
So sacred as it is. I have done sin;
For which the heavens, taking angry note.
Have left me issueless; and your father's bless'd
(As he from heaven merits it) with you,
Worthy his goodness. What might I have been,
Might I a son and daughter now have look'd on,
Such goodly things as you?

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Most noble sir,
That which I shall report will bear no credit,
Were not the proof so high. Please you, great sir,
Bohemia greets you from herself by me;
Desires you to attach his son, who has (His dignity and duty both cast off)
Fled from his father, from his hopes, and with
A shepherd's daughter.

Lord. Here in your city; I now came from him:
I speak amazedly, and it becomes
My marvel, and my message. To your court.
While he was hastening (in the chase, it seems).
Of this fair couple) meets he on the way
The father of this seeming lady, and
Her brother, having both their country quitted
With this young prince.

Flo. Camillo has betray'd me,
Whose honour, and whose honesty, till now,
Endur'd all weathers.

Lord. Lay't so to his charge:
He's with the king your father.

Leon. Who? Camillo?

Lord. Camillo, sir: I spake with him, who now
Has these poor men in question. Never saw I
Wretches so quake: they kneel, they kiss the earth,
Forswear themselves as often as they speak:
Bohemia stops his ears, and threatens them
With divers deaths in death.

Per. O, my poor father!—
The heaven sets spics upon us, will not have
Our contract celebrated.

Leon. You are married?

Flo. We are not, sir, nor are we like to be;
The stars I see, will kiss the valleys first:
The odds for high and low's alike.

Leon. My lord,
Is this the daughter of a king?

Flo. She is,
When once she is my wife.

Leon. That once, I see, by your good father's speed
Will come on very slowly. I am sorry,
Most sorry, you have broken from his liking,
Where you were tied in duty; and as sorry,
Your choice is not so rich in worth as beauty;
That you might well enjoy her.

Flo. Dear, look up
Though fortune, visible an enemy,
Should chase us with my father, power no jot
Hath she to change our loves.—Beseech you, sir,
Remember since you ow'd no more to time
Than I do now: with thought of such affections,
Step forth mine advocate: at your request,
My father will grant precious things as trifles.

Leon. Would he do so, I'd beg your precious mistress,
Which he counts but a trifle.

Paul. Sir, my liege,
Your eye hath too much youth in't: not a month
Pore your queen died, she was more worth such gaze
Than what you look on now.

Leon. I thought of her.
Even in these looks I made.—But your petition
Is yet unanswer'd. I will to your father:
Your honour not o'erthrown by your desires,
I am a friend to them, and you; upon which errand
I now go toward him. Therefore, follow me,
And mark what way I make. Come, good my lord.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter Autolycus and a Gentleman.

Aut. Beseech you, sir, were you present at this relation?

1 Gent. I was by at the opening of the fardeal, heard the old shepherd deliver the manner how he found it:
whereupon, after a little amazedness, we were all commanded out of the chamber; only this, methought
I heard the shepherd say, he found the child.

Aut. I would most gladly know the issue of it.

1 Gent. I make a broken delivery of the business;
but the changes I perceived in the king, and Camillo, were very notes of admiration: they seemed almost, with staring on one another, to tear the cases of their eyes; there was speech in their dumbness, language in their very gesture: they looked, as they had heard of a world ravished, or one destroyed. A notable passion of wonder appeared in them; but the wisest beholder, that knew no more but seeing, could not say, if the importance were joy, or sorrow, but in the extreminy of the one it must needs be.

Enter another Gentleman.

Here comes a gentleman, that, haply, knows more.—
The news, Rogero?

2 Gent. Nothing but bonfires. The oracle is fulfilled; the king's daughter is found: such a deal of wonder is broken out within this hour, that ballad-makers cannot be able to express it.

Enter a third Gentleman.

Here comes the lady Paulina's steward: he can deliver you more.—How goes it now, sir? This news, which is called true, is so like an old tale, that the verity of it is in strong suspicion. Has the king found his heir? 3 Gent. Most true, if ever truth were pregnant by circumstance: that which you hear, you’ll swear you see, there is such unity in the proofs. The mantle of queen Hermione,—her jewel about the neck of it;—the letters of Antigonus found with it, which they know to be his character,—the majesty of the creature, in resemblance of the mother,—the affection of nobleness, which nature shows above her breeding, and many other evidences, proclaim her with all certainty to be the king’s daughter. Did you see the meeting of the two kings? 2 Gent. No. 3 Gent. Then you have lost a sight, which was to be seen, cannot be spoken of. There might you have beheld one joy crown another: so, and in such manner, that, it seemed, sorrow went to take leave of them, for their joy waded in tears. There was casting up of eyes, holding up of hands, with countenance of such distraction, that they were to be known by garment, not by favour. Our king, being ready to leap out of himself for joy of his found daughter, as if that joy were now become a loss, cries, “O, thy mother, thy mother!” then asks Bohemian forgiveness; then embraces his son-in-law; then again worries his daughter with clippings her: now he thanks the old shepherd, which stands by, like a weather-beaten conduit of many kings’ reigns. I never heard of such another encounter, which James report to follow it, and undoes description to show it. 2 Gent. What pray you, became of Antigonus, that carried hence the child? 3 Gent. Like an old tale still, which will have matter to rehearse, though credit be asleep, and not an ear open. He was torn to pieces with a bear; this avouches the shepherd’s son, who has not only his innocence (which seems much) to justify him, but a handkerchief, and rings of his that Paulina knows. 1 Gent. What became of his bark, and his followers? 3 Gent. Wrecked, the same instant of their master’s death, and in the view of the shepherd: so that all the instruments, which aided to expose the child, were even then lost, when it was found. But O! the noble combat, that ‘twixt joy and sorrow was fought in Paulina! She had one eye declined for the loss of her husband, another elevated that the oracle was fulfilled: she lifted the princess from the earth, and so locks her in embracing, as if she would pin her to her heart, that she might no more be in danger of losing her. 1 Gent. The dignity of this act was worth the audience of kings and princes, for by such it acted. 3 Gent. One of the prettiest touches of all, and that which angled for mine eyes (caught the water, though not the fish) was, when at the relation of the queen’s death, (with the manner how she came to’t, heavily confessed, and lamented by the king) how attentiveness wounding his daughter; till, from one sign of deflour to another, she did, with an alas! I would fain say, bleed tears: for, I am sure, my heart wept blood. Who was most marble there changed colour; some swooned, all sorrowed: if all the world could have seen it, the woe had been universal. 1 Gent. Are they returned to the court? 3 Gent. No; the princess hearing of her mother’s statue, which is in the keeping of Paulina.—a piece many years in doing, and now newly performed by that rare Italian master, Julio Romano; who, had he himself eternity and could put breath into his work, would beguile nature of her custom, so perfectly he is his ape: he so near to Hermione hath done Hermione, that, they say, one would speak to her, and stand in hope of answer. Thither with all greediness of affection, are they gone, and there they intend to sup. 2 Gent. I thought, she had some great matter there in hand, for she hath privately, twice or thrice a day, ever since the death of Hermione, visited that removed house. Shall we thither, and with our company piece the rejoicing? 2 Gent. Who would be thence, that has the benefit of access? every wink of an eye, some new grace will be born: our absence makes us unhappily to our knowledge. Let’s along. [Exit Gentleman. Aut. Now, had I not the dash of my former life in me, would preferment drop on my head. I brought the old man and his son abroad the prince: told him I heard them talk of a fardel, and I know not what: but he at that time, over-fond of the shepherd’s daughter, (so he then took her to be) who began to be much sea-sick, and himself little better. Extremity of weather continuing, this mystery remained undiscovered. But it is all one to me; for had I been the finder out of this secret, it would not have relished among my other diacritics. Enter Shepherd and Clown, in new apparel. Here come those I have done good to against my will, and already appearing in the blossoms of their fortune. Slep. Come, boy; I am past more children; but thy sons and daughters will be all gentlemen born. Clo. You are well met, sir. You denied to fight with me this other day, because I was no gentleman born: see you these clothes? say, you see them not, and think me still no gentleman born: you were best say, these robes are not gentlemen born. Give me the lie, do, and try whether I am not now a gentleman born. Aut. I know, you are now, sir, a gentleman born. Clo. Ay, and have been so any time these four hours. Slep. And so have I, boy. Clo. So you have; but I was a gentleman born before my father, for the king’s son took me by the hand, and called me, brother; and then the two kings called my father, brother; and then the prince, my brother, and the princess, my sister, called my father, and so we were: and there was the first gentleman-like tears that ever we shed. Slep. We may live, son, to shed many more. Clo. Ay; or else ’t were hard luck, being in so preposterous estate as we are. Aut. I humbly beseech you, sir, to pardon me all the faults I have committed to your worship, and to give me your good report to the prince my master. Slep. Pr’ythee, son, do; for we must be gentle, now we are gentlemen. Clo. Thou wilt amend thy life? Aut. Ay, an it like your good worship. Clo. Give me thy hand: I will swear to the prince, thou art as honest a true fellow as any is in Bohemia. Slep. You may say it, but not swear it. Clo. Not swear it, now I am a gentleman? Let boors and franklins say it, I’ll swear it. Slep. How if it be false, son? Clo. If it be ne’re so false, a true gentleman may swear it in the behalf of his friend:—And I’ll swear to the prince, thou art a tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt not be drunk; but I know, thou art no tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt be drunk;
but I'll swear it, and I would thou wouldest be a tall fellow of thy hands.

_Aut._ I will prove ro. sir, to my power.

_Clo._ Ay, by any means prove a tall fellow: if I do not wonder how thou darest venture to be drunk, not being a tall fellow, trust me not.—[Trumpets.] Hark! the kings and the princes, our kindred, are going to see the queen's picture. Come, follow us: we'll be thy good masters.

_SCENE III._—The Same. A Chapel in PAULINA's House.

_Enter_ LEONTES, POLIXENES, FLORIZEL, PERDITA, CAMILLO, PAULINA, Lords, and Attendants._

_Leon._ O! grave and good Paulina, the great comfort That I have had of thee!

_Paul._ What, sovereign sir, I did not well, I meant well. All my services, You have paid home; but that you have vouchsaf'd, With your crown'd brother, and these your contracted Heirs of your kingdoms, my poor house to visit, It is a surplus of your grace, which never My life may last to answer.

_Leon._ O Paulina! We honour you with trouble. But we came To see the statue of our queen: your gallery Have we pass'd through, not without much content In many singularities, but we saw not That which my daughter came to look upon, The statue of her mother.

_Paul._ As she liv'd peerless, So her dead likeness, I do well believe, Exceeds whatever yet you look'd upon, Or hand of man hath done; therefore I keep it Lonely, apart. But here it is: prepare To see the life as lively mock'd, as ever Still sleep mock'd death: behold! and say, 'tis well. [PAULINA undraws a curtain, and discovers a statue._

_Music playing._—A pause.

I like your silence: it the more shows off Your wonder: but yet speak:—first you, my liege. Comes it not something near?

_Leon._ Her natural posture.—

Chide me, dear stone, that I may say, indeed, Thou art Hermione; or, rather, thou art she In thy not chiding, for she was as tender As infancy, and grace.—But yet, Paulina, Hermione was not so much wrinkled; nothing So aged, as this seems.

_Pol._ O! not by much.

_Paul._ So much the more our carver's excellence; Which lets go by some sixteen years, and makes her As she liv'd now.

_Leon._ As now she might have done, So much to my good comfort, as it is. Now piercing to my soul, O! thus she stood, Even with such life of majesty, (warm life, As now it coldly stands) when first I wou'd hor. I am ashamed: does not the stone rebuke me? For being more stone than it?—O, royal piece! There's magic in thy majesty, which Has my evils conjur'd to rememberance: and From thy admiring daughter took the spirits, Standing like stone with thee.

_Per._ And give me leave, And do not say 'tis superstition, that [Kneeling.] kneel, and thus implore her blessing.—_Lady._ Dear queen, that ended when I but began, Give me that hand of yours to kiss.

_Paul._ O, patience! The statue is but newly fix'd; the colour's Not dry.

_Cam._ My lord, your sorrow was too sore laid on, Which sixteen winters cannot blow away, So many summers dry: scarce any joy Did ever so long live; no sorrow, But kill'd itself much sooner.

_Paul._ Most truly, my lord, Let him that was the cause of this, have power To take off so much grief from you, as he Will piece up in himself.

_Paul._ Indeed, my lord, If I had thought, the sight of my poor image Would thus have wrought you, (for the stone is mine) I'd not have show'd it. [Offers to draw._

_Leon._ Do not draw the curtain.

_Paul._ No longer shall you gaze ont, lest your fancy May think anon it moves.

_Leon._ Let be, let be! Would I were dead, but that, methinks, already I am but dead, stone looking upon stone. What was he that did make it?—See, my lord, Would you not deem it breath'd, and that those veins Did verily bear blood?

_Pol._ Masterly done: The very life seems warm upon her lip.

_Leon._ The fixture of her eye has motion in it.

As we are mock'd with art.

_Paul._ I'll draw the curtain. My lord's almost so far transported, that He'll think anon it lives.

_Leon._ O, sweet Paulina! Make me to think so twenty years together. No settled senses of the world can match The pleasure of that madness. Let 't alone. _Paul._ I am sorry, sir, I have thus far stirr'd you; but I could afflict you farther.

_Leon._ Do, Paulina, For this affliction has a taste as sweet As any cordial comfort.—Still, methinks, There is an air comes from her: what fine chill'd Could ever yet cut breath? Let no man mock me. For I will kiss her.

_Paul._ Good my lord, forbear. [She stays him._ The rostiness upon her lip is wet: You'll mar it, if you kiss it, stain your own With oily painting. Shall I draw the curtain?

_Leon._ No, not these twenty years. Per. So long could I

Stand by, a looker on.

_Paul._ Either forbear, Quit presently the chapel, or resolve you For more amazement. If you can behold it, I'll make the statue move indeed; descend, And take you by the hand; but then you'll think (Which I protest against) I am assisted By wicked powers.

_Leon._ What you can make her do, I am content to look on: what to speak, I am content to hear; for 'tis as easy To make her speak, as move.

_Paul._ It is requir'd.

You do awake your faith. Then, all stand still, On, those that think it is unlawful business I am about; let them depart.

_Paul._ Proceed:

No foot shall stir.

Geoffrey Fitz-Peter, Earl of Essex.
William Longsword, Earl of Salisbury.
Robert Bigot, Earl of Norfolk.
Hubert de Burgh, Chamberlain to the King.
Robert Faulconbridge.
Philip Faulconbridge.
James Gurney, Servant to Lady Faulconbridge.

Lords, Ladies, Citizens of Angiers, Sheriff, Heralds, Officers, Soldiers, Messengers, and Attendants.

SCENE, sometimes in England, and sometimes in France.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Northampton. A Room of State in the Palace. Enter King John, Queen Elinor, Pembroke, Essex, Salisbury, and Others, with Chatillon.

K. John. Now, say, Chatillon, what would France with us?

Chat. Thus, after greeting, speaks the king of France, In my behaviour, to the majesty, The borrow'd majesty, of England here, Eli. A strange beginning!—borrow'd majesty?

K. John. Silence, good mother: hear the embassy. Chat. Philip of France, in right and true behalf Of thy deceased brother Geoffrey's son, Arthur Plantagenet, lays most lawful claim To this fair island, and the territories, To Ireland, Poictiers, Anjou, Touraine, Maine; Desiring thee to lay aside the sword Which sways usurpingly these several titles, And put the same into young Arthur's hand, Thy nephew, and right royal sovereign.

K. John. What follows, if we disallow of this?

Chat. The proud control of fierce and bloody war, To enforce these rights so forcibly withheld.

K. John. Here have we war for war, and blood for blood, Controlment for controlment: so answer France.

Chat. Then take my king's defiance from my mouth, The farthest limit of my embassy.

K. John. Bear mine to him, and so depart in peace. Be thou as lightning in the eyes of France; For ere thou canst report I will be there, The thunder of my cannon shall be heard. So, hence! Be thou the trumpet of our wrath, And sudden' presage of your own decay.—

An honourable conduct let him have; Pembroke, look to 't. Farewell, Chatillon. [Exeunt Chatillon and Pembroke.

Eli. What now, my son? have I not ever said, How that ambitious Constance would not cease, Till she had kindled France, and all the world, Upon the right and party of her son? This might have been prevented, and made whole, With very easy arguments of love, Which now the manage of two kingdoms must With fearful bloody issue arbitrate.

K. John. Our strong possession, and our right for us.

Eli. Your strong possession, much more than your right, Or else it must go wrong with you, and me:

So much my conscience whispers in your ear, Which none but heaven, and you, and I, shall hear. Enter the Sheriff of Northamptonshire, who whispers Essex.

Essex. My liege, here is the strangest controversy Come from the country to be judged by you, That e'er I heard: shall I produce the men?

K. John. Let them approach.—[Exit Sheriff

Our abbeyes, and our priories, shall pay
Re-enter Sheriff, with Robert Faulconbridge, and Philip, his bastard Brother.

This expedition's charge.—What men are you?

Bast. Your faithfult subject I: a gentleman

Born in Northamptonshire, and eldest son, As I suppose, to Robert Faulconbridge, A soldier, by the honour-giving hand Of Cour-de-lion knighted in the field.

K. John. What art thou?

Rob. The son and heir to that same Faulconbridge K. John. Is that the elder, and art thou the heir?

You came not of one mother, then, it seems.

Bast. Most certain of one mother, mighty king. That is well known, and, as I think, one father But, for the certain knowledge of that truth, I put you o'er to heaven, and to my mother: Of that I doubt, as all men's children may.
Eli. Out on thee, rude man! thou dost shame thy mother,
And wound her honour with this diffluence.

Bast. I, madam? no, I have no reason for it:
That is my brother's plea, and none of mine;
The which if he can prove, 'tis pops me out
At least from fair five hundred pounds a year,
Heaven guard my mother's honour, and my land!

K. John. A good blunt fellow. — Why, being younger born,
Dost he lay claim to thine inheritance?

Bast. I know not why, except to get the land.
But once he slander'd me with bastardly:
But wher'e he be as true begot, or no,
That still I lay upon my mother's head;
But, that I am as well begot, my liege,
(FAIR fall the bones that took the pains for me!)
Compare our faces, and be judge yourself.

If old sir Robert did beget us both,
And were our father, and this son like him,
O! old sir Robert, father, on my knee
Give heaven thanks, I was not like to thee.

K. John. Why, what a madcap hath heaven lent us here!

Eli. He hath a trick of Cour-de-lion's face;
The accent of his tongue affeceth him.
Do you not read some tokens of my son
In the large composition of this man?

K. John. Mine eye hath well examined his parts,
And finds them perfect Richard. — Sirrah, speak;
What doth move you to claim your brother's land?

Bast. Because he hath a half-face, like my father,
With that half-face would he have all my land:
A half-face'd goat! five hundred pound a year!

Rob. My gracious liege, when that my father liv'd,
Your brother did employ my father much.

Bast. Well, sir; by this you cannot get my land.
Your tale must be, how he employed my mother.

Rob. And once despatch'd him in an embassy
To Germany, there, with the emperor,
To treat of high affairs touching that time.
The advantage of his absence took the king,
And in the mean time rejoind at my father's;
Where how he did prevail I shame to speak.
But truth is truth: large lengths of seas and shores
Between my father and my mother lay,
As I have heard my father speak himself,
When this same lusty gentleman was got.
Upon his death-bed he by will bequeathed
His land to me; and took it, on his death,
That this, my mother's son, was none of his:
And, if he were, he came into the world
Full fourteen weeks before the course of time.
Then, good my liege, let me have what is mine,
My father's land, as was my father's will.

K. John. Sirrah, your brother is legitimate:
Your father's wife did after wedlock hear him:
And if she did play false, the fault was hers,
Which fault lies on the hazards of all husbands
That marry wives. Tell me, how my brother
Who, as you say, took pains to get this son,
Had of your father claim'd this son for his?
In sooth, good friend, your father might have kept
This calf bred from his cow, from all the world;
In sooth, he might: then, if he were my brother's,
My brother might not claim him, nor your father.
Being none of his, refuse him. — This concludes,
My mother's son did get your father's heir;

Your father's heir must have your father's land.

Rob. Shall, then, my father's will be of no force
To dispossess that child which is not his?

Bast. Of no more force to dispossess me, sir,
Than was his will to get me, as I think.

Eli. Whether hadst thou rather be a Faulconbridge,
And, like thy brother, to enjoy thy land,
Or the reputed son of Cour-de-lion,
Lord of thy presence, and no land beside?

Bast. Madam, an if my brother had my shape,
And I had his, sir Robert his, like him;
And if my legs were two such riding-rods,
My arms such cet-skins stunt'd; my face so thin,
That in mine ear I durst not stick a rose,
Lest men should say, "Look, where three-farthings goes,
And, to his shape, were heir to all this land,
Would I might never stir from off this place,
I'd give it every foot to have this face:
I would not be sir Rob. in any case.

Eli. I like thee well. Wilt thou forsake thy fortune,
Bequeath thy land to him, and follow me?
I am a soldier, and now bound to France.

Bast. Brother, take you my land, I'll take my chance
Your face hath got five hundred pounds a year,
Yet sell your face for five pence, and 'tis dear.—

Madam, I'll follow you unto the death.

Eli. Nay, I would have you go before me, thither.

Bast. Our country manners give our betters way.

K. John. What is thy name?

Bast. Philip, my liege; so is my name begun;
Philip, good old sir Robert's wife's eldest son.

K. John. From henceforth bear his name whose form thou hearest.

Kneel thou down Philip, but arise more great:

[Bast. kneels and rises.]

Arise sir Richard, and Plantagenet.

Bast. Brother, by the mother's side, give me your hand:

My father gave me honour, yours gave land,
Now blessed be the hour, by night or day,
When I was got Sir Robert was away.

Eli. The very spirit of Plantagenet! —

I am thy grandson, Richard: call me so.

Bast. Madam, by chance, but not by truth: what though?

Something about, a little from the right,
In at the window, or else o'er the hatch:
Who dares not stir by day, must walk by night,
And have is have, however men do catch.

Near or far off, well won is still well shot,
And I am I, how'er I was begot.

K. John. Go, Faulconbridge: now hast thou thy desire;

A landless knight makes thee a landed squire. —

Come, madam, and come, Richard: we must speed
For France, for France, for it is more than need.

Bast. Brother, adieu: good fortune come to thee,
For thou wast got 1 the way of honesty.

A foot of honour better than I was
But many, ah, many foot of land the worse.
Well, now can I make any Joan a lady: —
"Good den", sir Richard. — "God-a-mercy, fellow?
And if his name be George, I'll call him Peter;
For new-made honour doth forget men's names:
'T is too respective, and too sociable.

For your diversion, now, your traveller,
SCENE I. France. Before the Walls of Angiers.

Enter, on one side, the Archduke of Austria, and Forces; on the other, Philip, King of France, and Forces: Lewis, Constance, Arthur, and Attendants.

Leeu. Before Angiers well met, brave Austria.—Arthur, that great fore-runner of thy blood, Richard, that robb'd the lion of his heart, and sought the holy wars in Palestine, By this brave duke came early to his grave: And, for amends to his posterity, At our importance he is come, To spread his colours, boy, in thy behalf, And to rebuke the usurpation Of thy unnatural uncle. English John:

Embrace him, love him, give him welcome hither.
Artb. God shall forgive you Cœur-de-lion's death,
The rather, that you give his offspring life,
Shadowing his right under your wings of war,
I give you welcome with a powerless hand,
But with a heart full of unstained love:
Welcome before the gates of Angiers, duke.

Leeu. A noble boy! Who would not do thee right?
Aust. Upon thy check lay I this zealous kiss,
As seal to this indenture of my love;
That to my home I will no more return,
Till Angiers, and the right thou hast in France,
Together with that pale, that white-faced shore,
Whose foot spurs back the ocean's roaring tides—
And coops from other lands her islanders,
Even till that England, hedg'd in with the main,
That water-walled bulwark, still secure
And confident from foreign purposes.
Even till that utmost corner of the west
Salute thee for her king: till then, fair boy,
Will I not think of home, but follow arms.

Const. O! take his mother's thanks, a widow's thanks,
Till your strong hand shall help to give him strength,
To make a more requital to your love.

Aust. The peace of heaven is theirs, that lift their swords
In such a just and charitable war.

K. Phi. Well then, to work. Our cannon shall be Against the brows of this resisting town:—

Call for our chiefest men of discipline,
To call the plots of best advantages.
We'll lay before this town our royal bones,
Wade to the market-place in Frenchmen's blood,
But we will make it subject to this boy.

Const. Stay for an answer to your embassy,
Lest unadvised you stain your swords with blood.
My lord Chatillon may from England bring
That right in peace which here we urge in war;
And then we shall repent each drop of blood,
That hot rash haste so indifferently shed.

Enter Chatillon.

K. Phi. A wonder, lady!—lo, upon thy wish,
Our messenger, Chatillon, is arriv'd.—
What England says, say briefly, gentle lord;
We coldly pause for thee: Chatillon, speak.

Chat. Then turn your forces from this paltry siege,
And stir them up against a mightier task.
England, impatient of your just demands,
Hath put himself in arms: the adverse winds,
Whose leisure I have stay'd, have given him time
To land his legions all as soon as I.
His marches are expeditious to this town;
His forces strong, his soldiers confident.
With him along is come the mother-queen,
As Até stirring him to blood and strife:
With her her niece, the lady Blanch of Spain;
With them a bastard of the king's deceased,
And all ill-entitled humours of the land:
Rash, inconsiderate, fiery voluntaries,
With ladies' faces, and fierce dragons' spleens,
Have sold their fortunes at their native homes,
Bearing their birthrights proudly on their backs,
To make a hazard of new fortunes here.
In brief, a braver choice of dauntless spirits,
Than now the English bottoms have waft o'er,
Did never float upon the swelling tide,
To do offence and seath in Christendom.

[Drums heard.]

The interruption of their churlish drums
Cuts off more circumstance; they are at hand,
To parley, or to fight; therefore, prepare.

K. Phi. How much unlook'd for is this expedition!

Aust. By how much more unexpected, by so much
We must awake endeavour for defence,
For courage mounteth with occasion:
Let them be welcome, then; we are prepared.

Enter King John, Elinor, Blanch, the Bastard, Pembroke, and Forces.

K. John. Peace be to France, if France be in peace permit.
Our just and lineal entrance to our own:
If not, bleed France, and peace ascend to heaven;
While we, God's wrathful agent, do correct

Their proud contempt that beats his peace to heaven.

K. Phi. Peace be to England, if that war return
From France to England, there to live in peace.
England we love; and, for that England's sake,
With burden of our armour here we sweat.
This toil of ours should be a work of thine;
But thou from loving England art so far,
That thou hast under-wrought her lawful king.
Cut off the sequence of posterity,
Outfaced infant state, and done a rape
Upon the maiden virtue of the crown.
Look here upon thy brother Geffrey's face:

[Pointing to Arthur]

These eyes, these brows, were moulded out of his:
This little abstract doth contain that large,
Which died in Geffrey, and the hand of time
Shall draw this brief into as huge a volume.
That Geffrey was thy elder brother born,
And this his son: England was Geffrey's right,
And this is Geffrey's. In the name of God,
How comes it, then, that thou art call'd a king,
When living blood doth in these temples beat,
Which owe the crown that thou o'ermasterest?

K. John. From whom hast thou this great commission?
France.

To draw my answer from thy articles?

K. Phi. From that supernatural Judge, that stirs good thoughts
In any breast of strong authority,
To look into the plots and stains of right.
That Judge hath made me guardian to this boy;
Under whose warrant I impeach thy wrong,
And by whose help I mean to chastise it.

K. Phi. Exence: it is to beat usurping down.
Eli. Who is it, thou dost call usurper, France?

Const. Let me make answer:—thy usurping son.
Eli. Out, insolent! thy bastard shall be king,
That thou may'st be a queen, and check the world!

Const. My bed was ever to thy son as true,
As thine was to thy husband, and this boy
Liker in feature to his father Geffrey,
Than thou and John, in manners being as like,
As rain to water, or devil to his dam.
My boy a bastard! By my soul, I think,
His father never was so true begot:
It cannot be, an if thou wert his mother.

Eli. There's a good mother, boy, that beats thy father

Const. There's a good grandam, boy, that would blot thee.

Aust. Peace!

Bast. Hear the crier.

Aust. What the devil art thou?

Bast. One that will play the devil, sir, with you,
An' a may catch your hide and you alone.
You are the larde of whom the proverb goes,
Whose valour plucks dead lions by the beard.
I'll smoke your skin-coat, and I catch you right:
Srirah, look to't; if faith, I will, if faith.
Blanch. O! well did I become that lion's robe,
That did disrobe the lion of that robe.

Bast. It lies as sightly on the back of him,
As great Alice's shoes upon an ass.—
But, ass, I'll take that burden from your back.
Or lay on that shall make your shoulders crack.

Aust. What cracker is this same, that deads our ears
With this abundance of superfluous breath?

K. Phi. Lewis, determine what we shall do straight.
Lea. Women and fools, break off your conference.—
King John. This is the very sum of all:
England, and Ireland, Anjou, Touraine, Maine,
In right of Arthur do I claim of thee.
Wilt thou resign them, and lay down thy arms?
Arthur of Bretzane, yield thee this to my hand,
And out of thy love I'll give thee more,
Than e'er the coward band of France can win:
Submit thee, boy.

Eli. Come to thy grandam, child.
Const. Do, child, go to thy grandam, child:
Give thy grandam kingdom, and thy grandam will Give it a plum, a cherry, a fig:
There's a good grandam.

Arth. Good my mother, peace!
I would that I were low laid in my grave: [Weeping.]
I am not worth this coil that's made for me.

Eli. His mother shames him so, poor boy, he weeps.
Const. Now shame upon you, whe'r she does, or no!
His grandam's wrongs, and not his mother's shame,
Draw those heaven-moving pearls from his poor eyes,
Which heaven shall take in nature of a fee:
Ay, with these crystal beads shall heaven be brib'd
To do him justice, and revenge on you.

Eli. Thou monstrous slanderer of heaven and earth!
Const. Thou monstrous injurer of heaven and earth!
Call on me to t' injure: thee, and thee, whosoever,
The dominations, royalties, and rights,
Of this oppressed boy, thy eldest son's son,
Infortunate in nothing but in thee:
Thy sins are visited on this poor child;
The canon of the law is laid on him,
Being but the second generation
Removed from thy sin-conceiving womb.
K. John. Bedlam, have done.

Const. I have but this to say,—
That he is not only plagued for her sin,
But God hath made her sin and her, the plague
On this removed issue, plag'd for her,
And with her plague her sin: his injury
Her injury the beadle to her sin,
All punish'd in the person of this child,
And all for her, a plague upon her!

Eli. Thou unadvised so'd, I can produce
A will, that bars the title of thy son.

Const. Ay, who doubts that? a will! a wicked will;
A woman's will: a canker'd grandam's will!
K. Phi. Peace, lady! pause, or be more temperate.
It ill becomes this presence, to cry aim
To these ill-tuned repetitions.—
Some trumpet summon hither to the walls
These men of Angiers: let us hear them speak,
Whose title they admit, Arthur's or John's.

Trumpets sound. Enter Citizens upon the walls.
Citi. Who is it, that hath warn'd us to the walls?
K Phi. 'T is France, for England.
You men of Angiers, and my loving subjects,—
K. Phi. You loving men of Angiers, Arthur's subjects,
Our trumpet call'd you to this gentle parle.
K. John. For our advantage; therefore, hear us first.—
These flags of France, that are advanced here
Before the eye and prospect of your town,
Have hitherto March'd to your endagement:
The cannons have their bowels full of wrath,
And ready mounted are they, to spit forth
Their iron indignation 'gainst your walls:
All preparation for a bloody siege,
And merciless proceeding by these French,
Come 'fore your city's eyes, your winking gates,
And, but for our approach, those sleeping stones,
That as a waist do girdle you about,
By the compulsion of their ordinance
By this time from their fixed beds of time
Had been disord'd, and wild'd have made
For bloody power to rush upon your peace,
But, on the sight of us, your lawful king,
Who painfully, with much expedient march,
Have brought a countercheck before your gates,
To save unscrath'd your city's threaten'd cheeks,
Behold, the French amaz'd vouche a parle;
And now, instead of bullets wrapp'd in fire,
To make a shaking fever in your walls,
They shoot but calm words, folded up in smoke,
To make a faithless error in your ears:
Which trust accordingly, kind citizens,
And let us in, your king; whose labour'd spirits,
Forewarranted in this action of swift speed,
Crave harbourage within your city walls.

K. Phi. When I have said, make answer to us both
Lo! in this right hand, whose protection
Is most divinely vow'd upon the right
Of him it holds, stands young Plantagenet,
Son to the elder brother of this man,
And king e'er him, and all his that enjoys.
For this down-trodden equity we tread
In warlike march these greenes before your town;
Being no further enemy to you,
Than the constraint of hospitable zeal,
In the relief of this oppressed child.
Religiously provokes. Be pleased, then,
To pay that duty which you truly owe,
To him that owes it, namely, this young prince;
And then our arms, like to a muzzled bear,
Save in aspect, have all offence seal'd up:
Our cannon's malice vainly shall be spent
Against th' invulnerable clouds of heaven;
And with a blessed and unvex'd retire,
With unback'd swords, and helmets all unbruis'd,
We will bear home that lusty blood again,
Which here we came to spout against your town,
And leave your children, wives, and you, in peace.
But if you fondly pass our proferr'd offer,
'T is not the round'le of your old-fac'd walls
Can hide you from our messengers of war.
Though all these English, and their discipline,
Were harbour'd in their rude circumference.
Then, tell us: shall your city call us lord,
In that behalf which we have challeng'd it,
Or shall we give the signal to our rage,
And stalk in blood to our possession?

Citi. In brief, we are the king of England's subjects.
For him, and in his right, we hold this town.
K. John. Acknowledge then the king, and let me in Citi. That can we not: but he that proves the king,
To him will we prove loyal: till that time,
Have we ramm'd up our gates against the world.
K. John. Doth not the crown of England prove the
And, if not that, I bring you witnesses, [king?]
Twice fifteen thousand hearts of England's breaed.—
Bast. Bastards, and else.
K. Phi. To verify our title with their lives.
K. Phi. As many, and as well-born bloods as those—Bast. Some bastards, too.
K. Phi. Stand in his face to contradict his claim.

[Aside.]
KING JOHN.

ACT II.

CIT. Till you compound whose right is worthiest,
We for the worthiest hold the right from both.

K. John. Then God forgive the sins of all those souls,
That to their everlasting residence
Before the dew of evening fall shall fleet,
In dreadful trial of our kingdom's king!

K. Phi. Amen, Amen.—Mount, chevaliers! to arms!

Bast. St. George, that swing'd the dragon, and o'er its on his horseback at mine hostess' door, each us some fence! [To Austria.] Sirrah, were! at home,

At your den, sirrah, with your lioness,
I would set an ox-head to your lion's hide,

And make a monster of you.

Aust. Peace! no more.

Bast. O! tremble, for you hear the lion roar.

K. John. Up higher to the plain; where we'll set forth
In best appointment all our regiments.

Bast. Speed, then, to have advantage of the field.

K. Phi. It shall be so;—[To Lewis] and at the other hill
Command the rest to stand.—God and our right!

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Alarums and Excursions; then a Retreat. Enter a French Herald, with trumpets, to the gates.

F. Her. You men of Angiers, open wide your gates,
And let young Arthur, duke of Bretagne, in,
Who by the hand of France this day hath made
Much work for tears in many an English mother,
Whose sons lie scatter'd on the bleeding ground:
Many a widow's husband gruelling lies,
COLDLY embracing the discoloured earth,
And victory, with little loss, doth play
Upon the dancing banners of the French,
Who are at hand, triumphantly display'd,
To enter conquerors, and to proclaim
Arthur of Bretagne, England's king, and yours.

Enter an English Herald, with trumpets.

E. Her. Rejoice, ye men of Angiers, ring your bells:
King John, your king and England's, doth approach,
Commander of this hot malicious day.

Their armours, that have been so silver-bright,
Hither return all gilt with Frenchmen's blood.

There stunk no plume in any English crest,
That is renew'd by any staff of France:
Our colours do return in those same hands,
That did display them when we first march'd forth;
And, like a jolly troop of huntsmen, come
Our lusty English, all with purpled hands,
Dyed in the dying slaughter of their foes.

Open your gates, and give the victors way.

CIT. Heralds, from off our towers we might behold,
From first to last, the onset and retire
Of both your armies; whose equality
By our best eyes cannot be censured;
Blood hath bought blood, and blows have answer'd blows;
Strength match'd with strength, and power confronted power:
Both are alike; and both alike we like.
One must prove greatest; while they weigh so even,
We hold our town for neither, yet for both.

Enter, at one side, King John, with his power, Elinor, Blanch, and the Bastard; at the other, King Philip, Lewis, Austria, and forces.

K. John. France, hast thou yet more blood to cast away?

Say, shall the current of our right roam on?
Whose passage, vex'd with thy impediment,
Shall leave his native channel, and o'er-swell
With course disturb'd even thy confining shores,
Unless thou let his silver waters keep
A peaceful progress to the ocean.

K. Phi. England, thou hast not sav'd one drop of

In this hot trial, more than we of France;

Rather, lost more; and by this hand I swear,
That sways the earth this climate overlooks,
Before we will lay down our just-borne arms,
We'll put thee down, against whom these arms we bear,
Or add a royal number to the dead,
Graeze the scroll, that tells of this war's loss,
With slaughter coupled to the name of kings.

Bast. Ha! majesty, how high thy glory towers,
When the rich blood of kings is set on fire.
O! now dost Sithen line his dead chaps with steel;
The swords of soldiers are his teeth, his fangs;
And now he feasts, moulding the flesh of men,
In undetermine'd differences of kings;

Why stand these royal fronts amaz'd thus?

Cry, havock, kings! back to the stained field,
You equal potent, firey-kindled spirits!

Then let confusion of one part confirm
The other's peace; till then, blows, blood, and death!

K. John. Whose party do the townsmen yet admit?

K. Phi. Speak, citizens, for England who's your king?

CIT. The king of England, when we know the king

K. Phi. Know him in us, that here hold up his right.

K. John. In us, that are our own great deputy,
And bear procession of our person here;
Lord of our presence, Angiers, and of you.

CIT. A greater power than we deny all this;
And, till it be undoubted, we do lock
Our former scruple in our strong-barr'd gates,
Kings of our fear; until our fear, resolv'd,
Be by some certain king purg'd and depos'd.

Bast. By heaven, these scroyles of Angiers flout you, kings,
And stand securely on their battlements,
As in a theatre, whence they gaze and point
At your industrious scenes and acts of death;
Your royal presence at the court bind
Thee and me; and thus we'll both be bind'd

To do like the mutineers of Jerusalem;

Be friends awhile, and both conjointly bend
Your sharpest deeds of malice on this town.

By cast and west let France and England mount
Their battering cannon, charg'd to the months,
Till their soul-fearing clamours have brawl'd down

The flinty ribs of this contemptuous city;

I'll play incessantly upon these jades,
Even till unfenced desolation
Leave them as naked as the vulgar air,

That done, dissever your united strengths,
And part your mingled colours once again;

Turn face to face, and bloody point to point;

Then, in a moment, fortune shall cull forth
Out of one side her happy minion,

To whom in favour she shall give the day,

And kiss him with a glorious victory.

How like you this wild counsel, mighty states?

Smacks it not something of the policy?

K. John. Now, by the sky that hangs above our heads
I like it well.—France, shall we hurl our powers,
And lay this Angiers even with the ground,
Then, after, fight who shall be king of it?
  Bast. An if thou hast the mettle of a king,
Being wrong'd as we are by this peevish town,
Turn thou the mouth of thy artillery,
As we will ours, against these saucy walls;
And when that we have dash'd them to the ground,
Why, then defy each other, and pull-mell,
Make work upon ourselves for heaven, or hell.
  K. Phi. Let it be so.—Say, where will you assault.
  K. John. We from the west will send destruction
Into this city's bosom.
  Aust. I from the north.
  K. Phi. Over thunder from the south,
Shall rain their drift of bullets on this town.
  Best. O, prudent discipline! From north to south,
Austria and France shoot in each other's mouth.

[Aside.
I'll stir them to it.—Come, away, away!
  Cit. Hear us, great kings; vouchsafe a while to stay,
And I shall show you peace, and fair-face'd league;
Win you this city without stroke, or wound;
Resemble a breathing lives to die in beds,
That here come sacrifices for the field.
Persever not, but hear me, mighty kings.
  K. John. Speak on, with favour: we are bent to hear.
  Cit. That daughter there of Spain, the lady Blanch,
Is niece to England: look upon the years
Of Lewis the Dauphin, and that lovely maid.
If lusty love should go in quest of beauty,
Where should he find it fairer than in Blanch?
If zealous love should go in search of virtue,
Where should he find it purer than in Blanch?
If love ambitious sought a match of birth,
Whose veins bound richer blood than lady Blanch?
Such as she is, in beauty, virtue, birth,
Is the young Dauphin every way complete:
If not complete of 3, say, he is not she;
And she again wants nothing, to name want,
If want it be not, that she is not he:
He is the half part of a blessed man,
Left to be finished by such 2 she;
And she a fair divided excellence.
Whose fulness of perfection lies in him.
O! two such silver currents, when they join,
Do glorify the banks that bound them in:
Two and two shores to two such streams made one.
Two such controlling bounds shall you be, kings,
To these two princes, if you marry them.
This union shall do more than battery can
To our fast-closed gates; for, at this match,
With swifter spleen than powder can enforce,
The mouth of passage shall we fling wide open,
And give you entrance; but, without this match,
The sea enraged is half so deaf.
Lions more confident, mountains and rocks
More free from motion: no, not deatn himself
In mortal fury half so peremptory;
As we to keep this city.
  Bast. Here's a stay,
That shakes the rotten carcasse of old death
Out of his rage! Here's a large mouth, indeed,
That spits forth death, and mountains, rocks, and seas;
Talks as familiarly of roaring lions,
As maids of thirteen do of puppy-dogs.
What cannoneer begot this lusty blood?
He speaks plain cannon-fire, and smoke, and bounce;
He gives the bastinado with his tongue:
Our ears are cudgell'd; not a word of his,

1 mere: in f. a. 2 Complete in the qualities. 3 as: in f. a.

But buffets better than a fist of France,
Zounds! I was never so bethump'd with words,
Since I first call'd my brother's father dad.
  Eli. Son, list to this conjunction; make this match
Give with our niece a dowry large enough,
For by this knot thou shalt so surely tie
Thy now unsur'd assurance to the crown,
That yond' green boy shall have no sun to rise
The bloom that promiseth a mighty fruit.
I see a yielding in the looks of France;
Mark, how they whisper: urge them while their souls
Are capable of this ambition,
Lost zeal, now melted by the windy breath
Of soft petitions, pity, and remorse,
Cool and consol a gain to what it was.
  Cit. Why answer not the double majesties
This friendly treaty of our threaten'd town?
  K. Phi. Speak England first, that hath been forward first
To speak unto this city: what say you?
  K. John. If that the Dauphin there, thy princely son,
Can in this book of beauty read, I love,
Her dowry shall weigh equal with a queen;
For Anjou, and fair Touraine, Maine, Poictiers,
And all that we upon this side the sea,
(Except this city now by us besieg'd)
Find liable to our crown and dignity,
Shall gild her bridal bed, and make her rich
In titles, honours, and promotions,
As she in beauty, education, blood,
Holds hand with any princess of the world.
  K. Phi. What say'st thou, boy? look in the lady's Lec. I do, my lord; and in her eye I find
A wonder, or a wondrous miracle,
The shadow of myself form'd in her eye,
Which, being but the shadow of your son,
Becomes a sun, and makes your son a shadow.
I do protest, I've never lov'd myself,
Till now infus'd I behold myself
Drawn in the flattering table of her eye.
  [Whispers with Blanch]
  Bast. Drawn in the flattering table of her eye,
Hand'd in the frowning wrinkle of her brow,
And quarter'd in her heart, he doth espy
Himself love's traitor: this is pity now,
That hand'd, and drawn, and quarter'd, there should be
In such a love, so vile a lout as he.
  Blanch. My uncle's will in this respect is mine
If he see aught in you, that makes him like,
That any thing he sees, which moves his liking,
I can with ease translate it to my will;
Or if you will, to speak more properly,
I will enforce it easily to my love.
Farther I will not flatter you, my lord,
That all I see in you is worthy love,
Than this,—that nothing do I see in you,
Though churlish thoughts themselves should be your judge,
That I can find should merit any hate.
  K. John. What say these young ones? What say you,
  My niece?
  Blanch. That she is bound in honour still to do
What you in wisdom still vouchsafe to say.
  K. John. Speak then, prince Dauphin: can you love this lady?
  Lec. Nay, ask me if I can refrain from love,
For I do love her most unfeignedly.
  K. John. Then do I give Volquessen, Touraine, Maine
Poictiers, and Anjou, these five provinces,
With her to thee; and this addition more,
Full thirty thousand marks of English coin.—
Philip of France, if thou be placed withal,
Command thy son and daughter to join hands.
K. Phi. It likes us well.—Young princes, close your hands. [They join hands.
Aust. And your lips too; for, I am well-assur'd,
That I did so, when I was first assur'd.
K. Phi. Now, citizens of Angiers, ope your gates,
Let in that amity which you have made;
For at Saint Mary’s chapel presently
The rites of marriage shall be solemniz’d.—
Is not the lady Constance in this troop?
I know, she is not; for this match, made up,
Her presence would have interrupted much.
Where is she and her son? tell me, who knows.
Leu. She is sad and passionate at your highness’ tent.
K. Phi. And, by my faith, this league, that we have
Will give her sadness very little cure.— [made,
Brother of England, how may we content
This widow’d lady? In her right we came,
Which we, God knows, have turn’d another way,
To our own vantage.
K. John. We will heal up all;
For we’ll create young Arthur duke of Bretagne,
And earl of Richmond, and this rich fair town
We make him lord of.—Call the lady Constance:
Some speedy messenger bid her repair
To our solemnity.—I trust we shall,
If not fill up the measure of her will,
Yet in some measure satisfy her so,
That we shall stop her exclamation.
Go we, as well as haste will suffer us,
To this unlook’d for, unprepared pomp.
[Exeunt all but the Bastard.—The Citizens retire from the walls.
Bast. Mad world! mad kings! mad composition!

ACT III.

SCENE 1.—The Same. The French King’s Tent.

Enter Constance, Arthur, and Salisbury.

Const. Gone to be married? gone to swear a peace?
False blood to false blood join’d! Gone to be friends?
Shall Lewis have Blanch, and Blanch those provinces?
It is not so; than hast mis-spoke, misheard.
Be well advis’d, tell o’er thy tale again:
It cannot be; thou dost but say ’tis so.
I trust, I may not trust thee, for thy word
Is but the vain breath of a common man:
Believe me, I do not believe thee, man.
I have a king’s oath to the contrary.
Thou shalt be punish’d for thus frustrating me,
So I am sick, and capable of fears;
Opprest with wrongs, and therefore full of fears;
A widow, husbandless, subject to fears;
A woman, naturally born to fears;
And though thou now confess, thou didst but jest,
With my vex’d spirits, I cannot take a truce.
But they will quake and tremble all this day,
What dost thou mean by shaking of thy head?
Why dost thou look so sadly on my son?
What means that hand upon that breast of thine?
Why holds thine eye that lamentable rheum,
Like a proud river peering o’er his bounds?

John, to stop Arthur’s title in the whole,
Hath willingly departed with a part;
And France, whose armour conscience buckled on,
Whom zeal and charity brought to the field,
As God’s own soldier, rounded in the ear
With that same purpose-changer, that sly devi’d,
That broker that still breaks the pate of faith,
That daily break-vow, he that wins of all,
Of kings, of beggars, old men, young men, maids,—
Who having no external thing to lose
But the word maid,—cheats the poor maid of that;
That smooth-faced gentleman, tickling commodity,
Commodity, the bias of the world;
The world, who of itself is poised well,
Made to run even, upon even ground,
Till this advantage, this vile drawing bias,
This sway of motion, this commodity,
Makes it take head from all indifferency,
From all direction, purpose, course, intent:
And this same bias, this commodity,
This bawd, this broker, this all-changing word,
Clap’d on the outward eye of fickle France,
Hath drawn him from his own determin’d aim,
From a resolv’d and honourable war,
To a most base and vile-concluded peace.
And why stay I on this commodity?
But for because he hath not wad me yet:
Not that I have no power to clutch my hand,
When his fair angels would salute my palm;
But for my hand, as unattempted yet,
Like a poor baggar, raileth on the rich.
Well, whiles I am a baggar, I will rail,
And say, there is no sin, but to be rich;
And being rich, my virtue then shall be,
To say, there is no vice but baggar.
Since kings break faith upon commodity,
Gain, be my lord, for I will worship thee.

SCENE I.

KING JOHN.

For then I should not love thee; no, nor thou
Become thy great birth, nor deserve a crown.
But thou art fair, and at thy birth, dear boy,
Nature and fortune join'd to make thee great:
Of nature's gifts thou mayst possess the best
And with the half-blown rose. But fortune, O!
She is corrupted, chang'd, and won from thee:
Sh' adulterate hourly with thine uncle John:
And with her golden hand hath pluck'd on France
To tread down fair respect of sovereignty,
And made his majesty the bawd to theirs.
France is a bawd to fortune, and king John!
That strumpet fortune, that usurping John!—
Tell me, thou fellow, is not France forsown?
Envow'd him with words, or get thee gone,
And leave these voces alone, which I alone
Am bound to under-bear.

Sal. Pardon me, madam,
I may not go without you to the kings.
Const. Thou may'st, thou shalt: I will not go with thee.
I will instruct my sorrows to be proud,
For grief is proud, and makes his owner stoop.
To me, and to the state of my great grief,
Let kings assemble; for my grief's so great,
That no supporter but the huge firm earth
Can hold it up: here I and sorrows sit;
Here is my throne, bid kings come bow to it.

Enter King John. King Philip, Lewis, Blanch,
Elinor, Bastard, Austria, and Attendants.
K. Phi. 'Tis true, fair daughter; and this blessed
Ever in France shall be kept festival:
[day,
To solemnize this day, the glorious sun
Stays in her course, and plays the alchymist,
Turning, with splendour of his precious eye,
The meagre cloudy earth to glittering gold:
The yearly course, that brings this day about,
Shall never see it but a holy day.

Const. A wicked day, and not a holy day! [Rising.
What hath this day deserv'd? what hath it done.
That it in golden letters should be set,
Among the high tides, in the calendar?
Nay, rather, turn this day out of the week;
This day of shame, oppression, perjury:
Or if it must stand still, let wives with child
Pray, that their burdens may not fall this day;
Lest that their hopes prodigiously be cross'd:
But on this day, let seamen fear no wreck;
No bargains break, that are not this day made;
This day all things begun come to ill end
Yea, faith itself to hollow falsehood change!

K. Phi. By heaven, lady, you shall have no cause
To curse the fair proceedings of this day.
Have I not pawn'd to you my majesty?
Const. You have beguil'd me with a counterfeit,
Resembling majesty, which, being touch'd and tried,
Proves valueless. You are forsown, forsown;
You came in arms to spill mine enemies' blood,
But now in arms you strengthen it with yours;
The grappling vigour, and rough frown of war,
Is cold in animity and faint in peace.
And our oppression hath made up this league.—
Arm, arm, you heavens, against these perjur'd kings!
A widow cries: be husband to me, heavens!
Let not the hours of this ungodly day
Wear out the day in peace; but, ere sunset,
Set armed discord 'twixt these perjur'd kings!
Hear me! O, hear me!

Aust. Lady Constance, peace!
Const. War! war! no peace! peace is to me a war.
O. Lynoges! O, Austria! thou dost shame
That bloody spoil: thou slave, thou wretch, thou
Thou little valiant, great in villainy!
Thou ever strong upon the stronger side!
Thou fortune's champion, that dost never fight
But when her humorous ladyship is by
To teach thee safety! thou art perjur'd too
And sooth'st up greatnes. What a fool art thou,
A ramping fool, to brag, and stamp, and swear,
Upon my party! Thou cold-blooded slave,
Hast thou not spoke like thunder on my side?
Been sworn my soldier? bidding me depend
Upon thy stars, thy fortune, and thy strength?
And dost thou now fall over to my foes?
Thou wear a lion's hide! doff it for shame,
And hang a calf's skin on those recreant limbs.

Aust. O, that a man should speak those words to me!
Bast. And hang a calf's skin on those recreant limbs!

K. Phi. We like not this: thou dost forget thyself.

Enter PANDULPH.

K. Phi. Here comes the holy legate of the pope.

Pand. Hail, you enomiting deputys of heaven.
To thee, king John, my holy errand is.
I Pandulph, of fair Milan cardinal,
And from Pope Innocent the legate here,
Do in his name religiously demand,
Why thou against the church, our holy mother,
So wilfullly dost spurn; and, force perforce,
Keep Stephen Langton, chosen archbishop
Of Canterbury, from that holy see?
This, in our foresaid holy father's name,
Pope Innocent. I do demand of thee.

K. John. What earthly name to interrogatories
Can task the free breath of a sacred king?
Thou canst not, cardinal, devise a name
So slight, unworthy, and ridiculous,
To charge me to an answer, as the pope.
Tell him this tale; and from the month of England,
Add thus much more,—that no Italian priest
Shall tithe or toll in our dominions;
But as we under heaven are supreme head,
So, under heaven, that great supremacy,
Where we do reign, we will alone uphold,
Without th' assistance of a mortal hand.
So tell the pope; all reverence set apart
To him, and his usurp'd authority.

K. Phi. Brother of England, you blaspheme in this
K. John. Though you, and all the kings of Christer dom,

Are led so grossly by this meddling priest,
Dreading the curse that money may buy out,
And, by the merit of vile gold, dross, dust,
Purchose corrupted pardon of a man,
Who, in that sale, sells pardon from himself;
Though you, and all the rest, so grossly led,
This juggling witchcraft with revenue cherish,
Yet I, alone, alone do me oppose
Against the pope, and count his friends my foes.

Pand. Then, by the lawful power that I have,
Thou shalt stand eurs'd, and excommunicate.
And blessed shall he be, that doth revolt
From his allegiance to an heretie;
And meritorious shall that hand be eall'd,
Canonized and worship'd as a saint,
KING JOHN.

ACT III.

That takes away by any secret course
Thy haleful life.

Const. O! lawful let it be,
That I have room with Rome to curse awhile.
Good father Cardinal, cry thou amen
To my keen curses; for without my wrong
There is no tongue hath power to curse him right.

Pand. There's law and warrant, lady, for my curse.

Const. And for mine too: when law can do no right,
Let it be lawful that law bar no wrong.
Law cannot give my child his kingdom here,
For he that holds his kingdom holds the law:
Therefore, since law itself is perfect wrong,
How can the law forbid my tongue to curse?

Pand. Philip of France, on peril of a curse,
Let go the hand of that arch-heretic,
And raise the power of France upon his head,
Unless he do submit himself to Rome.

Eli. Look'st thou pale, France? do not let go thy hand.

Const. Look to that, devil, lest that France repent,
And by disjoining hands hell lose a soul.

Aust. King Philip, listen to the cardinal.

Bast. And hang a calf's-skin on his recreant limbs.

Aust. Well, ruffian, I must pocket up these wrongs, Because--

Bast. Your breeches best may carry them.

K. John. Philip, what say'st thou to the cardinal?

Const. What should he say, but as the cardinal?

Lew. Bethink you, father; for the difference
Is purchase of a heavy curse from Rome,
Or the light loss of England for a friend:
Forego the easier.

Blanch. That's the curse of Rome.

Const. O Lewis, stand fast! the devil tempts thee here,
In likeness of a new untrimmed* bride.

Blanch. The lady Constance speaks not from her faith,
But from her need.

Const. O! if thou grant my need,
Which only lives but by the death of faith,
That need must needs infer this principle,
That faith would live again by death of need:
O! then, trend down my need, and faith mounts up;
Keep my need up, and faith is trodden down.

K. John. The king is mov'd, and answers not to this.

Const. O! be remov'd from him, and answer well.

Aust. Do so, king Philip: hang no more in doubt.

Bast. Hang nothing but a calf's-skin, most sweet lust.

K. Phi. I am perplex'd, and know not what to say.

Pand. What canst thou say, but will perplex thee more.

It thou stand excommunicate, and curse'd?

K. Phi. Good reverend father, make my person yours,
And tell me how you would bestow yourself.
This royal hand and mine are newly knitt,
And the conjunction of our inward souls
Married in league, coupled and link'd together
With all religious strength of sacred vows;
The latest breath that gave the sound of words,
Was deep-swear'd faith, peace, amity, true love,
Between our kingdoms, and our royal selves;
And even before this truce, but new before,
No longer than we well could wash our hands,
To clasp this royal bargain up of peace,
Heaven knows, they were besmeard'd and overstain'd
With slaughter's pencil; where revenge did paint
The fearful difference of incensed kings;
And shall these hands, so lately purg'd of blood.

So newly join'd in love, so strong in both,
Unyoke this seizure, and this kind regret?
Play fast and loose with faith? so jest with heaven,
Make such unconstant children of ourselves,
As now again to snatch our palm from palm;
Unwear faith sworn, and on the marriage bed
Of smiling peace to march a bloody host,
And make a riot on the gentle brow
Of true sincerity? O! holy sir,
My reverend father, let it not be so:
Out of your grace, devise, ordain, impose
Some gentle order, and then we shall be bless'd
To do your pleasure, and continue friends.

Pand. All form is formless, order orderless,
Save what is opposite to England's love.
Therefore, to arms! be champion of our church,
And let the church, our mother, breathe her curse,
A mother's curse, on her revolting son.

France, thou may'st hold a serpent by the tongue,
A caged* lion by the mortal paw,
A fasting tiger safer by the tooth,
Than keep in peace that hand which thou dost hold.

K. Phi. I may disjoin my hand, but not my faith.

Pand. So mak'st thou faith an enemy to faith;
And, like a civil war, set'st oath to oath,
Thy tongue against thy tongue. O! let thy vow
First made to heaven, first be to heaven perform'd:
That is; to be the champion of our church.
What since thou swear'st is sworn against thyself,
And may not be performed by thyself:
For that, which thou hast sworn to do amiss,
Is not amiss when it is truly done;
And being done not, where doing tends to ill,
The truth is then most done not doing it.
The better act of purposes mistook
Is to mistake again: though indirect,
Yet indirectation thereby grows direct,
And falsehood falsehood corrects; as fire cools fire
Within the scorched veins of one new burn'd.
It is religion that doth make vows kept,
But, thou hast sworn against religion,
By what thou swear'st, against the thing thou swear'dst,
And mak'st an oath the surety for thy truth,
Against an oath: the truth, thou art unsure
To swear, swears only not to be forsworn:
Else, what a mockery should it be to swear?
But thou dost swear only to be forsworn;
And most forsworn, to keep what thou dost swear.
Therefore, thy later vows, against thy first,
Is in thyself rebellion to thyself:
And better conquest never canst thou make,
Than arm thy constant and thy nobler parts
Against these giddy loose suggestions:
Upon which better part our prayers come in,
If thou vouchsafe them; but, if not, then know,
The peril of our curses lights on thee,
So heavy, as thou shalt not shake them off,
But in despair die under their black weight.

Aust. Rebellion, flat rebellion!

Bast. Will it not be?

Will not a calf's-skin stop that mouth of thine?

Lew. Father, to arms!

Blanch. Upon thy wedding day?

Aust. Against the blood that thou hast married?

Bast. Shall braying trumpets, and loud curulial drums,
Clamours of hell, be measures to our pomp?

K. Phi. O husband, hear me! — ah, alack! how new
Is husband in my mouth! — even for that name,

* untrimmed: in f. e.: which Dyce defines virgin. * cased: in f. e. Dyce suggests chafed.
KING JOHN.

Scene III.

Which till this time my tongue did ne'er pronounce,
Upon my knee I beg, go not to arms
Against mine uncle.

Const.
O! upon my knee.
Made hard with kneeling, I do pray to thee,
Though virtuous Dauphin, alter not the doom
Fore-thought by heaven.

Blanch.
Now shall I see thy love. What motive may
Be stronger with thee than the name of wife?

Const.
That which upholdeth him that thee upholds,
His honour. O! thine honour, Lewis, thine honour.

Luc.
I muse, your majesty doth seem so cold,
When such profound respects do pull you on.

Pand.
I will denounce a curse upon his head.
K. Phi.
Thou shalt not need.—England, I'll fall
Const.
O, fair return of banish'd majesty! [from thee.

Eli.
O, foul revolt of French inconstancy!
K. John.
France, thou shalt rue this hour within this hour.

Bast.
Old Time the clock-setter, that bald sexton Time,
Is it as he will? well then, France shall rue.

Blanch.
The sun's o'ercast with blood: fair day,
Which is the side that I must go withal? [adieu!
I am with both: each army hath a hand,
And in their rage, I having hold of both,
They whirr asunder, and dismember me.

 Husband, I cannot pray that thou may'st win;
Uncle, I needs must pray that thou may'st lose;
Father, I may not wish the fortune thine;
Grandam, I will not wish thy wishes thrive;
Whoever wins, on that side shall I lose;
Assured loss, before the match be play'd.

Luc.
Lady, with me; with me thou fortune lies.

Blanch.
There where my fortune lives, there my life
dies.

K. John.
Cousin, go draw our puissance together.—
[Exit Bastard.]

France, I am burn'd up with inflaming wrath;
A rage, whose heat hath this condition,
That nothing can allay, nothing but blood,
The blood, and deadliest-val'd blood of France.
K. Phi.
Thy rage shall burn thee up, and thou shalt
To ashes, ere our blood shall quench that fire. [turn
Look to thyself: thou art in jeopardy.

K. John.
No more than he that threatens.—To arms
let's hie!
[Exeunt.

Scene II.—The Same. Plains near Angiers.
Alarums, Excursions. Enter the Bastard with Austria's Head.

Bast.
Now, by my life, this day grows wondrous hot;
Some fiery devil hovers in the sky,
And pours down mischief. Austria's head, lie there,
While Philip breathes.

Enter King John, Arthur, and Hubert.
K. John.
Hubert, keep this boy.—Philip, make up:
My mother is assailed in our tent,
And ta'en, I fear.

Bast.
My lord, I rescued her;
Her highness is in safety, fear you not:
But on, on by heage; for very little pains
Will bring this labour to an happy end.
[Exeunt.

Scene III.—The Same.
Alarums; Excursions; Retreat. Enter King John
Elinor, Arthur, the Bastard, Hubert, and Lords.
K. John.
So shall it be; your grace shall stay behind.
[To Elinor.

So strongly guarded.—Cousin, look not sad;
Thy grandam loves thee, and thy uncle will
As dear be to thee as thy father was.

Arth.
O! this will make my mother die with grief.
K. John.
Cousin, [To the Bastard.] away for England: haste before;

And ere our coming, see thou shake the bags
Of hoarding abbots; their imprison'd angels
Set at liberty: the fat ribs of peace
Must by the hungry now be fed upon:
Use our commission in his utmost force.

Bast.
Bell, book, and candle shall not drive me back,
When gold and silver beckis me to come on.
I leave your highness.—Grandam, I will pray
(If ever I remember to be holy.)
For your fair safety: so I kiss your hand.
Eli.
Farewell, gentle cousin.
K. John.
Coz, farewell. [Exit Bastard.
Eli.
Come hither, little kinsman; hark, a word.

She talks apart with Arthur.
K. John.
Come hither, Hubert. O! my gentle Hubert,
We owe thee much: within this wall of flesh
There is a soul counts thee her creditor,
And with advantage means to pay thy love:
And, my good friend, thy voluntary oath
Lives in this bosom, dearly cherished.
Give me thy hand. I had a thing to say,—
But I will fit it with some better time.
By heaven, Hubert, I am almost ashamed
To say what good respect I have of thee.

Hub.
I am much bounden to thy majesty, fyr.
K. John.
Good friend, thou hast no cause to say so
But thou shalt have: and creep time ne'er so slow,
Yet it shall come, for me to do thee good.
I had a thing to say,—but let it go.

The sun is in the heaven, and the proud day,
Attended with the pleasures of the world,
Is all too wanton, and too full of gauds,
To give me audience:—if the midnight bell
Did, with his iron tongue and brazen mouth,
Sound on into the drowsy ear of night:
If this same were a churchyard where we stand,
And thou possessed with a thousand wrongs;
Or if that surly spirit, melancholy,
Had baul'd thy blood, and made it heavy, thick,
[Which, else, runs tingling?] up and down the veins,
Making that idiot, laughter, keep men's eyes,
And strain their cheeks to idle merriment,
A passion hateful to my purposes,)
Or if that thou couldst see me without eyes,
Hear me without thine ears, and make reply
Without a tongue, using conceit alone,
Without eyes, ears, and harmful sound of words,
Then, in spite of the broad watchful day,
I would into thy bosom pour my thoughts,
But ah! I will not:—yet I love thee well;
And, by my troth, I think, thou lov'st me well.

Hub.
So well, that what you bid me undertake
Though that my death were adjunct to my act,
By heaven, I would do it.
K. John.
Do not I know, thou wouldst?
Good Hubert! Hubert,—Hubert, throw thine eye
On yond' young boy: I'll tell thee what, my friend,
He is a very serpent in my way;
And wheresoe'er this foot of mine doth tread,
He lies before me. Dost thou understand me?
Thou art his keeper.

That he shall not offend your majesty.
Hub.  My lord?
Hub.  He shall not live.

I could be merry now.  Hubert, I love thee;
Well, I'll not say what I intend for thee:
Remember.—Madam, fare you well:
I'll send those powers o'er to your majesty.
Eliz. My blessing go with thee!
Hubert shall be your man, attend on you
With all true duty.—On towards Calais, ho!  [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.  The Same.  The French King's Tent.
Enter King Philip, Lewis, Pandolph, and Attendants.
K. Phi.  So, by a roaring tempest on the flood,
A whole armado of converted sail
Is scatter'd, and disjoint'd from fellowship.
Pand.  Courage and comfort!  all shall yet go well.
K. Phi.  What can go well, when we have run so ill?
Are we not beaten?  Is not Angiers lost?
Arthur ta'en prisoner?  divers dear friends slain?
And bloody England into England gone,
O'erbearing interruption, spite of France?
Lew.  What hate he hath, that hath he fortified;
So hot a speed with such advice dispos'd,
Such temperate order in so fierce a cause,
Doth want example.  Who hath read, or heard,
If any kindred action like to this?
K. Phi.  Well could I hear that England had this praise,
So we could find some pattern of our shame.
[Enter CONSTANCE.

Look, who comes here?  a grave unto a soul;
Holding th' eternal spirit, against her will,
In the vile prison of afflicted breath.—
I prythee, lady, go away with me.
Con.  Lo now; now see the issue of your peace!
K. Phi.  Patience, good lady: comfort, gentle Constance.
Con.  No, I defy all counsel, all redress,
But that which ends all counsel, true redress,
Death, death.—O, amiable lovely death!
Thou odorous stench!  sound rottenness!
Arise from forth the couch of lasting night,
Thou hate and terror to prosperity,
And I will kiss thy detestable bones;
And put my eye-balls in thy vaulcy brows;
And ring these fingers with thy household worms;
And stop this gap of breath with fulsome dust,
And be a carrion monster like thyself:
Come, grin on me:  and I will think thou smilest,
And buss thee as thy wife!  Misery's love,
O, come to me!
K. Phi.  O, fair affliction, peace!
Con.  No, no, I will not, having breath to cry.—
O! that my tongue were in the thunder's mouth:
Then with what passion I would shake the world,
And rouse from sleep that fell anatomy,
Which cannot hear a lady's feeble voice,
Which scorrs a widow's invocation.
Pand.  Lady, you utter madness, and not sorrow.
Con.  Thou art not holy to belie me so.
I am not mad: this hair I tear, is mine;
My name is Constance: I was Geoffrey's wife;
Young Arthur is my son, and he is lost!
I am not mad.—I would to heaven were;

For then, 'tis like I should forget myself:
O, if I could, what grief should I forget!—
Preach some philosophy to make me mad,
And thou shalt be canoniz'd, cardinal;
For, being not mad, but sensible of grief,
My reasonable part prodigiously reason
How may I be deliver'd of these woes,
And teaches me to kill or hang myself:
If I were mad, I should forget my son,
Or madly think a babe of clowns were he.
I am not mad: too well, too well I feel
The different plague of each calamity.
K. Phi.  Bind up those tresses.  O! what love I note
In the fair multitude of those her hairs!
Where but by chance a silver drop hath fallen,
Even to that drop ten thousand wavy friends
Do glue themselves in sociable grief;
Like true, insepable, faithful lovers,
Sticking together in calamity.

Con.  To England, if you will.
K. Phi.  Bind up your hair.
Con.  Yes, that I will; and wherefore will I do it?
I tore them from their bonds, and cried aloud,
"O, that these hands could so redeem my son,
As they have given these hairs their liberty!"
But now, I envy at their liberty,
And will again commit them to their bonds,
Because my poor child is a prisoner.—
And, father cardinal, I have heard you say,
That we shall see and know our friends in heaven:
If that be true, I shall see my boy again;
For, since the birth of Cain, the first male child,
To him that did but yesterday suspend,
There was not such a gracious creature born.
But now will canker sorrow eat my bud,
And chase the native beauty from his cheek,
And he will look as hollow as a ghost,
As dim and meagre as an ague's fit,
And so he'll die; and, rising so again,
When I shall meet him in the court of heaven,
I shall not know him: therefore never, never Must I behold my pretty Arthur more.
Pand.  You hold too heinous a respect of grief.
Con.  He talks to me, that never had a son.
K. Phi.  You are as fond of grief, as of your child.
Con.  Grief fills the room up of my absent child,
Lies in his bed, walks up and down with me;
Puts on his pretty looks, repeats his words;
Remembers me of all his gracious parts,
Stuffs out his vacant garments with his form:
Then, have I reason to be fond of grief.
Fare you well: had you such a loss as I,
I could give better comfort than you do.—
I will not keep this form upon my head,

When there is such disorder in my wit.
O lord! my boy, my Arthur, my fair son!
My life, my joy, my food, all the world,
My widow-comfort, and my sorrow's cure!

K. Phi.  I fear some outrage, and I'll follow her.

[Exit.

Lew.  There's nothing in this world can make me
Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale, joy
Vexing the dull ear of a drowsy man;
And bitter shame hath spoild the sweet world's taste:
That it yields nought, but shame, and bitterness
Pand.  Before the curing of a strong disease,
Even in the instant of repair and health,
The fit is strongest: evils that take leave,
SCENE I.—Northampton. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Hubert and two Attendants.

Hub. Heat me these irons hot; and, look thou stand
Within the arras: when I strike my foot
Upon the bosom of the ground, rush forth,
And bind the boy, which you shall find with me,
Fast to the chair: be heedful. Hence, and watch.
1 Attend. I hope, your warrant will bear out the deed.
Hub. Uncleanly seruples: fear not you: look to 't. — [Exeunt Attendants.

Young lad, come forth; I have to say with you.

Enter Arthur.

Arth. Good morrow, Hubert.

Hub. Good morrow, little prince.

Arth. As little prince (having so great a title)
To be more prince,) as may be.—You are sad.

Hub. Indeed, I have been merrier.

Arth. Mercy on me!

Methinks, no body should be sad but I:
Yet, I remember, when I was in France,
Young gentlemen would be as sad as night,
Only for wantonness. By my chrisdom,
So, I were out of prison, and kept sheep,
I should be merry as the day is long;
And so I would be here, but that I doubt
Of my uncle practices more harm to me:
He is afraid of me, and I of him.

Is it my fault that I was Geoffrey's son?

This act, so evilly born, shall cool the hearts
Of all his people, and freeze up their zeal,
That none so small advantage shall strive forth
To check his reign, but they will cherish it
No natural exhalation in the sky,
No scape of nature, no dissembler'd day,
No common wind, no customed event,
But they will pluck away his natural cause,
And call them meteors, prodigies, and signs,
Abortives, presages, and tongues of heaven,
Plainly denouncing vengeance upon John.

Lev. May be, he will not touch young Arthur's life,
But hold himself safe in his imprisonment.

Put. O! sir, when he shall hear of your approach,
If that young Arthur be not gone already,
Even at that news he dies; and then the hearts
Of all his people shall revolt from him,
And kiss the lips of unacquainted change;
And pick strong matter of revolt, and wrath,
Out of the bloody fingers' ends of John.

Methinks, I see this hury all on foot:
And, O! what better matter breeds for you,
Than I have nam'd.—The bastard Faulconbridge
Is now in England ransacking the church,
Offending charity: if but a dozen French
Were there in arms, they would be as a call
To train ten thousand English to their side;
Or as a little snow, tumbling about,
Anon becomes a mountain. O, noble Dauphin!
Go with me to the king. 'T is wonderful,
What may be wrought out of their discontent.
Now that their souls are topful of offence,
For England go; I will whet on the king.

Lev. Strong reasons make strong actions. Let us go:
If you say, ay, the king will not say, no.

ACT IV.

No, indeed, is't not; and I would to heaven,
I were your son, so you would love me, Hubert.

Hub. [Aside.] If I talk to him, with his innocent prate
He will awake my mercy, which lies dead:
Therefore I will be sudden, and dispatch.

Arth. Are you sick, Hubert? you look pale to-day.
In sooth, I would you were a little sick;
That I might sit all night, and watch with you.
I warrant, I love you more than you do me.

Hub. [Aside.] His words do take possession of my bosom.

Read here, young Arthur. [Shewing a paper.] [Aside.] How now, foolish rheum!

Turning dispiteous torture out of door?
I must be brief; lest resolution drop
Out at mine eyes in tender womanish tears.—
Can you not read it? is it not fair writ?

Arth. Too fair, Hubert, for so foul effect.
Must you with hot irons burn out both mine eyes?

Hub. Young boy, I must.

Arth. And will you?

Hub. And I will

Arth. Have you the heart? When your head did but ache,
I knit my handkerchief about your brows,
(The best I had, a princess wrought it me,
And I did never ask it you again:
And with my hand at midnight held your head,
And, like the watchful minutes to the hour.
KING JOHN.

"Adieu, Prince Hubert! I thank you, Hubert."

"Silence! no more. Go closely in with me; much danger do I undergo for thee."
We breath'd our counsel; but it pleas'd your highness
To overbear it, and we are all well-pleas'd;
Since all and every part of what we would,
Doth make a stand at what your highness will.

K. John. Some reasons of this double coronation
I have possess'd you with, and think them strong;
And more, more strong, thus lesseening my fear,
I shall indulge you with: mean time, but ask
What you would have reform'd that is not well,
And well shall you perceive, how willingly
I will both hear and grant you your requests.

Pem. Then I, as one that am the tongue of these,
To sound the purposes of all their hearts,
Both for myself and them, but, chief of all.
Your safety, for the which myself and they Bend their best studies, heartily request
Th' enfranchisement of Arthur; whose restraint
Doth move the musing lips of discontent
To break into this dangerous argument.—
If what in rest you have, in right you hold,
Why should your fears, which, as they say, attend
The steps of wrong, be more than to mew up
Your tender kinman, and to choke his days
With barbarous ignorance, and deny his youth
The rich advantage of good exercise!—
That the time's enemies may not have this to grace occasions, let it be our suit,
That you have bid us ask his liberty;
Which for our goods we do no farther ask.
Than whereupon our weal, on yours depending,
Counts it your weal he have his liberty.

K. John. Let it be so: I do commit his youth

Enter HUBERT.

To your direction.—HUBERT, what news with you?

HUBERT. This is the man should do the bloody deed:
He show'd his warrant to a friend of mine.
The image of a wicked heinous fault
Lives in his eye: that close aspect of his
Both show the mood of a much-troubled breast;
And I do fearfully believe 'tis done,
What we so fear'd he had a more to do.
SAL. The colour of the king doth come and go, between his purpose and his conscience,
Like heralds twixt two dreadful battles set:
His passion is so ripe, it needs must break.

Pem. And when it breaks, I fear, will issue thence
The foul corruption of a sweet child's death.

K. John. We cannot hold mortality's strong hand.—
Good lords, although my will to give is living,
The suit which you demand is gone and dead:
He tells us, Arthur is deceas'd to-night.
SAL. Indeed, we fear'd his sickness was past cure.
Pem. Indeed, we heard how near his death he was,
Before the child himself felt he was sick.
This must be answer'd either here, or hence.
K. John. Why do you bend such solemn brows on me?
Think you, I bear the shears of destiny?
Have I commandment on the pulse of life?
SAL. It is apparent foul play; and 'tis a shame,
That great defenses should so grossly offer it.
So thrive it in your game: and so farewell.

Pem. Stay yet, lord Salisbury, I' shall go with thee,
And find th' inheritance of this poor child,
His little kingdom of a forced grave.
That blood which ow'd the breadth of all this isle,
Three foot of it doth hold: bad world the while.
This must not be thus borne: this will break out
To all our sowers, and ere long, I doubt. [Exeunt Lords.

K. John. They burn in indignation. I repent:
There is no sure foundation set on blood,
No certain life achiev'd by others' death.

Enter a Messenger.

A fearful eye thou hast: where is that blood,
That I have seen inhabit in those cheeks?
So foul a sky clears not without a storm:
Pour down thy weather.—How goes it all in France?

Mess. From France to England.—Never such a power
For any foreign preparation,
Was levied in the body of a land.
The copy of your speed is learn'd by them:
For, when you should be told they do prepare,
The tidings come that they are all arriv'd.

K. John. O! where hath our intelligence been drunk,
Where hath it slept? Where is my mother's care
That such an army could be drawn in France,
And she not hear of it?

Mess. My liege, her ear
Is stopp'd with dust: the first of April, died
Your noble mother: and, as I hear, my lord,
The lady Constance in a frenzy died.
Three days before: but this from rumour's tongue
I idly heard: if true, or false, I know not.

K. John. Withhold thy speech, dreadful Occasion!
O! make a league with me, till I have pleas'd
My discontented peers.—What! mother dead?
How wildly, then, walks my estate in France!—
Under whose conduct come these powers of France,
That thou for truth giv'st out are landed here?

Mess. Under the Dauphin.

Enter the Bastard, and PETER of POMFRET.

K. John. Thou hast made me gidd'y
With these ill-tidings.—Now, what says the world
To your proceedings? do not seek to stuff
My head with more ill news, for it is full.

BAST. But if you be afeard to hear the worst,
Then let the worst, unheard, fall on your head.

K. John. Bear with me, cousin, for I was amaz'd
Under the tide; but now I breathe again
Aloft the flood, and can give audience
To any tongue, speak it of what it will.

BAST. How I have sped among the clergymen,
The sums I have collected shall express:
But as I travell'd hither through the land,
I find the people strangely fantasied;
Possess'd with rumours, full of idle dreams,
Not knowing what they fear, but full of fear;
And here's a pamphlet, that I brought with me
From forth the streets of Pomfret, whom I found
With many hundreds treading on his heels;
To whom he sung, in rude harsh-sounding rhymes,
That ere the next Ascension-day at noon,
Your highness should deliver up your crown.

K. John. Thou idle dreamer, wherefore didst thou so
PETER. Foreknowing that the truth will fall out so.

K. John. Hubert, away with him: imprison him;
And on that day at noon, whereon, he says,
I shall yield up my crown, let him be hang'd.
Deliver him to safety, and return,
For I must use thee.—O my gentle cousin!

Hearst thou the news abroad, who are arriv'd?

Bast. The French, my lord; mon'sieur's mouths are full.
Besides, I met lord Bigot, and lord Salisbury, [of it
With eyes as red as new-enchanted fire,
And others more, going to seek the grave
If Arthur, who, they say, is kill'd to-night
In your suggestion.

1 than least is: in f. e 2 then: in f. e 3 should: in f. e
K. John. Gentle kinsman, go,
And thrust thyself into their companies.
I have a way to win their loves again:
Bring them before me.

Bast. I will seek them out.

K. John. Nay, but make haste; the better foot before.

O! let me have no subject enemies,
When adverse foreigners affright my towns
With dreadful pomp of stout invasion.
Be Mercury; set feathers to thy heels,
And thy like thought from them to me again.

Bast. The spirit of the time shall teach me speed.    [Exit.

K. John. Spoke like a spriteful, noble gentleman.—
Go after him; for he, perhaps, shall need
Some messenger betwixt me and the peers,
And be thou he.

Mess. With all my heart, my liege. [Exit.

K. John. My mother dead!

Re-enter Hubert.

Hub. My lord, they say, five moons were seen to-night:
Four fixed; and the fifth did whirl about
The other four in wonderous motion.

K. John. Five moons?

Hub. Old men, and beldame, in the streets
Do prophesy upon it dangerously,
Young Arthur's death is common in their mouths,
And when they talk of him, they shake their heads,
And whisper one another in the ear;
And he that speaks, doth gripe the hearer's wrist,
Whilst he hears, makes fearful action,
With wrinkled brows, with nods, with rolling eyes.
I saw a smith stand with his hammer, thus,
The whilst his iron did on the anvil cool,
With open mouth swallowing a tailor's news;
Who, with his shears and measure in his hand,
Standing on slippers, (which his nimble haste
Had falsely thrust upon contrary feet)
Told of a many thousand warlike French,
That were embattled and rank'd in Kent.
Another lean, unwash'd artificer
Cuts off his tale, and talks of Arthur's death.

K. John. Why seek'st thou to possess me with these fears?
Why urgest thou so oft young Arthur's death?
Thy hand hath murder'd him: I had a mighty cause
To wish him dead, but thou hast done to kill him.

Hub. Had none, my lord! why, did you not provoke me?

K. John. It is the curse of kings, to be attended
By slaves, that take their humours for a warrant
To break into the bloody house of life;
And, on the winking of authority,
To understand a law; to know the meaning
Of dangerous majesty; when, perchance, it frowns
More upon humour than advis'd respect.

Hub. Here is your hand and seal for what I did.

K. John. O! when the last account 'twixt heaven and earth
Is to be made, then shall this hand and seal
Witness against us to damnation.
How oft the sight of means to do ill deeds,
Makes ill deeds done! Hadst not thou been by,
A fellow by the hand of nature mark'd,
Quoted, and sign'd, to do a deed of shame
This murder had not come into my mind;
But, taking note of thy hour'd aspect,
Finding thee fit for bloody villainy,

Apt, liable to be employ'd in danger,
I faintly broke with thee of Arthur's death;
And thou, to be endeared to a king,
Made it no conscience to destroy a prince.

Hub. My lord,—

K. John. Hadst thou but shook thy head, or made a
When I spoke darkly what I purposed;    [pause.
Or turn'd an eye of doubt upon my face,
Or bid me tell my tale in express words,
Deep shame had struck me dumb, made me break off.
And those thy fears might have wrought fears in me:
But thou didst understand me by my signs,
And didst in signs again parley with sign's:
Yea, without stop, didst let thy heart consent,
And consequently thy rude hand to act
The gend which both our tongues held vile to name
Out of my sight, and never see me more!
My nobles leave me; and my state is brav'd,
Even at my gates, with ranks of foreign powers:
Nay, in the body of this fleshly land,
This kingdom, this confine of blood and breath,
Hostility and civil tumult reigns.

Between my conscience, and my cousin's death.

Hub. Arm you against your other enemies,
I'll make a peace between your soul and you.
Young Arthur is alive: this hand of mine
Is yet a maiden and an innocent hand,
Not painted with the crimson spots of blood.
Within this bosom never enter'd yet
The dreadful motion of a murderous thought,
And you have slander'd nature in my form;
Which, howsoever rude exteriorly,
Is yet the cover of a fairer mind,
Than to be butcher of an innocent child.

K. John. Doth Arthur live? O! haste thee to the peers:
Throw this report on their incensed rage,
And make them tame to their obedience.
Forgive the comment that my passion made
Upon thy feature; for my rage was blind,
And foul imaginary eyes of blood
Presented thee more hideous than thou art.
O! answer not; but to my closet bring
The angry lords, with all expedient haste;
I conjure thee but slowly; run more fast.    [Exeunt.

SCENE III. —The Same. Before the Castle.

Enter Arthur, on the Walls.

Arth. The wall is high; and yet will I leap down.—
Good ground, be pitiful, and hurt me not! —
There's few, or none, do know me; if they did,
This ship-boy's semblance hath disguis'd me quite.
I am afraid; and yet I'll venture it.
If I get down, and do not break my limbs,
I'll find a thousand shifts to get away:
As good to die and go, as die and stay.    [Leaps down
O me! my uncle's spirit is in these stones.—
Heaven take my soul, and England keep my bones. [Dies.

Enter Pembroke, Salisbury, and Bigot.

Sal. Lords, I will meet him at Saint Edmund's Bury.

It is our safety, and we must embrace
This gentle offer of the perious time.

Pen. Who brought that letter from the cardinal?

Sal. The count Melun, a noble lord of France;
Whose private misinside of the Dauphin's love,
Is much more general than these lines import.

Big. To-morrow morning let us meet him then
Sal. Or, rather then set forward: for 't will be
Two long days' journey, lords, or e'er we meet.
Enter the Bastard.

Bast. Once more to-day well met, distemper'd lords, The king by me requests your presence straight.

Sal. The king hath dispossess'd himself of us: We will not line his sin-bestained cloak With our pure honours, nor attend the foot That leaves the print of blood where'er it walks. Return, and tell him so: we know the worst.

Bast. Whate'er you think, good words, I think, were best.

Sal. Our griefs, and not our manners, reason now; Therefore, 't were reason you had manners now.

Pem. Sir Richard, what think you? Have you beheld, Or have you read, or heard? or could you think? Or do you almost think, although you see, That you do see? could thought, without this object, Form such another? This is the very top, The height, the crest, or crest unto the crest, Of murder's arms: this is the bloodiest shame, The wildest savagery, the vilest stroke, That ever wall-ey'd wrath, or starring rage, Present to the tears of soft remorse.

Pem. All murders past do stand excus'd in this; And this, so sole and so unmatchable, Shall give a holiness, a purity, To the yet unbegetter sin of times; And prove a deadly bloodshed but a jest, Exampl'd by this heinous spectacle.

Bast. It is a damned and a bloody work; The graceless action of a heavy hand, If that it be the work of any hand.

Sal. If that it be the work of any hand?— We had a kind of light, what would ensue: It is the shameful work of Hubert's hand; The practice, and the purpose, of the king: From whose obedience I forbid my soul, Kneeling before this ruin of sweet life, And breathing to his breastless excellence The incense of a vow, a holy vow, Never to taste the pleasures of the world, Never to be infected with delight. Nor conversant with ease and idleness, Till I have set a glory to this head, By giving it the worship of revenge.

Pem. Big. Our souls religiously confirm thy words.

Hub. Lords, I am hot with haste in seeking you. Arthur doth live; the king hath sent for you.

Sal. O! he is bold, and blushes not at death.—Avant, thou hateful villain! get thee gone.

Hub. I am no villain.

Sal. Must I rob the law? [Drawing his sword. Bast. Your sword is bright, sir: put it up again.

Sal. Not till I sheath it in a murderer's skin.

Hub. Stand back, lord Salisbury; stand back, I say: By heaven, I think, my sword's as sharp as yours. I would not have you, lord, forget yourself.

Nor tempt the danger of my true defence, Lest I, by marking but your rage, forget Your worth, your greatness, and nobility.

Big. Out, dunghill! dar'st thou brave a nobleman. Hub. Not for my life: but yet I dare defend My innocent life against an emperor.

Sal. Thou art a murderer.

Hub. Do not prove me so.

Yet, I am none. Whose tongue soe'er speaks false. Not truly speaks; who speaks not truly, lies.

Pem. Cut him to pieces.

Bast. Keep the peace, I say.

Sal. Stand by, or I shall gall you, Fustlebridge.

Bast. Thou wert better gall the devil, Salisbury. If thou butrown on me, or stir thy foot, Or teach thy hasty spleen to do me shame, I'll strike thee dead. Put up thy sword betime, Or I'll so maul you and your toasting-iron, That you shall think the devil is come from hell.

Big. What wilt thou do, renowned Faulconbridge? Second a villain, and a murderer.

Hub. Lord Bigot, I am none.

Big. Who kill'd this prince? [Pointing to Arthur Hub. 'Tis not an hour since I left him well: I honour'd him, I lov'd him; and will weep My date of life out for his sweet life's loss.

Sal. Trust not those cunning waters of his eyes. For villainy is not without such rheum; And he, long traded in it, makes it seem Like rivers of remorse and innocence. Away, with me, all you whose souls abhor Thy uncleanly savours of a slaughter-house. For I am stilled with this smell of sin.

Big. Away, toward Bury: to the Dauphin there. Pem. There, tell the king, he may inquire us out. [Execute Lords.

Bast. Here's a good world!—Knew you of this fair work? Beyond the infinite and boundless reach Of mercy, if thou didst this deed of death.

Art thou damn'd, Hubert.

Hub. Do but hear me, sir.

Bast. Ha! I'll tell thee what; Thou art damn'd as black—nay, nothing is so black: Thou art more deep damn'd than prince Lucifer. There is not yet so ugly a fiend of hell As thou shalt be, if thou didst kill this child.

Hub. Upon my soul,—

Bast. If thou didst but consent To this most cruel act, do but despair; And if thou woulst a cord, the smallest thread That ever spider twisted from her womb Will serve to strangle thee: a rush will be a beam To hang thee on: or wouldst thou drown thyself? Put but a little water in a spoon, And it shall be as all the ocean, Enough to stifle such a villain up.

Hub. If I in act, consent, or sin of thought Be guilty of the stealing that sweet breath, Which was embownded in this beauteous clay, Let hell want pains enough to torture me. I left him well.

Bast. Go, bear him in thine arms:— I am amaz'd, methinks; and lose my way Among the thorns and dangers of this world.—

How easy dost thou take all England up! From forth this worse of dead royalty, KING JOHN.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King John, Pandulph with the Crown, and Attendants.

K. John. Thus have I yielded up into your hand
The circle of my glory.

From this my hand, as holding of the pope,
Your sovereign greatness and authority.

K. John. Now keep your holy word: go meet the French;
And from his holiness use all your power
To stop their marches: 'tis now we are inflam'd,
Our discontented counties do revolt,
Our people quarrel with obedience,
Swearing allegiance, and the love of soul,
To stranger blood, to foreign royalty.
This inundation of mistemper'd humour
Rests by you only to be qualified:
Then pause not: for the present time's so sick.
That present medicine must be minister'd,
Or overthrown incurable ensues.

Pand. It was my breath that blew this tempest up,
Upon your stubborn usage of the pope;
But since you are a gentle convert,
My tongue shall hush again this storm of war,
And make fair weather in your plundering land.

On this Ascension-day, remember well,
Upon your oath of service to the pope,
Go I to make the French lay down their arms. [Exit.

K. John. Is this Ascension-day? Did not the prophet
Say that before Ascension-day at noon,
My crown I should give off? Even so I have.
I did suppose it should be on constraint;
But, heaven be thank'd, it is but voluntary.

Enter the Bastard. [Exit.

Bast. All Kent hath yielded: nothing there holds
But Dover castle: London hath receiv'd.
Like a kind host, the Dauphin and his powers.
Your nobles will not hear you, but are gone
To offer service to your enemy:
And wild amazement hurries up and down
The little number of your doubtful friends.

K. John. Would not my lords return to me again,
After they heard young Arthur was alive?

Bast. They found him dead, and cast into the streets;
An empty casket, where the jewel of life
By some damned hand was robb'd and ta'en away.

K. John. That villain Hubert told me he did live.

Bast. So, on my soul, he did, for aught he knew.
But wherefore do you droop? why look you sad?
Be great in act, as you ha've been in thought;
Let not the world see fear, and blank distrust,
Govern the motion of a kingly eye:

As doth a raven on a sick-fallen beast,
The imminent decay of wrested pomp.
Now happy he, whose cloak and cincture can Hold out this tempest.—Bear away that child,
And follow me with speed: I'll to the king.
A thousand businesses are brief in hand,
And heaven itself doth frown upon the land.

[Exeunt: Hubert bearing out Arthur's body.]

ACT V.

Be stirring as the time; meet! fire with fire,
Threaten the threaten, and outface the brow
Of bragging horror: so shall inferior eyes,
That borrow their behaviours from the great,
Grow great by your example, and put on
The dauntless spirit of resolution.
Away! and glister like the god of war,
When he intendeth to become the field:
Show boldness, and aspiring confidence.
What! shall they seek the lion in his den,
And fright him there? and make him tremble there?
O! let it not be said.—Courage, and run
To meet displeasure further from the doors,
And grapple with him ere he come so nigh.

K. John. The legate of the pope hath been with me.
And I have made a happy peace with him;
And he hath promised to dismiss the powers
Led by the Dauphin.

Bast. O, inglorious league!
Shall we, upon the footing of our land,
Send fair-play offers, and make compromise,
Insinuation, parley, and base truce.

To arms invasive? shall a beardless boy,
A cocker'd silken wanton, brave our fields,
And dash his spirit in a warlike soil,
Mocking the air with colours idly spread,
And find no check? Let us, my liege, to arms:
Perchance the cardinal cannot make your peace;
Or if he do, let it at least be said,
They saw we had a purpose of defence.

K. John. Have thou the ordering of this present time.

Bast. Away then, with good courage; yet I know,
Our party may well meet a prouder foe. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Plain, near St. Edmund's Bury

Enter, in arms, Lewis, Salisbury, Melun, Pembroke,
Bigot, and Soldiers.

Lewis. My lord Melun, let this be copied out,
And keep it safe for our remembrance.
Return the precedent to these lords again;
That, having our fair order written down,
Both they, and we, perusing these notes,
May know wherefore we took the sacrament,
And keep our faiths firm and inviolable.

Sal. Upon our sides it never shall be broken.
Aud. noble Dauphin, albeit we swear
A voluntary zeal, and an unurg'd faith,
To your proceedings; yet, believe me, prince,
I am not glad that such a sore of time
Should seek a plaster by contempt'd revolt,
And heal the inveterate canker of one wound.
By making many. O! it grieves my soul,
That I must draw this metal from my side...
To be a widow-maker; O! and there,
Where honourable rescue, and defence,
Cries out upon the name of Salisbury.
But such is the infection of the time,
That, for the health and physic of our right,
We cannot deal but with the very hand
Of stern injustice and confused wrong.—
And 'tis not pity, O, my grieved friends!
That we, the sons and children of this isle,
Were born to see so sad an hour as this;
Wherein we step after a stranger, march
Upon her gentle bosom, and fill up
Her enemies' ranks, (I must withdraw, and weep
Upon the thought of this enforced cause)
To grace the gentry of a land remote,
And follow unacquainted colours here?
What, here?—O nation, that thou couldst remove
That Neptune's arms, who clipped thee about,
Would bear thee from the knowledge of thyself,
And grasp thee tuple into a pagan shore;
Where these two Christian armies might combine
The blood of malice in a vein of league,
And not to spend it so unneighbourly!

Lev. A noble temper dost thou show in this;
And great affections wresting in thy bosom
Do make an earthquake of nobility.
O! what a noble combat hast thou fought,
Between compulsion, and a brave respect!
Let me wipe off this honourable dew,
That silverly dost progress on thy checks.
My heart hath melted at a lady's tears,
Being an ordinary inundation;
But this effusion of such mainy drops,
This shower, blown up by tempest of the soul,
Startles mine eyes, and makes me more amaz'd
Than had I seen the vanity top of heaven
Figur'd quite o'er with wringing meteors.
Lift up thy brow, renowned Salisbury,
And with a great heart heave away this storm:
Commend these waters to those baby eyes,
That never saw the giant-world enrag'd:
Nor met with fortune other than at feasts,
Full of warm blood, of mirth, of gossipping.
Come, come: for thou shalt thrust thy hand as deep
Into the purse of rich prosperity,
As Lewis himself:—so, nobles, shall you all,
That knot your shews to the strength of mine.

Enter PANDELF, attended.
And even there, methinks, an angel spake:
Look, where the holy legate comes apace,
To give us warrant from the hand of heaven,
And on our actions set the name of right
With holy breath.

Pand. Hail, noble prince of France.
The next is this:—king John hath reconcile'd
Himself to Rome; his spirit is come in,
That so stood out against the holy church.
The great metropolis and see of Rome:
Therefore, thy threatening colours now wind up,
And tame the savage spirit of wild war,
That, like a lion foster'd up at hand,
It may lie gentle at the foot of peace,
And be no farther harmful than in show.

Lev. Your grace shall pardon me: I will not back
I am too high-born to be propriety,
To be a secondary at control,
Or useful serving-man, and instrument,
To any sovereign state throughout the world.

1 spot: in f. e. 2 Embrace. 3 So the folio.; The bold, and most ed. read: unheird (i.e. unbearded). 4 and: in f. e. 5 crow: in f. e.

Your breath first kindled the dead coals of wars
Between this chastis'd kingdom and myself,
And brought in matter that should feed this fire;
And now 'tis far too huge to be blown out
With that same weak wind which enkindled it.
You taught me how to know the face of right,
Acquainted me with interest to this land,
'Ye, thrust this enterprise into my heart,
And come ye now to tell me, John hath made
His peace with Rome? What is that peace to me?
1, by the honour of my marriage-bed.
After young Arthur, claim this land for mine;
And now it is half-conquer'd, must I back,
Because that John hath made his peace with Rome?
Am I Rome's slave? What penny hath Rome borne?
What men provided, what munition sent,
To underproach this action? is't not 1,
That undergo this charge? who else but I,
And such as to my claim are liable,
Sweat in this business, and maintain this war?
Have I not heard these islanders shout out,
Vive le roy! as I have bank'd their towns?
Have I not here the best cards for the game,
To win this easy match, play'd for a crown,
And shall I now give over the yielded set?
No, on my soul, it never shall be said.

Pand. You look but on the outside of this work.
Lev. Outside or inside, I will not return
Till my attempt so much be glorified,
As to my ample hope was promised
Before I drew this gallant head of war,
And could these fiery spirits from the world,
To outlook conquest, and to win renown
Even in the jaws of danger and of death.—

[Trumpet sounds]

What lusty trumpet thus doth summon us?

Enter the Bastard, attended.

Bast. According to the fair play of the world,
Let me have audience: I am sent to speak.—
My holy lord of Milan, from the king
I come, to learn how you have dealt for him;
And, as you answer, I do know the scope
And warrant limited unto my tongue.

Pand. The Dauphin is too wilful-opposite,
And will not temporize with my entreaties.
He dully says, he 'll not lay down his arms.

Bast. By all the blood that ever fury breath'd,
The youth says well.—Now, hear our English king,
For thus his royalty doth speak in me.
He is prepar'd; and reason, too, he should:
This spush and unmanly approach,
This harness'd masque, and unadvised revel,
This unheard' sauntness of boyish troops,
The king doth smile at; and is well prepar'd
To whip this dwarfish war, these pigmy arms,
From out the circle of his territories.
That hand, which had the strength, even at your door
To edgel you, and make you take the hatch;
To dive like bucks in concealed wells;
To crouch in litter of your stable planks;
To lie like pawns look'd up in chests and trunks,
To hug with swine; to seek sweet safety out
In vaults and prisons, and to thrill, and shake,
Even at the crowing of your nation's cock,
Thinking his voice an armed Englishman:
Shall that victorious hand be feedled here,
That in your chambers gave you chastisement?
No! Know, the gallant monarch is in arms:
KING JOHN.

ACT V.

SCENE III. — The Same. A Field of Battle.

Alarums. Enter King John and Hubert.

K. John. How goes the day with us? O! tell me, Hubert.

Hub. Badly, I fear. How fares your majesty?

K. John. This fever, that hath troubled me so long, Lies heavy on me: O! my heart is sick.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, your valiant kinsman, Faulconbridge, Desires your majesty to leave the field, And send him word by me which way you go.

K. John. Tell him, toward Swinestead, to the abbey there.

Mess. Bo of good comfort; for the great supply, That was expected by the Dauphin here, Are wreak'd three nights ago on Goodwin sands: This news was brought to Richard but even now. The French fight coldly, and retire themselves.

K. John. Ah me! this tyrant fever burns me up, And will not let me welcome this good news. Set on toward Swinestead; to my litter straight: Weakness possesseth me, and I am faint. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. — The Same. Another part of the Same.

Enter Salisbury, Pembroke, Bigot, and Others.

Sol. I did not think the king so staid with friends.

Pem. Up once again; put spirit in the French: if they miscarry, we miscarry too.

Bigot. Sol. That misbegotten dauphin, Faulconbridge, In spite of all, alone upholds the day.

Pem. They say, king John sore sick hath left the field. Enter Melun wounded, and led by Soldiers. Mel. Lead me to the revolts of England here.

Sal. When we were happy we had other names.

Pem. It is the count Melun.

Sal. Wounded to death.

Mel. Fly, noble English; you are bought and sold: Untread the road-way of rebellion.

And welcome home again discarded faith.

Seek out king John, and fall before his feet; For if the French be lords of this loud day, He means to recompense the pains you take, By cutting off your heads. Thus hath he sworn, And I with him, and many more with me, Upon the altar at Saint Edmund's Bury; Even on that altar, where we swore to you, Dear amity and everlasting love.

Sal. May this be possible? may this be true?

Mel. Have I not hitherto death within my view. Retaining but a quantity of life, Which bleeds away, even as a form of wax. Resolveth from his figure 'gainst the fire? What in the world should make me now deceive. Since I must lose the use of all deceit? Why should I then be false, since it is true? That I must die here, and live hence by truth? I say again, if Lewis do win the day, He is forsworn, if e'er those eyes of yours Behold another day break in the east; But even this night, whose black contagious breath Already smokes about the burning crest Of the old, feeble, and day-wearied sun. Even this ill night, your breathing shall expire, Paying the fine of rated treachery, Even with a treacherous fire of your lives, If Lewis by your assistance win the day. Command me to one Hubert, with your king; The love of him,—and this respect besides, For that my grand-dire was an Englishman,— Awakes my conscience to confess all this. In lieu whereof, I pray you, bear me hence From forth the noise and rumour of the field; Where I may think the remnant of my thoughts In peace, and part this body and my soul With contemplation and devout desires. Sal. We do believe the devil and beseech our soul But I do love the favour and the form Of this most fair occasion, by the which We will untread the steps of damned flight; And, like a hated and retired flood, Leaving our rankness and irregular course, Stoop low within those bounds we have o'erlook'd. And calmly run on in obedience. Even to our ocean, to our great king John,— My arm shall give thee help to bear thee hence. For I do see the cruel pangs of death Bright3 in thine eye.—Away, my friends! New flight Ana happy newness, that intends old right. [Exeunt, leading off Melun.]

SCENE V. — The Same. The French Camp. Enter Lewis and his Train.

Leu. The sun of heaven, methought, was loath to set But stay'd, and made the western welkin blush, When English measured backward their own ground In faint retire. O! bravely came we off, When with a volley of our useless shot, After such bold talk we bid good night, And wound our tattered colours close up.4 Last in the field, and almost lords of it! Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Where is my prince, the Dauphin?
KING JOHN.

SCENE VII.—The Orchard of Swinsest-Abbev.

Enter Prince Henry, Salisbury, and Bigot.

P. Hen. It is too late: the life of all his blood Is touch'd corruptibly; and his pure brain (Which some suppose the soul's frail dwelling-house) Doth, by the idle comments that it makes, Foretell the ending of mortality.

Enter Pembroke.

Pem. His highness yet doth speak; and holds belief That being brought into the open air, It would allay the burning quality Of that hell poison which assaileth him.

P. Hen. Let him be brought into the orchard here.— Doth he still rage?

Exit Bigot

Pem.

He is more patient Than when you left him: even now he sung.

P. Hen. O, vanity of sickness! fierce extremes In their continuance will not feel themselves. Death, having prey'd upon the outward parts, Leaves them unvisited; and his siege is now Against the mind, which he pricks and wounds With many legions of strange fantasies, Which, in their throng and press to that last hold, Confound themselves. 'Tis strange that death should sing.

I am the cygnet to this pale faint swan, Who chants a doleful hymn to his own death, And from the organ-pipe of frailty sings His soul and body to their lasting rest.

Sal. Be of good comfort, prince, for you are born To set a form upon that indigent, Which he hath left so shapeless and so rude.

Re-enter Bigot and Attendants: King John brought in a Chair.

K. John. Ay, marry, now my soul hath elbow-room. It would not out at windows, nor at doors. There is so hot a summer in my bosom, That all my bowels crumble up to dust: I am a scribbled form, drawn with a pen Upon a parchment, and against this fire Do I shrink up.

P. Hen. How fares your majesty?

K. John. Poison'd,—ill-fare:—dead, forsook, cast off And none of you will bid the winter come, To thrust my icy fingers in my maw; Nor let my kingdom's rivers take their course Through my burn'd bosom; nor entreat the north To make his bleak winds kiss my parched lips, And comfort me with cold. —I do not ask you much: I beg cold comfort: and you are so strait, And so ingrateful, you deny me that.

P. Hen. O, that there were some virtue in my tears That might relieve you!

K. John. The salt in them is hot.— Within me is a hell; and there the poison Is, as a fiend, confin'd to tyrannize On unreprievable condemned blood.

Enter the Bastard.

Bast. O! I am scalded with my violent motion, And spleen of speed to see your majesty.

K. John. O cousin! thou art come to set mine eye The tackle of my heart is crack'd and burn'd; And all the shrouds, wherewith my life should sail, Are turned to one thread, one little hair: My heart hath one poor string to stay it by, Which holds but till thy news be uttered, And then all this thou seest is but a clod, And model of confounded royalty.

Lew. Ah, foul shrewd news! —Beshrew thy very heart!

Lew. The count Melun is slain: the English lords, By his persuasion, are again fallen off; And your supplies, which you have wish'd so long, Are cast away, and sunk, on Goodwin sands.

Lew. Who, foul shrewd news! —Beshrew thy very heart!

Lew. I did not think to be so sad to-night, As this hath made me. —Who was he, that said, King John did fly an hour or two before.

The steeple's midnight did part our weary powers?

Mess. Who ever spake it, it is true, my lord.

Lew. Well: keep good quarter, and good care to-night.

The day shall not be up so soon as I.

To try the fair adventure of to-morrow. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—An open Place in the Neighbourhood of Swinsest-Abbev.

Enter the Bastard and Hubert, severally.

Hub. Who's there? speak, ho! speak quickly, or I shoot.

Bast. A friend. —What art thou?

Hub. Of the part of England.

Bast. Where didst thou go?

Hub. What's that to thee? Why may not I demand Of thine affairs, as well as thine tongue so well.

Bast Hubert, I think.

Hub. Thou hast a perfect thought: I will, upon all hazards, well believe Thou art my friend, that know'st my tongue so well.

Bast. Who art thou?

Hub. Thou wilt: and, if thou please, Thou may'st befriend me so much, as to think I come one way of the Plantagenets.

Hub. Unkind remembrance! thou, and eyeless night, Have done me shame. —Brave soldier, pardon me, That any accent breaking from thy tongue Should 'scape the true acquaintance of mine ear.

Bast. Come, come; sans compliment, what news abroad?

Hub. Why, here walk I, in the black brow of night, To find you out.

Bast. Brief, then; and what's the news?

Hub. O! my sweet sir, news fitting to the night, Black, fearful, comfortless, and horrible.

Bast. Show me the very wound of this ill news: I am no woman; I'll not swoon at it.

Hub. The king, I fear, is poison'd by a monk; I left him almost speechless, and broke out To acquaint you with this evil, that you might The better arm you to the sudden time, Than if you had at leisure known of this.

Bast. How did he take it? who did taste to him?

Hub. A monk, I tell you; a resolved villain, Whose bowels suddenly burst out: the king Yet speaks, and, peradventure, may recover.

Bast. Whom didst thou leave to tend his majesty?

Hub. Why, know you not? the lords are all come back, And brought prince Henry in their company; At whose request the king hath pardon'd them, And they are all about his majesty.

Bast. Withhold thin indignation, mighty heaven, And tempt us not to bear above our power.

I'll tell thee, Hubert, half my power this night, Passing these flats, are taken by the tide; These Lincoln washes have devoured them: Myself well-mounted hardly have escap'd. Away, before: conduct me to the king; I doubt, he will be dead or ere I come. [Exeunt.
Bast. The Dauphin is preparing hitherward,
Where, heaven he knows, how we shall answer him;
For, in a night, the best part of my power,
As I upon advantage did remove,
Were in the washes, all unwarily,
Devoured by the unexpected flood.
[King John dies.]

Sal. You breathe these dead news in as dead an ear.—
My liege! my lord!—But now a king, now thus.
P. Hen. Even so must I run on, and even so stop.
What surety of the world, what hope, what stay,
When this was now a king, and now is clay?
Bast. Art thou gone so? I do but stay behind,
To do the office for thee of revenge,
And then my soul shall wait on thee to heaven,
As it on earth hath been thy servant still.—
Now, now, you stars, that move in your right spheres,
Where be your powers? Show now your mended faiths,
And instantly return with me again,
To push destruction, and perpetual shame,
Out of the weak door of our fainting land.
Straight let us seek, or straight we shall be sought:
The Dauphin rages at our very heels.
Sal. It seems you know not, then, so much as we,
The cardinal Pandulph is within at rest,
Who half an hour since came from the Dauphin,
And brings from him such offers of our peace
As we with honour and respect may take,
With purpose presently to leave this war.
Bast. He will the rather do it, when he sees Ourselves well sinew'd to our own defence.
Sal. Nay, it is in a manner done already;
For many carriages he hath despatch'd
To the sea-side, and put his cause and quarrel
To the disposing of the cardinal:
With whom yourself, myself, and other lords,
If you think meet, this afternoon will post
To consummate this business happily.
Bast. Let it be so.—And you, my noble prince,
With other princes that may best be spar'd,
Shall wait upon your father's funeral.
P. Hen. At Worcester must his body be inter'd.
For so he will'd it.
Bast. Thither shall it then.
And happily may your sweet self put on
The lineal state and glory of the land:
To whom, with all submission, on my knee,
I do bequeath my faithful services,
And true subjection everlasting;
Sal. And the like tender of our love we make,
To rest without a spot for evermore.
P. Hen. I have a kind soul, that would give you thanks
And knows not how to do it, but with tears.
Bast. O! let us pay the time but needful woe,
Since it hath been beforehand with our griefs.—
This England never did, nor never shall,
Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror,
But when it first did help to wound itself.
Now these, her princes, are come home again,
Come the three corners of the world in arms,
And we shall shock them. Nought shall make us mo
If England to itself do rest but true.
[Exit.]

KING JOHN.
THE LIFE AND DEATH
OF
KING RICHARD II.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

King Richard the Second.
Edmund of Langley, Duke of York.
Henry Bolingbroke, Duke of Hereford.
Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk.
Duke of Surrey.
Bushy, [Bishops.]
Bagot, [Creatures to King Richard.]
Green, [Earl of Northumberland.]

Lords, Heralds, Officers, Soldiers, Gardeners, Keeper, Messenger, Groom, and other Attendants.

SCENE, dispersedly in England and Wales.

ACT I.

Enter King Richard; attended; John of Gaunt, and other Nobles, with him.

K. Rich. Old John of Gaunt, time-honour'd Lancast-er,
Hast thou, according to thy oath and band, brought hither Henry Hereford, thy bold son, here to make good the boisterous late appeal, Which then our leisure would not let us hear, Against the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray ?

Gaunt. I have, my liege.

K. Rich. Tell me, moreover, hast thou sounded him, if he appeal the duke on ancient malice, Or worthily, as a good subject should.

On some known ground of treachery in him?

Gaunt. As near as I could sift him on that argument, On some apparent danger seen in him, Aim'd at your highness; no inveterate malice.

K. Rich. Then call them to our presence: face to face,

And frowning brow to brow, ourselves will hear Th' accuser, and th' accused, freely speak.—

[Exeunt some Attendants.

High stomach'd are they both, and full of ire, In rage deaf as the sea, hasty as fire.

Re-enter Attendants, with Bolingbroke and Norfolk.

Boling. Full many years of happy days befal My gracious sovereign, my most loving liege! Nor. Each day still better other's happiness; Until the heavens, envying earth's good hap, Add an immortal title to your crown!

K. Rich. We thank you both; yet one but fia 1—rus

As well appeareth by the cause you come; Namely, to appeal each other of high treason.—

Cousin of Hereford, what dost thou object Against the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray ?

Boling. First, heaven be the record to my speech: In the devotion of a subject's love,

Tendering the precious safety of my prince.

And free from wrath or misbegotten hate, Come I appellant to this princely presence.—

Now, Thomas Mowbray, do I turn to thee, And mark my greeting well; for what I speak, My body shall make good upon this earth, Or my divine soul answer it in heaven.

Thou art a traitor, and a miscreant; Too good to be so, and too bad to live,

Since the more fair and crystal is the sky,

The uglier seem the clouds that in it fly.

Once more, the more to aggravate the note, With a foul traitor's name stuff I thy throat:

And wish, (so please my sovereign) ere I move,

What my tongue speaks, my right-drawn sword may prove.

Nor. Let not my cold words here accuse my zeal:
T is not the trial of a woman's war,

The bitter clamour of two eager tongues,

Can arbitrate this cause betwixt us twain:

The blood is hot that must be cool'd for this:

Yet can I not of such tame patience boast,

As to be hush'd, and nought at all to say,

First, the fair reverence of your highness curbs me

From giving rein and spur* to my free speech,

327
Which else would post, until it had return'd
These terms of treason doubled down his throat.
Setting aside his high blood's royalty,
And let him be no kinman to my Hege,
I do defy him, and I spitt at him;
Call him a slander-crowding villain;
Which to maintain I would allow him odds,
And meet him, were I tied to run a-foot
Even to the frozen ridges of the Alps,
Or any other ground inhabitable,
Where ever Englishman durst set his foot.
Mean'time, let this defend my loyalty:
By all my hopes, most falsely doth he lie.

Boling. Pale trembling coward, there I throw my Disclaiming here the kindness of the king;
And lay aside my high blood's royalty,
Which fear, not reverence, makes thee to except:
If guilty dread have left thee so much strength,
As to take upon mine honour's paw, then stop.
By that and all the rites of knighthood else,
Will I make good against thee, arm to arm,
What I have spoke, or thou canst worse devise.
Nor. I take it up; and, by that sword I swear,
Which gently laid my knighthood on my shoulder,
I'll answer thee in any fair degree,
or chivalrous design of knightly trial:
And, when I mount, alive may I not light,
If I be traitor, or unjustly fight!

K. Rich. What doth our cousin lay to Mowbray's charge?
It must be great, that can inherit us
So much as of a thought of ill in him.

Boling. Look, what I speak, my life shall prove it true:
That Mowbray hath receiv'd eight thousand nobles,
in name of lendings for your highness's soldiers,
The which he hath detain'd for levied* employments,
Like a false traitor, and injurious villain.
Besides, I say, and will in battle prove,
or here, or elsewhere, to the furthest verge
That ever was survey'd by English eye,
That all the treasons, for these eighteen years
Complotted and contrived in this land,
Fetch from false Mowbray their first head and spring.
Farther, I say, and farther will maintain
Upon his bad life to make all this good,
That he did plot the duke of Gloucester's death;
Suggest his soon-believing adversaries,
And, consequently, like a traitor-coward,
Stole out his innocent soul through streams of blood:
Which blood, like sacrificing Abel's, cries,
Even from the tongueless caverns of the earth,
To me (for justice, and rough chastisement): And, by the glorious worth of my descent,
This arm shall do it, or this life be spent.

K. Rich. How high a pitch his resolution soars!-
Thomas of Norfolk, what say' sthou to this?
Nor. O! let my sovereign turn away his face,
And bid his ears a little while he deaf,
Till I have told this slander of his blood.
How God, and good men, hate so foul a liar.

K. Rich. Mowbray, impartial are our eyes, and ears:
Were he my brother, nay, my kingdom's heir,
As he is but my father's brother's son,
Now by my sceptre's awe I make a vow,
Sach neighbour nearness to our sacred blood
Should nothing privilege him, nor partialize
The unstopping firmness of my upright soul.

He is our subject, Mowbray, so art thou:
Free speech and fearless, I to thee allow.
Nor. Then, Bolingbroke, as low as to thy heart.
Through the false passage of thy throat, thou liest
Three parts of that receipt I had for Calais,
Disbur'd I dul'd to his highness's soldiers:
The other part reserved I by command;
For that my sovereign liege was in my debt,
Upon remainder of a clear account,
Since last I went to France to fetch his queen.
Now, swallow down that lie.—For Gloriest's death,
I slew him not: but to mine own disgrace,
Neglected my sworn duty in that case.—
For you, my noble lord of Lancaster,
The honourable father to my foe,
Once did I lay an ambush for your life,
A trespass that doth vex my grieved soul;
But, ere I last receiv'd the sacrament,
I did confess it, and exactly begg'd
Your grace's pardon, and, I hope, I had it.
This is my fault: as for the rest appeal'd,
It issues from the rancour of a villain,
A reagent and most degenerate traitor;
Which in myself I boldly will defend,
And interchangeably hurl down my gage
Upon this overweening traitor's foot,
To prove myself a loyal gentleman
Even in the best blood chamber'd in his bosom.

K. Rich. Wrath-kindled gentlemen, be rul'd by me
Let's purge this choler without letting blood:
This we prescribe, though no physician:
Deep malice makes too deep incision.
Forget, forgive; conclude, and be agreed;
Our doctors say this is no month to bleed.—
Good uncle, let this end where it begun;
We'll calm the duke of Norfolk, you your son.

Gaunt. To be a make-piece shall become my age.
Throw down, my son, the duke of Norfolk's gage.

K. Rich. And, Norfolk, throw down his.

Gaunt. When, Harry? when?

Obedience bids, I should not bid again.
K. Rich. Norfolk, throw down; we bid; there is not so little.

Nor. Myself I throw, dread sovereign, at thy foot
My life thou shalt command, but not my shame.
The one my duty owes; but my fair name,
Despite of death that lives upon my grave,
To dark dishonour's use thou shalt not have.
I am disgrace'd, impeach'd, and baffled here,
Pier'd to the soul with slander's venom'd spee:
The which no balm can cure, but his heart-blood
Which breathed that poison.

K. Rich. Rage must be withstood
Give me his gage:—lions make leopards tame.
Nor. Yea, but not change his spots: take my shame,
And I resign my gage. My dear, dear lord,
The purest treasure mortal times afford
Is spotless reputation: that away,
Men are but gilded loan, or painted clay.
A jewel in a ten times bar'd-up chest
Is a bold spirit in a loyal breast.
Mine honour is my life: both grow in one:
Take honour from me, and my life is done.
Then, dear my liege, mine honour let me try;
In that I live, and for that will I die.

1 Uninhabitable: often so used by contemporary writers. 2 From the quart. 1597. 3 So the folio; quart. 1597: said. 4 Driscoll.

Boling. O! God defend my soul from such deep sin.
Shall I seem crest-fall'n in my father's sight?
Or with pale beggar-fear impeach my height
Before this oufard's dastard? Ere my tongue
Shall wound mine honour with such feeble wrong,
Or sound so base a parle, my tooth shall tear
The slavish motive of recanting fear,
And spit it bleeding in his high disgrace,
Where shame doth harbour, even in Mowbray's face.

[Exit Gaunt.

K. Rich. We were not born to sue, but to command:
Which since we cannot do to make you friends,
Be ready, as your lives shall answer it.
At Coventry, upon Saint Lambert's day,
There shall your swords and lances arbitrate
The swelling difference of your settled hate:
Since we cannot atone you, we shall see
Justice design the victor's chivalry.—
Lord Marshal, command our officers at arms,
Be ready to direct these home-alarms.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same. A Room in the Duke of Lancaster's Palace.

Enter Gaunt, and Duchess of Gloster.

Gaunt. Alas! the part I had in Gloster's blood* Doth more solcit me, than your exclains.
To stir against the butchers of his life:
But since correction lieth in those hands,
Which made the fault that we cannot correct,
Put we our quarrel to the will of heaven;
Who when they see the hours ripe on earth,
Will rain hot vengeance on offenders' heads.

Duch. Finds brotherhood in thee no sharper spur?
Hath love in thy old blood no living fire?
Edward's seven sons, whereof thyself art one,
Were as seven phials of his sacred blood,
Or seven fair branches springing from one root:
Some of those seven are dried by nature's course,
Some of those branches by the destinies cut;
But Thomas, my dear lord, my life, my Gloster,
One phial full of Edward's sacred blood,
One flourishing branch of his most royal root,
Is crack'd, and all the precious liquor spilt;
Is hack'd down, and his summer leaves all faded,
By envy's hand, and murder's bloody axe.
Ah! Gaunt, his blood was thine: that bed, that womb,
That metal, that self-mould, that fashion'd thee,
Made him a man: and though thou liv'st, and breath'st,
Yet art thou slain in him. Thou dost consent
In some large measure to thy father's death,
In that thou seest thy wretched brother die,
Who was the model of thy father's life.
Call it not patience, Gaunt: it is despair:
In suffering thus thy brother to be slaughtered,
Thou show'st the naked pathway to thy life,
Teaching stern murder how to butcher thee.
That which in mean men we entitle patience,
Is pale cold cowardice in noble breasts.

What shall I say? to safeguard thine own life,
The best way is to venge my Gloster's death.

Gaunt God's is the quarrel; for God's substitute,
His deputy anointed in his sight,
Hath caus'd his death; the which, if wrongfully,
Let heaven revenge, for I may never lift
An angry arm against his minister.

Duch. Where then, alas! may I complain myself?

Gaunt. To God, the widow's champion and defender.
Duch. Why then, I will.—Farewell, farewell.* out
Gaunt.

Thou go'st to Coventry, there to behold
Our cousin Hereford and tell Mowbray fight.
O! sit my husband's wrongs on Hereford's spear,
That it may enter butcher Mowbray's breast;
Or if misfortune miss the first career,
Be Mowbray's sins so heavy in his bosom,
That they may break his foaming course's back,
And throw the rider headlong in the lists,
A caitiff recreant to my cousin Hereford.
Farewell, old Gaunt: thy sometime brother's wife
With her companion grief must end her life.

Gaunt. Sister, farewell: I must to Coventry.
As much good stay with thee, as go with me.

Duch. Yet one word more.—Grief boundeth where it falls,
Not with the empty hollowness, but weight:
I take my leave before I have begun.
For sorrow ends not when it seemeth done.
Commend me to my brother, Edmund York.
Lo! this is all:—nay, yet depart not so;
Though this be all, do not so quickly go;
I shall remember more. Bid him—O! what—
With all good speed at Flashy visit me.

Alack! and what shall so good old York there see,
But empty lodgings and unfinish'd walls,
Unpeopled offices, untrodden stones?
And what heart* there for welcome, but my groans?
Therefore commend me: let him not come there.
To seek out sorrow that dwells everywhere.
Desolate, desperate,* will I hence, and die:
The last leave of thee takes my weeping eye.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Gosford Green, near Coventry.

Lists set out, and a Throne. Heralds, &c., attending.

Enter the Lord Marshal, and Aumerle.

Mar. My lord Aumerle, is Harry Hereford arm'd?
Aum. Yea, at all points, and longs to enter in.
Mar. The duke of Norfolk, sprightfully and bold,
Stays but the summons of the appellant's trumpet.

Aum. Why then, the champions are prepar'd, and stay
For nothing but his majesty's approach.

Flourish. Enter King Richard, who takes his seat on his Throne; Gaunt, Bushy, Bagot, Green, and others, who take their places. A Trumpet is sounded, and answered by another Trumpet within. Then enter Norfolk in armour, preceded by a Herald.

K. Rich. Marshal, demand of yonder champion
The cause of his arrival here in arms:
Ask him his name; and orderly proceed
To swear him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. In God's name, and the king's, say who thou art,
And why thou com'st thus knightly clad in arms:
Against what man thou com'st, and what thy quarrel.
Speak truly, on thy knighthood, and thine oath,
As so defend thee heaven, and thy valour!

Nor. My name is Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk.

Who hither come en enraged by my oath,
(Which, God defend, a knight should violate;)
Both to defend my loyalty and truth,
To God, my king, and my succeeding issue,
Against the duke of Hereford that appeals me
And, by the grace of God and this mine arm,
To prove him, in defending of myself,
A traitor to my God, my king, and me:
And, as I truly fight, defend me heaven!

Trumpets sound. Enter Bolingbroke, in armour, preceded by a Herald.

K. Rich. Marshal, ask yonder knight in arms,
Both who he is, and why he cometh hither
Thus plaited in habiliments of war;
And formally, according to our law,
Depose him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. What is thy name, and wherefore com'st thou hither,
Before King Richard in his royal lists?
Against whom com'st thou? and what is thy quarrel?
Speak like a true knight; so defend thee heaven!

Boling. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
And, I: who ready here do stand in arms,
To prove by God's grace, and my body's valour,
In lists, on Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk,
That he's a traitor, foul and dangerous,
To God of heaven, king Richard, and to me:
And, as I truly fight, defend me heaven!

Mar. On pain of death no person be so bold,
Or daring hardy, as to touch the lists;
Except the marshal, and such officers
Appointed to direct those fair designs.

Boling. Lord marshal, let me kiss my sovereign's
And bow my knee before his majesty: [hand,
For Mowbray and myself are like two men
That vow a long and weary pilgrimage;
Then let us take a ceremonious leave,
And loving farewell of our several friends.

Mar. The appellant in all duty greets your highness,
And craves to kiss your hand, and take his leave.

K. Rich. We will descend, and fold him in our arms.
Cousin of Hereford, as thy cause is right,
So be thy fortune in this royal fight.
Farewell, my blood: which if to-day thou shed,
Lament we may, but not revenge thee dead.

Boling. O! let no noble eye profane a tear
For me, if I be guid'd with Mowbray's spear.

As confident as is the falcon's flight,
Against a bird, do I with Mowbray fight.

My loving lord, I take my leave of you:—
Of you, my noble cousin, lord Aumerle:
Not sick, although I have to do with death,
But lusty, young, and cheerily drawing breath.
I go! as at English feasts, so I regard
The daintiest last, to make the end most sweet:
O! thou, [To Gaunt.] the earthy author of my
Whose youthful spirit, in me regenerate,
Both with a two-fold vigour lift me up
To reach at victory above my head,
Add proof unto mine armour with thy prayers;
And with thy blessings steel my lance's point,
That it may enter Mowbray's waxen coat,
And furbish new the name of John of Gaunt,
Even in the lusty 'baviour of his son.

Gaunt. God in thy good cause make thee prosperous!
Be swift like lightning in the execution;
And let thy blows, doubly redoubled,
Fall like amazing thunder on the casque
Of thy adverse pernicious enemy:
Rouse up thy youthful blood, be valiant and live,
Boling. Mine innocence, and Saint George to thrive!

Nor. Hereford, God forsooth, cast my lot,
There lives or dies, true to King Richard's throne
A loyal, just, and upright gentleman.

Never did captive with a freer heart
Cast off his chains of bondage, and embrace
His golden uncontroU'd enfranchisement.
More than my dancing soul doth celebrate
This feast of battle with mine adversary.
Most mighty liege, and my companion peers,
Take from my mouth the wish of happy years:
As gentle and as jovial, as to jest,
Go I to fight. Truth hath a quiet breast.

K. Rich. Farewell, my lord: securely I espay
Virtue with valour couched in thine eye.

Order the trial, martial, and begin.

Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Receive thy lance: and God defend thee right!

Boling. Strong as a tower in hope, I cry, amen.

Mar. Go bear this lance [To an Officer.] to Thomas duke of Norfolk.

1. Her. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Stands here for God, his sovereign, and himself,
On pain to be found false and recreant.
To prove the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray,
A traitor to his God, his king, and him:
And dares him to set forward to the fight.

2. Her. Here standeth Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk.

On pain to be found false and recreant,
Both to defend himself, and to approve
Henry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
To God, his sovereign, and to him, disloyal;
Courageously, and with a free desire,
Attending but the signal to begin.

Mar. Sound, trumpets; and set forward, combatants.

A Charge sounded,

Stay, the king hath thrown his warde} down.

K. Rich. Let them lay by their helmets and their spear,
And both return back to their chairs again.
Withdraw with us; and let the trumpets sound,
While we return these dukes what we decree.

A long flourish

Draw near, [To the Combatants.] and list, what with our council we have done.

For that our kingdom's earth should not be soil'd
With that dear blood which it hath fostered;
And for our eyes do hate the dire aspect
Of civil wounds plough'd up with neighbours' swords
And for we think the eagle-winged pride
Of sky-aspiring and ambitious thoughts,
With rival-hating envy, set on you
To wake our peace, which in our country's cradle
Draves the sweet infant breath of gentle sleep;
Which so rous'd up with boisterous untun'd drums,
With harsh resounding trumpets' dreadful bray,
And grating shock of wraffhous iron arms,
Might from our quiet confines fright fair peace,
And make us wade even in our kindred's blood:
Therefore, we banish you our territories:
You, cousin Hereford, upon pain of life,
Till twice five summers have enri'd our fields,
Shall not regret our fair dominions,
But tread the stranger paths of banishment.

Boling. Your will be done. This must my comfort be
That sun that warms you here shall shine on me;
And those his golden beams, to you here lent,
Shall point on me, and gild my banishment.
K. Rich. Norfolk, for thee remains a heavier doom,
Which I with some unwillingness pronounce:
The fly's slow hours shall not determine

1 Jest often means a mask entertainment. 2 So the quarto, 1597; other eds. thy. 3 Truck iron. 4 This and the four following lines are omitted in the folio. 5 So the quarto; the folio death. 6 sty; in f. a.
The dateless limit of thy dear exile.
The hopeless word of—never to return
Breathe I against thee, upon pain of life.

Nor. A heavy sentence, my most sovereign liege,
And all unlook'd for from your highness' mouth:
A dearer merit, not so deep a main
As to be cast forth in the common air,
Have I deserv'd at your highness' hands.
The language I have learn'd these forty years,
My native English, now I must forgo;
And now my tongue's use is to me no more,
Than an unstrung viol, or a harp;
Or like a cunning instrument cas'd up,
Or, being open, put into his hands
That knows no touch to tune the harmony.
Within my mouth you have enjail'd my tongue,
Doubly pooren'd, with my teeth and lips;
And dull, unfeeling, barren ignorance
Is made my jailor to attend on me.
I am too old to fawn upon a nurse,
Too far in years to be a pupil now;
What is thy sentence, then, but speechless death,
Which robs my tongue from breathing native breath?

K. Rich. It boots thee not to be compassionate:
After our sentence planning comes too late.

Nor. Then, thus I turn me from my country's light,
To dwell in solemn shades of endless night. [Retiring.

K. Rich. Return again, and take an oath with thee.
Lay on our royal sword your banish'd hands;
Swear by the duty that ye owe to God,
(Our part therein we banish with yourselves)
To keep the oath that we administer:
You never shall (so help you truth and God!) Embrace each other's love in banishment;
Nor never look upon each other's face;
Nor never write, regret, nor reconcile
This lowering tempest of your home-bred hate;
Nor never by advised purpose meet,
To plot, contrive, or complott any ill,
Gainst us, our state, our subjects, or our land.

Boling. I swear.

Nor. And I, to keep all this.

Boling. Norfolk, so far, to a sacred enemy.—
By this time, had the king permitted us,
One of our souls had wander'd in the air,
Banish'd this frail sepulchre of our flesh,
As now our flesh is banish'd from this land:
Confess thy treasons, ere thou fly the realm;
Since thou hast far to go, bear not alone
The clogging burden of a guilty soul.

Nor. No, Bolingbroke; if ever I were traitor,
My name be blotted from the book of life,
And I from heaven banish'd, as from hence.
But what thou art, God, thou, and I do know;
Ald all too soon, I fear, the king shall rue.
Farewell, my liege.—Now no way can I stay:
Save back to England, all the world's my way. [Exit.

K. Rich. Uncle, even in the glasses of thine eyes
I see thy griefed heart: thy sad aspect
Hath from the number of his banish'd years
Pluck'd four away.—[To Bolingbroke] Six frozen winters spent,
Return with welcome home from banishment.

Boling. How long a time lies in one little word!
Four lagging winters and fouranton springs,
In word: an end: such is the breath of kings.

Gaunt. I thank my liege, that in regard of me
He shortens four years of my son's exile;
But little vantage shall I reap thereby,
For, ere the six years, that he hath to spend,
Can change their moons, and bring their times about,
My oil-dried lamp, and time-bewasted light,
Shall be extinct with age and endless night:
My inch of taper will be burnt and done,
And blindfold death not let me see my son.

K. Rich. Why, uncle, thou hast many years to live

Gaut. But not a minute, king, that thou canst give Shorten my days thou canst with sullen sorrow,
And pluck nights from me, but not lend a morrow.
Thou canst help time to turrow me with age.
But stop no wrinkle in his pilgrimage:
Thy word is current with him for death,
But, dead, thy kingdom cannot buy my breath.

K. Rich. Thy son is banish'd upon good advice,
Whereeto thy tongue a party-verdict gave:
Why at our justice seem'st thou, then, to lower?

Gaut. Things sweet to taste prove in digestion sour
When the tongue's pasty prove in digestion sour.
You urg'd not as a judge; but I had rather,
You should have bid me argue like a father.
O! had it been a stranger, not my child,
To smooth his fault I should have more med:
A partial slander sought I to avoid,
And in the sentence my own life destroy'd.

Alas! I look'd when some of you should say,
I was too strict to make mine own away;
But you gave leave to my unwilling tongue,
Against my will to do myself this wrong.

K. Rich. Cousin, farewell;—and, uncle, bid him so
Six years we banish him, and he shall go.

[FLOURISH. Extant K. RICHARD, and Train
Aum. Cousin, farewell: what presence must no know,
From where do you remain, let paper show.
Mar. My lord, no leave take I; for I will ride,
As far as land will let me, by your side.

Gaunt. O! to what purpose dost thou hoard thy words,
That thou return'st no greeting to thy friends?

Boling. I have too few to take my leave of you,
When the tongue's office should be prodigal
To breathe the abundant colour of the heart.

Gaut. Thy grief is but thy absence for a time.

Boling. Joy absent, grief is present for that time.

Waut. What is six winters? they are quickly gone

Boling. To men in joy; but grief makes one hour:

Gaunt. Call it a travel, that thou tak'st for pleasure
Boling. My heart will sigh when I miscall it so,
Which finds it an enforced pilgrimage.

Gaunt. The sullen passage of thy weary steps
Esteem a foil, wherein thou art to set
The precious jewel of thy home-return.

Boling. Nay, rather, every tedious stride I make
Will but remember me, what a deal of world
I wander from the jewels that I love.
Must I not serve a long apprenticeship
To foreign passages, and in the end,
Having my freedom, boast of nothing else
But that I was a journeyman to grief?

Gaunt. All places that the eye of heaven visits,
Are to a wise man ports and happy havens.
Teach thy necessity to reason thus;
There is no virtue like necessity;
Think not the king did banish thee,
But thou the king: woe doth the heavier sit,

1 Rewond. 2 So the quartos; the folio: ever. 3 Not in f. e. 4 So the old copies; the 2d folio, and mod. eds. read: far. 5 This and the two following lines are omitted in the folio. 6 This and the next speech are omitted in the folio.
Where it perceives it is but faintly borne.
Go, say I sent thee forth to purchase honour,
And not the king exil'd thee; or suppose,
Devouring pestilence hangs in our air,
And thou art flying to a fresher clime:
Look, what thy soul holds dear, imagine it
To lie that way thou go'st, not whence thou com'st:
Suppose the singing birds musicians,
The grass whereon thou tread'st; the presence strew'd,
The flowers fair ladies, and thy steps no more
Than a delightful measure, or a dance;
For gnarling sorrow hath less power to bite
The man that mocks at it, and sets it light.

Boling. O! who can hold a fire in his hand
By thinking on the frosty Caucasus?
Or cloy the hungry edge of appetite,
By bare imagination of a feast?
Or wallow naked in December snow,
By thinking on fantastic summer's heat?
O! no: the apprehension of the good;
Gives but the greater feeling to the worse:
Fell sorrow's teeth doth never rankle more,
Than when it bites, but lancess not the sore.

Gaunt. Come, come, my son, I'll bring thee on thy way:
Had I thy youth and cause, I would not stay.

Boling. Then, England's ground, farewell! sweet soil, adieu;
My mother, and my nurse, that bears me yet!
Where-e'er I wander, boast of this I can,
Though banish'd, yet a trueborn Englishman. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Room in the King's Castle.
Enter King Richard, Bagot, and Green, at one door; Aumerle at another.

K. Rich. We did observe.—Cousin Aumerle,
How far brought you high Hereford on his way?
Aum. I brought high Hereford, if you call him so,
But to the next highway, and there I left him.

K. Rich. And, say, what store of parting tears were shed?
Aum. 'faith, none for me; except the north-east wind,
Which then blew bitterly against our faces,
Awak'd the sleeping rheum, and so by chance
Did grace our hollow parting with a tear.

K. Rich. What said our cousin, when you parted with him?
Aum. Farewell: and, for my heart disdain'd my tongue
Should so profane the word, that taught me craft
To counterfeit oppression of such grief,
That words seem d buried in my sorrow's grave.

Marry, would the word "farewell" have lengthen'd hours,
And added years to his short banishment.
He should have had a volume of farewells:
But, since it would not, he had none of me.
K. Rich. He is our cousin, cousin; but 'tis doubt,
When time shall call him home from banishment,
Whether our kinsman come to see his friends.
Ourself, and Bushy, Bagot here, and Green,
Observe his courtship to the common people:
How he did seem to divere into their hearts,
With humble and familiar courtesy;
What reverence he did throw away on slaves;
Wooing poor craftsmen with the craft of smiles,
And patient underbearing of his fortune,
As 't were to banish their affects with him.
Off goes his banquet to an oyster wench;
A brace of draymen bid God speed him well,
And had the tribute of his supple knee
With — "Thanks, my countrymen, my loving friends!"—
As were our England in reverent his,
And he our subjects' next degree in hope.

Green. Well, he is gone; and with him go these thoughts,
Now for the rebels, which stand out in Ireland,
Expedient manage must be made, my liege,
Ere farther leisure yield them farther means.
For their advantage, and your highness' loss,
K. Rich. We will ourselves in person to this war:
And, for our coffers; with too great a court,
And liberal largess, are grown somewhat light;
We are enforc'd to form our royal realm;
The revenue whereof shall furnish us
For our affairs in hand. If that come short,
Our substitutes at home shall have blank charters,
Whereeto, when they shall know what men are rich,
They shall subscribe them for large sums of gold,
And send them after to supply our wants,
For we will make for Ireland presently.

Enter Bushy.

Bushy. What news?
Bushy. Old John of Gaunt is grievous sick, my lord,
Suddenly taken, and hath sent post-haste,
To entreat his majesty to visit him.
K. Rich. Where lies he now?
Bushy. At Ely-house, my liege.

K. Rich. Now put it, God, in his physician's mind,
To help him to his grave immediately!
The lining of his coffers shall make coats
To deck our soldiers for these Irish wars.—
Come, gentlemen, let's all go visit him:
Pray God, we may make haste, and come too late!
[Exeunt.
KING RICHARD II.

SCENE 1. York. No; it is stipp'd with other flattering sounds,
As praises of his state: then, there are found
Lascivious metres, to whose venom sound
The open ear of youth doth always listen:
Report of fashions in proud Italy;
Whose manners still our tardy spish nation
Lims after, in base imitation.
Where doth the world thrust forth a vanity,
So it be new there's no respect how vile,
That is not quickly buzz'd into his ears?
Then, all too late comes counsel to be heard,
Where will doth mutiny with wit's regard.
Direct not him, whose way himself will choose:
'T is breath thou lack'st, and that breath wilt thou lose.

Gaunt. Methinks, I am a prophet new inspir'd,
And thus, expiring, do foretell of him.
His rash fierce blaze of riot cannot last.
For violent fires soon burn out themselves:
Small showers last long, but sudden storms are short;
He tires betimes, that spurs too fast betimes;
With eager feeding food doth choke the feeder:
Light vanity, instinate cormorant,
Consuming means, soon preys upon itself.
This royal throne of kings, this scepter'd isle,
This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,
This other Eden, demi-Paradise;
This fortress, built by nature for herself,
Against infection, and the hand of war;
This happy breed of men, this little world,
This precious stone set in the silver sea,
Which serves it in the office of a wall,
Or as a moat defensive to a house,
Against the envy of less happier lands:
This blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this England,
This nurse, this teeming womb of royal kings,
Fear'd by their breed, and famous by their birth,
Renowned for their deeds as far from home,
For Christian service and true chivalry;
As is the sepulchre in stubborn Jewry
Of the world's ransom, blessed Mary's Son:
This land of such dear souls, this dear, dear land,
Dear for her reputation through the world,
Is now less'd out, I die pronouncing it,
Like to a tenement, or pelted farm.
England, bound in with the triumphant sea,
Whose rocky shore beats back the envious siege
Of watery Neptune, is now bound in with shame,
With inky blots, and rotten parchment bonds:
That England, that was wont to conquer others,
Hath made a shameful conquest of itself.
Ah! would the scandal vanish with my life,
How happy then were my ensuing death.

Enter King Richard, and Queen Aumerle, Bushy, Green, Bagot, Ross, and Willoughby.
York. The king is come: deal mildly with his youth;
For young hot colts, being urg'd, do rage the more.
Queen. How fares our noble uncle, Lancaster?
K. Rich. What? comfort, man! How is 't with aged Gaunt?
Gaunt. O, how that name betises my composition!
Old Gaunt, indeed; and gaunt in being old:
Within me grief hath kept a teinds fast;
And who abstains from meat, that is not gaunt?
For sleeping England long time have I watch'd;
Watching breeds leanness, leanness is all gaunt:
The pleasure that some fathers feed upon
Is my strict fast, I mean my children's looks;
And therein fasting hast thou made me gaunt.
Gaunt am I for the grave, gaunt as a grave,
Whose hollow womb inherits nought but bones.
K. Rich. Can sick men play so nicely with their names?
Gaunt. No; misery makes sport to mock itself:
Since thou dost seek to kill my name in me,
I mock my name, great king, to flatter thee.
K. Rich. Should dying men flatter with those things live?
Gaunt. No, no; men living flatter those that die.
K. Rich. Thou, now a dying, say'st thou flatter'st me.
Gaunt. O! no; thou diest, though 't the sicker be.
K. Rich. I am in health, I breathe, and see thee ill.
Gaunt. Now, he that made me knows I see thee ill:
Ill in myself to see, and in thee seeing ill,
The death-bed is no lesser than the land,
Wherein thou liest in reputation sick,
And thou, too careless patient as thou art,
Com'rit'st thy pointed body to the cure
Of those physicians that first wounded thee.
A thousand flatterers sit within thy crown,
Whose compass is no bigger than thy head,
And yet, incaged in so small a verge.
The waste is no whit lesser than thy land.
O! had thy grandsire, with a prophet's eye,
Seen how his son's son should destroy his sons,
From forth thy reach he would have laid thy shame.
Deposing thee before thou wert possess'd,
Which art possess'd now to depose thyself.
Why, cousin, wert thou regent of the world,
It were a shame to let this land be lease;
But for thy world enjoying but this land.
Is it not more than shame to shame it so?
Landlord of England art thou now, not king;
Thy state of law is bondslave to the law,
And thou—
K. Rich. A lunatic lean-witted fool,
Presuming on an auge's privilege,
Dar'st with thy frozen admonition
Make pale our cheek, chasing the royal blood
With fury from his native residence,
Now, by my seat's right royal majesty,
Wert thou not brother to great Edward's son,
This tongue that runs so roundly in thy head,
Should run thy head from thy unreverend shoulders.
Gaunt. O! spare me not, my brother Edward's son.
For that I was his father Edward's son;
That blood already, like the pelican,
Hast thou tapp'd out, and drunkenly carous'd:
My brother Gloster, plain well-meaning soul,
Whom fair befal in heaven 'mongst happy souls
May be a preceendent and witness good,
That thou respect'st not spilling Edward's blood.
Join with the present sickness that I have,
And thy unkindness be like crooked age,
To crop at once a too-long withered flower.
Live in thy shame, but do not shame with thee.
These words hereafter thy tormentors be—
Convey me to my bed, then to my grave:
Love they to live, that love and honour have.
[Exit, borne out by his Attendants]
K. Rich. And let them die, that age and sullens have
For both hast thou, and both become the grave

1 The quarto, 1593, reads: As praises, of whose taste the wire are found (fond). 2 Folio, 1623: for 3 Pety 'n'sd': io fe 4 The folio seems: with 5 The folio: and. 6 So the quarto; the folio and most mod. ed.: And—
E. Rich. And thou a lunatic, &c.
York. I do beseech your majesty, impute his words
To wardly sickness and age in him:
He loves you, on my life, and holds you dear
As Harry, duke of Hereford, were he here.
K. Rich. Right, you say true; as Hereford: love, so live:
As theirs, so mine; and all be as it is.

Enter Northumberland.

North. My liege, old Gaunt commends him to your majesty.
K. Rich. What says he?
North. Nay, nothing; all is said.
His tongue is now a stringless instrument:
Words, life, and all, old Lancaster hath spelt.
York. Be York the next that must be bankrupt so!
Though death be poor, it ends a mortal woe.
K. Rich. The ripest fruit first falls, and so doth he:
His time is spent; our pilgrimage must be.
So much for that.—Now for our Irish wars.
We must supplant those rough rag-headed kerns,
Which live like venom, where no venom else,
But only they, hath privilege to live:
And for these great affairs do ask some charge,
Towards our assistance we do seize to us
The plate, coin, revenues, and movables,
Whereof our uncle Gaunt did stand possess’d.
York. How long shall I be patient? Ah! how long
Shall tender duty make me suffer wrong?
Not Gloster’s death, nor Hereford’s banishment,
Not Gaunt’s rebukes, nor England’s private wrongs,
Nor the prevention of poor Bolingbroke
About his marriage, nor my own disgrace.
Have ever made me sour my patient cheek,
Or bend one wrinkle on my sovereign’s face.
I am the last of noble Edward’s sons,
Of whom thy father, prince of Wales, was first:
In war was never lion, and more fierce.
In peace was never gentle lamb more mild,
Than was that young and princely gentleman.
His face thou hast, for even so look’d he,
Accomplish’d with the number of thy hours;
But when he frown’d, it was against the French.
And not against his friends: his noble hand
Did win what he did spend, and spent not that
Which his triumphant father’s hand had won:
His hands were guilty of no kindred blood,
But bloody with the enemies of his kin.
O, Richard! York is too far gone with grief,
Or else he never would compare between
O, my liege! Pardon me, if you please; if not, I, pleas’d
Not to be pardon’d, am content withal.
Seek you to seize, and gripe into your hands,
The royalties and rights of banish’d Hereford?
Is not Gaunt dead, and doth not Hereford live?
Was not Gaunt just, and is not Harry true?
Did not the one deserve to have an heir?
Is not his heir a well-deserving son?
Take Hereford’s rights away, and take from time
His charters and his customary rights;
Let not to-morrow, then, ensue to-day;
Be not thyself; for how art thou a king,
But by fair sequence and succession?
Now, afore God (God forbid, I say true!),
If you do wrongfully seize Hereford’s rights.

Call in the letters patents that he hath
By his attorneys-general to sue
His livery; and deny his offer’d homage,
You pluck a thousand dangers on your head,
You lose a thousand well-disposed hearts,
And prick my tender patience to those thoughts
Which honour and allegiance cannot think.
K. Rich. Think what you will: we seize into our hands
His plate, his goods, his money, and his lands.
York. I’ll not be by the while. My liege, farewell.
What will e’en hereof, there’s none can tell;
But by bad courses may be understood,
That their events can never fall out good.
[Exit
K. Rich. Go, Bushy, to the earl of Wiltshire straight.
Bid him repair to us to Ely-house,
To see this business. To-morrow next
We will for Ireland; and it’s time, I traw;
And we create, in absence of ourself,
Our uncle York lord governor of England,
For he is just, and always lov’d us well.—
Come on, our queen: to-morrow must we part;
Be merry, for our time of stay is short.
[Flourish

[Exeunt, King, Queen, Bushy, Aumerle, Green, and Bagot.

North. Well, lords, the duke of Lancaster is dead.
Ross. And living too, for now his son is duke.
Wilko. Barely in title, not in revenues.
North. Richly in both, if justice had her right.
Ross. My heart is great; but it must break with silence.
Ere’t be disburden’d with a liberal tongue.
North. Nay, speak thy mind; and let him not Speak more.
That speaks thy words again to do thee harm!
Wilko. Tends that thou’dst speak, to the duke of Hereford?
If it be so, out with it boldly, man,
Quick is mine ear to hear of good towards him.
Ross. No good at all that I can do for him,
Unless you call it good to pity him,
Bereft and gelded of his patrimony.
North. Now, afore God, it’s shame such wrongs are borne
In him, a royal prince, and many more
Of noble blood in this declining land.
The king is not himself, but basely led
By flatterers; and what they will inform,
Merely in hate, ‘gainst any of us all,
That will the king severely prosecute,
‘Gainst us, our wives’, our children, and our heirs
Ross. The commons hath he pil’d with grievous taxes,
And quite lost their hearts: the nobles hath he fin’d
For ancient quarrels, and quite lost their hearts.
Wilko. And daily new exactions are devis’d;
As blanks, benevolences, and I wit not what;
But what, o’ God’s name, doth become of this?
North. Wars have not wasted it, for warr’d he hath not,
But basely yielded upon compromise
That which his noble ancestors achiev’d with blows
More hath he spent in peace, than they in wars.
Ross. The earl of Wiltshire hath the realm in farm
Wilko. The king’s grown bankrupt, like a broken man
North. Reproach, and dissolution, hangeth over him
Ross. He hath not money for these Irish wars,

1 On the death of every person who held by Knight’s service, the escheator of the court summoned a jury, who inquired what estate he died seized, or possessed of, and what age his next heir was. If he was under age, he became a ward of the king; if of full age, he had a right to seize out a writ of 'outlet et main', that is, his livery, that the king’s hand might be taken off, and the land delivered to him—Nelson
2 Not in the folio
His but lenitous notions notwithstanding.
But by the robbing of the banish’d duke.

North. His noble kinsman: most degenerate king!
But, lords, we hear this fearful tempest sing,
Yet seek no shelter to avoid the storm:
We see the wind sit sore upon our sails,
And yet we strike not, but securely perish.

Ross. We see the very wreck that we must suffer;
And unavoidable is the danger now,
For suffering so the causes of our wreck.

North. Not so; even through the hollow eyes of death,
I spy life peering; but I dare not say
How near the tidings of our comfort is.

Will. Nay; let us share thy thoughts, as thou dost ours.

Ross. But confident to speak, Northumberland:
We three are but thyself; and, speaking so,
Thy words are but our thoughts; therefore, be bold.

North. Then thus.—I have from Port le Blanc, a bay
In Brittany, receiv’d intelligence,
That Harry duke of Hereford, Reginald lord Cobham,
That late broke from the duke of Exeter,
His brother, archbishop late of Canterbury.
Sir Thomas Erpingham, sir John Ramston.
Sir John Norbury, sir Robert Waterston, and Francis Quoint.
All these well furnish’d by the duke of Bretagne,
With eight tall ships, three thousand men of war,
Are making hither with all due expediency,
And shortly mean to touch our northern shore:
Perhaps, they had ere this, but that they stay
The first departing of the king for Ireland.
If, then, we shall shake off our shalvish yoke,
Imp’d out our drooping country’s broken wing,
Redeem from breaking pawn the blemish’d crown,
Wipe off the dust that hides our scepter’s gilt,
And make high majesty look like itself,
Away with me in post to Ravenspurg;
But if you faint, as fearing to do so,
Stay and be secret, and myself will go.

Ross. To horse, to horse, I urge doubts to them that fear.

Will. Hold out my horse, and I will first be there.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. An Apartment in the Palace.

Enter Queen, Bushy, and Bagot.

Bushy. Madam, your majesty is too much sad:
You promis’d when you parted with the king,
To lay aside life-damning heaviness,
And entertain a cheerful disposition.

Queen. To please the king, I did; to please myself,
I cannot do it; yet I know no cause
Why I should welcome such a guest as grief.
Save bidding farewell to so sweet a guest
As my sweet Richard. Yet, again, methinks,
Some unborn sorrow, ripe in fortune’s womb,
Is coming towards me; and my inward soul
With nothing troubles: at some thing it grieves,
More than with parting from my lord the king.

Bushy. Each substance of a grief hath twenty shadows,
Which show like grief itself, but are not so:
For sorrow’s eye, glazed with blinding tears,
Divides one thing entire to many objects,
Like perspectives, which rightly gaz’d upon,
Show nothing but confusion: ey’d awry,
Distinguish form: so your sweet majesty,
Looking awry upon your lord’s departure,
Finds shapes of grief more than himself to wall,
Which, look’d on as it is, is nought but shadows:
Of what it is not. Then, thrice gracious queen.
More than your lord’s departure weep not: more not seen;
Or if it be, ’tis with false sorrow’s eye,
Which for things true weeps things imaginary.

Bushy. ’Tis nothing but conceit, my gracious lady.

Queen. It may be so; but yet my inward soul
Persuades me, it is otherwise: how’er it be,
I cannot but be sad; so heavy sad,
As, though unthinking on no thought I think.
Makes me with heavy nothing faint and shrink.

Bushy. ’Tis nothing but conceit, my gracious lady.

Queen. ’T is nothing lost: conceit is still deriv’d
From some forefather grief; mine is not so,
For nothing hath begot my something woe;
Or something hath the nothing that I guess?:
’T is in reversion that I do possess.
But what it is, that is not yet known, what
I cannot name: ’tis nameless woe, I wot.

Enter Green.

Green. God save your majesty:—and well met gentlemen.—
I hope, the king is not yet shipp’d for Ireland.

Queen. Why hopst thou so? ’tis better hope he is,
For his designs crave haste, his haste good hope;
Then, wherefore dost thou hope, he is not shipp’d?

Green. That he, our hope, might have retir’d his power.
And driven into despair an enemy’s hope,
Who strongly hath set footing in this land.
The banish’d Bolingbroke repeals himself,
And with uplifted arms is late arriv’d
At Ravenspurg.

Queen. Now, God in heaven forbid!

Green. Ah! madam, ’tis too true: and what is worse,
The lord Northumberland, his son young Henry Percy,
The lords of Ross, Beaumond, and Willoughby,
With all their powerful friends, are fled to him

Bushy. Why have you not proclaim’d Northumberland, And all the rest of the revolted faction, traitors?

Green. We have: whereupon the earl of Worcester
Hath broken his staff, resign’d his stewardship,
And all the household servants fled with him
To Bolingbroke.

Queen. So, Green, thou art the midwife to my woe,
And Bolingbroke my sorrow’s dismal heir:
Now hath my soul brought forth her prodigy,
And I, a gasping new-deliver’d mother,
Have woe to woe, sorrow to sorrow join’d.

Bushy. Despair not, madam.

Queen. Who shall hinder me?
I will despair, and be at enmity
With cozening hope: he is a flatterer,
A parasite, a keeper-back of death,
Who gently would dissolve the bands of life,
Which false hope lingers in extremity.

Enter the Duke of York, port-armed.

Green. Here comes the duke of York.

Queen. With signs of war about his aged neck.
O! full of careful business are his looks.—
Uncle, for God's sake, speak comfortable words.

York. Should I do so, I should belie my thoughts:
Comfort's in heaven; and we are on the earth,
Where nothing but crosses, care, and grief.
Your husband, he is gone to save far off,
Whilst others come to make him lose at home:
Here am I left to undercrop his land,
Who, weak with age, cannot support myself.
Now comes the sick hour that his surfeit made;
Now shall he try his friends that flatter'd him.

Enter a Servant.
Serv. My lord, your son was gone before I came.

York. He was?—Why, so — go all which way it will —

The nobles they are fled, the commons cold,
And will, I fear, revolt on Hereford's side.—
Sirrah, get thee to Plashy, to my sister Gloster;
Bid her send me presently a thousand pound.
Hold; take my ring.
Serv. My lord, I had forgot to tell your lordship:
To-day, as I came by, I called there:
But I shall grieve you to report the rest.

York. What is 't, knave?
Serv. An hour before I came the duchess died.

York. God for his mercy! what a tide of woes
Comes rushing on this woeful land at once!
I know not what to do:—I would to God,
(So my untruth had not provok'd him to it)
The king had cut off his head with my brother's.—
What! are there not posts dispatch't for Ireland?—
How shall we do for money for these wars?—
Come, sister,—cousin, I would say: pray, pardon me.—
Go, fellow, [To the Servant.] get thee home: provide some ears,
And bring away the armour that is there. [Exit Servant.

Gentlemen, will you go must men? If I know how, or which way, to order these affairs, Thas disorderly thrust into my hands, Never believe me. Both are my kinsmen:
Th' one is my sovereign, whom both my oath
And duty bids defend; th' other again,
Is my near kinsman, whom the king hath wrong'd,
Whom conscience and my kindred bids to right.
Well, somewhat we must do.—Come, cousin, [men, I'll dispose of you.—Gentlemen, go muster up your
And meet me presently at Berkley. 1
I should to Plashy too, But time will not permit.—All is uneven,
And every thing is left at six and seven.

[Exit York and Queen.

Bushy. The wind sits fair for news to go for Ireland,
But none returns. For us to levy power,
Proportionable to the enemy,
Is all impossible.

Green. Besides, our nearness to the king in love
Is near the hate of those love not the king.

Bagot. And that's the wairering commons; for their love
Lies in their purses, and whose empties them,
By so much fills their hearts with deadly hate.

Bushy. Wherein the king stands generally condemn'd.

Bagot. If judgment lie in them, then so do we,
Because we ever have been near the king.

Green. Well, I'll for refuge straight to Bristol castle:
The earl of Wiltshire is already there.

Bushy. Thither will I with you; for little office

Will the hateful commons perform for us,
Except like ours to tear us all to pieces.—
Will you go along with us?

Bagot. No: I will to Ireland to his majesty.

Farewell! if heart's presages be not vain,
We three here part, that never shall meet again.

Bushy. That's as York thrives to beat back Bolingbroke.

Green. Alas, poor duke! the task he undertakes Is numbering sands, and drinking ocean dries:
Where one on his side fights, thousands will fly.
Farewell at once; for once, for all, and ever.

Bushy. Well, we may meet again.

Bagot. I fear me, never. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The Wilds in Glosstershire.

Enter Bolingbroke and Northumberland, with Forces.

Boling. How far is it, my lord, to Berkley now?

North. Believe me, noble lord,
I am a stranger here in Glosstershire.
These high wild hills, and rough uneven ways.
Draw out our miles, and make them wearisome; And yet your fair discourse hath been as sugar.
Making the hard way sweet and delectable.
But, I bethink me, what a weary way From Ravenspur to Cotswold will be found
In Ross and Willoughby, wanting your company,
Which, I protest, hath very much beguil'd
The tediousness and process of my travel:
But theirs is sweetend with the hope to have
The present benefit which I possess;
And hope to joy is little less in joy,
Than hope enjoy'd: by this the weary lords Shall make their way seem short, as mine hath been By sight of what I have, your company.

Boling. Of much less value is my company,
Than your good words. But who comes here?

Enter Harry Percy.

North. It is my son, young Harry Percy,
Sent from my brother Worcester, whencesoever.—

Harry, how fares your uncle?

Percy. I had thought, my lord, to have learn'd his health of you.

North. Why, is he not with the queen?

Percy. No, my good lord: he hath forsook the court,
Broken his staff of office, and dispers'd the household of the king.

North. What was his reason? He was not so resolv'd, when last we spake
Together.

Percy. Because your lordship was proclaimed traitor But he, my lord, is gone to Ravenspur;
To offer service to the duke of Hereford;
And sent me over by Berkley, to discover
What power the duke of York had levied there:
Then, with directions to repair to Ravenspur

North. Have you forgot the duke of Hereford, boy?

Percy. No, my good lord; for that is not forgot,
Which ne'er I did remember; to my knowledge I never in my life did look on him.

North. Then learn to know him now: this is the duke Percy. My gracious lord, I tender you my service,
Such as it is, being tender, raw, and young,
Which elder days shall ripen, and confirm
To more approved service and desert.

Boling. I thank thee, gentle Percy; and be sure,
I count myself in nothing else so happy,
North. How far is it to Berkley? And what stir
Keeps good old York there, with his men of war?

Percy. This stands the castle, by yond' tuft of trees,
Mann'd with three hundred men, as I have heard;
And in it are the lords of York, Berkley, and Seymour.
None else of name, and noble estimate.

Enter Ross and Willoughby.

North. Here come the lords of Ross and Willoughby.

Bloody with spurring, fiery red with haste.

Boling. Welcome, my lords. I wot, your love pursues
A banish'd traitor: all my treasury
Is but yet unfelt thanks, which, more enrich'd,
Shall be your love and labour's recompense.
Ross. Your presence makes us rich, most noble lord.
Willo. And far surmounts our labour to attain it.

Boling. Evermore thanks, th'o' exchequer of the poor:
Which, till my infant fortune comes to years,
Stands for my bounty. But who comes here?

Enter Berkley.

North. It is my lord of Berkley, as I guess.
Berk. My lord of Hereford, my message is to you.
Boling. My lord, my answer is— to Lancaster,
And I am come to seek that name in England;
And I must find that title in your tongue,
Before I make reply to aught you say.
Berk. Mistake me not, my lord: it is not my meaning,
To raise one title on your honour out.
To you, my lord, I come, what lord you will.
From the most gracious regent of this land,
The duke of York, to know what pricks you on
To take advantage of the absent time,
And fright our native peace with self-borne arms.

Enter York attended.

Boling. I shall not need transport my words by you:
Here comes his grace in person.—My noble uncle.

[Kneels.

York. Show me thy humble heart, and not thy knee,
Whose duty is conceivable and false.
Boling. My gracious uncle—
York. Tut, tut! Grace me no grace, nor uncl'e me no uncl'e: I am no traitor's uncle; and that word "grace,"
In an ungracious mouth, is but profane.
Why have those banish'd and forbidden legs
Dar'd once to touch a dust of England's ground?
But more than that,—why have they dar'd to march
So many miles upon our peaceful bosom,
Frighting her pale-faced villages with war,
And ostentation of despoothing arms?
Canst thou because th'o' anointed king is hence
Why, foolish boy, the king is left behind,
And in my loyal bosom lies his power.
Were I but now the lord of such hot youth,
As when brave Gaunt, thy father, and myself,
Rescued the Black Prince, that young Mars of men,
From forth the ranks of many thousand French,
O! then, how quickly should this arm of mine,
Now prisoner to the palsy, chastise thee,
And minister correction to thy fault!

Boling. My gracious uncle, let me know my fault:
On what condition stands it, and wherein?
York. Even in condition of the worst degree;
In gross rebellion, and detested treason:
Thou art a banish'd man, and here art come
Before the expiration of thy time,
In braving arms against thy sovereign
Boling. As I was banish'd, I was banish'd Hereford.
But as I come, I come for Lancaster.
And, noble uncle, I beseech your grace,
Look on my wrongs with an indifferent eye
You are my father, for, methinks, in you
I see old Gaunt alive: O! then, my father,
Will you permit that I shall stand condemn'd
A wandering vagabond, my rights and royalties
Pluck'd from my arms performing: All given away
To upstart unriths? Wherefore was I born?
If that my cousin king be king of England,
It must be granted I am duke of Lancaster.
You have a son. Aumerle, my noble kinsman;
Had you first died, and he been thus brod down,
He should have found his uncle Gaunt a father,
To rouse his wrongers. chase them to the bay.
I am denied to sue my livery here,
And yet my letters patent give me leave:
My father's goods are all distress'd, and sold,
And these, and all, are all amiss employ'd.
What would you have me do? I am a subject,
And challenge law: attorneys are denied me,
And therefore personally I lay my claim
To my inheritance of free descent.

North. The noble duke hath been too much abused,
Ross. It stands your grace upon to do him right.
Wil. Base men by his endowments are made great,
York. My lords of England, let me tell you this
I have had feeling of my cousin's wrongs,
And labour'd all I could to do him right;
But in this kind to come; in braving arms,
Be his own carver, and cut out his way,
To find out right with wrong,—it may not be:
And you, that do abet him in this kind,
Cherish rebellion, and are rebels all.

North. The noble duke hath sworn, his coming is
But for his own: and for the right of that,
We all have strongly sworn to give him aid,
And let him ne'er see joy that breaks that oath.
York. Well, well, I see the issue of these arms.
I cannot mend it, I must needs confess,
Because my power is weak, and all ill left;
But if I could, by him that gave me life,
I would attach you all, and make you stoop
Unto the sovereign mercy of the king.
But since I cannot, be it known unto you,
I do remain as neuter. So, farewell;
Unless you please to enter in the castle,
And there, my lords, repose you for this night.

Boling. An offer, uncle, that we will accept:
But we must win your grace, to go with us
To Bristol castle; which, they say, is held
By Bushy, Bazot, and their complices,
The caterpillars of the commonwealth,
Which I have sworn to weed and pluck away.
York. It may be I will go with you;—but yet I'll pause.
For I am loath to break our country's laws.
Nor friends, nor foes, to me welcome you are:
Things past redress are now with me past care. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. A Camp in Wales.

Enter Salisbury, and a Welsh Captain.

Cap. My lord of Salisbury, we have stay'd ten days
And hardly kept our countrymen together,
And yet we hear no tidings from the king;
The eare, we will disperse ourselves. Farewell.

Sal. Stay yet another day, thou trusty Welshman:
The king repose all his confidence in thee.

Cap. 'Tis thought, the king is dead: we will not stay.
The bay-trees in our country are all wither'd,
And meteors fright the fixed stars of heaven;
The pale-fac'd moon looks bloody on the earth,
And lean-look'd prophets whisper fearful change:
Rich men look sad, and ruffians dance and leap,
The one in fear to lose what they enjoy,
The other to enjoy by rage and war:
These signs forerun the death of fall of kings.
Farewell: our countrymen are gone and fled,
As well assur'd Richard, their king, is dead.

Sal. Ah, Richard! with the eyes of heavy mind,
I see thy glory, like a shooting star,
Foil to the base earth from the firmament.
Thy sun sets weeping in the lowly west,
Witnessing storms to come, woe, and unrest:
Thy friends are fled to wait upon thy foes,
And crossly to thy good all fortune goes.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Bolingbroke’s Camp at Bristol.

Enter Bolingbroke, York, Northumberland, Percy,
Willoughby, Ross; Bushy and Green, prisoners.

Boling. Bring forth these men.—
[Bushy and Green stand forward.]

Bushy, and Green, I will not vex your souls,
Since presently your souls must part your bodies,
With too much urging your pereicious lives,
For 't were no charity: yet, to wash your blood
From off my hands, here in the view of men
I will unfold some causes of your deaths.
You have misled a prince; a royal king,
A happy gentleman in blood and lineaments,
By you unhappy and disfigur’d clean:
You have, in manner, with your sinful hours,
Made a divorce betwixt his queen and him,
Broke the possession of a royal bed,
And stain’d the beauty of a fair queen’s cheeks.
With tears, drawn from her eyes by your foul wrongs,
Myself, a prince by fortune of my birth,
Near to the king in blood, and near in love,
Till you did make him misinterpret me,
Have stoop’d my neck under your injuries,
And sigh’d my English breath in foreign clouds,
Eating the bitter bread of banishment,
Whilst you have fed upon my signories,
Dispark’d my parks, and fell’d my forest woods,
From mine own windows torn my household coat,
Itaz’d out my impress, leaving me no sign,
Save men’s opinions, and my living blood,
To show the world I am a gentleman,
This and much more, much more than twice all this,
Condemn you to the death. See them deliver’d over
To execution, and the hand of death.

Bushy. More welcome is the stroke of death to me,
Than Bolingbroke to England.—Lords, farewell!

Green. My comfort is, that heaven will take our souls,
And plague injustice with the pangs of hell.

Boling. My lord Northumberland, see them dispatch’d

[Exeunt Northumberland and Others, with Bushy and Uncle, you say the queen is at your house; Green.
For God’s sake, fairly let her be entreated :
Tell her I send to her my kind comands;
Take special care my greetings be deliver’d
York. A gentleman of mine I have dispatch’d
With letters of your love to her at large.

Boling. Thanks, gentle uncle.—Come, my lords,
To fight with Glendower and his complices:
Away, Awhile to work, and after holiday.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Coast of Wales. A Castle in view.

Flourish: Drums and Trumpets. Enter King Richard,
Bishop of Carlisle, Aumerle, and Soldiers.

K. Rich. Barkingly Castle call they this at hand?
Aum. Yea, my good lord. How brooks your grace the air,
After late tossing on the breaking seas?

K. Rich. Needs must I like it well: I weep for joy,
To stand upon my kingdom once again.—
Dear earth, I do salute thee with my hand,
Though rebels wound thee with their horses’ hoofs.
As a long parted mother with her child
Plays fondly with her tears and smiles in meeting,
So, weeping, smiling, gout I thee, my earth,
And do thee favour with my royal hand.
Feed not thy sovereign’s foe, my gentle earth,
Nor with thy sweets comfort his ravenous sense;
But let thy spiders, that suck up thy venom,
And heavy-gaited toads, lie in their yay,
Doing annoyance to the treacherous feet,
Which with usurping steps do trample thee,
Yield stinging nettles to mine enemies:
And when they from thy bosom pluck a flower,
Guard it, I pray thee, with a lurking adder,
Whose double tongue may with a mortal touch
 Throw death upon thy sovereign’s enemies.—
Mock not my senseless congregation, lords:
This earth shall have a feeling, and these stones
Prove armed soldiers, ere her native king
Shall falter under foul rebellion’s arms.

Bishop. Fear not, my lord: that power that made you king,
Hath power to keep you king, in spite of all.

The means that heavens yield must be embrac’d,
And not neglected; else, if heaven would,
And we will not, heaven’s offer we refuse,
The proffer’d means of succour and redress.

Aum. He means, my lord, that we are too remiss;
Whilst Bolingbroke, through our security,
Grows strong and great in substance, and in power
K. Rich. Discomfortable cousin! know’st thou not,
That when the searching eye of heaven is hid
Behind the globe, and lights the lower world,
Then thieves and robbers range abroad unseen,
In murders and in outrage, boldly here;
But when from under this terrestrial ball
He dreses the proud tops of the eastern pines,
And darts his light through every guilty hole,
Then murders, treasons, and detested sins,
The cloak of night being pluck’d from off their backs,

1 The folio omits: and fall.
2 Not in f. e.
3 The rest of the speech is not in the folio.
4 Not in f. e.
5 Not in f. e.
6 Not in f. e.
Stand bare and naked, trembling at themselves?
So when this thief, this traitor Bolingbroke,
Who all this while hath revel'd in the night;
Whist we were wandering with the antipodes,
Shall we see rising in our throne, the cast,
His treasons will sit blushing in his face,
Not able to endure the sight of day,
Not all the water in the rough rude sea
Can wash the balm from an anointed king:
The breath of worldly men cannot depose
The deputy elected by the Lord.
For every man that Bolingbroke hath press'd,
To lift surew'd steel against our golden crown,
God for his Richard hath in heavenly pay
A glorious angel: then, if angels fight,
Weak men must fall, for heaven still guards the right.

Enter Salisbury.

Welcome, my lord. How far off lies your power?
Sal. Nor near, nor farther off, my gracious lord,
Than this weak arm. Discomfort grudges my tongue
And bids me speak of nothing but despair.
One day too late, I fear, my noble lord,
Hath clouded all thy happy days on earth.
O! call back yesterday, bid time return,
And thou shalt have twelve thousand fighting men:
To-day, to-day, unhappy day too late,
O'erthrow's thy joys, friends, fortune, and thy state;
For all the Welshmen, hearing thou wert dead,
Are gone to Bolingbroke, dispers'd, or fled.

Aum. Comfort, my liege! why looks your grace so pale?

K. Rich. But now, the blood of twenty thousand men
Did triumph in my face, and they are fled;
And till so much blood thither come again,
Have I not reason to look pale and dead?
All souls that will be safe, fly from my side;
For time hath set a blot upon my pride.

Aum. Comfort, my liege! remember who you are.

K. Rich. I had forgot myself. Am I not king?
Awake, thou coward majesty! thou sleepest.
Is not the king's name twenty thousand names?
Arm, arm, my name! a puny subject strikes
At thy great glory.—Look not to the ground,
Ye favourites of a king: are we not high?
High be our thoughts. I know, my uncle York
Hath power enough to serve our turn. But who comes here?

Enter Scroop.

Scroop. More health and happiness betide my liege,
Than can my care-turn'd tongue deliver him.
K. Rich. Mine ear is open, and my heart prepar'd:
The worst is worldly loss thou canst unfold.
Say, is my kingdom lost? why, 't was my care;
And what lose is it to be rid of care?
Strives Bolingbroke to be as great as we?
Greater he shall not be: if he serve God,
We'll serve him too, and be his fellow so.
Revolt our subjects? that we cannot mend;
They break their faith to God, as well as us.
Cry woes, destruction, ruin, loss, decay.
The worst is death, and death will have his day.

Scroop. Glad am I, that your highness is so arm'd
To bear the tidings of calamity.
Like an unseasonable stormy day,
Which makes the silver rivers drown their shores,
As if the world were all dissolv'd to tears;
So high above his limits swells the rage
Of Bolingbroke, covering your fearful land
With hard bright steel, and hearts harder than steel.
White-beards have arm'd their thin and hairless scalp
Against thy majesty; and boys, with women's voices,
Strive to speak high, and clasp their feeble joints
In stiff unwieldy armour 'gainst thy crown:
Thy very headsmen learn to bend their bows
Of double-fatal yew against thy state;
Yea, distaff-women manage rusty bills
Against thy seat: both young and old rebel,
And all goes worse than I have power to tell.
K. Rich. Too well, too well, thou tell'st a tale so ill!
Where is the earl of Wiltshire? where is Bagot?
What is become of Bushy? where is Green?
That they have let the dangerous enemy
Measure our confines with such peaceful steps?
If we prevail, their heads shall pay for it.
I warrant they have made peace with Bolingbroke.
Scroop. Peace have they made with him, indeed, my lord.
K. Rich. O villains, vipers, damn'd without redemption!
Dogs, easily won to fawn on any man!
Snakes, in my heart-blood warm'd, that sting my heart!
Three Judases, each one thrice worse than Judas!
Would they make peace? terrible hell make war
Upon their spotted souls for this offence!
Scroop. Sweet love, I see, changing his property,
Turns to the sourest and most deadly hate.
Again uncurse their souls; their peace is made
With heads and not with hands: those whom you curse
Have felt the worst of death's destroying wound,
And lie full low, grav'd in the hollow ground.
Aum. Is Bushy, Green, and the earl of Wiltshire, dead?
Scroop. Yea, all of them at Bristol lost their heads.
Aum. Where is the duke, my father, with his power?
K. Rich. No matter where. Of comfort no man speak:
Let's talk of graves, of worms, and epitaphs;
Make dust our paper, and with rainy eyes
Write sorrow on the bosom of the earth.
Let's choose executors, and talk of wills:
And yet not so,—for what can we bequeath,
Save our deposed bodies to the ground?
Our lands, our lives, and all are Bolingbroke's,
And nothing can we call our own but death,
And that small model of the barren earth,
Which serves as paste and cover to our bones.
For God's sake, let us sit upon the ground,
And tell sad stories of the death of kings:
How some have been depos'd, some slain in war.
Some haunted by the ghosts they have depos'd,
Some poison'd by their wives, some sleeping kill'd,
All murder'd,—for within the hollow crown—
That rounds the mortal temples of a king—
Keeps death his court, and there the antic site.
Scroop. Shall we read it, and grinning at his pomp;
Allowing him a breath, a little scene,
To monarchize, be fear'd, and kill with looks;
Infusing him with self and vain conceit,
As if this flesh, which walks about our life,
Were brass impregnable; and, humour'd thus,
Comes at the last, and with a little pin
Bores through his castle wall, and—farewell king!
Cover your heads, and mock not flesh and blood
With solemn reverence: throw away respect,
Tradition, form, and ceremonious duty.

It is in Knight's Pictorial Shakespeare.
For you have but mistook me all this while:
I live with bread like you, feel want.
Taste grief, need friends; subjected thus,
How can you say to me—I am a king?

Bishop. My lord, wise men ne'er sit and wait their
But presently the means to wait. [WOES.
To fear the foe, since fear oppresseth strength,
Gives, in your weakness, strength unto your foe,
And so your follies fight against yourself.

Fear, and be slain; no worse can come to fight:
And fight and die is death destroying death;
Where fearing dying pays death service breath.

Aum. My father hath a power, enquire of him,
And learn to make a body of a limb.

K. Rich. Thou child'st me well.—Proud Bolingbroke,
I come
To change blows with thee for our day of doom.
This ague-fit of fear is over-blown:
At easy task it is, to win our own—
Say, Scroop, where lies our uncle with his power?
Speak sweetly, man, although thy looks be sour.
Scroop. Men judge by the complexion of the sky
The state and inclination of the day;
So may you by my dull and heavy eye,
My tongue hath but a heavier tale to say.
I play the torturer, by small and small,
To lengthen out the worst that must be spoken.
Your uncle York is join'd with Bolingbroke;
And all your northern castles yielded up.
And all your southern gentlemen in arms
Upon his part. [K. Rich.

K. Rich. Thou hast said enough.—
Beshrew thee. cousin. [To Aumerle.] which didst lead me forth
Of that sweet way I was in to despair!
What say you now? What comfort have we now?
By heaven, I'll hate him everlasting,
That bids me be of comfort any more.
Go to Flint castle: there I'll pine away;
A king, woe's slave, shall kingly woe obey.
That power I have, discharge; and let them go
To eat the land that hath some hope to grow,
For I have none.—Let no man speak again
To alter this, for counsel is but vain.

Aum. My liege, one word.

K. Rich. He does me double wrong,
That wounds me with the flatteries of his tongue.
Discharge my followers: let them hence away,
From Richard's night to Bolingbroke's fair day.

[Exit.

SCENE III. Wales. A Plain before Flint Castle.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, Bolingbroke and Forces; York, Northumberland, and Others.

Boling. So that by this intelligence we learn,
The Welshmen are dispers'd; and Salisbury
Is gone to meet the king, who lately landed
With some few private friends upon this coast.
North. The news is very fair and good, my lord:
Richard, not far from hence, hath hid his head.
York. It would beseech the lord Northumberland,
To say, king Richard:—Alack, the heavy day,
When such a sacred king should hide his head!
North. Your grace mistakes me; only to be brief,
Left I his title out.
York. The time hath been,
Would you have been so brief with him, he would

Have been so brief with you, to shorten you,
For taking so the head, your whole head's length.

Boling. Mistake not, uncle, farther than you should York. Take not, good cousin, farther than you should Lest you mistake; the heavens are o'er our heads.

Boling. I know it, uncle; and oppose not myself
Against their will.—But who comes here?

Enter Percy.

Welcome, Harry. What, will not this castle yield?
Percy. The castle royally is man'd, my lord,
Against thy entrance.

Percy. Yes, my good lord;
It doth contain a king: king Richard lies
Within the limits of yond' lime and stone;
And with him are the lord Aumerle, lord Salisbury,
Sir Stephen Scroop; besides a clergymen
Of holy reverence, who, I cannot learn.

North. O! belike it is the bishop of Carlisle.
Boling. Noble lord.

Go to the rude ribs of that ancient castle:

Through broken trumpet send the breath of parle
Into his ruin'd ears, and thus deliver:

Henry Bolingbroke,
On both his knees doth kiss king Richard's hand,
And sends allegiance, and true faith of heart,
To his most royal person; hither come
Even at his feet to lay my arms and power,
Provided that, my banishment repeal'd,
And lands restor'd again, be freely granted.
If not, I'll use the advantage of my power,
And lay the summer's dust with showers of blood,
Rain'd from the wounds of slaughter'd Englishmen:
The which, how far off from the mind of Bolingbroke
It is, such crimson tempest should bedrench
The fresh green lap of fair king Richard's land,
My stooping duty tenderly shall show.
Go; signify as much, while here we march
Upon the grassy carpet of this plain.
Let 's march without the noise of threatening drum,
That from the castle's tatter'd battlements
Our fair appointments may be well perus'd.
Methinks, king Richard and myself should meet,
With no less terror than the elements
Of fire and water, when their thundering shock?
At meeting tears the cloudy cheeks of heaven.
Be he the fire, I'll be the yielding water:
The rage be his, while on the earth I rain
My waters; on the earth, and not on him.—

March on, and mark king Richard how he looks.
A parley sounded, and answered by a Trumpet within Flourish. Enter on the walls King Richard, the Bishop of Carlisle, Aumerle, Scroop, and Salisbury.
Boling. See, see, king Richard doth himself appear,
As doth the blushing discontented sun
From out the fiery portal of the east,
When he perceives the envious clouds are bent
To dim his glory, and to stain the track
Of his bright passage to the occident.
York. Yet looks he like a king: behold, his eye,
As bright as is the eagle's, lights forth
Controlling majesty. Alack, alack, for woe,
That any storm should stain so fair a show!

K. Rich. We are amaz'd; and thus long have we stood
[To Northumberland.

To watch the faithful bending of thy knee,
KES'G
Come your Sorrow like 341 were know. That hath dismiss'd us from our stewardship; for well we know, no hand of blood and bone
Can gripe the sacred handle of our sceptre, unless he do profane, steal, or usurp.
And though you think that all, as you have done, have torn their souls by turning them from us, and we are barren and bereft of friends.
Yet know, my master, God omnipotent, is mustering in his clouds on our behalf. Armies of pestilence; and they shall strike your children yet unborn, and shall
That lift your vassal hands against my head, and threaten the glory of my precious crown.
Tell Bolingbroke. for yond', methinks, he stands, that every stride he makes upon my land is dangerous treason. He is come to ope the purple testament of bleeding war:
But ere the crown he looks for live in peace, Ten thousand bloody crowns of mothers' sons shall ill become the flower of England's face,
Change the complexion of her maid-pale peace
To scarlet indignation, and bedew her pastures' grass with faithful English blood.
North. The King of heaven forbid, our lord the king should so with civil and unequal arms.
Be rush'd upon. Thy thrice-noble cousin, Harry Bolingbroke, doth humbly kiss thy hand; and by the honourable tomb he sweares, that stands upon your royal grandsire's bones, and by the royalties of both your bloods, Currents that spring from one most gracious head, and by the hued hand of warlike Gaunt, and by the worth and honour of himself, comprising all that may be sworn or said, his coming hither hath no farther scope, than for his lineal royalties, and to beg Enfranchisement immediate on his knees: Which on thy royal party granted once, his glittering arms he will commend to rust, his barbed steeds to stables, and his heart to faithful service of your majesty.
This sweares he, as he is a prince, is just, and, as a gentleman. I credit him.
K. Rich. Northumberland, say, thus the king re- His noble cousin is right welcome hither; [turns: and all the number of his fair demands.
Shall be accomplish'd without contradiction. With all the gracious utterance thou hast, speak to his gentle hearing kind condescends.—
Northumberland retires to Bolingbroke. We do debate ourself, cousin, [To Aumerle.] do we not, to look so poorly, and to speak so fair? Shall we call back Northumberland, and send defiance to the traitor, and so die?
Aum. No. good my lord: let's fight with gentle words.
Till time lend friends, and friends their helpful swords.
K. Rich. O God! O God! that e'er this tongue of mine, That laid the sentence of dreadful banishment
On yond' proud man, should take it off again With words of sooth. O! that I were as great As is my grief, or lesser than my name, or that I could forget what I have been, or not remember what I must be now.
Swell'st thou, proud heart? I'll give thee scope to beat, [Unbuttoning.]
Since foes have scope to beat both thee and me.
Aum. Northumberland comes back from Bolingbroke.
K. Rich. What must the king do now? Must he submit?
The king shall do it. Must he be depos'd?
The king shall be contented. Must he lose
The name of king? o' God's name, let it go:
I'll give my jewels for a set of beads,
My gorgeous palace for a hermitage,
My gay apparel for an alms-man's gown,
My figured goblets for a dish of wood,
My sceptre for a palmer's walking staff,
My subjects for a pair of carved saints,
And my large kingdom for a little grave,
A little grave, an obscure grave:
Or I'll be buried in the king's highway,
Some way of common trade, where subjects' feet
May hourly trample on their sovereign's head;
For on my heart they tread, now whilst I live, and, buried once, why not upon my head?—
Aumerle, thou weep'st: my tender-hearted cousin!—
We'll make foul weather with despised tears;
Our sighs and they shall lodge the summer corn,
And make a dearth in this revolting land:
Or shall we play the wantons with our woes, and make some pretty match with shedding tears?
As thus:—to drop them still upon one place, till they have fretted us a pair of graves
Within the earth; and, therein laid, there lies Two kinsmen digg'd their graves with weeping eyes.
Would not this ill do well?—Well, well, I see I talk but idly, and you mock at me.—
Most mighty prince, my lord Northumberland, what says king Bolingbroke? will his majesty give Richard leave to live till Richard die? you make a leg, and Bolingbroke says ay.
North. My lord, in the base court, I doth attend to speak with you: may 't please you to come down?
K. Rich. Down, down, I come; like glistening Phaeton
Wanting the manage of unruly jades.
[North. retires again to Bolingbroke.
In the base court? Base court, where kings grow base,
To come at traitors' calls, and do them grace.
In the base court? Come down? down, court! down, king!
For night-owls shriek, where mounting larks should sing.
[Exeunt, from above.
Boling. What says his majesty?
North. Sorrow and grief of heart
Make him speak fondly, like a frantic man:
Yet he is come.
Enter King Richard, and his Attendants, below.
Boling. Stand all apart, and show fair duty to his majesty.—
My gracious lord,—
K. Rich. Fair cousin, you debase your princely knees
To make the base earth proud with kissing it:
Me rather had, my heart might feel your love,
Than my unpleas'd eye see your courtesy.
Up, cousin, up: your heart is up. I know,
Thus high at least, although your knee be low
Boling. My gracious lord. I come but for name own
K. Rich. Your own is yours; and I am yours, and all
Boling. So far be mine, my most redoubted lord,
As my true service shall deserve your love.
K. Rich. Well you deserve:—they well deserve to have—

---

Not in f. o. base court, lower court.

Enter the Queen, and two Ladies.

Queen. What sport shall we devise here in this garden?

To drive away the heavy thought of care?

1 Lady. Madam, we’ll play at bowls.

Queen. ’Twill make me think the world is full of rubs.
And that my fortune runs against the bias.

1 Lady. Madam, we’ll dance.

Queen. My legs can keep no measure in delight,
When my poor heart no measure keeps in grief:
Therefore, no dancing, girl; some other sport.

1 Lady. Madam, we’ll tell tales.

Queen. Of sorrow, or of joy?

1 Lady. Of either, madam.

Queen. Of neither, girl;
For if of joy, being altogether wanting,
It doth remember me the more of sorrow;
Or if of grief, being altogether had,
It adds more sorrow to my want of joy;
For what I have I need not to repeat,
And what I want it boots not to complain.

1 Lady. Madam, I’ll sing.

Queen. ’T is well that thou hast cause;
But thou shouldst please me better, wouldst thou weep.

1 Lady. I could weep, madam, would it do you good.

Queen. And I could sing, would weeping do me good,
And never borrow any tear of thee.
But stay, here come the gardeners.
Let’s step into the shadow of these trees.—
My wretchedness unto a row of pins,
They’ll talk of state: for every one doth so
Against a change. Woe is forsworn with woe.

[Queen and Ladies retire.

Enter a Gardener and two Servants.

Gard. Go, bind thou up yond’ dangling apricocks,
Which, like merry children, make their sire
Stoop with oppression of their prodigal weight:
Give some supportance to the bowing twigs.—
Go thou, and like an executioner,
Cut off the heads of two-fast-growing sprays,
That look too lofty in our commonwealth:
All must be even in our government.

You thus employ’d, I will go root away
The noisome weeds, that without profit suck
The soil’s fertility from wholesome flowers.

1 Serv. Why should we, in the compass of a pale,
Keep law, and form, and due proportion,
Shewing, as in a model, our firm estate,
When our sea-wall’d garden, the whole land,
Is full of weeds; her fairest flowers chok’d up,
Her fruit-trees all unprun’d, her hedges ruin’d,
Her knots’ disorder’d, and her wholesome herbs
Swarming with caterpillars?

Gard. Hold thy peace.
He that hath suffer’d this disorder’d spring,
Hath now himself met with the fall of leaf;
The weeds that his broad-spreading leaves did shelter.
That seem’d in eating him to hold him up,
Are pluck’d up, root and all, by Bolingbroke;
I mean, the earl of Wiltshire, Bashly, Green.

1 Serv. What! are they dead?

Gard. They are; and Bolingbroke Hath seiz’d the wasteful king.—What pity is it,
That he had not so trimm’d and dress’d his land,
As we this garden. At the time of year
We wound the bark, the skin of our fruit-trees,
Lest, being over-prou’d in sap and blood,
With too much riches it confound itself:
Had he done so to great and growing men,
They might have liv’d to bear, and he to taste
Their fruits of duty. Superfluous branches
We lop away, that bearing boughs may live:
Had he done so, himself had borne the crown,
Which waste and idle hours have quite thrown down.

1 Serv. What! think you, then, the king shall be depos’d?

Gard. Depress’d he is already; and depos’d,
’Tis doubt, he will be: letters came last night
To a dear friend of the good duke of York’s,
That tell black tidings.

Queen. O! I am press’d to death, through want of speaking.

[Coming forward.

Thou, old Adam’s likeness, set to dress this garden,
How darest thou harsh, rude tongue sound this unpleasing
What Eve, what serpent hath suggested thee news?
To make a second fall of cursed man?
Why dost thou say king Richard is depos’d?
Darst thou, than little better thing than earth,
Divine his downfall? Say, where, when, and how,
Can’st thou by these ill tidings? speak, thou wretch.

Gard. Pardon me, madam; little joy have I,
To breathe these news, yet what I say is true.
King Richard, he is in the mighty hold
Of Bolingbroke: their fortunes both are weigh’d:
In your lord’s scale is nothing but himself,
And some few vanities that make him light;
But in the balance of great Bolingbroke,
Besides himself, are all the English peers,
And with that odds he weighs king Richard down.
Post you to London, and you’ll find it so;
I speak no more than every one doth know.

Queen. Nimble mischance, that art so light of foot,
Doth not thy embassage belong to me,
And am I last that knows it? O! thou think’st
To serve me last, that I may longest keep Thy sorrow in my breast.—Come, ladies, go
To meet at London London’s king in woe.—
What! was I born to this, that my sad look
Should grace the triumph of great Bolingbroke?

Gardener, for telling me these news of woe,
Pray God, the plants thou gav’st may never grow.

[Exit Queen and Ladies.

Gard. Poor queen! so that thy state might be no worse,
I would my skill were subject to thy curse.
Here did she fall a tear; here, in this place,
I’ll set a bank of rue, sour herb of grace:
Rue, even for ruth, here shortly shall be seen
In the remembrance of a weeping queen.

[Exit.
ACT IV.

SCENE I.—London. Westminster Hall.

The Lords spiritual on the right side of the Throne; the Lords temporaries on the left; the Commons below. Enter Bolingbroke, Aumerle, Surrey, Northumberland, Percy, Fitzwater, another Lord, the Bishop of Carlisle, the Abbot of Westminster, and Attendants.

Boling. Call forth Bagot.

Enter Bagot, guarded.

Now, Bagot, freely speak thy mind, What thou dost know of noble Gloster's death; Who wrought it with the king, and who perform'd The bloody office of his timeless end.

Bagot. Then, set before my face the lord Aumerle. Boling. Cousin, stand forth, and look upon that man. Bagot. My lord Aumerle, I know your daring tongue Scorns to unsay what once it hath deliver'd. In that dead time when Gloster's death was plotted, I heard you say,—'Is not my arm of length, That reacheth from the restful English court, As far as Calais, to mine uncle's head?'

Amongst much other talk, that very time, I heard you say, that you had rather refuse The offer of an hundred thousand crowns, Than Bolingbroke's return to England; Adding withal, how blest this land would be In this your cousin's death.

Aum. Princess, and noble lords, What answer shall I make to this base man? Shall I so much dishonour my fair stars, On equal terms to give him chastisement? Either I must, or have mine honour soild With the attainer of his slanderous lips.

There is my gage, the manual seal of death, That marks thee out for hell; I say, thou liest, And will maintain what thou hast said is false In thy heart-blood, though being all too base To stain the temper of my knightly sword.

Boling. Bagot, forbear: thou shalt not take it up. Aum. Excepting one, I would he were the best In all this presence, that hath mov'd me so.

Fitz. If that thy valour stand on sympathy, There is my gage, Aumerle, in gage to thine. By that fair sun which shows me where thou stand'st, I heard thee say, and, vauntingly thou spak'st it, That thou wert cause of noble Gloster's death. If thou deny'st it twenty times, thou liest; And I will turn thy falsehood to thy heart, Where it was forged, with my rapier's point. Aum. Thou dar'st not, coward, live to see that day.

Fitz. Now, by my soul, I would it were this hour. Aum. Fitzwater, thou art damn'd to hell for this. Percy. Aumerle, thou liest; his honour is as true a this appeal, as thou art all unjust; And, that thou art so, there I throw my gage, To prove it on thee to th' extremest point Of mortal breathing. Seize it if thon dar'st.

Aum. And if I do not, may my hands rot off, And never brandish more revengeful steel Over the glittering helmet of my foe! Lord. I task the earth to the like, forsworn Aumerle; And spurn thee on with all as many lies

* e. add: Officers behind, with Bagot. * Not in f. e. * Equality of rank. * This and the next speech are not in the folio, all, but the quartos of 1597, read: take.
Worst! in this royal presence may I speak,
Yet best becom'ning me to speak the truth.
Would God, that any in this noble presence
Were enough noble to be upright judge
Of noble Richard: then true nobles\(^1\) would Learn him forbearance from so foul a wrong.
What subject can give sentence on his king?
And who sits here that is not Richard's subject?
Thieves are not judged\(^2\) but they are by to hear,
Although apparent guilt be well in them;
And shall the figure of God's majesty;
His captain, steward, deputy elect.
Anointed, crowned, planted many years,
Be judged by subject and inferior breath.
And he not\(^3\) present! O! forend\(^4\) it, God,
That, in a Christian climate, souls refin'd.
Should show so heinous, black, obscene a deed!
I speak to subjects, and a subject speaks,
Stir'd up by God thus boldly for his king,
My lord of Hereford here, whom you call king,
Is a foul traitor to proud Hereford's king;
And if you crown him, let me prophesy
The blood of English shall manure the ground,
And future ages groan for this foul act:
Peace shall go sleep with Turks and infidels,
And in this seat of peace tumultuous wars
Shall kin with kin, and kind with kind confounded;
Disorder, horror, fear, and mutiny,
Shall here inhabit, and this land be call'd
The field of Golgotha, and dead men's skulls.
O! if you raise\(^5\) this house against this house,
It will the woefullest division prove,
That ever fell upon this cursed earth.
Prevent,\(^5\) resist it, let it be not so,
Last child, child's children, cry against you—woe!
North. Well have you argued, sir; and, for your pains,
Of capital treason we arrest you here:—
My lord of Westminster, be it your charge
To keep him safely till his day of trial.
May it please you, lords, to grant the commons' suit.
Boling. Fetch hither Richard, that in common view
He may surrender: so we shall proceed
Without suspicion.
York. I will be his conduct. [Exit.
Boling. Lords, you that are here are under our arrest,
Procure your sureties for your days of answer.—
Little are we beholding to your love. [To the Bishop.
And look for little at your helping hands.
Re-enter York, with King Richard, and Officers bearing the Crown, &c.
K. Rich. Alack! why am I sent for to a king,
Before I have shook off the regal thoughts
Wherewith I reign'd? I hardly yet have learnt
To insinuate, flatter, bow, and bend my limbs:
Give sorrow leave awhile to tutor me
To this submission. Yet I well remember
The favours\(^6\) of these men: were they not mine?
Did they not sometime cry, All hail! to me?
So Judas did to Christ; but he, in twelve,
Found truth in all, but one: I, in twelve thousand, none.
God save the king! Will you man say, amen?
Art I both prince and clerk? How then, amen?
God save the king! although I be not he;
And yet, amen, if heaven do think him me.
To do what service am I sent for hither?
York. To do that office of thine own good will,
Which tired majesty did make thee offer;
The resignation of thy state and crown
To Harry Bolingbroke.
K. Rich. Give me the crown.—Here, cousin, seize the crown;
[Crown brought
Here, cousin, on this side my hand, and on that side, yours.
Now is this golden crown like a deep well,
That owes\(^7\) two buckets, filling one another;
The emptier ever dancing in the air,
The other down, unseen, and full of water:
That bucket down, and full of tears, am I,
Drinking my grief, whilst you mount up on high
Boling. I thought you had been willing to resign
K. Rich. My crown, I am; but still my griefs are mine
You may my glories and my state dispose,
But not my griefs: still am I king of those. [crown
Boling. Part of your cares you give me with you
My care is loss of care, by old care done;
Your care is gain of care, by new care won:
The cares I give, I have, though given away;
They tend the crown, yet still with me they stay.
Boling. Are you contented to resign the crown?
K. Rich. Ay, no;—no, ay;—for I must nothing be Therefore no, for I resign to thee.
Now mark me how I will undo myself.—
I give this heavy weight from off my head,
And this unwieldy sceptre from my hand,
The pride of kingly sway from out my heart:
With mine own tears I wash away my balm,
With mine own hands I give away my crown,
With mine own tongue deny my sacred state,
With mine own breath release all duties, rites\(^8\):
All pomp and majesty I do forswear;
My manors, rents, revenues, I forgo;
My acts, decrees, and statutes, I deny:
God pardon all oaths that are broke to me!
God keep all vows unbrok'd that swear\(^9\) to thee!
Make me, that nothing have, with nothing grieve'd;
And thou with all pleas'd, that last all achiev'd!
Long may'st thou live in Richard's sent to sit,
And soon lie Richard in an earthly pit!
God save king Henry, unkag'd Richard says,
And send him many years of sunshine days!—
What more remains?
North. No more, but that you read [Offering a paper
These accusations, and these grievous crimes,
Committed by your person and your followers,
Against the state and profit of this land;
That, by confessing them, the souls of men
May deem that you are worthily depos'd.
K. Rich. Must I do so? and must I ravel out
My weav'd up folly? Gentle Northumberland,
If thy offences were upon record,
Would it not shame thee, in so fair a troop,
To read a lecture of them? If thou wouldest,
There shouldst thou find one heinous article,
Containing the depos'ing of a king,
And cracking the strong warrant of an oath,
Mark'd with a blot, daub'd in the book of heaven.—
Nay, all of you, that stand and look upon me,
Whilst that my wretchedness doth baffle myself,
Though some of you, with Pilate, wash your hands,
Showing an outward pity; yet you Pilates
Have here deliver'd me to my sour cross,
And water cannot wash away your sin.

Mark, silent king, the moral of this sport:
How soon my sorrow hath destroy'd my face.
Boling. The shadow of your sorrow hath destroy'd
The shadow of your face.
K. Rich. Say that again. The shadow of my sorrow? Ha! let's see:—
'Tis very true, my grief lies all within;
And these external manners of lament
Are merely shadows to the unseen grief,
That swells with silence in the tortured soul;
There lies the substance: and I thank thee, king,
For thy great bounty, that not only giv'st
Me eas' to wait, but teachest me the way
How to lament the cause. I'll beg one boon,
And then begone and trouble you no more.
Shall I obtain it?
Boling. Name it, fair cousin.
K. Rich. Fair cousin! I am greater than a king.
For, when I was a king, my flatterers
Were then but subjects; being now a subject,
I have a king here to my flatterer.
Being so great, I have no need to beg.
Boling. Yet ask.
K. Rich. And shall I have it?
Boling. You shall.
K. Rich. Why then give me leave to go.
Boling. Whither?
K. Rich. Whither you will, so I were from your sights
Boling. Go, some of you; convey him to the Tower.
K. Rich. O, good! Convey?—Conveyers* are you all.
That rise thus mimbly by a true king's fall.
[Execut K. Richard, and Guard.
Boling. On Wednesday next we solemnly set down
Our coronation: lords, prepare yourselves.
[Execut all but the Abbot, Bishop of Carlisle, and Aumerle.
Abbot. A woeful pageant have we here beheld.
Bishop. The woe's to come: the children yet unborn
Shall feel this day as sharp to them as thorn.
Aumer. You holy clergy-men, is there no plot
To rid the realm of this pernicious blot?
Abbot. My lord, before I freely speak my mind herein,
You shall not only take the sacrament
To bury mine intents, but also to effect
Whatever I shall happen to devise.
I see your brows are full of discontent,
Your hearts of sorrow, and your eyes of tears:
Come home with me to supper; I will lay
A plot, shall show us all a merry day.  [Exeunt.]
To grim necessity; and he and I
Will keep a league till death. Hie thee to France,
And cloister thee in some religious house:
Our holy lives must win a new world's crown,
Which our profane hours here have stricken down.

Queen. What! is my Richard both in shape and mind
Transform'd and weak'en'd? Hath this Bolingbroke
Depos'd thine intellect? hath he been in thy heart?
The lion, dying, thrusteth forth his paw,
And wounds the earth, if nothing else, with rage
To be o'erpower'd; and wilt thou, pupil-like,
Take thy correction mildly? kiss the rod,
And fawn on rage with base humility,
Which art a lion, and a king of beasts?

K. Rich. A king of beasts, indeed? if aught but beasts,
I had been still a happy king of men.

Good sometime queen, prepare thee hence for France:
Think I am dead: and that even here thou tak'st,
As from my death-bed, my last living leave.
In winter's tedious nights sit by the fire
With good old folks, and let them tell thee tales
Of woeful ages long ago betid;
And, ere thou bid good night, to quit their grief,
Tell thou the lamentable tale of me,
And send the hearers weeping to their beds.
For why, the senseless brands will sympathize
The heavy accent of thy moving tongue,
And in the touch weep the fire out;
And some will mourn in ashes, some coal-black,
For the deposing of a rightful king.

Enter Northumberland, attended.

North. My lord, the mind of Bolingbroke is chang'd:
You must to Pomfret, not unto the Tower.—
And, madam, there is order ta'en for you:
With all swift speed you must away to France.

K. Rich. Northumberland, thou ladder, whereby
The mounting Bolingbroke ascends my throne,
The time shall not be many hours of age
More than it is, ere foul sin gathering head
Shall break into corruption. Thou shalt think,
Though he divide the realm, and give thee half,
It is too little, helping him to all:
And he shall think, that thou, which know'st the way
To plant unrightful kings, wilt know again,
Being ne'er so little urg'd, another way
To pluck him headlong from the usurped throne.
The love of wicked friends converts to fear;
That fear to hate; and hate turns one, or both,
To worthy danger and deserved death.

North. My guilt be on my head, and there an end.
Take leave, and part, for you must part withth' me.

K. Rich. Doubly divorce'd! —Bad men, ye violate
A twofold marriage; 'twixt my crown and me,
And then, betwixt me and my married wife.
Let me kiss the oath; 'twixt thee and me;
[They embrace.]

And yet not so, for with a kiss 'twas made.
Part us, Northumberland: I towards the north,
Where shivering cold and sickness pine the elime;
My wife to France: from whence, set forth in pomp,
She came adorned hither like sweet May,
Sent back like Hallowmas, or shortest day.

Queen. And must we be divided? must we part?

K. Rich. Ay, hand from hand, my love, and heart from heart.

Queen. Banish us both, and send the king with me.

North. That were some love, but little policy.

Queen. Then whither he goes, thither let me go.

K. Rich. So two, together weeping, make one woe
Weep thou for me in France, for thee here
Better far off, than near, being ne'er the near.

Go; count thy way with sighs, I mine with groans.

Queen. So longest way shall have the longest means
K. Rich. Twice for one stop I'll groan, the way being short,
And piece the way out with a heavy heart.
Come, come, in wooing sorrow let's be brief,
Since, wedding it, there is such length in grief.
One kiss shall stop our mouths, and dubiously part:
Thus give I mine, and thus take I thy heart. [They kiss.

Queen. Give me mine own again; 't were no good part,
To take on me to keep, and kill thy heart.

[They kiss again.

So, now I have mine own again, begone,
That I may strive to kill it with a groan.

K. Rich. We make woe wanton with this fond delay.
Once more, adieu; the rest let sorrow say. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in the Duke of York's Palace.

Enter York, and the Duchess.

Duch. My lord, you told me, you would tell the rest,
When weeping made you break the story off,
Of our two cousins coming into London.

Duch. At that sad stop, my lord,
Where rude misgovern'd hands, from windows' tops,
Threw dust and rubbish on king Richard's head.

York. Then, as I said, the duke, great Bolingbroke,
Mounted upon a hot and fiery steed,
Which his aspiring rider seem'd to know,
With slow but stately pace kept on his course,
While all tongues cried—"God save thee, Bolingbroke!"

You would have thought the very windows spake,
So many greedy looks of young and old
Through casements darted their desiring eyes
Upon his visage; and that all the walls
With painted imagery had said at once,—
"Jesu preserve thee! welcome, Bolingbroke!"

Whilst he, from one side to the other turning,
Bare-headed, lower than his proud steed's neck,
Bespalte them thus,—"I thank you, countrymen:"
And thus still doing, thus he pass'd along.

Duch. Alas, poor Richard! where rode he the whilst?
York. As in a theatre, the eyes of men,
After a well-grad'd actor leaves the stage,
Are idly bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious;
Even so, or with much more contempt, men's eyes
Did seewell of gentle Richard: no man cried, God save him;
No joyful tongue gave him his welcome home;
But dust was thrown upon his sacred head,
Which with such gentle sorrow he shook off,
His face still combating with tears and smiles,
The badges of his grief and patience,
That had not God, for some strong purpose, steel'd
The hearts of men, they must perforce have melted,
And barbarism itself have pitted him.
But heaven hath a hand in these events,
To whose high will we bound our calm contents.
To Bolingbroke are we sworn subjects now,
Whose state and honour I for eye allow.

Duch. Here comes my son Aumerle.

York. Aumerle that was...
KING RICHARD II.

SCENE III.—Windsor. A Room in the Castle.

Enter BOLINGBROKE as King; PERCY, and other Lords.

Boling. Can no man tell me of my untruthy son?

York. 'Tis full three months, since I did see him last:

If any plague hang over us, 'tis he.

I would to God, my lords, he might be found.

Inquire at London, 'mongst the taverns there,

For there they say, he daily doth frequent,

With unrestrained loose companions;

Even such, they say, as stand in narrow lanes,

And beat our watch, and rob our passengers;

While he, young wanton, and effeminate boy,

Takes on the point of honour to support

So dissolve a crew.

Percy. My lord, some two days since I saw the prince,

And told him of these triumphs held at Oxford.

Boling. And what said the gallant?

Percy. His answer was,—he would unto the stews;

And from the commonest creature pluck a glove,

And wear it as a favour; and with that

He would unhorse the lustiest challenger.

Boling. As dissolve, as desperate; yet through both

I see some sparks of better hope, which elder days

May happily bring forth. But who comes here?

Enter Aumerle, in great haste.

Aum. Where is the king?

Boling. What means our cousin, that he stays and looks

So wildly?

Aum. God save your grace. I do beseech your majesty,

To have some conference with your grace alone.

Boling. Withdraw yourselves, and leave us here alone.—

[Exeunt Percy and Lords.

What is the matter with our cousin now?

Aum. For ever may my knees grow to the earth.

My tongue elevate to my cousin within my mouth,

Unless a pardon, ere I rise, or speak.

Boling. Intended, or committed, was this fault?

If on the first, how heinous else it be,

To win thy love after I pardon thee.

Aum. Then give me leave that I may turn the key,

That no man enter till my tale be done.

Boling. Have thy desire. [Aumerle locks the door —To kill the king at Oxford.

Duch. He shall be none;

We'll keep him here: then, what is that to him?

York. Away, fond woman! I were he twenty times

My son, I would appeach him.

Duch. Hadst thou groan'd for him,

As I have done, thou wouldst be more put to,

But now I know thy mind: thou dost suspect,

That I have been disloyal to thy bed,

And that he is a bastard, not thy son.

Sweet York, sweet husband, be not of that mind:

He is as like thee as a man may be,

Not like to me, nor any of my kin,

And yet I love him.

York. Make way, unruly woman. [Exit.

Duch. After, Aumerle! Mount thee upon his horse

Spur, post, and get before him to the king,

And beg thy pardon ere he do accuse thee.

I'll not be long behind: though I be old,

I doubt not but to ride as fast as York:

And never will I rise up from the ground,

Till Bolingbroke have pardon'd thee. Away! begone.

[Exeunt.

KING RICHARD II.

SCENE III. But that is lost for being Richard's friend,

And, madam, you must call him Rutland now.

I am in parliament pledge for his truth,

And lasting fealty to the new-made king.

Enter Aumerle.

Duch. Welcome, my son. Who are the violets now,

That strew the green lap of the new-com spring?

Aum. Madam, I know not; nor I greatly care not:

God knows, I had as lief be none, as one.

York. Well, bear you well in this new spring of time,

Lest you be crop'd before you come to prime.

What news from Oxford? hold those justs and triumphs?

Aum. For aught I know, my lord, they do.

York. You will be there, I know.

Aum. If God prevent it not, I purpose so.

York. What seal is that, that hangs without thy bosom?

Yea, look'st thou pale? let me then see the writing.

Aum. My lord, it is nothing.

York. No matter, then, who sees it.

I will be satisfied, let me see the writing.

Aum. I do beseech your grace to pardon me.

It is a matter of small consequence,

Which for some reasons I would not have seen.

York. Which for some reasons, sir, I mean to see.

I fear, I fear,—

Duch. What should you fear?

Tis nothing but some bond ho's enter'd into

For gay apparel 'gainst the triumph day.

York. Bound to himself? what doth he with a bond

That he is bound to? Wife, thou art a fool.—

Boy, let me see the writing.

Aum. I do beseech you, pardon me: I may not show it.

York. I will be satisfied: let me see it, I say,

Treason! foul treason!—villain! traitor! slave!—

Duch. What is the matter, my lord?

York. Ho! who is within there? Saddle my horse.

God for his mercy! what treachery is here!

Duch. Why, what is it, my lord?

York. Give me my boots, I say: saddle my horse.—

Now by mine honour, by my life, my troth,

I will appeach the villain.

Duch. What's the matter?

York. Peace, foolish woman.

Duch. I will not peace.—What is the matter,

Aumerle?

Aum. Good mother, be content: it is no more

Than my poor life must answer.

Duch. Thy life answer?

York. Bring me my boots! I will unto the king.

Enter Servant with boots.

Duch. Strike him, Aumerle.—Poor boy, thou art

amaz'd.—

Hence, villain! never more come in my sight.

[Exit Servant.

York. Give me my boots, I say.

Duch. Why, York, what wilt thou do?

Wilt thou not hide the trespass of thine own?

Have we more sons, or are we like to have?

Is not my teeming date drunk up with time,

And wilt thou pluck my fair son from mine age,

And robb of a happy mother's name?

Is he not like thee? is he not thine own?

York. Thou fond, mad woman,

Wilt thou conceal this dark conspiracy?

A dozen of them here have ta'en the sacrament,

And interchangeably set down their hands,
York. [Within.] My liege, beware! look to thyself:
Thou hast a traitor in thy presence there.

Boling. Villain, I’ll make thee safe. [Drawing.

Aum. Stay thy revengeful hand: thou hast no cause to fear.

York. [Within.] Open the door, secure, fool-hardy
king:
Shall I for love speak treason to thy face?
Open the door, or I will break it open.

[Bolingbrook opens the door, and locks it again.

Enter York.

Boling. What is the matter, uncle? speak;
Recover breath: tell us how near is danger,
That we may arm us to encounter it.

York. Peruse this writing here, and thou shalt know
The treason that my haste forbids me show.

Aum. Remember, as thou read’st, thy promise past,
I do repent me: read not my name there;
My heart is not confederate with my hand.

York. It was, villain, ere thy hand did set it down.—
I tore it from the traitor’s bosom, king:
Fear, and not love, begots his penitence.
Forget to pity him, lest thy pity prove
A serpent that will bite thee to the heart.

Boling. O, heinous, strong, and bold conspiracy! —
O, loyal father of a treacherous son!
Thou shear, immaculate, and silver fountains,
From whence this stream through muddy passages
Hath held his current, and defied himself!
Thy overflow of good converts to bad;
And thy abundant goodness shall excuse
This deadly blot in thy digressing son.

York. So shall my virtue be his vice’s bawd,
And he shall spend mine honour with his shame,
As thriftless sons their scraping fathers’ gold.
Mine honour lives when his dishonour dies,
Or my shame’d life in his dishonour lies:
Thou kill’st me in his life; giving him breath,
The traitor lives, the true man’s put to death.

Duch. [Within.] What ho! my liege! for God’s sake let me in.

Boling. What shrill-voic’d supplicant makes this eager cry?

Duch. A woman, and thine aunt, great king; ’tis I.
Speak with me, pity me, open the door:
A beggar begs, that never begg’d before.

Boling. Our scene is altered, from a serious thing,
And now chang’d to “The Beggars and the King.”—
My dangerous cousin, let your mother in:
I know, she’s come to pray for your foul sin.
York. If thou do pardon, whatsoever pray,
More sins for this forgiveness prosper may.
This fester’d joint cut off, the rest rest sound;
This, let alone, will all the rest confound.

Enter Duchess.

Duch. O king! believe not this hard-hearted man:
Love, loving not itself, none other can.
York. Thou frantic woman, what dost thou make here?
Shall thy old dogs once more a traitor rear?

Duch. Sweet York, be patient. Hear me, gentle liege.

Boling. Rise up, good aunt.

Duch. Not yet, I thee beseech:
For ever will I walk upon my knees,
And never see day that the happy sees,
Till thou give joy; until thou bid me joy,
By pardoning Rutland, my transgressing boy.

Aum. Unto my mother’s prayers, I bend my knee

York. Against them both, my true joints bound me

[Knells.

Boling. I’ll may’st thou thrive, if thou grant any grace?

Duch. Pleadeth he in earnest? look upon his face:
His eyes do drop no tears, his prayers are in jest:
His words come from his mouth, ours from our breast:
He prays but faintly, and would be denied:
We pray with heart, and soul, and all beside:
His weary joints would gladly rise, I know;
Our knees shall kneel till to the ground they grow:
His prayers are full of false hypocrisy;
Ours of true zeal and deep integrity.
Our prayers do out-pray his; then, let them have
That mercy which true prayers ought to have.

Boling. Good aunt, stand up.

Duch. Nay, do not say—stand up,
But, pardon first, and afterwards, stand up.
An if I were thy nurse, thy tongue to teach,
Pardon should be the first word of thy speech.
I never long’d to hear a word till now;
Say—pardon, king: let pity teach thee how:
The word is short, but not so short as sweet;
No word like pardon, for kings’ months so meet.

York. Speak it in French, king: say, pardonnez-moi.

Duch. Dost thou teach pardon to destroy?
Ah, my sour husband, my hard-hearted lord,
That set’s the word itself against the word!
Speak, pardon, as ’tis current in our land:
The chopping* French we do not understand.
Thine eye begins to speak, set thy tongue there,
Or in thy piteous heart plant thine ear,
That hearing how our plaints and prayers do pierce,
Pity may move thee pardon to rehearse.

Boling. Good aunt, stand up.

Duch. I do not sue to stand

Pardon is all the suit I have in hand.

Boling. I pardon him, as God shall pardon me.

Duch. O, happy vantage of a kneeling knee!
Yet am I sick for fear: speak it again;
Twice saying pardon doth not pardon twain,
But makes one pardon strong.

Boling. I pardon him with all my heart.

Duch. A god on earth thou art. [Rises.

Boling. But for our trusty brother-in-law, and the abbot,
With all the rest of that consorted crew,
Destruction straight shall dog them at the heels.—
Good uncle, help to order several powers
To Oxford, or where else* these traitors be:*
They shall not live within this world, I swear,
But I will have them. so* I once know where.
Uncle, farewell,—and cousin mine! adieu:
Your mother well hath pray’d, and prove you true.

Duch. Come, my old man; I pray God make their new.

SCENE IV.

Enter Sir Pierce of Exton, and a Servant.

Exton. Didst thou not mark the king, what words he spake?

"Have I no friend will rid me of this living fear?"
Was it not so?

Serv. Those were his very words. [twice.

Exton. "Have I no friend?" quoth he: he spake it
And urg’d it twice together, did he not?

Serv. He did.
Enter Exton. And, speaking it, he wisely look'd on me; As who should say,—I would thou wert the man That would relieve this terror from my heart; Mean'ning the King at Pomfret. Come, let's go: I am the king's friend, and will rid his foes. [Exit.

SCENE V.—Pomfret. The Dungeon of the Castle. Enter King Richard.

K. Rich. I have been studying how I may compare
This prison, where I live, unto the world: And for because the world is populous, And here is not a creature but myself, I cannot do it: yet I'll humour't out. My brain I'll prove the female to my soul; My soul, the father: and these two beget
A generation of still-breeding thoughts, And these same thoughts people this little world; In humours like the people of this world, For no thought is contented. The better sort, As thoughts of things divine, are intermit't With scruples, and do set the world itself Against the world.
As thus:—"Come, little ones," and then again,— "It is as hard to come, as for a camel. To thread the pattern of a small needle's eye." Thoughts tending to ambition, they do plot Unlike:—wonders: how these vain weak nails May tear a passage through the flinty ribs Of this hard world, my ragged prison walls; And, for they cannot, die in their own pride. Thoughts tending to content flatter themselves, That they are not the first of fortune's slaves, Nor shall not be the last: like silly beggars, Wzo, sitting in the stocks, refuse their shame. That many have, and others must sit there: And in this thought they find a kind of ease, Bearing their own misfortune on the back Of such as have before endured the like. Thus play I, in one person, many people, And none contented: sometimes am I king; Then, treason makes me wish myself a beggar, And so I am: then, crushing penury Persuades me I was better when a king.
Then, am I king again: and, by and by, Think that I am undoing by Bolingbroke, And straight am nothing.—But whate'er I am, Nor I, nor any man, but that man is, With nothing shall be pleas'd, till he be ease'd With being nothing.—Music do I hear? Ha, ha! keep time.—How sour sweet music is, When time is broke, and no proportion kept! So is it in the music of men's lives: And here have I the daintiness of ear, To check time broke in a disorder'd string, But for the concord of my state and time, Had not an ear to hear my true time broke. I wasted time, and now doth time waste me; For now hath time made me his numbering clock; My thoughts are minutes, and with sighs they jar, Their watches on unto mine eyes the outward watch, Whereto my finger, like a dial's point, Is pointing still, in cleansing them from tears. Now, for so sound, that tells what hour it is, Are clamorous groans, that strike upon my heart, Which is the bell: so sighs, and tears, and groans, Show minutes, times, and hours; but my time Runs posting on in Bolingbroke's proud joy,

While I stand fooling here, his Jack o' the clock. This music mads me: let it sound no more, For though it hath holp madmen to their wits, In me, it seems, it will make wise men mad. Yet, blessing on his heart that gives it me! For 'tis a sign of love, and love to Richard Is a strange brooch in this all-hating world.

Enter Groom.

Groom. Hail, royal prince! K. Rich. Thanks, noble peer; The cheapest of us is ten groats too dear. What art thou? and how comest thou hither, Where no man never comes, but that sad dog That brings me food to make misfortune live? Groom. I was a poor groom of thy stable, king. When thou wert king; who, travelling towards York, With much ado, at length have gotten leave To look upon my sometime royal master's face. O! how it yern'd my heart, when I beheld In London streets that coronation day, When Bolingbroke rode on roan Barbary! That horse that thou so often hast bestrid, That horse that I so carefully have dress'd K. Rich. Hole he Barbary? Tell me, gentle friend, How went he under him? Groom. So proud, as if he had disdain'd the ground K. Rich. So proud that Bolingbroke was on his back! That jade hath eat bread from my royal hand; This hand hath made him proud with clapping him. Would he not stumble? Would he not fall down, (Since pride must have a fall) and break the neck Of that proud man that did usurp his back? Forgiveness, horse! why do I rail on thee, Since thou, created to be aw'd by man, Wast born to bear? I was not made a horse: And yet I hear a burden like an ass, Spur-gall'd and tir'd by jauncing Bolingbroke. Enter Keeper, with a Dish.

Keep. Fellow, give place: here is no longer stay. [To the Groom.

Keep. My lord, will 't please you to fall to? K. Rich. Taste of it first, as that art wont to do. Keep. My lord, I dare not: Sir Pierce of Exton, who lately came from the king, commands the contrary. K. Rich. The devil take Henry of Lancaster, and thee! Patience is stale, and I am weary of it. [Strike the Keeper.

That hand shall burn in never-quenching fire, That stagger thus my person.—Exton, thy fierce hand Hath with the king's blood stain'd the king's own hand. Mount, mount, my soul! thy seat is up on high, Whilst my gross flesh sinks downward, here to die. [Dies

Exton. As full of valour, as of royal blood, And have I spilt: O, would the deed were good! For now the devil, that told me I did well, Says that this deed is chronicled in hell.
This dead king to the living king I'll bear.—
Take hence the rest, and give them burial here.

[Exeunt with the bodies.

SCENE VI.—Windsor. An Apartment in the Castle.

Flourish Enter Bolingbroke, and York, with Lords and Attendants.

Boling. Kind uncle York, the latest news we hear is, that the rebels have consum'd with fire
Our town of Ciester in Glosstshire;
But whither they be taken, or slain, we hear not.

Enter Northumberland.

Welcome, my lord. What is the news with you?*

North. First, to thy sacred state wish I all happiness:
The next news is,—I have to London sent
The heads of Salisbury, Spencer, Blunt, and Kent:
The manner of their taking may appear
At large discoursed in this paper here.

[Presenting a Paper.

Boling. We thank thee, gentle Percy, for thy pains,
And to thy worth will add right worthy gains.

Enter Fitzwater.

Fitz. My lord, I have from Oxford sent to London
The heads of Brocas, and Sir Bennet Seely,
Two of the dangerous consorted traitors,
That sought at Oxford thy dire overthrow.

Boling. Thy pains, Fitzwater, shall not be forgot;
Right noble is thy merit, well I wot.

Enter Percy, with the Bishop of Carlisle.

Percy. The grand conspirator, abbot of Westminster,
With eulog of conscience, and sour melancholy
Hath yielded up his body to the grave;

But here is Carlisle living, to abide
Thy kinely doom, and sentence of his pride.

Boling. Bishop of Carlisle, this shall be your doom*:
Choose out some secret place, some reverend room,
More than thou hast, and with it joy thy life;
So, as thou liv'st in peace, die free from strife:
For though mine enemy thou hast ever been,
High sparks of honour in thee have I seen.

Enter Exton, with Attendants bearing a Coffin.

Exton. Great king, within this coffin I present
Thy buried fear: herein all breathless lies
The mightiest of thy greatest enemies,
Richard of Bordeaux, by me hither brought.

Boling. Exton, I thank thee not; for thou hast wrought
A deed of slander with thy fatal hand
Upon my head, and all this famous land. [Deed.

Exton. From your own mouth, my lord, did I this Boling. They love not poison that do poison need,
Nor do I thee: though I did wish him dead,
I hate the murderer, love him murdered.
The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labour,
But neither my good word, nor princely favour:
With Cain go wander through the shade of night,
And never show thy head by day nor light.—

Lords, I protest, my soul is full of woe,
That blood should sprinkle me to make me grow:
Come, mourn with me for that I do lament,
And put on sullen black. Incontinent
I'll make a voyage to the Holy land,
To wash this blood off from my guilty hand.
March sadly after: grace my mourning here,
In weeping after this untimely bler.

* These two words are not in f. e. * Carlisle, this is your doom: in f. e * So the quarto, 1597; the others, and folio: slaughters
THE FIRST PART
KING HENRY IV.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Lords, Officers, Sheriff, Vintner, Chamberlain, Drawers, Carriers, Travellers, and Attendants.

SCENE, England.

ACT I.

K. Hen. So shaken as we are, so wan with care, Find we a time for fretted peace to pant, And breathe short-winded accents of new broils To be commenc'd in strains afar remote. No more the thirsty entrance of this soil Shall daub her lips with her own children's blood; No more shall trenching war channel her fields, Nor bruise her flowrets with the armed hoofs Of hostile paces; those opposed eyes, Which, like the meteors of a troubled heaven, All of one nature, of one substance bred, Did lately meet in the intestine shock And furious close of civil butchery, Shall now, in mutual, well-beseeming ranks, March all one way, and be no more oppo'd Against acquaintance, kindred, and allies: The edge of war, like an ill-sheathed knife, No more shall cut his master. Therefore, friends, As far as to the sepulchre of Christ, Whose soldier now, under whose blessed cross, We are impressed, and engag'd to fight, Forthwith a power of English shall we levy, Whose arms were moulded in their mother's womb, To chase these pagans, in those holy fields, Over whose acres walk'd those blessed feet, Which fourteen hundred years ago were nail'd For our advantage on the bitter cross. But this our purpose is a twelve-month old,

And bootless 'tis to tell you we will go: Therefore we meet not now.—Then, let me hear Of you, my gentle cousin Westmoreland, What yesternight our council did-decree, In forwarding this dear expedience. West. My liege, this haste was hot in question, And many limits of the charge set down But yesternight; when, all athwart, there came A post from Wales loaden with heavy news; Whose worst was, that the noble Mortimer, Leading the men of Herefordshire to fight Against the irregular and wild Glendower, Was by the rude hands of that Welchman taken, A thousand of his people butchered; Upon whose dead corpse there was such misuse, Such beastly, shameless transformation, By those Welchwomen done, as may not be Without much shame re-told or spoken of. K. Hen. It seems, then, that the tidings of this broil Brake off our business for the Holy Land. West. This, match'd with other, did, my gracious lord; For more uneven and unwelcome news Came from the north, and thus it did import. On Holy-rood day, the gallant Hotspur there, Young Harry Percy, and brave Archibald, That ever-valiant and approved Scot, At Holmedon met; Where they did spend a sad and bloody hour, As by discharge of their artillery, And shape of likelihood, the news was told; For he that brought them, in the very heat

And pride of their contention did take horse,
Uncertain of the issue any way.

K. Hen. Here is a dear, a true-industrious friend,
Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his horse,
Stain’d with the variation of each soil
Betwixt that Holmedon and this seat of ours;
And he hath brought us smooth and welcome news.
The earl of Douglas is discomfited;
Ten thousand bold Scots, two-and-twenty knights,
Balk’d in their own blood, did Sir Walter see
On Holmedon’s plains: of prisoners, Hotspur took Mordake carl of Fife, and eldest son
To beaten Douglas, and the earl of Athol,
Of Murray, Angus, and the bold’ Montecith;
And is not this an honourable spoil?
A gallant prize? ha! cousin, is it not?

West. ’Faith, it is a conquest for a prince to boast of.

K. Hen. Yea, there thou mak’st me sad, and mak’st me sin,
In envy that my lord Northumberland
Should be the father to so blest a son:
A son, who is the theme of honour’s tongue;
Amongst a grove the very straightest plant:
Who is sweet fortune’s minion, and her pride:
Whilst I, by looking on the praise of him,
See riot and dishonour stain the brow
Of my young Harry. O! that it could be prov’d,
That some night-tripping fairy had exchang’d
In eradle-clothes our children where they lay,
And eall’d mine Perey, his Plantagenet;
Then would I have his Harry, and he mine.
But let him from my thoughts.—What think you, coz,
Of this young Perey’s pride? the prisoners,
Which he in this adventure hath surpris’d,
To his own use he keeps; and sends me word,
I shall have none but Mordake carl of Fife.

West. This is his mene’s teaching; this is Worcester,
Malevolent to you in all aspects:
Which makes him prune himself, and bristle up
The crest of youth against your dignity.

K. Hen. But I have sent him for to answer this;
And for this cause awhile we must neglect
Our holy purpose to Jerusalem.
Cousin, on Wednesday next our council we
Will hold at Windsor: so inform the lords;
But come yourself with speed to us again,
For more is to be said, and to be done,
Than out of anger can be uttered.

West. I will, my liege. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Apartment in the Palace.

Enter HENRY, Prince of Wales, and Falstaff.

Fal. Now, Hal; what time of day is it, lad?
P. Hen. Thou art so fat-witted, with drinking of old sack, and unbuttoning thee after supper, and sleeping upon benches after noon, that thou hast forgotten to demand that truly, which thou wouldest truly know.
What a devil hast thou to do with the time of the day? unless hours were cups of sack, and minutes capons, and elocks the tongues of bawds, and dials the signs of leaping-houses, and the blessed sun himself a fair torch, which in flame-colour’d taffeta, I see no reason why thou shouldst be so superfluous to demand the time of the day.

Fal. Indeed you come near me, now, Hal; for we,
that take purses, go by the moon and the seven stars, and not by Phæbus.—he, ‘that wandering knight so fair.’

And, I pr’ythee, sweet wag, when thou art king,—as, God save thy grace,—majesty. I should say, for grace thou wilt have none,—

P. Hen. What, none?

Fal. No, by my troth; not so much as will serve to be prologue to an egg and butter.

P. Hen. Well, how then? come, roundly, roundly.

Fal. Marry, then, sweet wag, when thou art king, let not us, that are squires of the night’s body be called thieves of the day’s beauty; let us be Diana’s foresters, gentlemen of the shade, minions of the moon; and let men say, we be men of good government, being governed as the sea is, by our noble and chaste mistress
the moon, under whose countenance we steal.

P. Hen. Thou say’st well, and it holds well, too; for the fortune of us, that are the moon’s men, doth ebb and flow like the sea, being governed as the sea is, by the moon. As for proof now: a purse of gold most resolutely snatch’d on Monday night, and most disso-lutely spent on Tuesday morning; got with swearing—lay by; and spent with crying—bring in; now, in as low an ebb as the foot of the ladder, and, by and by,
in as high a flow as the ridge of the gallows.

Fal. By the Lord, thou say’st true, lad. And is not my hostess of the tavern a most sweet wench?

P. Hen. As the honey of Hybla, my old lad of the castle.

* Is not a buff jerkin* a most sweet robe of durability?

Fal. How now, how now, mad wag? what, in thy quips, and thy quiddities? what a plague have I to do with a buff jerkin?

P. Hen. Why, what a pox have I to do with my hostess of the tavern?

Fal. Well, thou hast called her to a reckoning many a time and oft.

P. Hen. Did I ever call for thee to pay thy part?

Fal. No: I’ll give thee thy due; thou hast paid all there.

P. Hen. Yea, and elsewhere, so far as my coin would stretch; and, where it would not, I have used my credit.

Fal. Yea, and so used it, that it is! here apparent that thou art heir apparent.—But, I pr’ythee, sweet wag, shall there be gallows standing in England when thou art king, and resolution thus foibed, as it is, with the rusty curb of old father antick, the law? Do not thou, when thou art a king, hang a thief.

P. Hen. No: thou shalt.

Fal. Shall I? O rare! By the Lord, I’ll be a grave
judge.

P. Hen. Thou judgest false already: I mean, thou shalt have the hanging of the thieves, and so become a rare hangman.

Fal. Well, Hal, well; and in some sort it jumps with my humour, as well as waiting in the court, I can tell you.

P. Hen. For obtaining of suits?

Fal. Yea, for obtaining of suits, whereof the hangman hath no lean wardrobe. ‘Shlool, I am as melancholy as a gib-cat, or a lugger bear.

P. Hen. Or an old lion; or a lover’s lute.

Fal. Yea, or the drone of a Lincolnshire bagnippe.*

---

* Raised in ridges, bagnippe. * These two words are not in f. e. * 2 in f. e.:
In faith.

* The Knight of the Sun, whose romantic adventures were translated and published in 1655. * An allusion to the name of Oldcastle, which Falstaff appears to have originally borne. Farmer says it is from, lad of Castello. * This was the dress of constables at the time of the play were it not here: in f.e. * Gib, was an old name for a tom-cat. * The Lincolnshire bagnippe is often mentioned by old writers.
P. Hen. What saithest thou to a hare, or the melancholy of Moor-ditch?

Fal. Thou hast the most unsavoury similes; and art, indeed, the most comparative, rascallish, sweet young prince. But, Hal, I pr'ythee, trouble me no more with vanity! I would to God, thou and I knew where a commodity of good names were to be bought. An old lord of the council rated me the other day about you, sir; but I marked him not: and yet he talked very wisely; but I regarded him not, and yet he talked wisely, and in the street too.

P. Hen. Thou didst well; for wisdom cries out in the streets, and no man regards it.

Fal. O! thou hast damnable iteration, and art, indeed, able to corrupt a saint. Thou hast done much harm upon me, Hal:—God forgive thee for it. Before I knew thee, Hal, I knew nothing: and now am I, if a man should speak truly, little better than one of the wicked. I must give over this life, and I will give it over; by the Lord, and I do not, I am a villain: I'll be damned for never a king's son in Christendom.

P. Hen. Where shall we take a purse-to-morrow, Jack?

Fal. Zounds! where thou wilt, lad, I'll make one; and I do not, call me villain, and baffle me.

P. Hen. I see a good amendment of life in thee; from praying, to purse-taking.

Enter PIONS, at a distance.

Fal. Why, Hal, 'tis my vocation, Hal; 'tis no sin for a man to labour in his vocation. Pions!—Now shall we know if Gadshill have set a match:—O! if men were to be saved by merit, what hole in hell were not enough for him? This is the most omnipotent villain, that ever cried, Stand! to a true man.

P. Hen. Good morning, Ned.

Pions. Good morning, sweet Hal.—What says monsieur Remorse? What says Sir John Lack-Sack?—and Sugar? Jack, how aggravates the devil and thee about thy soul, that thou soldest him on Good-Friday last, for a cup of Madeira, and a cold eapen's leg?

P. Hen. Sir John stands to his word: the devil shall have his bargain, for he was never yet a breaker of proverbs: he will give the devil his due.

Pions. Art thou damned for keeping thy word with the devil.

P. Hen. Else had he been damned for cozening the devil.

Pions. But, my lad's, my lad's, to-morrow morning, by four o'clock, early at Gadshill. There are pilgrims going to Canterbury with rich offerings, and traders riding to London with fat purses: I have visors for you all, you have horses for yourselves. Gadshill lies to-night in Rochester; I have bespoke supper to-morrow night in Eastcheap: we may do it as secure as sleep. If you will go, I will stuff your purses full of crowns; if you will not, tarry at home, and be hanged.

Fal. Hear ye, Yeardwid: if I tarry at home, and go ot, I'll hang you for going.

Pions. You will, chaps?

Fal. Hal, wilt thou make one?

Fal. There's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee, nor thou can'st not of the blood royal, if thou darest not stand for ten shillings.

P. Hen. Well then, once in my days I'll be made chap.

Fal. Why, that's well said.

P. Hen. Well, come what will, I'll tarry at home.

Fal. By the Lord, I'll be a traitor then, when thou art king.

P. Hen. I care not.

Pions. Sir John, I pr'ythee, leave the prince and me alone: I will lay him down such reasons for this adventure, that he shall go.

Fal. Well, God give thee the spirit of persuasion, and him the ears of profiting, that what thou speakest may move, and what he hears may be believed, that the true prince may (for recreation sake) prove a false thief; for the poor accuses of the time want countenance. Farewell: you shall find me in Eastcheap.

P. Hen. Farewell, thou latter spring! Farewell, All-hallows' summer! [Exit FALSTAFF.

Pions. Now, my good sweet honey lord, ride with us to-morrow: I have a jest to execute, that I cannot manage alone. Falstaff, Bardolph, Pete, and Gadshill shall rob those men that have already way-laid yourselves and I will not be there; and when they have the booty, if you and I do not rob them, out this head off from my shoulders.

P. Hen. How shall we part with them in setting forth?

Pions. Why, we will set forth before or after them, and appoint them a place of meeting, wherein it is at our pleasure to fail; and then will they adventure upon the exploit themselves, which they shall have no sooner achieved, but we'll set upon them.

P. Hen. Yea, but 'tis like, that they will know us, by our horses, by our habits, and by every other appointment, to be ourselves.

Pions. Tut! our horses they shall not see; I'll tie them in the wood; our visors we will change, after we leave them; and, sirrah, I have cases of buckram for the none; to unmask our noted outward garments.

P. Hen. Yea, but I doubt they will be too hard for us. Pions. Well, for two of them, I know them to be as true-bred cowards as ever turned back; and for the third, if he'll fight longer than he sees reason, I'll forswear arms. The virtue of this jest will be, the incomprehensible lies that this same fat rogue will tell us when we meet at supper: how thirty at least he fought with; what wards, what blows, what extremities he endured; and in the reproof of this lies the jest.

P. Hen. Well, I'll go with them: provide us all things necessary, and meet me to-morrow night in Eastcheap, there I'll sup. Farewell.

Pions. Farewell, my lord. [Exit PIONS.

P. Hen. I know you all, and will a white uphold

The unyok'd humour of your idleness:
Yet herein will I imitate the sun.
Who doth permit the base contagious clouds
To smother up his beauty from the world,
That when he please again to be himself,
Being wanted, he may be more wondered at.
By breaking through the foul and ugly mists
Of vapours, that did seem to strangle him.
If all the year were playing holidays,
To sport would be as tedious as to work;
But when they seldom come, they wish'd for come
And nothing pleaseth but rare accidents.
So, when this loose behaviour I throw off,
And pay the debt I never promised.
By much better than my word I am,
By so much shall I falsify men's hopes;
And, like bright metal on a sullen ground.
My reformation, glittering o'er my fault,
Shall show more goodly, and attract more eyes,
Than that which hath no foil to set it off.
I'll so offend to make offence a skill,
Re redeeming time, when men think least I will. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The Same. Another Apartment in the Palace.

K. Hen. My blood hath been too cold and temperate,
Unto the stir at these indigines,
And you have found me; for, accordingly,
You tread upon my patience: but, be sure,
I will from henceforth rather be myself,
Mighty, and to be feared, than my condition,
Which hath been smooth as oil, soft as young down,
And therefore lost that title of respect,
Which the proud soul ne'er pays but to the proud.

Wor. Our house, my sovereign liege, little deserves
The scourge of greatness to be used on it;
And that same greatness, too, which our own hands
Have hoil to make so portly.

North. My good lord,—

K. Hen. Lord Worcester, get thee gone; for I do see Danger and d bedence in thine eye.
Oh sir! your presence is too bold and peremptory,
And me most might never yet endure
The moody frontiers of a servent brow.
You have good leave to leave us: when we need
Your use and counsel, we shall send for you.—

[Exit Worcester.

You were about to speak.

North. Yea, my good lord.

Those prisoners in your highness' name demanded,
Which Harry Percy, here, at Holmedon took,
Were, as he says, not with such strength denied
As is deliver'd to your majesty:
Either envy, therefore, or misprison
Is guilty of this fault, and not my son.

Hot. My liege, I did deny no prisoners:
But, I remember, when the fight was done,
When I was dry with rage, and extreme toil,
Breathless and faint, leaning upon my sword,
Came there a certain lord, neat, trimly dress'd,
Fresh as a bridegroom; and his chin, new reap'd,
Show'd like a stubble-land at harvest-home:
He was perfum'd like a milliner,
And twixt his finger and his thumb he held
A poucet-box, which ever and anon
He gave his nose, and took it away again;
Who, therewith angry, when it next came there,
Took it in spite:—and still he smil'd, and talk'd;
And as the soldiers bore dead bodies by,
He call'd them untaught knaves, unmanly,
To bring such things as did dishonour,
Betwixt the wind and his nobility.
With many holiday and ladies' terms
He question'd me; among the rest, demanded
My prisoners, in your majesty's behalf.
I then, all startling, with my wounds being cold,
To be so pester'd with a poppinjay,
Out of my grief and my impatience,
Answer'd neglectingly, I know not what,
He should, or he should not: for he made me mad,
To see him shine so brisk, and smell so sweet,
And talk so like a waiting gentlewoman,
Of guns, and drums, and wounds, God save the mark!

And telling me, the sovereign'st thing on earth
Was parmeecei for an inward bruise;
And that it was a great pity, so it was.
This villainous evil-tempered should be digg'd
Out of the bowels of the harmless earth,
Which many a good tall fellow had destroy'd
So cowardly; and, but for these vile guns,
He would himself have been a soldier.
This bald, unjointed chat of his, my lord,
I answer'd indirectly, as I said;
And, if I beseech you, let not his report
Come current for an accusation,
Betwixt my love and your high majesty.

Blunt. The circumstance considered, good my lord,
What'er Lord Harry Percy then had said,
To such a person, and in such a place,
At such a time, with all the rest re-told,
May reasonably die, and never rise
To do him wrong, or any way impeach
What then he said, so he unsay it now.

K. Hen. Why, yet he doth deny his prisoners,
But with proviso, and exception,
That we, at our own charge, shall ransom straight
His brother-in-law, the foolish Mortimer;
Who, on my soul, hath wilfully betray'd
The lives of those that he did lead to fight Against that great magician, damn'd Glendower,
Whose daughter, as we fear, that Earl of March
Hath lately married. Shall we our offers then,
Be emptied to redeem a traitor home?
Shall we by treason, and indent with foes,
When they have lost and forfeited themselves?
No, on the barren mountains let him starve:
For I shall never hold that man my friend,
Whose tongue shall ask me for one penny cost,
To ransom home revolted Mortimer.

Hot. Revolted Mortimer!
He never did fall off, my sovereign liege,
But by the chance of war: to prove that true,
Needs no more but one tongue for all those wounds,
Those mouthed wounds, which valiantly he took,
When on the gentle Severn's seedy bank,
In single opposition, hand to hand,
He did confound the best part of an hour
In changing hardiment with great Glendower.
Three times they breath'd, and three times did they drink.

Upon agreement, of swift Severn's flood;
Who then, affrighted with their bloody looks,
Ran fearfully among the trembling reeds,
And hid his crisp head in the hollow bank
Blood-stained with these valiant combattants.

Never did base and rotten policy
Colour her working with such deadly wounds;
Nor never could the noble Mortimer
Receive so many stings, as yours:—
Then, let him not be slander'd with revolt.

K. Hen. Thou dost belie him, Percy, thou dost beli him:
He never did encounter with Glendower
I tell thee,
He durst as well have met the devil alone,
As Owen Glendower for an enemy.
Art thou not ashamed? But, sirrah, henceforth
Let me not hear you speak of Mortimer.
Send me your prisoners with the speediest means,
Or you shall hear in such a kind from me
As will displease you.—My lord Northumberland,
We license your departure with your son.—
Send us your prisoners, or you'll hear of it.

[Exeunt King Henry, Blunt, and Train.

Hot. And if the devil come and roar for them, I will not send them.—I will after straight,
And tell him so; for I will ease my heart,
Albeit I make a hazard of my head. [Offers pardon]

North. What! drunk with cholera? stay, and pause awhile:
ere comes your uncle.

Re-enter Worcester.

Hot. Speak of Mortimer! Zounds! I will speak of him: and let my soul
Want mercy, if I do not join with him:
Yet, on his part, I'll empty all these veins,
And shed my dear blood drop by drop 't the dust,
But I will lift the down-trod Mortimer,
As high 't the air as this unhateful king,
As this ingrate and canker'd Bolingbroke.

North. Brother, [To Worcester] the king hath made your nephew mad.

War. Who struck this heat up after I was gone?

Hot. He will, forsooth, have all my prisoners;
And when I urged the ransom once again
Of my wife's brother, then his cheek look'd pale,
And on my face he turn'd an eye of death,
Trembling even at the name of Mortimer.

War. I cannot blame him. Was he not proclaim'd,
By Richard, that dead is, the next of blood?

North. He was: I heard the proclamation:
And then it was when the unhappy king
(Whose wrongs in us God pardon!) did set forth
Upon his Irish expedition;
From whence he intercepted did return
To be depos'd, and shortly murdered.

War. And for whose death, we in the world's wide mouth
Live scandaliz'd, and foully spoken of.

Hot. But, soul! I pray you, did king Richard, then,
Proclaim my brother Edmund Mortimer
Heir to the crown?

North. He did: myself did hear it.

Hot. Nay, then, I cannot blame his cousin king,
That wish'd him on the barren mountains starve.
But shall it be, that you, that set the crown
Upon the head of this forgetful man;
And for his sake wear the detested blot
Of murder'd subornation, shall it be,
That you a world of curses undergo,
Being the agents, or base second means,
The cords, the ladder, or the hangman rather?—
O! pardon me, that I descend so low,
To show the line, and the predicament,
Wherein you range under this subtle king.
Shall it for shame be spoken in these days,
Or fill up chronicles in time to come,
That men of your nobility and power,
Did gage them both in an unjust behalf,
(As both of you, God pardon it! have done)
To put down Richard, that sweet lovely rose,
And plant this thorn, this canker, Bolingbroke?
And shall it, in more shame, be farther spoken,
That you are foole'd, discured, and shook off
By him, for whom these shames ye underwent?
No! yet time serves, wherein you may redeem
Your tarnish'd honours, and restore yourselves
Into the good thoughts of the world again.

Revenge the jeering, and disdain'd contempt,
Of this proud king; who studies day and night
To answer all the debt he owes to you,
Even with the bloody payment of your deaths.
Therefore, I say,—

War. Peace, cousin! say no more.
And now I will unclasp a secret book.
And to your quick-conceiving discretions
I'll read you matter deep and dangerous;
As full of peril and adventurous spirit,
As to o'erwalk a current, roaring loud,
On the unsteadfast footing of a spear.

Hot. If he fall in, good night!—or sink or swim,
Send danger from the east unto the west,
So honour cross it, from the north to south,
And let them grapple:—O! the blood more stirs.
To rouse a lion, than to start a hare.

North. Imagination of some great exploit
Drives him beyond the bounds of patience.

War. By heaven, methinks, it were an easy leap
To pluck bright honour from the pale-fac'd moon:
Or dive into the bottom of the deep,
Where fathom-line could never touch the ground,
And pluck up drowned honour by the locks.
So he that doth redeem her thence might wear
Without corvall all her dignities:
But out upon this half-fac'd fellowship!

War. He apprehends a world of figures here,
But not the form of what he should attend.—
Good cousin, give me audience for awhile.

Hot. I cry you mercy.

War. Those same noble Seets
That are your prisoners,—

Hot. I'll keep them all.

War. By God, he shall not have a Seet of them:
No, if a Seet would save his soul, he shall not.
I'll keep them, by this hand.

War. You start away.
And lend no ear unto my purposes.
Those prisoners you shall keep.

Hot. Nay, I will; that's flat
He said he would not ransom Mortimer;
Forbad my tongue to speak of Mortimer;
But I will find him when he lies asleep,
And in his ear I'll holla.—Mortimer! Nay,
I'll have a starling shall be taught to speak
Nothing but Mortimer, and give it him,
To keep hisanger still in motion.

War. Hear you, cousin, a word.

Hot. All studies here I solemnly defy,
Save how to gall and pinch this Bolingbroke;
And that same sword-and-buckler prince of Wales,
But that I think his father loves him not,
And would be glad he met with some mischance,
I would have him poison'd with a pot of ale.

War. Farewell, kinsman. I will talk to you,
When you are better temper'd to attend.

North. Why, what a wasp-stung art thou to break into this woman's mood,

Hot. Why, look you, I am whipp'd and scourg'd with rods,
Netted, and stung with pismires, when I hear
Of this vile polititian, Bolingbroke.
In Richard's time.—what do ye call the place?—
A plague upon 't—it is in Gloucestershire:—
'T was where the mad-cap duke his uncle kept,
His uncle York,—where I first bow'd my knee
Unto this king of smiles, this Bilingbroke,
'Sblood! when you and he came back from Ravenspur.

North. At Berkley castle.

Hot. You say true.—

Why, what a candied deal of courtesy
This fasting greyhound then did proffer me!
Look,—"when his infant fortune came to age,"
And,—"gentle Harry Percy,"—and, "kind cousin,"—
O, the devil take such cozeners!—God forgive me!—

Good uncle, tell your tale: I'11 have done.

Wor. Nay, if you have not, to 't again,
We'll stay your leisure.

Hot. I have done, i' faith.

Wor. Then once more to your Scottish prisoners.
Deliver them up without their ransom straight,
And make the Douglas' son your only mean
For powers in Scotland; which, for divers reasons
Which I shall send you written, be assur'd,
Will easily be granted you.—My lord,

Your son in Scotland being thus employ'd,
Shall secretly into the bosom creep
Of that same noble prelate, well belov'd,
The archbishop.

Hot. Of York, is it not?

Wor. True; who bears hard
His brother's death at Bristol, the lord Scroop.
I speak not this in estimation,
As what I think might be, but what I know
Is ruminated, plotted, and set down;
And only stays but to behold the face

Of that occasion that shall bring it on.

Hot. I smell it:
Upon my life, it will do wondrous well.

North. Before the game's afoot, thou still let'st slip

Hot. Why, it cannot choose but be a noble plot. —
And then the power of Scotland, and of York,
To join with Mortimer, ha?

Wor. And so they shall.

Hot. In faith, it is exceedingly well aim'd.

Wor. And 't is no little reason bids us speed,
To save our heads by raising of a head;
For, bear ourselves as even as we can,
The king will always think him in our debt,
And think we think ourselves unsatisfied.
Till he hath found a time to pay us home:
And see already how he doth begin
To make us strangers to his looks of love.

Hot. He does, he does: we'll be reveng'd on him.

Wor. Cousin, farewell.—No farther go in this,
Than I by letters shall direct your course.
When time is ripe (which will be suddenly)
I'll steal to Glendower, and lord Mortimer;
Where you, and Douglass, and our powers at once,
As I will fashion it, shall happily meet,
To bear our fortunes in our own strong arms,
Which now we hold at much uncertainty.

North. Farewell, good brother: we shall thrive, I trust.

Hot. Uncle, adieu.—O! let the hours be short,
Till fields, and blows, and groans applaud our sport.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

Enter a Carrier, with a Lantern in his hand.

1 Car. Heigh ho! An't be not four by the day, I'll be hanged: Charles' wain is over the new chimney, and yet our horse not packed. What, ostler!

Ost. [Within.] Anon, anon.

1 Car. I pr'ythee, Tom, beat Cut's saddle, put a few flocks in the point; the poor jade is wrung in the withers out of all ease.

Enter another Carrier.

2 Car. Peas and beans are as dank here as a dog, and that is the next way to give poor jades the boats: this house is turned upside down since Robin ostler died.

1 Car. Poor fellow! he never joyed since the price of oats rose: it was the death of him.

2 Car. I think, this be the most villainous house in all London road for fleas: I am stung like a tenech.

1 Car. Like a tenech? by the mass, there is no' er a king in Christendom could be better bit than I have been since the first cock.

2 Car. Why, they will allow us no' er a jordan, and then we leak in the chimney; and your chamber-lie breeds fleas like a leach.

1 Car. What, ostler! come away and be hanged; come away.

2 Car. I have a gammon of bacon, and two rashes4 of ginger, to be delivered as far as Charing-cross.

1 Car. 'Odisbody! the turkeys in my pannier are quite starved—What, ostler!—A plague on thee! hast thou never an eye in thy head? canst not hear? An 't were not as good a deed as drink, to break the gate of thee, I am a very villain—Come, and be hanged: hast no faith in thee?

Enter GADSHILL.

Gads. Good morrow, carriers. What's o'elock?

1 Car. I think it be two o'elock.

Gads. I pr'ythee, lend me thy lantern, to see my gelding in the stable.

1 Car. Nay, soft, I pray ye: I know a trick worth two of that, i' faith.

Gads. I pr'ythee, lend me thine.

2 Car. Ay, when? canst tell?—Lend me thy lantern, quoth a?—merry, I'll see thee hanged first.

Gads. Sirrah carrier, what time do you mean to come to London?

2 Car. Time enough to go to bed with a candle, I warrant thee.—Come, neighbour Mugs, we'll call up the gentlemen; they will along with company, for they have great charge.

[Exeunt Carriers.

Gads. What, ho! chamberlain!

Cham. [Within.] At hand, quoth pick-purse.

Gads. That's even as fair as—at hand, quoth the chamberlain; for thou variest no more from picking of purses, than giving direction doth from labouring; thou lay'st the plot how.

Enter Chamberlain.

Cham. Good morrow, master Gadshill. It holds current, that I told you ye sternight: there's a franklin in the wild of Kent, hath brought three hundred marks with him in gold: I heard him tell it to one of his company, last night at supper; a kind of auditor; one that hath abundance of charge too, God knows what.

They are up already, and call for eggs and butter: they will presently vary.
Gads. Sirrah, if they meet not with saint Nicholas' clerks, I'll have thee this neck.
Cham. No, I'll none of it: I pray thee, keep that for the hangman; for, I know thou worshipst saint Nicholas as truly as a man of falsehood may.
Gads. What talkest thou to me of the hangman? if I hang, I'll make a fat pair of gallows: for, if I hang, sir John hangs with me, and then knowest he's no staving lord! There! there are other Trojans that thou dreamest not of, the whom, for sport sake, are content to do the profession some grace, that would, if matters should be looked into, for their own credit sake, make all whole. I am joined with no foot land-rakers, no long-staff, sixpenny strikers: none of these mad, mustacho purple-painted malt-worms; but with nobility and sanguiinitie; burgomasters, and great ones—yes, it is, such can hold in; such will strike sooner than speak; and speak sooner than drink, and drunk sooner than pray; and yet i lie: for they pray continually to their saint, the commonwealth; or, rather, not pray to her, but pray on her, for they ride up and down on her, and make her their boots.
Cham. What! the commonwealth their boots? will she hold out water in foul way?
Gads. She will, she will; justice hath liquored her.
We steal as in a castle, cook-sure; we have the receipt of fern-seed, we walk invisible.
Cham. Nay, by my faith, I think you are more believing to the night, than to fern-seed, for your walking invisible.
Gads. Give me thy hand: thou shalt have a share in our purchase, as I am a true man.
Cham. Nay, rather let me have it, as you are a false thief.
Gads. Go to; homo is a common name to all men.
Bid the ostler bring my gelding out of the stable.
Farewell, you muddy knave. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Road by Gadshill.

Enter Prince Henry, and Poius; Bardolph and Peto,
at some distance.
Poius. Come, shelter, shelter: I have removed Falstaff's horse, and he frets like a gumined velvet.4
P. Hen. Stand close.

Enter Falstaff.
Poius. Halts! Poius! Poius, and be hanged! Poius!
P. Hen. Peace, ye fat-kidneyed rascal! What a brawling dost thou keep?
Poius. Where's Poius? Hal.
P. Hen. He is walked up to the top of the hill: I'll go seek him.

[Exeunt Poius.]
Poius. I am accursed to rob in that thief's company;
the rascal hath removed my horse, and tied him I know not where. If I travel but four foot by the squire's further foot I shall break my wind. Well, I doubt not but to die a fair death for all this, if I seape hanging for killing that rogue. I have forsworn his company hourly any time this two-and-twenty years, and yet I am bewitched with the rogue's company. If the rascal have not given me medicines to make me love him, I'll be hanged; it could not be else: I have drunk measures—Poius! Hal!—a plague upon you both!
—Bardolph!—Peto!—I'll starve, cry I'll rob a foot further. Arent they not in good a deed as drink to, turn true man, and leave these rogues, I am the veriest varlet that ever chewed with a tooth. Eight yards of uneven ground is three score and ten miles afoot with me, and the stony-hearted villains know it well enough.
A plague upon't, when thieves cannot be true to one another! [They whistlle.] Whew!—A plague upon you all! Give me my horse, you rogues: give me my horse, and be hanged.

Poius. Peace, ye fat-guts! lie down: lay thi'ne ear close to the ground, and list if thou canst hear the tread of travellers.
Poius. Have you any levers to lift me up again, being down? 'Sblood! I'll not hear mine own flesh so far afout again, for all the coin in thy father's exchequer.
What a plague mean ye to colt? me thus?
P. Hen. Thou liest: thou art not colt'd, thou art uncol'ted.
Poius. Poius, I pray thee, good prince Hal, help me to my horse; good king's son.
P. Hen. Out, you rogue! shall I be your ostler?
Poius. Go, hang thyself in thine own heir-apparent garters! If I be taken, I'll peach for this. An I have not ballads made on you all, and sung to filthy tunes, let a cup of saek be my poison: when a jest is so forward, and afoot too,—I hate it.

Enter Garland.
Poius. Stand.
Poius. So I do, against my will.
Poius. O! 'tis our sector: I know his voice.

Enter Bardolph.
Poius. Bard. What news?
Poius. Case ye, ease ye; on with your visors: there's money of the king's coming down the hill: 'tis going to the king's exchequer.
Poius. You lie, you rogue: 'tis going to the king's laver.
Poius. There's enough to make us all.
Poius. Be hanged.
P. Hen. Sirs, you four shall front them in the narrow lane: Ned Poius and I will walk lower: if they scape from your encounter, then they light on us.
Poius. But how many be there of them?
Poius. Some eight, or ten.
Poius. Zounds! will they not rob us?
P. Hen. What, a coward, sir John Paunch?
Poius. Indeed, I am not John of Gaunt, your grandfather: but yet no coward, Hal.
Poius. Well, we leave that to the proof.
Poius. Sirrah Jack, thy horse stands behind the hedge: when thou needest him, there thou shalt find him. Farewell, and stand fast.
Poius. Now cannot I strike him, if I should be hanged.
Poius. Ned, [Aside to Poius.] where are our disguisels?
Poius. Here, hard by: stand close.

[Exeunt Poius and Poius.
Poius. Now, my masters, happy man be his dote, say
1: every man to his business.

Enter Travellers.

1 Trav. Come, neighbour: the boy shall lead on horses down the hill; we'll walk afoot awhile, and ease our legs.

Thieves. Stand!

Trav. Jesus bless us!

Poius. Strike: down with them; cut the villains' throats. Ah, whosoono caterpillars! baco-fed knives!
they hate us youth: down with them; fleece them.

1 Trav. O! we are undone, both we and ours, for ever

1 A cant name for robbers. 2 tranquillity: in f.s. 3 great owners: in f. e. 4 Of old, believed to be invisible, from its very minute size.
4 A term, in frequent use, for booty. 5 A gummed velvet, being very stuff, fretted, or wore rapidly. 6 Foot-rule. 7 Trick. 8 Lot.
Fal. Hang ye, gorbellied knaves. Are ye undone?
No, ye fat chuffs! I would, your store were here. Oh, beacons, on! What! ye knaves, young men must live. You are grand-jurors are ye? We’ll jure ye, i’ faith.

[Exeunt Fal. &c. driving the Travellers out. Re-enter Prince Henry and Poins.

P. Hen. The thieves have bound the true men.
New could thou and I rob the thieves, and go merrily to London, it would be argument for a week, laughter for a month. and a good jest for ever.

Poins. Stand close; I hear them coming.

Re-enter Thieves.

Fal. Come, my masters; let us share, and then to horse before day. An the prince and Poins be not two arrant cowards, there’s no equity stirring; there’s no more value in that Poins, than in a wild duck.

P. Hen. Your money. [Rushing out upon them.

Poins. Villains,
As they are sharing, the Prince and Poins set upon them. They all run away, and Falstaff, after a blow or two, runs away too, leaving the booty behind them.]

P. Hen. Got with much ease. Now merrily to horse:
The thieves are scatter’d, and possessed with fear
So strongly, that they dare not meet each other;
Each takes his fellow for an officer.
Away, good Ned. Falstaff sweats to death,
And ρ αρ χ ϝ the lean earth as he walks along:
Wor’t not for laughing, I should pity him.

Poins. How the rogue roared! [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Warkworth. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Hotspur, reading a Letter.

—But for mine own part, my lord, I could be well contented to be there, in respect of the love I bear your house?—He could be contented,—why is he not then? In respect of the love he bears our house:—he shows in this, he loves his own barn better than he loves our house. Let me see some more. "The purpose you undertake, is dangerous?"—Why, that’s certain: it is dangerous to take a cold, to sleep. to drink; but I tell you, my lord, out of this nettle, danger, we’ll pluck this flower, safety. "The purpose you undertake, is dangerous; the friends you have named, uncertain: the time itself unsorted, and your whole plot too light for the counterfeit of so great an opposition."—Say you so, say you so? I say unto you again, you are a shallow, cowardly hind, and you lie. What a jackbrain is this! By the Lord, our plot is a good plot as ever was laid: our friends true and constant: a good plot. good friends, and full of expectation: an excellent plot, very good friends. What a frosty-spirited rogue is this? Why, my lord of York commends the plot, and the general course of the action. "Zounds! and I were now by this rascal, I could brain him with his lady’s fan. Is there not my father, my uncle, and myself? Lord Edmund Mortimer, my lord of York, and Owen Glendower? Is there not, besides, the Douglas? Have I not all their letters, to meet me in arms by the ninth of the next month, and are they not, some of them, set forward already? What a pagan rascal is this! an infidel! Ha! you shall see now, in very sincerity of fear and cold heart, will he to the king, and lay open all our proceedings. Oh! I could divide myself, and go to buffets, for moving such a dish of skimmed milk with so honourable an action. Hang him! let him tell the king: we are prepared. I will set forward to-night.
Lady. Do you not love me? Do you not, indeed?
   Well, do not then; for since you love me not,
   I will not love myself. Do you not love me?
   Nay, tell me, if you speak in jest, or no?
   Hot. Come, to the park. Kate! will thou see me ride?
   And when I am o’ horseback, I will swear
   I love thee infinitely. But hark you, Kate;
   I must have you henceforth question me
   Whither I go, nor reason whereabout.
   Whether I must, I must; and, to conclude,
   This evening must I leave you, gentle Kate.
   I know you wise; but yet no farther wise
   Than Harry Percy’s wife: constant you are;
   But yet a woman: and for secrecy,
   No lady closer; for I well believe
   Thou wilt not utter what thou dost not know;
   And so far will I trust thee, gentle Kate.
Lady. How! so far?
   Hot. Not an inch farther. But hark you, Kate?
   Whither I go, thither shall you go too;
To-day will I set forth, to-morrow you.
   Will this content you, Kate?
Lady. It must, of force. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Eastcheap. A Room in the Boar’s Head Tavern.

   Enter Prince Henry and Poins.

P. Hen. Ned, pr’ythee, come out of that fat room, and lend me thy hand to laugh a little.

Poins. Where hath been, Hal?

P. Hen. With three or four logheads, amongst three or four-score hogsheads. I have sounded the very base spring of humility. Sirrah, I am sworn brother to a leash of drawers, and can call them all by their Christian names, as—Tom, Dick, and Francis.
   They take it already upon their salvation, that though
   I be but prince of Wales, yet I am the king of courtesy, and tell me flatly I am no proud Jack, like Falstaff;
   but a Corinthian, a lad of mettle, a good boy,
   (by the lord, so they call me,) and when I am king of England I shall command all the good lads in Eastcheap.
   They call drinking deep, dying sweet; and when you breathe in your watering  they cry hem!
   and had you play it off.—To conclude, I am so good a proficent in one quarter of an hour, that I can drink with any tinker in his own language during my life. I tell then, Ned, thou hast lost much honour that thou wert not with me in this action. But, sweet Ned,—to sweeten which name of Ned, I give thee this pennys-worth of sugar, eloped even now into my hand by an under-skinner  ; one that never speaketh other English in his life, than—Eight shillings and sixpence; and—
   "You are welcome;" with this shrill addition.—Anon, anon, sir! Score a pint of bastard in the Half-moon, or so. But, Ned, to drive away the time till Falstaff come, I pr’ythee, do thou stand in some by-room, while I question my puny drawer to what end he gave me the sugar: and do thou never leave calling—Francis!
   that his tale to me may be nothing but—anon. Step aside, and I will show thee a precedent.
Poins. Francis!

P. Hen. Thou art perfect.

Poins. Francis! [Exit Poins.

Poins. Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon, sir. [Look down into the Pomegranate, Ralph.

P. Hen. How long hast thou to serve, Francis?

Fran. Forsooth, five years, and as much as to—

Poins. [Within.] Francis! [Fran. Anon, anon, sir.

P. Hen. Five years! by ’r lady, a long lease for the clinking of pewter. But, Francis, darest thou be so valiant, as to play the coward with thy indument, and to show it a fair pair of holts, and run from it?
   Fran. O lord, sir! I’ll be sworn upon all the books in England. I could find it in my heart.

Poins. [Within.] Francis! [Fran. Anon, anon, sir.

P. Hen. How old art thou, Francis?

Fran. Let me see,—about Michaelmas next I shall

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, sir.—Pray you, stay a little, my lord.

P. Hen. Nay, but hark you, Francis. For the sugar thou gavest me,—‘t was a pennyworth, wasn’t it?

Fran. O lord, sir! I would it had been two.

P. Hen. I will give thee for it a thousand pound;
   ask me when thou wilt, and thou shalt have it.

Poins. [Within.] Francis! [Fran. Anon, anon, sir.

P. Hen. Anon, Anon, Francis? No, Francis; but to-morrow, Francis; or, Francis, on Thursday; or, indeed, Francis, when thou wilt. But, Francis—

Fran. My lord?

P. Hen. Wilt thou rob this leathern-jerkin, crystal-button, knot-pated,  agate-ring, puke-stocking, caddis-garter, smooth-tongue, Spanish-pouch,—

Fran. O lord, sir, who do you mean?

P. Hen. Why then, your brown bastard! is your only drink: for, look you, Francis, your white canvas doublet will sully. In Barbary, sir, it cannot come to so much.

Fran. What, sir?

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

P. Hen. Away, you rogue! Dost not thou hear them call?

   not knowing which way to go.

   Enter Vintner.

   Vint. What! stand’st thou still, and hear’st such a calling? Look to the guests within. [Exit Fran.]
   My lord, old sir John, with half a dozen more, are at the door: shall I let them in?

   P. Hen. Let them alone awhile, and then open the door. [Exit Vintner.] Poins!

   Re-enter Poins.

   Poins. Anon, anon, sir.

   P. Hen. Sirrah, Falstaff and the rest of the thieves are at the door. Shall we be merry?

   Poins. As merry as cricketts, my lady. But hark ye what cunning match have you made with this jest of the drawer? come, what’s the issue?

   P. Hen. I am now of all humours, that have show’d themselves humours, since the old days of Goodman
   Adam to the pupil age of this present twelve o’clock at midnight. [Re-enter Francis, with Wine.] What’s o’clock, Francis?

   Fran. Anon, anon, sir. [Exit.

   P. Hen. That ever this fellow should have fewer words than a parrot, and yet the son of a woman! His industry is—up-stairs, and down-stairs; his eloquence, the parcel of a reckoning. I am not yet of Percy’s mind, the Hotsprur of the North; he that kills me some six or seven dozen of Scots at a breakfast, washes his hands, and says to his wife,—’Fie upon this quiet life? I want work." "O my sweet Harry," says she, "how many hast thou killed to-day?" "Give me my manor horse a druch," says he, and answers, "Some fourteen," an hour after; "a trice, a trille." —I pray thee, call in Falstaff; I'll play Petyr, and that damned brawn shall play dame Mortimer his wife. "Rive!" says the drunkard. Call in rits, call in tallow.

Enter Falstaff, Gadsbhill, Bardolph, and Peto. Pots. Welcome, Jack. Where hast thou been?

Fal. A plague of all cowards, I say, and a vengeance too! marry, and amen! —Give me a cup of sack, boy. —Ere I lead this life long, I'll sew nether-stocks, and mend them, and foot them too. A plague of all cowards! —Give me a cup of sack, rogue. —Is there no virtue extant? [He drinks.] P. Hen. Didst thou never see Titan kiss a dish of butter? pitiful-hearted Titan, that melted at the sweet tale of the sun! if thou didst, then behold that compound.

Fal. Thou rogue, here's line in this sack too: there is nothing but roguery to be found in villainous man: yet a coward is worse than a cup of sack with line in it; a villainous coward. —Go thy ways, old Jack; die when thou wilt, manhood, good manhood, be not forgot upon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten herring! There live not three good men unhanged in England, and one of them is fat, and grows old: God help the while! a bad world, I say, I would I were a weaver; I could sing psalms or anything. A plague of all cowards, I say still.

P. Hen. How now, wool-sack! what matter you? Fal. A king's son! If I do not beat thee out of thy kingdom with a dagger of lath, and drive all thy subjects afore thee like a flock of wild geese, I'll never wear hair on my face more. You prince of Wales! P. Hen. Why, you whoreson round man, what's the matter?

Fal. Are you not a coward? answer me to that! and Pots there?

Pots. Zounds! ye fat paunch, and ye call me coward. I'll stab thee.

Fal. I call thee coward! I'll see thee damned ere I call thee coward: but I would give a thousand pound, I could run as fast as thou canst. You are straight enough in the shoulders: you care not who sees your back. Call you that backing of your friends? A plague upon such backing! give me them that will face me. —Give me a cup of sack! I am a rogue, if I drunk to-day.

P. Hen. O villain! thy lips are scarce wiped since thou drunkst last.

Fal. All's one for that. [He drinks.] A plague of all cowards, still say I.

P. Hen. What's the matter?

Fal. What's the matter? there be four of us here have ta'en a thousand pound this day morning.

P. Hen. Where is he, Jack? where is it?

Fal. Where is it? taken from us it is: a hundred upon poor four of us.

P. Hen. What, a hundred, man?

Fal. I am a rogue, if I were not at half-sword with a dozen of them two hours together. I have 'seapped by miracle. I am eight times thrust through the doublet: four through the hose; my buckler cut through and through; my sword hacked like a hand-saw: ecce sig-see thy hand? come, tell us your reason: what sayest thou to this?

Poius. Come, your reason, Jack, your reason.

Fal. What, upon compulsion? No; were I at the strappado or all the racks in the world, I would not tell you on compulsion. Give you a reason on compulsion! if reasons were as plenty as blackberries, I would give no man a reason upon compulsion.

P. Hen. 'Twill be no longer guilty of this sin: this sanguine coward, this bed-presser, this horse-back-breaker, this huge hulk of flesh—

Fal. Away, you starveling, you elf-skin, you dried meat's tongue, bull's pizzle, you stock-fish—O, for breath to utter what is like thee!—you tailor's yard, you sheath, you bow-case, you vile standing-neck;

P. Hen. Well, breathe awhile, and then to it again; and when thou hast tired thyself in base comparisons, hear me speak but this.

Poius. Mark, Jack.

P. Hen. We two saw you set on four: you bound them, and were masters of their wealth.—Mark now, how plain a tale shall you put down. Then did we two set on you four, and, with a word, out-faced you from your prize, and have it: yea, and can show it you here in the house.—And, Falstaff, you carried your guts away as umbrly, with as quick dexterity, and roared for mercy, and still ran and roared, as ever I heard bulif calf. What a slave art thou, to hack thy sword as thou hast done, and then say, it was in fight! What trick, what device, what starting-hole, causeth thou now find out, to hide thee from this open and apparent shame?

Poius. Come, let's hear, Jack: what trick hast thou now done?

Fal. By the Lord, I knew ye, as well as he that made ye. Why, hear ye, my masters: was it for me to kill the heir apparent? Should I turn up the true prince? Why, thou knowest, I am as valiant as Hercules; but beware instinct: the lion will not touch the true prince. Instinct is a great matter; I was a coward on instinct. I shall think the better of myself and thee, during my life; I, for a valiant lion, and thou for a true prince. But, by the Lord, lads, I am glad you have the money.—Hostess, clap to the doors: watch to-night, pray to-morrow.—Gallants, lads, boys, hearts of gold, all the titles of good fellowship come to you! What! shall we be merry? shall we have a play extempore?

P. Hen. Content;—and the argument shall be, thy running away.

Fal. Ah! no more of that, Hal, an thou loveth me.

Enter Hostess.

Host. O Jesu! My lord the prince,—

P. Hen. How now, my lady the hostess! what say'st thou to me?

Host. Merry, my lord, there is a nobleman at the court that doth wish to speak with you: he says, he comes from your father.

P. Hen. Give him as much as will make him a royal man, and send him back again to my mother.

Fal. What manner of man is he?

Host. An old man.

Fal. What doth gravity out of his bed at midnight?
—Shall I give him his answer?

P. Hen. Pr'ythee, do, Jack.

Fal. 'Faith, and I'll send him pricking. [Exit.

P. Hen. Now, sirs: by your lady, you fought fair:—so did you, Peto;—so did you, Bardolph: you are lions too, you ran away upon instinct, you will not touch the true prince, no:—ifie!

Bard. 'Faith, I ran when I saw others run.

P. Hen. 'Faith, tell me now in earnest: how came Falstaff's sword so hacked?

Peto. Why, he hacked it with his dagger, and said, he would swear truth out of England, but he would make you believe it was done in fight; and persuaded us to do the like.

Bard. Yea, and to tickle our noses with spear grass, to make them bleed: and then to besmirch our garments with it, and to swear it was the blood of true men. I did that I did not this seven year before; I blushed to hear his monstrous devices.

P. Hen. O villain! thou stolen a cup of sack eighteen years ago, and wert taken with the maund, and ever since thou hast blushed extempore. Thou hast fire and sword on thy side, and yet thou ran'st away: what instinct hadst thou for it?

Bard. My lord, do you see these meteors? do you behold these exhalations?

P. Hen. I do.

Bard. What think you they pretend?

P. Hen. Hot livers and cold purses.

Bard. Choler, my lord, if rightly taken.

P. Hen. No, if rightly taken, halter.

Re-enter Falstaff.

Here comes lean Jack; here comes bare-bone. How now, my sweet creature of bombast! How long is't ago, Jack, since thou savest thy own knee?

Fal. My own knee? when I was about thy years, Hal, I was not an eagle's talon in the waist; I could have crept into any alderman's thumb-ring: a plague of sighing and grief! it blows a man up like a bladder. There's villainous news abroad: here was sir John Brayce from your father: you must to the court in the morning. That same mad fellow of the north, Percy: and he of Wales, that gave Amaiion the bastinado, and made Lucifer euckold, and swore the devil his true liege-man upon the cross of a Welsh hook, what, a plague, call you him?

Poius. O! Glendower.

Fal. Owen, Owen; the same; and his son-in-law. Mortimer; and old Northumberland: and that sprightly Scot of Scots, Douglas, that runs o' horseback up a hill perpendicular.

P. Hen. He that rides at high speed, and with his pistol kills a sparrow flying.

Fal. You have hit it.

P. Hen. So did he never the sparrow.

Fal. Well, that rascal hath good mettle in him; he will not run.

P. Hen. Why, what a rascal art thou, then, to praise him so for running?

Fal. O' horseback, ye cuckoo! but, afoot, he will not jade a foot.

P. Hen. Yes, Jack, upon instinct.

Fal. I grant ye, upon instinct. Well, he is there too, and one Mordake, and a thousand blue-caps more. Worcester is stolen away to-night; thy father's beard is turned white with the news: you may buy land now as cheap as stinking mackerel.

P. Hen. Why then, it is like, if there come a hot June, and this civil buffeting hold, we shall buy maidenheads as they buy hob-nails, by the hundred.

Fal. By the mass, lad, thou sayest true; it is like we shall have good trading that way.—But, tell me,
hal. art thou not horribly afraid? thou being heir apparent, couldst the world pick thee out three such enemies again, as that fiend Douglas, that spirit Percy, and that devil Glendower? art thou not horribly afraid? doth not thy blood thrill at it?

p. hen. Not a whit, i' faith: I lack some of thy instinct.

fal. Well, thou wilt be horribly chud to-morrow, when thou comest to thy father: if thou love me, practise a answer.

p. hen. Do thou stand for my father, and examine me upon the particulars of my life.

fal. Shall I? content.—This chair shall be my state, this dagger my sceptre, and this cushion my crown.

p. hen. Thy state is taken for a joint-stool, thy golden sceptre for a leaden dagger, and thy precious rich crown for a pitiful bald crown!

fal. Well, on the fire of grace be not quite out of thee, now shalt thou be moved.—Give me a cup of sack, to make mine eyes look red, that it may be thought I have wept; for I must speak in passion, and I will do it in king Cambyses' vein.

p. her. Well, here is my leg. fal. And here is my speech.—Stand aside, nobility.

host. o. Jesu! this is excellent sport, i' faith.

fal. Weep not, sweet queen, for trickling tears are vain.

host. o. the father! how he holds his countenance.

fal. For God's sake, lords, convey my tristful queen, For tears do stop the flood-gates of her eyes.

host. o. Jesu! he doth it as like one of these harlotry players as ever I see.

fal. Peace, good pint-pot! peace, good tickle-brain!—Harry, I do not only marvel where thou spendest thy time, but also how thou art accompanied: for though the camoufle, the more it is trodden on, the taster it grows. so, youth, the more it is wasted, the sooner it wears That thou art my son, I have partly thy mother's word, partly my own opinion; but chiefly, a villainous trick of thine eye, and a foolish hazing of thy nether lip, that doth warrant me. If, then, thou be son to me, here lies the point.—why, being son to me, art thou so pointed at? Shall the blessed sun of heaven prove a measure, and eat blackberries? a question not to be asked. Shall the sun of England prove a thief, and take purses? a question to be asked. There is a thing, Harry, which thou hast often heard of, and it is known to many in our land by the name of pitch: this pitch, as ancient writers do report, doth defile: so doth the company thou keepest; for, Harry, now I do not speak to thee in drink; but in tears: not in pleasure, but in passion: not in words only, but in woes also.—And yet there is a virtuous man, whom I have often noted in thy company, but I know not his name.

p. hen. What manner of man, an it like your majesty?

fal. A godly* portly man i' faith, and a corpulent: of a cheerful look, a pleasing eye, and a most noble carriage: and, as I think, his age some fifty, or, by'r lady, inclining to threescore, and now I remember me, his name is Falstaff: if that man should be chiefly given, he deceiveth me; for, Harry, I see virtue in his looks. If then the tree may be known by the fruit, as the fruit by the tree then peremptorily I speak it, there is virtue in that Falstaff: him keep with the rest banish. And tell me, now, thou naughty varlet, tell me, where hast thou been this month?

p. hen. Dost thou speak like a king? Do thou stand for me, and I'll play my father.

fal. Depose me? if thou dost it half so gravely, so majestically in word and matter, hang me up by the heels for a rabbit-sucker, or a poulterer's hare.

p. hen. Well, here I am set.

fal. And here I stand.—Judge, my masters.

p. hen. Now, Harry! whence come you?

fal. My noble lord, from Eastcheap.

p. hen. The complaints I hear of thee are grievous.

fal. 'Sblood, my lord, they are false.—Nay, I'll tickle thee for a young prince, i' faith.

p. hen. Swearest thou, ungracious boy? henceforth ne'er look on me. Thou art violently carried away from grace: there is a devil haunt thee, in the likeness of a fat old man: a turn of man is thy companion. Why dost thou converse with that hulk of honour whose bolting-hutch of beastliness, that swoln parcel of dropsies, that huge bombard of sack, that stuffed elk-bag of guts, that roasted Manningtree-ox, with the pudding in his belly, that reverend vice, that great iniquity, that father ruffian, that vanity in years? wherein is he good, but to taste sack and drink it? wherein neat and cleanly, but to carve a eonut and eat it? wherein cunning, but in craft? wherein crafty, but in villainy? wherein villainous, but in all things? wherein worthy, but in nothing?

fal. I would your grace would take me with you;* whom means your grace?

p. hen. That villainous abominable misleader of youth, Falstaff, that old white-bearded Satan.

fal. My lord, the man I know.

p. hen. I know thou dost.

fal. But to say, I know more harm in him than in myself, were to say more than I know. That he is old, the more the pity, his white hairs do witness it: but that he is, saving your reverence, a whoremaster, that I utterly deny. If sack and sugar be a fault, God help the wicked! If to be old and merry be a sin, then many an old host that I know, is damned: if to be fat be to be hated, then Pharaoh's lean kine are to be loved. No, my good lord: banish Pete, banish Bardolph, banish Pouns; for sweet Jack Falstaff, kind Jack Falstaff, true Jack Falstaff, valiant Jack Falstaff, and, therefore more valiant, being as he is, Jack Falstaff, banish not him thy Harry's company; banish not him thy Harry's company: banish plump Jack, and banish all the world.

p. hen. I do, I will.

bard. o! my lord, my lord! the sheriff, with a most monstrous watch, is at the door.

fal. Out, you rogue! play out the play: I have much to say in the behalf of that Falstaff.

re-enter hostess.

host. o. Jesu! my lord, my lord!—p. hen. Heigh, heigh! the devil rides upon a fiddle-stick. what's the matter?

host. the sheriff and all the watch are at the door they are come to search the house. shall I let them in?

fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? never call a true piece of gold a counterfeit: thou art essentially mad, without seeming so.

1 An allusion to the "Lamentable Tragedy" of Cambyses, by Thomas Preston. 2 My obedience. 3 Old copies: trustful; Rowe made the change to good. 4 The later quartos and folio, yet. 5 One who lacks out of sight; a truant. 6 So the old copies; Malone changed the word to skull. 7 A large barrel; also, a drinking vessel. 8 An allusion to the Mannerist "air" skulful. 9 Let me understand you.
P. Hen. And thou a natural coward, without instinct.
Fal. I deny your major. If you will deny the sheriff, so; if not, let him enter: if I become not a cart as well as another man, a plague on my bringing up. I hope I shall as soon be strangled with a halter as another.
P. Hen. Go, hide thee behind the arras:—the rest walk up above. Now, my masters, for a true face, and good conscience.
Fal. Both which I have had; but their date is out, and therefore I'll hide me.
[Exeunt all but the Prince and Peto.]
P. Hen. Call in the sheriff.
Enter Sheriff and Carrier.
Now, master sheriff, what's your will with me?
Sher. First, pardon me, my lord. A hue and cry
Hath follow'd certain men unto this house.
P. Hen. What men?
Sher. One of them is well known, my gracious lord;
A gross fat man.
Car. As fat as butter.
P. Hen. The man. I do assure you, is not here,
For I myself at this time have employ'd him.
And, sheriff, I will engage my word to thee.
That I will, by to-morrow dinner-time,
Send him to answer thee, or any man.
For any thing he shall be charg'd withal:
And so, let me entreat you, leave the house.
Sher. I will, my lord. There are two gentlemen
Have in this robbery lost three hundred marks.

P. Hen. It may be so: if he have robb'd these men.
He shall be answerable; and so, farewell!
Sher. Good night, my noble lord.
P. Hen. I think it is good morrow, is it not?
Sher. Indeed, my lord, I think it be two o'clock.
[Exeunt Sheriff and Carrier.
P. Hen. This oily rascal is known as well as Pani's
Go, call him forth.
Peto. Falstaff!—fast asleep behind the arras, and nothing like a horse.
P. Hen. Bark, how hard he fetches breath. Search his pockets. [Peto searches.] What hast thou found ?
Peto. Nothing but papers, my lord.
P. Hen. Let's see what they be: read them.
Peto. [Reads.] Item, A capon, ... 2s 2d
Item, Sauce . . . . . . . . . . 4d
Item, Sack, two gallons, ... 5s. 8d
Item, Anchovies, and sack after supper, ... 2s. 6d
Item, Bread. . . . . . . . ob
P. Hen. O monstrous! but one half-pennyworth of bread to this intolerable deal of sack!—What there is else, keep close: we'll read it at more advantage. There let him sleep till day. I'll to the court in the morning we must all to the wars, and thy place shall be honourable. I'll procure this fat rogue a charge of foot; and I know, his death will be a march of twelve-score.
The money shall be paid back again with advantage
Be with me betimes in the morning; and so good morrow, Peto.
Peto. Good morrow, good my lord. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Bangor. A Room in the Archdeacon's
House.
Enter Hotspur, Worcester, Mortimer, and Glendower.
Mort. These promises are fair, the parties sure,
And our induction full of prosperous hope.
Ho. Lord Mortimer, and cousin Glendower, will you sit down?—And, uncle Worcester.—A plague upon it! I have forgot the map.
Glend. No, here it is.
Sit, cousin Percy; sit, good cousin Hotspur;
For by that name as oft as Lancaster
Doth speak of you,
His heem looks pale, and with a rising sigh
He wisheth you in heaven.
Hot. And you in hell, as often as he hears Owen
Glendower spoke of.
Glend. I cannot blame him: at my nativity,
The treat of heaven was full of fiery shapes;
Of burning cresses;—and at my birth,
The frame and huge foundation of the earth
Shak'd like a coward.
Hot. Why, so it would have done at the same season,
If your mother's cat had but kitten'd, though yourself
had never been born.
Glend. I say, the earth did shake when I was born.
Hot. And I say the earth was not of my mind,
If you suppose as fearing you it shook.
Glend. The heavens were all on fire; the earth did

1 The arras was usually hung at some distance from the wall.
2 There is no direction in the old copies, except Brit. Subsequendialogue Peto takes part; mod. ed. changes the name here and in a half-penny. 4 Introduction. 5 A small frame-work of iron filled thread. 6 From the quarto. 1599.
Hot. Why, so can I, or so can any man:
But will they come, when you do call for them?
Gled. Why, I can teach you, cousin, to command the devil.
Hot. And I can teach thee, coz, to shame the devil,
By telling truth, tell truth, and shame the devil—
If thou have power to raise him, bring him hither.
And I'll be sworn, I have power to shame him hence.
O! while you live, tell truth, and shame the devil.
Mort. Come, come;
No more of this unprofitable chat.
Gled. Three times hath Henry Bolingbroke made head
Against my power: thrice from the banks of Wye,
And sandy-bottom'd Severn, have I sent him
Bootless home, and weather-beaten back.
Hot. Home without boots, and in foul weather too!
How 'scape'd he aues, in the devil's name?
Gled. Come, here's the map: shall we divide our right,
According to our three-fold order ta'en?
Mort. The archdeacon hath divided it
Into three limits, very equally,
England, from Trent and Severn hither,
By south and east-is to my part assign'd:
All westward, Wales, beyond the Severn shore,
And all the fertile land within that bound,
To Owen Glendower— and, dear coz, ye know
The remnant northward, lying off from Trent.
And our indentures trishe are drawn,
Which being sealed interchangeably,
A business that this night may execute)
To-morrow, cousin Percy, you, and I,
And my good lord of Worcester, will set forth,
To meet your father, and the Scottish power,
As is appointed us, at Shrewsbury.
My father Glendower is not ready yet;
Nor shall we need his help these fourteen days.—
Within that space you may have drawn together
[To Glendower.

Your tenants, friends, and neighbouring gentlemen.
Gled. A shorter time shall send me to you, lords;
And in my conduct shall your ladies come:
From whom you now must steal, and take no leave;
For there will be a world of water shed,
Upon the parting of your wives and you.
Hot. Methinks, my moiety, north from Burton here,
In quantity equals not one of yours.
See, how this river comes me cranking in,
And cuts me from the best of all my land
A huge half-moon, a monstrous candle out,
I'll have the current in this place dam'd up,
And here the snug and silver Trent shall run,
In a new channel, far and evenly:
It shall not wind with such a deep indent,
To rob me of so rich a bottom here.
Gled. Not wind? it shall; it must: you see, it doth.
Mort. Yea, but mark, how he bears his course, and runs me up
With like advantage on the other side;
Ceding the opposed continent, as much
As on the other side it takes from you.
Wor. Yea, but a little charge will trench him here,
And on this north side win this cape of land;
And then he runs all straight and evenly.
Hot. I'll have it so: a little charge will do it.

Gled. I will not have it alter'd.
Hot.
Gled. No, nor you shall not.
Hot.
Gled. Why, that will I.
Hot.
Let me not understand you then
Speak it in Welsh.
Gled. I can speak English, lord, as well as you.
For I was train'd up in the English court;
Where, being but young, I framed to the harp
Many an English ditty, lovely well.
And gave the tongue a helpful ornament;
A virtue that was never seen in you.
Hot. Marry, and I'm glad of it with all my heart.
I had rather be a kitten, and cry mew,
Than one of these same metre ballad-mongers
I had rather hear a brazen can'tick turned,
Or a dry wheel grate on the axle-tree;
And that would set my teeth nothing on edge,
Nothing so much as mincing poetry.
'T is like the fore'd gait of a shuttering nag.
Gled. Come, you shall have Trew turn'd.
Hot.
I do not care.
I'll give thrice so much land to any well-deserving friend;
But, in the way of bargain, mark ye me,
I'll extol on the ninth part of a hair.
Are the indentures drawn? shall we be gone?
Gled. The moon shines fair, you may away by night,
I'll haste the writer, and withal, I'll break
With your young wives of your departure hence.
I am afraid my daughter will run mad,
So much she doteth on her Mortimer...
[Exit
Mort. Fie, cousin Percy! how you cross my father
Hot. I cannot choose: sometime he angers me
With telling me of the moldarp and the ant,
Of the dreamer Merlin and his prophecies;
And of a dragon, and a finless fish,
A clip-wing'd griffin, and a moultlen raven
A couching lion, and a ramping cat,
And such a deal of skimble-skambe stuff
As puts me from my faith. I tell you what,—
He held me, last night, at the least nine hours
In reckoning up the several devils' names,
That were his lackeys: I cried, "humph," and "well."
"I go to,"
But mark'd him not a word.  O! he's as tedious
As a tired horse, a railing wife;
Worse than a smoky house: I had rather live
With cheese and garlic in a windmill, far,
Than feed on cates, and have him talk to me,
In any summer-house in Christendom.
Mort. In faith, he is a worthy gentleman;
Exceedingly well read, and profited
In strange conceits; valiant as a lion,
And woodrun affable, and as bountiful
As minces of India. Shall I tell you, cousin?
He holds your temper in a high respect,
And curbs himself even of his natural scope,
When you do cross his humour; faith, he does.
I warrant you, that man is not alive,
Might so have tempted him as you have done,
Without the taste of danger and reproof:
But do not use it oft, let me entreat you.
Wor. In faith, my willful lord, you are to blame,
And since your coming hither have done enough
SCENE II.

KING HENRY IV.

To put him quite beside his patience.
You must needs learn, lord, to amend this fault:
Though sometimes it show greatness, courage, blood,
And that's the secret grace it renders you,
Yet oftentimes it doth present harsh rage,
Defect of manners, want of government,
Pride, haughtiness, opinion, and disdain:
The least of which, haunting a nobleman,
Loss'd men's hearts, and leaves behind a stain
Upon the beauty of all parts besides,
Beguiling them of commendation.

Hot.  Well, I am school'd: good manners be your speed.
Here come our wives, and let us take our leave.

Re-enter GLENDOWER, with the Ladies.

Mort.  This is the deadly spite that angers me;
My wife can speak no English, I no Welsh.

GLEND.  My daughter weeps: she will not part with She'll be a soldier too; she'll to the wars.  [you;
Mort.  Good father, tell her that, and, by my aunt
Perey,
Shall follow in your conduct speedily.

GLEND.  She's desperate here;
A peevish self-will'd harlotry, and one
At no persuasion can do good upon.

[She speaks to Mortimer in Welsh.

Mort.  I understand thy looks: that pretty Welsh
Which thou pour'st from these welling heavens,
I am too perfect in; and, but for shame,
In such a parley would I answer thee.

[She speaks again.
I understand thy kisses, and thou mine,
And that's a feeling disposition:
But I will never be a truant, love,
Till I have learn'd thy language; for thy tongue
Makes Welsh as sweet as ditties highly penn'd,
Sung by a fair queen in a summer's bower,
With ravishing division, to her lute.

GLEND.  Nay, if thou melt, then will she e'en run mad.

Mort.  O! I am ignorance itself in this.

GLEND.  She bids you on the wanton rushes lay you,
And rest your gentle head upon her lap, [down
And she will sing the song that pleaseth you,
And on your eye-lids crown the god of sleep.
Charming your blood with pleasing heaviness:
Making such difference 'twixt wake and sleep,
As is the difference betwixt day and night,
The hour before the heavenly-harness'd team
Begins his golden progress in the east.

Mort.  With all my heart I'll sit, and hear her sing:
By that time will our book, I think, be drawn.

GLEND.  Do so;
And those musicians that shall play to you,
Hang in the air a thousand leaues from hence;
And straight they shall be here.  Sit, and attend.

Hot.  Come, Kate, thou art perfect in lying down:
Come, quick, quick; that I may lay my head in thy lap.

LADY P.  Go, ye giddy goose.  [The music plays.

Hot.  Now I perceive, the devil understands Welsh;
And 'tis no marvel, he is so humorous.

By 'r lady, he's a good musician.

LADY P.  Then, should you be nothing but musical,
For you are altogether governed by humours.

Lie still, ye thief, and hear the lady sing.

In Welsh.

Hot.  I had rather hear, lady, my brach* howl it.

LADY P.  Wouldst thou have thy head broken?

Hot.  No.

LADY P.  Then be still.

Hot.  Neither; 'tis a woman's fault.

LADY P.  Now, God help thee!

Hot.  To the Welsh lady's bed.

LADY P.  What's that?

Hot.  Peace; she sings.  [A Welsh Song by Lady M

Hot.  Come, Kate, I'll have your song too.

LADY P.  Not mine, in good sooth.

Hot.  Not yours, in good sooth!  Heart!
You swear like to a comfit-maker's wife.
Not yours, in good sooth; and, as true as I live:
As God shall mend me; and, as sure as day:
And giv'st such sarcenet surety for thy oaths.
As if thou never walk'd farther than Finsbury.
Swear me, Kate, like a lady as thou art,
A good-mouth-filling oath; and leave in sooth.
And such protests of pepper-gingerbread.
To velvet-guards,* and Sunday-citizens.

Come, sing.

LADY P.  I will not sing.

Hot.  'Tis the next way to turn tailor, or be red-breast teacher.
An the indentures be drawn, I'll away within these two hours; and so come in wher ye will.
[Exit

GLEND.  Come on; lord Mortimer: you are as slow
As hot lord Perey is on fire to go.
By this our book is drawn: we'll seal, and part
To horse immediately.

Mort.  With all my heart.  [Exeunt

SCENE II.—London.  A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, Prince of Wales, and Lords

K.  Hen.  Lords, give us leave.  The Prince of Wales and I.

Must have some private conference: but be near at hand.

For we shall presently have need of you.—

[Exeunt Lords

I know not whether God will have it so,
For some displeasing service I have done,
That, in his secret doom, out of my blood
He'll breed revengement and a scourge for me
But thou dost, in thy passages of life,
Make me believe, that thou art only mark'd
For the hot vengeance and the rod of heaven,
To punish my mistreadings.  Tell me else,
Could such inordinate, and low desires,
Such poor, such bare, such lewd, such mean attempts
Such barren pleasures, rude society,
As thou art match'd withal, and granted to,
Accompany the greatness of thy blood,
And hold their level with thy princely heart?

P.  Hen.  So please your majesty, I would, I could Quit all offences with as clear excuse
As well as, I am doubtless, I can purge
Myself of many I am charg'd withal:
Yet such extenuation let me beg.
As, in respect of many tales devis'd,
Which oft the ear of greatness needs must hear
By smiling pick thanks and base newsmongers,
I may, for some things true, wherein my youth
Hath faulty wander'd and irregular,
Find pardon on my true submission.
K. Hen. God pardon thee!—yet let me wonder,
At thy affections, which do hold a wing,
Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors.
Thy place in council thou hast rudely lost,
Which by thy younger brother is supplied;
And art almost an alien to the hearts
Of all the court, and princes of my blood:
The hope and expectation of thy time
Is ruin'd; and the soul of every man
Prophetically doth fore-think thy fall.
Had I so lavish of my presence been,
So common-hackney'd in the eyes of men,
So stale and cheap to vulgar company,
Opinion, that did help me to the crown,
Had still kept loyal to possession,
And left me in reputeless banishment,
A fellow of no mark, nor likelihood,
By being seldom seen, I could not stir,
But like a comet I was wonder'd at;
That men would tell their children, "This is he!"
Others would say,—"Where? which is Bolingbroke?"
And then I stole all courtesy from heaven,
And dress'd myself in such humility,
That I did pluck allegiance from men's hearts,
Loud shouts and salutations from their mouths,
Even in the presence of the crowned king.
Thus did I keep my person fresh, and new;
My presence, like a robe possessed,
Never seen but wonder'd at: and so my state,
Seldom, but sumptuous, showed like a feast,
And won by readiness such solemnity.
The skipping king, he ambl'd up and down
With shallow jesters, and rash h'avin's wits.
Soon kindled, and soon burn'd: discarded state;
Mingled his royalty with carping fools;
Had his great name profaned with their sores;
And gave his countenance against his name,
To laugh at gibing boys, and stand the push
Of every beardless vain comparative:
Grew a companion to the common streets,
Ente'off'd himself to popularity:
That, being dally swallow'd by men's eyes,
They surfeited with honey: and began
To loathe the taste of sweetness, whereof a little More than a little is by much too much.
So, when he had occasion to be seen,
He was but as the cuckoo is in June,
Heard, not regarded; seen, but with such eyes,
As, sick and blunted with community,
Afford no extraordinary gaze,
Such as is bent on sun-like majesty,
When it shines seldom in admiring eyes:
But rather drouz'd, and hung their eyelids down,
Slept in his face, and render'd such aspect
As cloudy men use to their adversaries,
Being with his presence glutted, gorg'd, and full.
And in that very line, Harry, stand'st thou;
For thou hast lost thy princely privilege,
With vile participation: not an eye
But is a-woary of thy common sight,
Save mine, which hath desir'd to see thee more;
Which now doth that I would not have it do,
Make blind itself with foolish tenderness.

P. Hen. I shall hereafter, my thrice-glorious lord,
Be more myself.

K. Hen. For all the world,
As thou art to this hour, was Richard then,
When I from France set foot at Ravenspur;
Blunt. So is the business that I come to speak of.

Lord Mortimer of Scotland hath sent word,
That Douglas, and the English rebels met,
The eleventh of this month, at Shrewsbury.
A mighty and a fearful head they are,
If promises be kept on every hand,
As ever o'ER'd foul play in a state.

K. Hen. The earl of Westminster set forth to-day.
With him my son, Edw. John of Lancaster:
For this advertisement is five days old.—
On Wednesday next, Harry; you shall set forward;
On Thursday we ourselves will march.
Our meeting is Bridgnorth; and, Harry, you
Shall march through Glosfiershire: by which account,
Our business valued, some twelve days hence
Our general forces at Bridgnorth shall meet,
Our hands are full of business: let's away;
Advantage feeds him fat, while men delay. [Exit.

SCENE III.—Enkechep. A Room in the Boar's Head Tavern.

Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.

Fal. Bardolph, am I not fallen away vilely since this last action? do I not bate? do I not dwindle?—Why, my skin hangs about me like an old lady's loose gown: I am wither'd like an old apple-John. Well, I'll repent, and that suddenly, while I am in some liking; I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent. An I have not forgotten what the inside of a church is made of, I am a pepper-corn, a brewer's horse. The inside of a church! Company, villainous company, hath been the spoil of me.

Bard. Sir John, you are so fretful, you cannot live long.

Fal. Why, there is it.—Cone, sing me a bawdy song; make me merry. I was as virtuously given as a gentleman need to be; virtuous enough: swore little; dined not above seven times a week; went to a bawdy-house not above once in a quarter,—of an hour; paid money that I borrowed three or four times; lived well, and in good compass; and now I live out of all order, out of all compass.

Bard. Why, you are so fat, sir John, that you must needs be out of all compass; out of all reasonable compass, sir John.

Fal. Do thou amend thy face, and I'll amend my life. Thou art our admiral, thou bearest the lantern not in the poop,—but 'tis in the nose of thee; thou art the knight of the burning lamp.

Bard. Why, sir John, my face does you no harm.

Fal. No; I'll be sworn, I make as good use of it as any man doth of a death's head, or a memento mori: I never see thy face, but I think upon hell-fire, and Dives that lived in purple; for there he is in his robes, burning, burning. If thou wert any way given to virtue, I would swear by thy face: my oath should be. By this fire, that's God's angel: but thou art altogether given over, and wert, indeed, but for the light in thy face, the son of utter darkness. When thou ran'st up Gadshill in the night to catch my horse, if I did not think thou hadst been an ignis fatus, or a ball of wild-fire, there's no purchase in money. O! thou art a perpetual triumph. an everlasting bonfire-light. Thou hast saved me a thousand marks in links and torches, walking with thee in the night betwixt tavern and tavern: but the sack that thou hast drunk me, would have bought me lights as good cheap, at the dearest chandler's in Europe. I have maintained that salamander of yours with fire any time this two and thirty years: God reward me for it!

Bard. 'Sblood! I would my face were in your belly

Fal. God-a-mercy! so should I be sure to be heart-burned.

Enter Hostess.

How now, dame Partlet the hen? have you inquired yet who picked my pocket?

Host. Why, sir John, what do you think, sir John? Do you think I keep thieves in my house? I have searched, I have inquired, so has my husband, man'y man, boy by boy, servant by servant: the tittle of a hair was never lost in my house before.

Fal. You lie, hostess; Bardolph was shaved, and lost many a hair; and I'll be sworn, my pocket was picked. Go to, you are a woman: go.

Host Who? No. I defy thee: God's light! I was never called so in mine own house before.

Fal. Go to; I know you well enough.

Host. No, sir John; you do not know me, sir John: I know you, sir John: you owe me money, sir John, and now you pick a quarrel to beguile me of it. I bought you a dozen of shirts to your back.

Fal. Dowels, filthy dowels: I have given them away to bakers' wives, and they have made bolters of them.

Host. Now, as I am a true woman, holland of eight shillings an ell. You owe money here besides, sir John, for your diet, and by-drinkings, and money lent you, four and twenty pound.

Fal. He had his part of it: let him pay.

Host He? alas! he is poor: he hath nothing.

Fal. How! poor? look upon his face; what call you rich? let them coin his nose, let them coin his cheeks. I'll not pay a denier. What, will you make a younger of me? shall I not take mine ease in mine inn, but I shall have my pocket picked? I have lost a real-thing of my grandfather's, worth forty mark.

Host. O Jesu! I have heard the prince tell him. I know not how off, that that ring was copper.

Fal. How! the prince is a Jack, a sneak-up, 'Sblood! and he were here, I would cudgel him like a dog, if he would say so.

Enter Prince Henry and Poins, marching. Falstaff meets the Prince, playing on his trombone, like a fifer

Fal. How now, lad! is the wind in that door, or faith? must we all march?

Bard. Yea, two and two, Newgate-fashion.

Host. My lord, I pray you, hear me.

P. Hen. What sayest thou, mistress Quickly? How does thy husband? I love him well: he is an honest man.

Host. Good my lord, hear me.

Fal. Pr'ythee let her alone, and list to me.

P. Hen. What say'st thou, Jack?

Fal. The other night I fell asleep, here, behind the arras, and had my pocket picked: this house is turned bawdy-house: they pick pockets.

P. Hen. What didst thou lose, Jack?

Fal. Will thou believe me, Hal? three or four bounds of forty pound a-piece, and a seal ring of my grandfa ther's.

P. Hen. A trifle: some eight-penny matter.

Host. So I told him, my lord: and I said I heard your grace say so: and, my lord, he speaks most vilely of you, like a foul-mouthed man as he is, and said, he would cudgel you.

P. Hen. What! he did not?

Host. There's neither faith, truth, nor womanhood in me else.
Fal. There’s no more faith in thee than in a stewed prawn; nor more truth in thee, than in a drawn fox: and for womanhood, maid Marian may be the deputy’s wife of the ward to thee. Go, you thing, go.

Host. Say, what thing? what thing?

Fal. What thing? why, a thing to thank God on.

Host. I am nothing to thank God on, I would thou shouldst know it: I am an honest man’s wife; and, setting thy knighthood aside, thou a knave to call me so.

Fal. Setting thy womanhood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

Host. Say, what beast, thou knave thou?

P. Hen. An otter, sir John: why an otter?

Ea. Why? she’s neither fish nor flesh; a man knows not where to have her.

Host. Thou art an unjust man in saying so: thou or any man knows where to have me, thou knave thou!

P. Hen. Thou sayest true, hostess; and he slanders thee most grossly.

Host. So he doth you, my lord; and said this other day, you ought him a thousand pound.

P. Hen. Sirrah! do I owe you a thousand pound?

Fal. A thousand pound, Hal! a million! thy love is worth a million; thou owest me thy love.

Host. Nay, my lord, he called you Jack, and said he would edgell you.

Fal. Did I, Bardolph?

Bard. Indeed, sir John, you said so.

Fal. Yea: if he said my ring was copper.

P. Hen. I say, ’tis copper: darest thou be as good as thy word now?

Fal. Why, Hal, thou knowest, as thou art but man, I dare; but as thou art prince, I fear thee, as I fear the roaring of the lion’s whelp.

P. Hen. And why not, as the lion.

Fal. The king himself is to be feared as the lion. Dost thou think I’ll fear thee as I fear thy father? nay, as I do, I pray God, my dirdle break!

P. Hen. O! if it should, how would thy guts fall about thy knees! But, sirrah, there’s no room for faith, truth, nor honesty, in this bosom of thine; it is filled up with guts and midriff. Charge an honest woman with picking thy pocket! Why, thou whoreson, impudent, embossed rascal, if there were any thing in thy pocket but tavern reckonings, memorandums of bawdy-houses, and one poor penny-worth of sugar-candy to make thee long-winded; if thy pocket were enriched with any other injuries but these, I am a villain; and yet you will stand to it; you will not pocket up wrong.

Art thou not ashamed?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? thou knowest in the state of innocence, Adam fell; and what should poor Jack Falstaff do, in the days of villany? Thou seest I have more flesh than another man, and therefore more frailty. You confess, then, you picked my pocket?

P. Hen. It appears so by the story.

Fal. Hostess, I forgive thee. Go, make ready breakfast; love thy husband, look to thy servants, cherish thy guests: thou shalt find me tractable to any honest reason: thou seest, I am pacified.—Still?—Nay, pray thee begone. [Exit Hostess.] Now, Hal, to the news at court: for the robbery, lad,—how is that answered?

P. Hen. O! my sweet beef. I must still be good angel to thee. The money is paid back again.

Fal. O! I do not like that paying back; ’tis a double labour.

P. Hen. I am good friends with my father, and may do any thing.

Fal. Rob me the exchequer the first thing thou dost, and do it with unwashed hands too.

Bard. Do, my lord.

P. Hen. I have procured thee, Jack, a charge of foot.

Fal. I would, it had been of a horse. Where shall I find one that can steal well? O! for a fine thief, of the age of two-and-twenty, or thereabouts! I am heinously unprovided. Well, God be thanked for these rebels; they offend none but the virtuous: I laud them, I praise them.

P. Hen. Bardolph!

Bard. My lord.

P. Hen. Go hear this letter to lord John of Lancaster.

To my brother John: this to my lord of Westmoreland.— Go, Pouns, to horse, to horse! for thou, and I, have thirty miles to ride yet ere dinner time.— Jack, meet me to-morrow in the Temple-hall at two o’clock in the afternoon: There shalt thou know thy charge; and there receive Money, and order for their furniture. The land is burning, Percy stands on high, And either they, or we, must lower lie.

[Exeunt Prince, Pouns, and Bardolph.

Fal. Rare words! brave world!—Hostess, my breakfast: come.—

O! I could wish this tavern were my drum. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Rebel Camp near Shrewbury.

Enter Hotspur, Worcester, and Douglas.

Hot. Well said, my noble Scot: if speaking truth, in this fine age we were not thought flatter; Such attribution should the Douglas have, As not a soldier of this season’s stamp Should go so general current through the world. By God, I cannot flatter: I defy The tongues of soothers; but a braver place In my heart’s love hath no man than yourself. Nay, task me to my word; approve me, lord.

Dougl. Thou art the king of honour: No man so potent breathes upon the ground,
KING HENRY IV.

He was much fear'd by his physicians.

Wor. I would the state of time had first been whole,

Ere he by sickness had been visited:

His health was never better worth than now.

Hot. Sick now! droop now! this sickness doth infect

The very life-blood of our enterprise;
'Tis catching hither, even to our camp.

He writes me here,—that inward sickness—
And that his friends by deputation could not
So soon be drawn; nor did he think it meet,
To lay so dangerous and dear a trust
On any soul removed, but on his own.

Yet doth he give us bold advertisement,
That with our small conjunction we should on,
To see how fortune is dispose to us;
For, as he writes, there is no qualing now,
Because the king is certainly possess'd

Of all our purposes. What say you to it?

Wor. Your father's sickness is a main to us.

Hot. A perilous gash, a very limb lopp'd off:—

And yet, in faith, 'tis not; his present want
Seems more than we shall find it.—Were it good,
To set the exact wealth of all our states
All at one cast? to set so rich a main
On the nice hazard of one doubtful hour?
It were not good; for therein should we read
The very bottom and the soul of hope,
The very list, the very utmost bound
Of all our fortunes.

Doug. 'Faith, and so we should,
Where now remains a sweet reversion:
We now1 may boldly spend upon the hope
Of what is to come in:
A comfort of retirement lives in this.

Hot. A rendezvous, a home to fly unto,
If that the devil and mischief look big
Upon the said head of our affairs.

Wor. But yet, I would your father had been here.
The quality and hair2 of our attempt
Brooks no division: it will be thought
By some, that know not why he is away,
That wisdom, loyalty, and mere dislike
Of our proceedings, kept the earl from hence.
And think, how such an apprehension
May turn the tide of fearful faction,
And breed a kind of question in our cause:
For, well you know, we of the offering side
Must keep aloof from strict arbitration,
And stop all sight-holes, every loop from whence
The eye of reason may pry in upon us.
This absence of your father's draws a curtain,
That shows the ignorant a kind of fear
Before not dreamt of.

Hot. You strain too far.
I, rather, of his absence make this use:—
It lends a lustre, and more great opinion,
A larger dare to our great enterprise,
Than if the earl were here: for men must think,
If we, without his help, can make a head
To push against the kingdom, with his help,
We should o'turn it topsy-turvy down.—
Yet all goes well: yet all our joints are whole.

Doug. As heart can think: there is not such a word
Spoke of in Scotland as this term3 of fear.

Enter Sir Richard Vernon.

Hot. My cousin Vernon I welcome, by my soul.

Ver. Pray God my news be worth a welcome, lord.

The earl of Westmoreland, seven thousand strong,

Is marching hitherwards; with him, prince John.

Hot. No harm: what more?

Ver. And farther, I have learn'd,
The king himself in person is set forth,
Or hitherwards intendeth speedily,
With strong and mighty preparation.

Hot. He shall be welcome too. Where is his son
The nimble-footed mad-cap prince of Wales,
And his comrades, that dash'd the world aside,
And bid it pass?

Ver. All furnish'd, all in arms,
All plund' like estridges, that wing the wind,
Bated4 like eagles having lately bath'd,
Glittering in golden coats, like images;
As full of spirit as the month of May,
And gorgeous as the sun at midsummer,
Wanton as youthful goats, wild as young bulls.
I saw young Harry, with his beaver on,
His cuisses on his thighs, gallantly arm'd,
Rise from the ground like feather'd Mercury.
And vaulted with such ease into his seat,
As if an angel dropp'd down from the clouds,
To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus,
And witch the world with noble horsemanship.

Hot. No more, no more: worse than the sun in March
This praise doth nourish a queue. Let them come;
They come like sacrifices in their trim,
And to the fire-ey'd maid of smoky war,
All hot, and bleeding, will we offer them;
The mailed Mars shall on his altar sit,
Up to the ears in blood. I am on fire,
To hear this rich reprisal is so nigh,
And yet not ours.—Come, let me taste5 my horse,
Who is to bear me, like a thunderbolt,
Against the bosom of the prince of Wales:
Harry to Harry shall, hot horse to horse,
Meet, and ne'er part, till one drop down a corse.—

O, that Glendower were come!

Ver. There is more news.

I learn'd in Worcester, as I rode along,
He cannot draw his power this fourteen days.

Doug. That's the worst tidings that I hear of yet.

Wor. Ay, by my faith, that bears a frosty sound.

Hot. What may the king's whole battle reach unto?

Ver. To thirty thousand.

Hot. Forty let it be:
My father and Glendower being both away,
The powers of us may serve so great a day.
Come, let us take a muster speedily:
Doomsday is near; die all, die merrily.

Doug. Talk not of dying: I am out of fear
Of death, or death's hand; for this one half year. [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—A public Road, near Coventry.

Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.

Fal. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry: fill me a bottle of sack. Our soldiers shall march through, we'll to Sutton-Cofield to-night.

Bard. Will you give me money, captain?

Fal. Lay out, lay out.

Bard. This bottle makes an angel.

Fal. An if it do, take it for thy labour; and if it make twenty, take them all, I'll answer the coinage
Bid my lieutenant Peto meet me at the town's end.

Bard. I will, captain: farewell. [Exit

Fal. If I be not ashamed of my soldiers, I am a souse'd gurnet6. I have misused the king's press damnable.
I have got, in exchange of a hundred and fifty soldiers. three hundred and odd pounds, I pressed me none but good householders, yeomen’s sons: inquired me out contracted bachelors, such as had been asked twice on the barns: such a commodity of warm slaves, as had as lief hear the devil as a drum: such as fear the report of a caliver, worse than a struck fowl, or a hurt wild-duck. I pressed me none but such toasts and butter,1 with hearts in their bellies no bigger than puny heads, and they have bought out their services; and now my whole charge consists of ancients, corporals, lieutenants, gentlemen of companies, slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted cloth,2 where the glutton’s dogs licked his sores; and such as, indeed, were never soldiers, but disheartened unjust serving men, younger sons to younger brothers, revolted taistlers, and ostlers trade-fallen: the cankers of a calm world, and a long peace; ten times more dishonourable ragged than an old pieced3 ancient: and such have I, to fill up the rooms of them that have bought out their services, that you would think that I had a hundred and fifty tattered prodigals, lately come from swine-keeping, from eating draft and husks. A mad fellow met me on the way, and told me I had unloaded all the giblets, and pressed the dead bodies. No eye hath seen such scarecrows. I’ll not march through Coventry with them, that’s flat:—nay, and the villains march wide betwixt the legs, as if they had gyes on; for, indeed, I had the most of them out of prison. There’s but4 a shirt and a half in all my company: and the half shirt is two napkins, tacked together, and thrown over the shoulders like a herald’s coat without sleeves: and the shirt, to say the truth, stolen from my host at St. Albans, or the red-nosed inn-keeper of Daventry. But that’s all one; they’ll find linen enough on every hedge.

Enter Prince Henry and Westmoreland.

P. Hen. How now, Blunt! how now, quail! I come to steal cream. P. Hen. I think, to steal cream indeed: for thy theft hath already made thee butter. But tell me, Jack; whose fellows are these that come after? Fal. Mine, Hal, mine. P. Hen. I did never see such pitiful rascals. Fal. Tut, tut! good enough to toss;5 food for powder, powder for food; they’ll fill a pit, as well as better: tush, man, mortal men, mortal men. West. Ay, but, sir John, methinks they are exceeding poor and bare; too beggarly. Fal. ’Faith, for their poverty, I know not where they had that: and for their bareness, I am sure, they never learned that of me. P. Hen. No, I’ll be sworn; unless you call three fingers on the ribs, bare. But, sirrah, make haste: Percy is already in the field. Enr. What, is the king encamped? West. He is, sir John: I fear we shall stay too long. Fal. Well, To the latter end of a fray, and the beginning of a feast, Fite a dull fighter, and a keen guest. [Exeunt.

Hot. We’ll fight with him to-night.

Wor. It may not be.

Dou. You give him, then, advantage.

Ver. Not a whit.

Hot. Why say you so? looks he not for supply?

Ver. So do we.

Hot. His is certain, ours is doubtful.

Wor. Good cousin, be advis’d: stir not to-night.

Ver. Do not, my lord.

Dou. You do not counsel well.

Hot. You speak it out of fear, and a cold heart.

Ver. Do me no slander, Douglas: by my life, And I dare well maintain it with my life, If well-respected honour bid me on.

I hold as little counsel with weak fear, As you, my lord, or any Scot that lives:

Let it be seen to-morrow in the battle,

Which of us fears.

Dou. Yea, or to-night.

Ver. Content.

Hot. To-night, say I.

Ver. Come, come, it may not be.

I wonder much,

Being men of such great leading as you are,

That you foresee not what impediments

Drag back our expedition: certain horse

Of my cousin Vernon’s are not yet come up:

Your uncle Worcester’s horse came but to-day,

And now their pride and mettle is asleep,

Their courage with hard labour tame and dull,

That not a horse is half the half himself.

Hot. So are the horses of the enemy,

In general, journey-hated, and brought low;

The better part of ours are full of rest.

Wor. The number of the king exceedeth ours:

For God’s sake, cousin, stay till all come in.

Enter Sir Walter Blunt.

Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the king,

If you vouchsafe me hearing and respect.

Hot. Welcome, sir Walter Blunt; and would to God

You were of our determination!

Some of us love you well; and even those some

Envy your great deservings, and good name,

Because you are not of our quality,

But stand against us like an enemy.

Blunt. And God defend but still I should stand so

So long as out of limit and true rule,

You stand against anointed majesty.

But, to my charge.—The king hath sent to know

The nature of your griefs; and whereupon

You conjure from the breast of civil peace

Such bold hostility, teaching his duteous land

Audacious cruelty? If that the king

Have any way your good deserts forgot,

Which he confesseth to be manifold,

He bids you name your griefs, and with all speed,

You shall have your desires with interest,

And pardon absolute for yourself, and these,

Herein misled by your suggestion.

Hot. The king is kind; and, well we know, the king

Knows at what time to promise, when to pay.

My father, with my uncle, and myself,

Did give him that same royalty he wears;

1 According to Fynes Morison’s Itinerary (1617), Londoners were “in reproach” called Cockneys, and eaters of butter called.

And when he was not six-and-twenty strong,
Sick in the world's regard, wretched and low,
A poor unrivend outlaw sneaking home,
My father gave him welcome to the shore:
And, when he heard him swear, and vow to God,
He came but to be duke of Lancaster,
To sue his mercy, and beg his peace,
With tears of innocence, and terms of zeal,
My father, in kind heart and pity mov'd,
Sware him assistance, and perform'd it too.
Now, when the lords and barons of the realm
Perev'd Northumberland did lean to him,
The more and less came in with cap and knee;
Met him in boroughs, cities, villages,
Attended him on bridges; stood in lanes,
Laid gifts before him, promised him their oaths,
Gave him their heirs, as pages follow'd him,
Even at the heels, in golden multitudes.
He presently, as greatness knows itself,
Steps me a little higher than his vow.
Made to my father, while his blood was poor,
Upon the naked shore at Ravenspur:
And now, forsworn, takes on him to reform
Some certain edicts, and some strait decrees,
That tie too heavy on the commonwealth;
Cries out upon abuses, seems to weep
Over his country's wrongs; and, by this face,
This seeming brow of justice, did he win
The hearts of all that he did angle for:
Proceeded farther; cut me off the heads
Of all the favourites, that the absent king
In deputation left behind him here,
When he was personal in the Irish war.
Blunt. Tut! I came not to hear this.
Hot. Then, to the point.
In short time after he depos'd the king;
Soon after that, depriv'd him of his life;
And, in the neck of that, task'd the whole state;
To make that worse, suffer'd his kinsman March
(Who is, if every owner were due place'd,
Indeed his king) to be engag'd in Wales,
There without ransom to lie forfeited;
Disgrac'd me in my happy victories;
Sought to entrap me by intelligence;
Rated my uncle from the council-board;
In rage dismiss'd my father from the court;
Broke oath on oath, committed wrong on wrong,
And, in conclusion, drove us to seek out
This head of safety; and, withal, to pry
Into his title, the which we find
Too indirect for long-continuance.
Blunt. Shall I return this answer to the king?
Hot. Not so; sir Walter: we'll withdraw awhile.

Go to the king; and let there be impawn'd
Some surety for a safe return again,
And in the morning early shall nine uncle
Bring him our purposes; and so farewell.
Blunt. I would you would accept of grace and love
Hot. And, may be, so we shall.
Blunt. Pray God you do! [Exeunt

Enter the Archbishop of York, and Sir Michael.

Arch. He, good sir Michael; bear this sealed brief
With winged haste to the lord marshal:
This to my cousin Scroop; and all the rest
To whom they are directed. If you knew
How much they do import, you would make haste.
Sir M. My good lord,
I guess their tenour.
Arch. Like enough, you do.
To-morrow, good sir Michael, is a day,
Wherein the fortune of ten thousand men
Must bide the touch; for, sir, at Shrewsbury,
As I am truly given to understand,
The king, with mighty and quick-raised power,
Meets with lord Harry; and, I fear, sir Michael,
What with the sickness of Northumberland,
Whose power was in the first proportion,
And what with Owen Glendower's absence thence,
Who with them was a rated sinew too,
And comes not in, o'er-rul'd by prophecies,
I fear, the power of Perey is too weak
To wage an instant trial with the king.
Sir M. Why, my good lord, you need not fear,
There is Douglas, and lord Mortimer.
Arch. No, Mortimer is not there. [Perey
Sir M. But there is Mordaunt, Vernon, lord Harry
And there's my lord of Worcester; and a head
Of gallant warriors, noble gentlemen.
Arch. And so there is; but yet the king hath drawn
The special head of all the land together:
The prince of Wales, lord John of Lancaster,
The noble Westmoreland, and warlike Blunt,
And many more corivals, and dear men
Of estimation and command in arms.
Sir M. Doubt not, my lord, they shall be well oppos'd
Arch. I hope no less, yet needful 'tis to fear;
And, to prevent the worst, sir Michael, speed;
For, if lord Perey thrive not, ere the king
Dismiss his power, he means to visit us,
For he hath heard of our confederaey,
And it is but wisdom to make strong against him
Therefore, make haste. I must go write again
To other friends; and so farewell, sir Michael. [Exeunt

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The King's Camp near Shrewsbury.

K. Hen. How bloodylly the sun begins to peer
Above yond busky hill: the day looks pale
At his distemperature.
P. Hen. The southern wind.

Both play the trumpet to his purposes;
And by his hollow whistling in the leaves
Foretels a tempest, and a blustering day.
K. Hen. Then, with the losers let it sympathise,
For nothing can seem foul to those that win.

[Trumpet sounds
Enter Worcester and Vernon.

How now, my lord of Worcestar! 'tis not well,
That you and I should meet upon such terms

1 The delivery of his property to him. See Richard II., p. n. l. 2 "Busky" wood. 3 Well: in f. s. 4 Delivered a gage or hostage. 5 See the quarto; the folio: was rated firmly. 6 Busky, wood.

As now we meet. You have deceiv'd our trust,
And made us doff our easy robes of peace,
To crush our old limbs in ungentle steel:
This is not well, my lord; this is not well.
What say you to it? will you again unskit
This churlish knot of all-abhorred war,
And move in that obedient orb again,
Where you did give a fair and natural light,
And be no more an exhal'd mictor,
A prodigy of fear, and a portent
Of broached mischief to the unborn times?

Wor. I hear me, my liege;
For mine own part, I could be well content
To entertain the lag-end of my life
With quiet hours; for, I do protest,
I have not sought the day of this dislike. [then?

K. Hen. You have not sought it! say, how comes it

Fal. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it.

P. Hen. Peace. chessot, peace!

Wor. It pleas'd your majesty, to turn your looks
Of favour, from myself, and all our house;
And yet I must remember you, my lord,
We were the first and dearest of your friends.
For you my staff of office did I break
In Richard's time; and posted day and night
To meet you on the way, and kiss your hand,
When yet you were in place, and in account,
Nothing so strong and fortunate as I.
It was myself, my brother, and his son,
That brought you home, and boldly did outface
The dangers of the time. You swore to us,
And you did swear that oath at Doncaster,
That you did nothing purpose 'gainst the state,
Nor claim no farther than your new-fall'n right,
The seat of Gaunt, dukedom of Lancaster.
To this we swore our aid; but, in short space,
It rain'd down fortune showering on your head,
And such a flood of greatness fell on you,
What with our help, what with the absent king,
What with the injuries of a warrants time,
The seeming sufferances that you had borne,
And the contrarious winds that held the king
So long in his unlucky Irish wars,
That all in England did repulse him dead:
And, from this swarm of fair advantages,
You took occasion to be quickly wo'd
To grip the general sway into your hand;
Forgot your oath to us at Doncaster.
And, being fed by us, you us'd us so
As that ungentle gull, the cuckoo's bird,
Useth the sparrow; did oppress our nest,
Grew by our feeding so great a bulk,
That even our love durst not come near your sight,
For fear of swallowing; but with nimble wing
We were enforc'd, for safety sake, to fly
Out of your sight, and raise this present head:
Whereby we stand opposed by such means
As you yourself have forg'd against yourself,
By unkind usage, dangerous countenance,
And violation of all faith and troth
Sworn to us in your younger enterprise.

K. Hen. These things, indeed, you have articulat'd
Proclaim'd at market-crosses, read in churches,
To face the garment of rebellion
With some fine colour, that may pleased the eye
Of fickle changelings, and poor discontented,
Which gape, and rub the elbow, at the news
Of hurlyburly innovation:
And never yet did insurrection want
Such water-colours to impart his cause;
Nor moody beggars, starving for a time
Of pillmell havoc and confusion.

P. Hen. In both our armies, there is many a soul
Shall pay full dearly for this encounter,
If once they join in trial. Tell your nephew,
The prince of Wales doth join with all the world
In praise of Henry Percy: by my hopes,
This present enterprise set off his head,
I do not think, a braver gentleman,
More active-valiant, or more valiant-young,
More daring, or more bold, is now alive
To grace this latter age with noble deeds.
For my part, I may speak it to my shame,
I have a truant been to chivalry,
And so, I hear, he doth account me too;
Yet this before my father's majesty:
I am content, that he shall take the odds
Of his great name and estimation,
And will, to save the blood on either side,
Try fortune with him in a single fight. [thee

K. Hen. And, prince of Wales, so dare we venture
Albeit considerations infinite
Do make against it.—No, good Worcester, no,
We love our people well; even those we love,
That are misled upon your cousin's part:
And, will they take the offer of our grace,
Both he, and they, and you, yea, every man
Shall be my friend again, and I'll be his.
So tell your cousin, and bring me word
What he will do; but if he will not yield,
Rebuke and dread correction wait on us,
And they shall do their office. So, be gone.
We will not now be troubled with reply:
We offer fair, take it advisedly.

[Exeunt Worcester and Vernon.

P. Hen. It will not be accepted, on my life.
The Douglas and the Hotspur both together
Are confident against the world in arms.

K. Hen. Hence, therefore, every leader to his charge
For, on their answer, will we set on them;
And God befriend us as our case is just!

[Exeunt King, Blunt, and Prince John.

Fal. Hal, if thou see me down in the battle,
And bestride me, so: 'tis a point of friendship.

P. Hen. Nothing but a colossal can do thee that friendship. Say thy prayers, and farewell.

Fal. I would it were bed-time, Hal, and all well.

P. Hen. Why, thou owest God a death.

[Exit Fal. 'Tis not due yet: I would be loath to pay him
Before his day. What need I be so forward with him that calls not on me? Well, 'tis no matter; honour pricks me on. Yea, but how if honour prick me off when I come on? how then? Can honour set to a leg?
No. Or an arm? No. Or take away the grief of a wound? No. Honour hath no skill in surgery, thou. No. What is honour? A word. What is that word, honour? What is that honour? Air.
A trim reckoning!—Who hath it? He that died of Wednesday. Doth he feel it? No. Doth he hear it? No.
Is it sensible? Then? Yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? No. Why? Detraction will not suffer it: therefore, I'll none of it: honour is a mere scutch-meal, and so ends my catechism.

[Exit

SCENE II.—The Rebel Camp.

Enter Worcester and Vernon.

Wor. O, no! my nephew must not know, sir Richard
The liberal kind offer of the king.
There did he pause: but let me tell the world,
If he outrage the envy of this day,
England did never owe so sweet a hope,
So much misconstrued in his wantonness.

Hot. Cousin, I think thou art enamoured
Upon his follies: never did I hear
Of any prince so wild of* liberty.
But he as he will, yet once ere night
I will embrace him with a soldier's arm,
That he shall shrink under my courtesy.—
Arm, arm, with speed!—And, tellows, soldiers, friends
Better consider what you have to do,
Than I, that have not well the gift of tongue,
Can lift your blood up with persuasion.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, here are letters for you.

Hot. I cannot read them now.—
O gentlemen! the time of life is short:
To spend that shortness basely, were too long,
If life did ride upon a dial's point,
Still ending at the arrival of an hour.
An if we live, we live to tread on kings;
If die, brave death, when princes die with us.
Now, for our consciences, the arms are fair,
When the intent of bearing them is just.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. My lord, prepare; the king comes on apace
Hot. I thank him, that he cuts me from my taie
For I profess not talking. Only thus—
Let each man do his best; and here draw I
A sword, whose temper I intend to stain
With the best blood that I can meet withal
In the adventure of this perilous day.
Now,—Esperance!—Percy!—and set on!—
Sound all the lofty instruments of war,
And by that music let us all embrace,
'Fore heaven and earth; some of us never shall
A second time do such a courtesy.

[The Trumpets sound. They embrace, and exult]

SCENE III.—Plain near Shrewsbury.

Excursions, and Parties fighting. Alarum to the Battle
Then enter DOUGLAS and BLUNT, meeting.

Blunt. What is thy name, that in battle thus Thou crossest me? what honour dest thou seek Upon my head?

Doug. Know, then, my name is Douglas;
And I do haunt thee in the battle thus,
Because some tell me that thou art a king.

Blunt. They tell thee true.

Doug. The lord of Stafford dear to-day hath bought
Thy likeness; for, instead of thee, king Harry,
This sword hath ended him: so shall it thee,
Unless thou yield thee as my prisoner.

Blunt. I was not born a yeelder, thou proud Scot;*
And thou shalt find a king that will revenge
Lord Stafford's death. They fight, and Blunt is slain

Enter HOTSUR.

Hot. O Douglas! hadst thou fought at Holmedon thus,
I never had triumph'd upon* a Scot.

Doug. All's done, all's won: here breathless lies the king.

Hot. Where?

Doug. Here.

Hot. This, Douglas? no; I know this face full well.
A gallant knight he was, his name was Blunt,

1 Old copies: Supposition; Pope made the change. 2 The folio, and all but first quarto: talking. 3 Mention. 4 So the three early quarto: the last, and folio: at. 5 The folio inserts: worthy. 6 For heaven to earth: in f. e. 7 So the thr quarto: the folio: second quarto: the others: ever.
Semblably furnish'd like the king himself.

Dug. A fool go with thy soul, where'er it goes!
A borrow'd title hast thou bought too dear:

Why didst thou tell me that thou wert a king?

Hot. The king hath many masking in his coats,

Dug. Now, by my sword, I will kill all his coats:

U'll murder all his wardrobe, piece by piece,
Until I meet the king.

Hot. Up, and away!

Our soldiers stand full fairly for the day. [Exeunt.

Alarums. Enter Falstaff.

Fal. Though I could scape shot-free at London,
I fear the shot here; here's no searing, but upon the pate. — Soft! who art thou? Sir Walter Blunt:
there's honour for you; here's no vanity. —I am hot as molten lead, and as heavy too: God keep lead out of me! I need no more weight than mine own boulders.

— I have led my ragamuffins where they are peppered: there's not two of my hundred and fifty left alive, and they are for the town's end, to beg during life. But who comes here?

Enter Prince Henry.

P. Hen. What? stand'st thou idle here? lend me
Many a nobleman lies stark and stiff — thy sword:
Under the hoofs of vaunting enemies,
Whose deaths are yet unreveng'd. I pr'ythee, lend me thy sword.

Fal. O Hal! I pr'ythee, give me leave to breathe a while. — Turk Gregory never did such deeds in arms, as I have done this day. I have paid Percy, I have made him sure.

P. Hen. He is, indeed; and living to kill thee.
I pr'ythee lend me thy sword.

Fal. Nay, before God, Hal, if Perey be alive, thou get'st not my sword; but take my pistol, if thou wilt.

P. Hen. Give it me. What, is it in the case?

Fal. Ay, Hal; 'tis hot, 'tis hot: there's that will seek a city. [The Prince draws out a bottle of sack.

P. Hen. What! is't a time to jest and dally now? [Throws it at him, and exit.

Fal. Well, if Perey be alive, I'll pierce him. If he do come in my way, so: if he do not, if I come in his willingly, let him make a carbonded of me. I like not such grinning honour as sir Walter hath: give me life, which if I can save, so; if not, honour comes unlooked for, and there's an end.

SCENE IV. — Another Part of the Field.

K. Hen. I pr'ythee,
Harry, withdraw thyself; thou blest'st too much.

Lord John of Lancaster, go you with him.

P. John. Not I, my lord, unless I did bleed too.

P. Hen. I do beseech your majesty, make up,
Lest your retirement do amaze your friends.

K. Hen. I will do so. — My lord of Westmoreland, ead him to his tent.

West. Come, my lord, I'll lead you to your tent.

P. Hen. Lead me, my lord? I do not need your help:
Azd heaven forbid, a shallow scratch should drive
The prince of Wales from such a field as this,
Where stain'd noenity lies trodden on,
And rebels' arms triumph in massacres!

P. John. We breathe too long. — Come, cousin Westmoreland,
Our duty this way lies: for God's sake, come.

[Exeunt Prince John and Westmoreland

P. Hen. By God thou hast deceiv'd me, Lancaster,
I did not think thee lord of such a spirit.

Before, I lov'd thee as a brother, John,
But now, I do respect thee as my soul.

K. Hen. I saw him hold lord Percy at the point,
With lustier maintenance than I did look for
Of such an ungrawd warrior.

P. Hen. O! this boy

Enter Hotspur.

Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth.

P. Hen. Thou speak'st as if I would deny my name.

Hot. My name is Harry Percy.

P. Hen. Why, then I see
A very valiant rebel of that name.
I am the prince of Wales; and think not, Percy,
To share with me in glory any more:
Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere;
Nor can one England brook a double reign,
Of Harry Percy, and the prince of Wales.

Hot. Nor shall it, Harry, for the hour is come
To end the one of us; and would to God,
Thy name in arms were now as great as mine!

P. Hen. I'll make it greater, ere I part from thee,
And all the budding honours on thy crest
I'll crop, to make a garland for my head.

Hot! can no longer brook thy vanities. [They fight

Enter Falstaff.

Fal. Well said, Hal! to it, Hal! — Nay, you shall Find no boy's play here, I can tell you.
Art thou alive, or is it phantasy
That plays upon our eyesight? I pray thee, speak;
We will not trust our eyes, without our ears.
Thou art not what thou seem'st.

Fal. No, that's certain: I am not a double man,
But if I be not Jack Falstaff, then am I a Jack. There is Percy: [Throwing down the body] if your father will do me any honour, so; if not, let him kill the next Percy himself. I look to be either earl or duke, I can assure you.

P. Hen. Why, Percy I killed myself, and saw thee dead.

Fal. Didst thou?—Lord, lord, how this world is given to lying!—I grant you I was down and out of breath, and so was he; but we rose both at an instant, and fought a long hour by Shrewsbury clock. If I may be believed, so; if not, let them that should reward valour bear the sin upon their own heads. I'll take it upon my death, I gave him this wound in the thigh: if the man were alive, and would deny it
'Zounds! I would make him eat a piece of my sword.

P. John. This is the strangest tale that e'er I heard.
P. Hen. This is the strangest fellow, brother John.—
Come, bring your luggage nobly on your back:
For my part, if a lie may do thee grace,
I'll gild it with the happiest terms I have.

[A Retreat is sounded
The trumpets sounds retreat; the day is ours.
Come, brother, let us to the highest of the field,
To see what friends are living, who are dead.

[Exeunt Prince Henry and Prince John.

Fal. I'll follow, as they say, for reward. He that rewards me, God reward him; if I do grow great; I'll grow less; for I'll purge, and leave sack, and live cleanly, as a nobleman should do.

[Exit, dragging out Percy's Body.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

The Trumpets sound. Enter King Henry, Prince
Henry, Prince John, Westmoreland, and Others with Worcester, and Vernon, prisoners.

K. Hen. Thus ever did rebellion find rebuke.—
Ill-spirited Worcester, did we not send grace,
Pardon, and terms of love to all of you?
And wouldst thou turn our offers contrary?
Misuse the tenour of thy kinsman's trust?
Three knights upon our party slain to-day,
A noble earl, and many a creature else,
Had been alive this hour,
If, like a Christian, thou hadst truly borne
Betwixt our armies true intelligence.

Wor. What I have done, my safety urg'd me to,
And I embrace this fortune patiently,
Which not to be avoided falls on me?

K. Hen. Bear Worcester to the death, and Vernon too;
Other offenders we will pause upon.—

[Exeunt Worcester and Vernon, guarded
How goes the field?

P. Hen. The noble Scot, lord Douglas, when he saw
The fortune of the day quite turn'd from him,
The noble Percy slain, and all his men
Upon the foot of fear, fled with the rest;
And falling from a hill he was so bruis'd,
That the pursuers took him. At my tent
The Douglas is, and I beseech your grace,
I may dispose of him.
With all my heart.

Then, brother John of Lancaster, to you

This honourable bounty shall belong.

Go to the Douglas, and deliver him
Up to his pleasure, ransomless, and free:
His valour, shown upon our crests to-day,
Hath taught us how to cherish such high deeds,
Even in the bosom of our adversaries.

I thank your grace for this high courtesy,
Which I shall put in act without delay.¹

Then this remains,—that we divide our

You, son John, and my cousin Westmoreland,
Towards York shall beed you, with your dearest

To meet Northumberland, and the prelate Scroop,
Who, as we hear, are busily in arms:
Myself, and you, son Harry, will towards Wales,
To fight with Glendower and the earl of March.
Rebellion in this land shall lose his sway,
Meeting the check of such another day:
And since this business so fair is done,
Let us not leave till all our own be won. ¹

¹ Which I shall give away in. exactly: in f. e. This speech is found in the four earliest, but not in the two latest quartos. [The folio]

SCENE, England.

INDUCTION.

Warkworth. Before Northumberland’s Castle.

Enter RUMOUR, painted full of Tongues.¹

Rum. Open your ears; for which of you will stop
The vent of hearing, when loud rumour speaks?
I, from the orient to the drooping west,
Making the wind my post-horse, still unfold
The acts commenced on this ball of earth:
Upon my tongues continual slanders ride,
The which in every language I pronounce,
Stuffing the ears of men with false reports.
I speak of peace, while covert enmity,
Under the smile of safety, wounds the world:
And who but Rumour, who but only I,
Make fearful masts, and prepar'd defence;
Whilst the big year, swoln with some other grief,
Is thought with child by the stern tyrant war,
And no such matter? Rumour is a pipe
Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures;
And of so easy and so plain a stop,
That the blunt monster with uncounted heads,
The still-discordant wavering multitude,
Can play upon it. But what need I thus
My well-known body to anatomiize
Among my household? Why is Rumour here?
I run before king Harry's victory;
Who in a bloody field by Shrewsbury
Hath beaten down young Hotspur, and his troops,
Quenching the flame of bold rebellion
Even with the rebels' blood. But what mean I
To speak so true at first? my office is
To noise abroad, that Harry Monmouth fell
Under the wrath of noble Hotspur's sword;
And that the king before the Douglas' rage
Stoop'd his anointed head as low as death.
This have I rumour'd through the pleasant² towns
Between that royal field of Shrewsbury
And this worm-eaten hold of ragged stone,
Where Hotspur's father, old Northumberland,
Lies crafty-sick: the posts come tiring on,
And not a man of them brings other news
Than they have learn'd of me; from Rumour's tongues
They bring smooth comforts false, worse than true wrongs.  [Exit.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—The Same.

Enter Lord BARDOLPH. The earl?

Bard. Who keeps the gate here? ho! Where is

Enter Warder, above.²

Ward. What shall I say you are?

Bard. Tell thou the earl,

That the lord Bardolph doth attend him here.

Ward. His lordship is walk'd forth into the orchard:

¹ This direction is only in the 1820-1821 editions. Rumour, or Fame, was often so represented.
² peasant: in f. e. ³ Porter before the Gate

377
Enter Northumberland.

Bard. Here comes the earl.

North. What news, lord Bardolph? every minute now
Should be the father of some stratagem.
The times are wild: contention, like a horse
Full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose,
And bears down all before him.

Bard. Noble earl, bring you certain news from Shrewsbury.

North. Good, God will! As good as heart can wish.
The king is almost wounded to the death,
And in the fortune of my lord, your son,
Prince Harry slain outright; and both the Blunts
Killed by the hand of Douglas; young prince John,
And Westmoreland and Stafford, fled the field;
And Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk sir John,
Is prisoner to your son. O! such a day,
So fought, so follow'd: and so fairly won,
Came not till now to dignify the times,
Since Cæsar's fortunes.

North. How is this deriv'd?
Saw you the field? came you from Shrewsbury?

Bard. I spake with one, my lord, that came from thence:
A gentleman well-bred, and of good name,
That freely render'd me these news for true.

North. Here comes my servant, Travers, whom I sent
On Tuesday last to listen after news.

Bard. My lord. I over-rode him on the way,
And he is furnish'd with no certainties,
More than he happy may retain from me.

Enter Travers.

North. Now, Travers, what good tidings come with you?

Trav. My lord, sir John Umfreville turn'd me back
With joyful tidings; and, being better hors'd,
Out-rode me. After him came spurring hard
A gentleman, almost forspent with speed,
That stopp'd by me to breathe his bloodied horse.
He ask'd the way to Chester; and of him
I did demand, what news from Shrewsbury:
He told me that rebellion had bad luck,
And that young Harry Percy's spur was cold.
With that he gave his able horse the head,
And, bending forward, struck his armed heels
Against the pining sides of his poor jade
Up to the rowel-head; and, starting so,
He seem'd in running to devour the way,
Staying no longer question.

North. Ha!—Again.
Said he, young Harry Percy's spur was cold?
Of Hotspur, cold spur? that rebellion
Had me: ill-luck!

Bard. My lord, I'll tell you what:
If my young lord your son have not the day,
Upon mine honour, for a silken point,
I'll give my barony; never talk of it.

North. Why should that gentleman, that rode by Travers,
Give, then, such instances of loss?

Bard. Who, he? He was some hilding fellow, that had stolen
The horse he rode on, and, upon my life,
Spoke at a venture. Look, here comes more news.

Enter Morton.

North. Yea, this man's brow, like to a tinfoil leaf,
Foretells the nature of the tragic volume:
So looks the storm, whereon thy impetuous flood
Hath left a witness'd usurpation.
Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury?

Mort. I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble lord;
Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask,
To fright our party.

North. How doth my son and brother?
Thou tremblest; and the whiteness in thy cheek
Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand.
Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless,
So dull, so dead in look, so wee-begone,
Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night,
And would have told him, half his Troy was burn'd:
But Priam found the fire, ere he his tongue,
And I my Percy's death, ere thou report'st it.
This thou wouldst say,—Your son did thus, and that;
Your brother, thus; so fought the noble Douglas;
Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds,
But in the end, to stop mine ear indeed,
Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise,
Ending with—brother, son, and all are dead.

Mort. Douglas is living, and your brother, yet;
But for my lord, your son,

North. Why, he is dead. See, what a ready tongue suspicious hath!
He that but fears the thing he would not know,
Hath by instinct knowledge from others' eyes;
That what he fear'd is chang'd. Yet speak, Morton,
Tell thou thy earl his divination lies,
And I will take it as a sweet disgrace,
And make thee rich for doing me such wrong.

Mort. You are too great to be by me gainsaid.
Your spirit is too true; your fears too certain.

North. Yet, for all this, say not that Percy's dead—I
See a strange confession in thine eye:
Thou shak'st thy head; and hold'st it fear, or sin,
To speak the truth. If he be slain, say so;
The tongue offends not, that reports his death;
And he doth sin that doth belie the dead,
Not he which says the dead is not alive.
Yet the first finder of unwelcome news
Hath a losing office; and his tongue
Sounds ever after as a sullen bell,
Remember'd knolling a departing friend.

Bard. I cannot think, my lord, your son is dead.

Mort. I am sorry I should force you to believe
That which I would to heaven I had not seen;
But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state,
Rendering faint quittance, wearied and outbreath'd,
To Harry Monmouth: whose swift wrath beat down
The never-daunted Percy to the earth,
From whence with life he never more sprang up.
In few, his death, whose spirit lent a fire
even to the dullest peasant in his camp,
Being bruised once, took fire and heat away
From the best temper'd courage in his troops:
For from his metal was his party steel'd;
Which once in him abated, all the rest
Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy lead.
And as the thing that's heavy in itself,
Upon enforcement flies with greatest speed,
So did our men: heavy in Hotspur's loss,
Lend to this weight such lightness with their feet
That arrows fled not swifter toward their aim,
Than did our soldiers, aiming at their safety.
Scene II.

KING HENRY IV.

Fly from the field. Then was that noble Worcester too soon taken prisoner; and that furious Soot, the bloody Douglas, whose well-labouring sword had three times slain th' appearance of the king, gan vail his stomach, and did grace the shame of those that turn'd their backs; and in his flight stumbling in fear, was took. The sum of all is, that the king hath won, and hath sent out a speedy power, to encounter you, my lord, under the conduct of young Lancaster, and Westmoreland. This is the news at full.

North. For this I shall have time enough to morn in poison there is physic; and these news, having been well, that would have made me sick, being sick, have in some measure made me well: and as the wretch, whose fever-weaken'd joints, like strengthless hinges, buckle'd under life, impatient of his fit, breaks like a fire out of his keeper's arms; even so my limbs, weaken'd with grief, being now enrag'd with grief, are thrice themselves. Hence, therefore, thou niec'd so cruelly, a sealed letter now, with joints of steel, must glove this hand: and hence, thou sickly quaff! then art a guard too wanton for the head, which princes, flesh'd with conquest, aim to hit. Now bind my brow with iron; and approach the rugged'st hour that time and spite dare bring, to frown upon th' enrag'd Northumberland. Let heaven kiss earth: now, let not nature's hand keep the wild flood confin'd: let order die; and let this world no longer be a stage, to feed contention in a lingering act, but let one spirit of the first-born Cain reign in all bosoms, that, each heart being set in bloody courses, the rude scene may end, and darkness be the buer of the dead!

Tra. This strained passion doth you wrong. My lord.

Bard. Sweet Earl, divorce not wisdom from your honour.

Mor. The lives of all your loving companions, lean out your health; the which, if you give o'er to stormy passion, must perfecly decay. You cast the event of war, my noble lord, and summed the account of chance, before you said,—Let us make head. It was your prudence, that in the dose of blows your son might drop: you knew, he walk'd o'er perils, on an edge, more likely to fall in, than to get o'er: you were advis'd, his flesh was capable of wounds and scars, and that his forward spirit would lift him where most trade of danger rang'd; yet did you say,—Go forth; and none of this, though strongly apprehended, could restrain the stiff-borne action: what hath then befallen, or what hath this bold enterprise brought forth, more than that being which was like to be?

Bard. We all, that are engaged to this loss, knew that we ventur'd on such dangerous seas; that, if we wrought out life, 'twas ten to one; and yet we ventur'd, for the gain proposed Chok'd the respect of likely peril fear'd; and, since we are o'erseas, ventur'd again.

Come, we will all put forth; body, and goods.

Mor. 'Tis more than time: and, my most noble lord, I hear for certain, and dare speak the truth.

The gentle archbishop of York is up,' with well-appointed powers: he is a man, who with a double surety binds his followers. My lord your son had only but the corps, but shadows and the shows of men, to fight; for that same word, rebellion, did divide the action of their bodics from their souls, and they did fight with queasiness, constrain'd as men drink potions, that their weapons only seem'd on our side: but, for their spirits and souls, this word, rebellion, it had froze them up, as fish are in a pond. But now, th' archbishop turns insurrection to religion: suppose's sincere and holy in his thoughts, he's follow'd both with body and with mind, and doth enlarge his rising with the blood of fair king Richard, scrap'd from Pompfret stones; derives from heaven his quarrel, and his cause; tells them, he doth besride a bleeding land, gasping for life under great Bolingbroke, and more, and more, do flock to follow him.

North. I knew of this before; but, to speak truth, This present grief had wip'd it from my mind. Go in with me; and counsel every man the aptest way for safety, and revenge. Get posts and letters, and make friends with speed: Never so few, and never yet more need.

Scene II.—London. A Street.

Enter Sir John Falstaff, with his page bearing his sword and buckler.

Fal. Sirrah, you giant, what says the doctor to my water?
Page. He said, sir, the water itself was a good healthy water; but for the party that owed it, he might have more diseases than he knew for.

Fal. Men of all sorts take a pride to gird at me: the brain of this foolish-compounded clay, man, is not able to invent any thing that tends to laughter, more than I invent, or is invented on me: I am not only witty in myself, but the cause that wit is in other men. I do here walk before thee, like a sow that hath welsh'd all her litter but one: if the prince put thee into my service for any other reason than to set me off, why then, I have no judgment. Thou whorsome mandrake, thou art fit to be worn in my cap, than to wait at my heels. I was never named with an agate till now: but I will in-set thee neither in gold nor silver, but in vile apparel, and send you back again to your master, for a jewel; the juvenal, the prince your master, whose chin is not yet fledged. I will sooner have a beard grown in the palm of my hand, than he shall get one on his cheek; and yet he will not stick to say, his face is a face-royal. God may finish it when he will, it is not a hair amiss yet: he may keep it still as a face-royal, for a barber shall never earn six-pence out of it; and yet, he will be crowing, as if he had writ man ever since his father was a bachelor. He may keep his own grace, but he is almost out of mine, I can assure you. What said Master Dumbleton about the saltn for my short cloak, and my slippers?

Page. He said, sir, you should procure him better assurance than Bardolph, he would not take his bond and yours: he liked not the security.

Fal. Let him be damned like the glutton: may his tongue be hotter. — A whorsome Achitophel: a rascally yea-forsooth knave, to bear a gentleman in hand, and then stand upon security!—The whorsome smooth-pates do now wear nothing but high shoes, and bunches of keys at their girdles; and if a man is thorough with them in honest taking up, then must they stand upon secrecy. I had as lief they would put ratebane in my mouth, and offer to stop it with security. I looked he should have sent me two and twenty yards of satin, as I am a true knight, and he sends me security. Well, he may sleep in security; for he hath the horn of abundance, and the lightness of his horse shines through it; and yet cannot he see, though he have his own lantern to light him. — Where's Bardolph?

Page. He's gone into Smithfield to buy your worship a horse.

Fal. I bought him in Paul's, and he'll buy me a horse in Smithfield: an I could get me but a wife in the stews, I was married, hanged, and wedded.

_Enter the Lord Chief Justice, and an Attendant._

Page. Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the prince for striking him about Bardolph.

Fal. Wait close; I will not see him.

Ch. Just. What's he that goes there?

Atten. Falstaff, an't please your lordship.

Ch. Just. He that was in question for the robbery?

Atten. He, my lord; but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury, and, as I hear, is now going with some charge to the lord John of Lancaster.

Atten. Sir John Falstaff!

Fal. Boy, tell him I am deaf.

Ch. Just. I am sure he is, to the hearing of anything good. — Go, pull him by the elbow; I must speak with him.

Atten. Sir John,

Fal. What! a young knave, and begging? Is there not ware? is there not employment? Dost not the king lack subjects? do not the rebels need soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it.

Atten. You mistake me, sir.

Fal. Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? setting my knighthood and my soldiership aside, I had lied in my throat if I had said so.

Atten. I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldiership aside, and give me leave to tell you, you lie in your throat, if you say I am any other than an honest man.

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so? I lay aside that which grows to me? if thou get'st any leave of me, hang me: if thou take'st leave, thou wert better be hanged. You hunt-counter, hence! seavant!

Atten. Sir, my lord would speak with you.

Fal. Sir John Falstaff, a word with you.

Fal. My good lord! — God give your lordship good time of day. I am glad to see your lordship abroad: I heard say, your lordship was sick: I hope, your lordship goes abroad by advice. Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltiness of time, and I most humbly beseech your lordship to have a reverend care of your health.

Ch. Just. Sir John, I sent for you before your expedition to Shrewsbury.

Fal. An't please your lordship, I hear his majesty is returned with some discomfort from Wales.

Ch. Just. I talk not of his majesty. — You would not come when I sent for you.

Fal. And I hear, moreover, his highness is fallen into this same whoreson apoplexy.

Ch. Just. Well, heaven mend him. — I pray you, let me speak with you.

Fal. This apoplexy is, as I take it, a kind of lethargy, an't please your lordship; a kind of sleeping in the blood, a whoreson tingling.

Ch. Just. What tell you me of it? be it as it is.

Fal. It hath its original from much grief; from study, and perturbation of the brain. I have read the cause of his effects in Galen: it is a kind of deafness.

Ch. Just. I think you are fallen into the disease, for you hear not what I say to you.

Fal? Very well, my lord, very well: rather, an't please you, it is the disease of not listening, the malady of not marking, that I am troubled with.

Ch. Just. To punish you by the heels would amend the attention of your ears; and I care not, if I do become your physician.

Fal. I am as poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient: your lordship may minister the potion of imprisonment to me, in respect of poverty; but how should I be your patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or, indeed, a scruple itself.

Ch. Just. I sent for you, when there were matters against you for your life, to come speak with me.

Fal. As I was then advised by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come.

Ch. Just. Well, the truth is, sir John, you live in great infamy.

Fal. He that buckles him in my belt cannot live in less.

Ch. Just. Your means are very slender, and your waste is great.

Fal. I would it were otherwise: I would my means were greater, and my waist slimmerer.

Ch. Just. You have misused the youthful prince.

Fal. The young prince hath misled me: I am the fellow with the great belly, and he my dog.

Ch. Just. Well, I am loth to call a new-healed wound. Your day's service at Shrewsbury hath a little gilded over your night's exploit on Gadshill: you may thank the unquiet time for your quiet o'er-posting that action.

Fal. My lord—

Ch. Just. But since all is well, keep it so: wake not a sleeping wolf.

Fal. To wake a wolf, is as bad as to smell a fox.

Ch. Just. What, you are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

Fal. A wassail candle, my lord; all toaward: if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Ch. Just. There is not a white hair on your face, but should have his effect of gravity.

Fal. His effect of gravy, gravy, gravy.

Ch. Just. You follow the young prince up and down, like his ill angel.

Fal. Not so, my lord; your ill angel is light, but, I hope, he that looks upon me will take me without

1 _Engage_ upon credit. 2 "He that marries a wife out of a suspected inn or ale-house, buys a horse in Smithfield, and hires a servant in Paul's, as the divert (proverb) is, shall likely have a jude to his horse, a knave for his man, an arrant, honest woman for his wife."

_Burton's Anatomy_—quoted by Knight. The middle aisle of St Paul's Cathedral seems to have been a sort of general exchange. 3 Folio. 4 _Fal._ want. 5 Following on a wrong scent. 6 "Is't please your lordship: a kind of": as omitted in the folio. 7 The quarto. 8 _Old_ —for Othæl—the name which Falstaff seems to have been at first called. 9 Folio: be. 10 _Wassail._ 11 Folio: evil. 12 The coin so named.
weighing: and yet, in some respects. I grant, I cannot go. I cannot tell; virtue is of so little regard in these coster-monger days, that true valour is turned bear-herd. Pregnancy is made a tapster, and hath his quick wit wasted in giving reckonings: all the other gifts appertaining to man, as the mace of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry. You, that are old, consider not the capacities of us that are young: you measure the heat of our lives with the bitterness of your gall; and that we are in the vaward of our youth, I must confess, are wags too.

Ch. Just. Do you set down your name in the scroll of youth, that are written down old with all the characters of age? Have you not a moist eye, or a dry hand, a yellow cheek, a white beard, a decreasing lend, and increasing belly? Is not your voice broken, your wind short, your chin double, your wit single, and every part about you blasted with antiquity, and will you yet call yourself young? Fie, fie, fie, sir John!

Fal. My lord, I was born, about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head, and something a round belly. For my voice,—I have lost it with a lolling, and singing of anthems. To approve my youth further, I will not: the truth is, I am only old in judgment and understanding; and he that will eaper with me for a thousand marks, let him lend me the money, and have at him. For the box of the ear that the prince gave you, he gave it like a rude prince, and you took it like a sensible lord. I have checked him for it, and the young lion repent; marry, not in ashes, and sacket, but in new silk, and old sack.

Ch. Just. Well, God send the prince a better companion!

Fal. God send the companion a better prince! I cannot rid my hands of him.

Ch. Just. Well, the king hath severed you and prince Harry.* I hear you are going with lord John of Lan caster against the archbishop, and the earl of North umberland.

Fal. Yes; I thank your pretty sweet wit for it. But look you pray, all you that kiss my lady peace at home, that our armies join not in a hot day; for, by the Lord, I take but two shirts out with me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinarily: if it be a hot day, and I brandish any thing but my bottle, I would I might never spit white again. There is not a dangerous action can peep out his head, but I am thrust upon it: well, I cannot last for ever. But it was always yet the trick of our English nation, if they have a good thing, to make it too common. If you will needs say I am an old man, you should give me rest. I would to God, my name were not so terrible to the enemy as it is: I were better to be eaten to death with rust, than to be secured to nothing with perpetual motion.

Ch. Just. Well, be honest, be honest; and God bless your expedition.

Fal. Will your lordship lend me a thousand pound to furnish me forth?

Ch. Just. Not a penny, not a penny: you are too impatient to bear crosses*. Fare you well: commend me to my cousin Westmoreland.

[Exit Chief Justice and Attendant.

Fal. If I do, fillip me with a three-man beetle. A man can no more separate age and cœvoucousness, than he can part young limbs and lechery; but the govt galls the one, and the pox pinches the other, and so both the diseases prevent my curses. Boy!

Page. Sir?

Fal. What money is in my purse?

Page. Seven groats and two-pence.

Fal. I can get no remedy against this consumption of the purse: borrowing only fingers and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable. Go, bear this letter to my lord of Lancaster; this to the prince; this to the earl of Westmoreland; and this to old mistress Ursula, whom I have weekly sworn to marry since I perceived the first white hair of* my chin. About it: you know where to find me. [Exit Page.] A pox of this gossip! for a pox! for the one, or the other, plays the rogue with my great toe. 'Tis no matter, if I do halt: I have the wars for my colour, and my pension shall seem the more reasonable. A good wit will make use of any thing; it will turn diseases to commodity. [Exit.

Enter the Archbishop of York, the Lords Hastings, Mowbray, Earl Marshal, and Bardolph.

Arch. Thus have you heard our cause, and know our means; And, my most noble friends, I pray you all, Speak plainly your opinions of our hopes.— And first, lord marshal, what say you to it?

Mooch. I well allow the occasion of our arms; But gladly would be better satisfied, How, in our means, we should advance ourselves To look with forehead bold and big enough Upon the power and puissance of the king. Hast. Our present mustere grow upon the file To five and twenty thousand men of choice: And our supplies live largely in the hope O' great Northumberland, whose bosom burns With an incensed fire of injuries.

Bard. The question then, lord Hastings, standeth thus:— Whether our present five and twenty thousand May hold up head without Northumberland. Hast. With him, we may.

Bard. Ay, marry, there's the point: But if without him we be thought too feeble, My judgment is, we should not step too far. Till we had his assistance by the hand; For in a theme so bloody-faced as this, Conjecture, expectation, and surprise Of aids incertain should not be admitted.

Arch. 'Tis very true, lord Bardolph; for, indeed, It was young Hotspur's case at Shrewsbury. Bard. It was, my lord: who liv'd himself with hope Eating the air on promise of supply, Fluttering himself with promise of a power Much smaller than the smallest of his thoughts; And so, with great imagination, Proper to madmen, led his powers to death, And winking leap'd into destruction.

Hast. But, by your leave, it never yet did hurt, To lay down likelihoods, and forms of hope.

Bard. Yes, in* this present quality of war,* Indeed the instant act, and cause* on foot, Lives so in hope, as in an early spring We see th' appearing buds: which, to prove fruit,
Hope gives not so much warrant, as despair
That frosts will bite them. When we mean to build,
We first survey the plot, then draw the model,
And, when we see the figure of the house,
Then must we rate the cost of the erection;
Which if we find outweighs ability,
What do we then, but draw anew the model
In fewer offices, or, at last, desist
To build at all? Much more, in this great work,
(Which is, almost, to pluck a kingdom down,
And set another up) should we survey
The plot, the situation, and the model;
Consult upon a sure foundation;
Question surveyors, know our own estate,
How able such a work to undergo.
A careful leader sums what force he brings
To weigh against his opposite: or else,
We fortify on paper, and in figures,
Using the names of men, instead of men:
Like one that draws the model of a house
Beyond his power to build it; who, half through,
Gives o'er, and leaves his part-created cost
A naked subject to the weeping clouds,
And waste for churlish winter's tyranny.

Hast. Grant, that our hopes, yet likely of fair birth,
Should be still-born, and that we now possess
The utmost man of expectation,
I think we are a body strong enough.
Even as we are, to equal with the king.

Bard. What! is the king but five and twenty thousand?

Hast. To us, no more; nay, not so much, lord
Bardolph;
For his divisions, as the times do bawl,
Are in three heads: one power against the French,
And one against Glendower; perforce, a third
Must take us up. So is the uniform king
In three divided, and his coffers sound
With hollow poverty and emptiness.

Arch. That he should draw his several strengths
Together,
And come against us in full puissance,
Need not be dreaded.

Hast. If he should do so.
He leaves his back unarmed, the French and Welsh
Baying him at the heels: never fear that.

Bard. Who, is it like, should lead his forces hither?

Hast. The duke of Lancaster, and Westmoreland
Against the Welsh, himself and Harry Monmouth
But who is substituted against the French,
I have no certain notice.

Arch. Let us on
And publish the occasion of our arms.
The commonwealth is sick of their own choice;
Their over-greedy love hath surfeited;
An habitation giddy and unsure
Hath he, that buildeth on the vulgar heart.

O, thou fond many! with what loud applause
Didst thou beat heaven with blessing Bolingbroke,
Before he was what thou wouldst have him be;
And being now trium'd in thine own desires,
Thou, beastly feeder, art so full of him,
That thou provok'st thyself to cast him up.

So, so, thou common dog, didst thou disgorge
Thy glutton bosom of the royal Richard,
And now wouldst eat thy dead vomit up,
And howl'st to find it.

What trust is in these times?
Thy that, when Richard liv'd, would have him die,
Are now become enamour'd on his grave;
Thou, that threw'st dust upon his goodly head,
When through proud London he came sighing on
After th' admired heels of Bolingbroke,
Cry'st now, "O earth, yield us that king again,
And take thou this!" O, thoughts of men accurst!
Past, and to come, seem best; things present, worst.

Maitb. Shall we go draw our numbers, and set on?

Hast. We are time's subjects, and time bids be gone

[Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

Enter Hostess; Fang, and his Boy, with her; and Snare following.

Host. Master Fang, have you entered the action?

Fang. It is entered.

Host. Where's your yeoman? Is't a lusty yeoman?

Fang. Sirrah, where's Snare?

Host. O lord! ay: good master Snare.

Snare. Here, here.

Fang. Snare, we must arrest sir John Falstaff.

Host. Yes, good master Snare; I have entered him
And all.

Snare. It may chance cost some of us our lives, for he will stab.

Hos. Alas the day! take heed of him: he stabbed
Me in mine own house, and that most beastly. In Good faith, he cares not what mischief he doth, if his Weapon be out: he will foin like any devil; he will Spare neither man, woman, nor child.

Fang. If I can close with him, I care not for his Thrust.

Host. No, nor I neither: I'll be at your elbow.

Fang. An I but fist him once; an he come but Within my vice.

Host. I am undone by his going; I warrant you, he's An infinitive thing upon my score.—Good master Fang,
Hold him sure:—good master Snare, let him not 'scape.
He comes continually to Pie-corner, (saving your manhoods) to buy a saddle; and he's invited to dinner
To the lubber's head in Lambert-street, to master Smooth's
The silksman: I pray ye, since my exion is entered,
And my case so openly known to the world, let him be Brought in to his answer. A hundred mark is a long
Score for a poor lene woman to bear; and I have borne
And borne, and have been flogged off, and Flogged off, and fuddled off, from this day to that day,
That it is a shame to be thought on. There is no
Honesty in such dealing, unless a woman should be made
An ass, and a beast, to bear every knave's wrong.

Enter Sir John Falstaff, Page, and Bardolph.

Yonder he comes; and that arrant malmsey-nose knave,
Bardolph, with him. Do your offices, do your offices,
Master Fang and master Snare: do me, do me, do me
Your offices.

Host. Let us on
And publish the occasion of our arms.
The commonwealth is sick of their own choice;
Their over-greedy love hath surfeited;
An habitation giddy and unsure
Hath he, that buildeth on the vulgar heart.

O, thou fond many! with what loud applause
Didst thou beat heaven with blessing Bolingbroke,
Before he was what thou wouldst have him be;
And being now trium'd in thine own desires,
Thou, beastly feeder, art so full of him,
That thou provok'st thyself to cast him up.

So, so, thou common dog, didst thou disgorge
Thy glutton bosom of the royal Richard,
And now wouldst eat thy dead vomit up,
And howl'st to find it.

What trust is in these times?
Thy that, when Richard liv'd, would have him die,
Are now become enamour'd on his grave;
Thou, that threw'st dust upon his goodly head,
When through proud London he came sighing on
After th' admired heels of Bolingbroke,
Cry'st now, "O earth, yield us that king again,
And take thou this!" O, thoughts of men accurst!
Past, and to come, seem best; things present, worst.

Maitb. Shall we go draw our numbers, and set on?

Hast. We are time's subjects, and time bids be gone

[Exeunt.]
Fal. How now! whose mare's dead; what's the matter?
Fang. Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of mistress Quickly.

Fal. Away, varlets!—Draw, Bardolph: cut me off the villain's head; throw the queen in the channel.

Fal. Keep them off; Bardolph.

Fang. A rescue! a rescue!

Host. Good people, bring a rescue or two.—Thou wilt not? thou wilt not? do, do, thou rage! do, thou hemp-seed!

Fal. Away, ye scullion! ye rampallian! ye fustilarian! I'll tickle your catastrophe.

Enter the Lord Chief Justice, attended.

Ch. Just. What is the matter? keep the peace here, ho!

Host. Good my lord, be good to me! I beseech you, stand to me!

Ch. Just. How now, sir John! what, are you brawling here?

Doth this become your place, your time, and business? You should have been well on your way to York.—Stand from him, fellow: wherefore hang'st thou on him?

Host. O! my most worshipful lord, an' pleases your grace, I am a poor widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit.

Ch. Just. For what sum?

Host. It is more than for some, my lord; it is for all, all I have. He hath eaten me out of house and home: he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his; but I will have some of it out again, or I will ride thee o' nights, like the mare.

Fal. I think, I am as like to ride the mare, if I have any vantage of ground to get up.

Ch. Just. How comes this, sir John?—Fie! what man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamations?—Are you not ashamed to enforce a poor widow to so rough a course to come by her own?

Fal. What is the gross sum that I owe thee?

Host. Marr'y, if thou wert an honest man, thyself, and the money too. Thou didst swear to me upon a parcel-gilt goblet, sitting in my Dolphin-chamber, at the round table, by a sea-coal fire, upon Wednesday in Whit Sunday, when the prince broke thy head for likening his father to a singing-man of Windsor; thou didst swear to me then, as I was washing thy wound, to marry me, and make me thy lady wife. Canst thou deny it? Did not goodwife Kechell, the butcher's wife, come in then, and call me gossip Quickly? coming in to borrow a mess of vinegar: telling us, she had a good dish of prawns, whereby thou didst desire to eat some, whereby I told thee, they were ill for a green wound? And didst thou not, when she was gone down stairs, desire me to be no more so familiarly with such poor people; saying, that ere long they should call me madam? And didst thou not kiss me, and bid me fetch thee thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy book-oath: deny it, if thou canst.

Fal! My lord this is a poor mad soul; and she says, up and down the town, that her eldest son is like you. She hath been in good case, and the truth is, poverty hath distracted her. But for these foolish officers, I beseech you, I may have redress against them.

Ch. Just. Sir John, sir John, I am well acquainted with your manner of wrenching the true cause the false way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words that come with such more than impudent sauciness from you, can thrust me from a level consideration; you have, as it appears to me, practised upon the easy-yielding spirit of this woman, and made her serve your uses both in purse and person.

Host. Yes, in troth, my lord.

Ch. Just. Pr'ythee, peace.—Pay her the debt you owe her, and unpay the villainy you have done with her: the one you may do with sterling money, and the other with current repentance.

Fal. My lord, I will not undergo this snare without reply. You call honourable boldness, impudent sauciness: if a man will make courtly, and say nothing, he is virtuous. No, my lord, my humble duty remember'd, I will not be your suitor: I say to you, I do desire deliverance from these officers, being upon hasty employment in the king's affairs.

Ch. Just. You speak as having power to do wrong; but answer in the effect of your reputation, and satisfy the poor woman.

Ch. Just. Now, master Gower! what news?

Gow. The king, my lord, and Henry prince of Wales are near at hand: the rest this paper tells. [C. J. reads.

Fal. As I am a gentleman.

Host. Faith, you said so before.

Ch. Just. As I am a gentleman. Come, no more words of it.

Host. By this heavenly ground I tread on, I must be fain to pawn both my plate, and the tapestry of my dining-chambers.

Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the only drinking: and for thy walls,—a pretty slight drollery, or the story of the prodigal, or the German hunting in water-work, is worth a thousand of these bed hangings, and these fly bitten tapestries. Let it be ten pound, if thou canst. Come, an it were not for thy humours, there is not a better wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw thy action. Come, thou must not be in this humour with me; dost not know me? Come, come, I know thou wast set on to this.

Host. Pray thee, sir John, let it be but twenty nobles: I faith I am loath to pawn my plate, in good earnest, la.

Fal. Let it alone; I'll make other shift: you'll be a fool still.

Host. Well, you shall have it, though I pawn my gown. I hope, you'll come to supper. You'll pay me all together?

Fal. Will I live?—Go, with her, with her; hook on, hook on.

Host. Will you have Doll Tear-sheet meet you at supper?

Fal. No more words: let's have her.

Ch. Just. I have heard better news.

Fal. What's the news, my good lord?

Ch. Just. Where lay the king last night?

Gow. At Basingstoke, my lord.

Fal. I hope, my lord, all's well: what is the news, my lord?

Ch. Just. Come all his forces back?
ACT II.

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Street.

Enter Prince Henry and Poyntz.

P. Hen. Trust me, I am exceeding weary.

Poyntz. Is it come to that? I had thought, weariness durst not have attached one of so high blood.

P. Hen. 'Tis faith, it doth me, though it discourseth the incompleatness of my greatness to acknowledge it. Doth it not show vilenly in me to desire small beer?

Poyntz. Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied, as to remember so weak a composition.

P. Hen. Belike then, my appetite was not princely got; for, by my troth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer. But, indeed, these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me, to remember thy name? or to know thy face to-morrow? or to take note how many pair of silk stockings thou hast; viz., these, and those that were thy peach-coloured ones? or to bear the inventory of thy shirts; as, one for superstivity, and one other for use?—but that the tennis-court-keeper knows better than I, for it is a low ebb of linen with thee, when thou keepest not racket there; as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of thy low-countries have made a shift to eat up thy holland; and God knows, whether those that bawld out the ruins of thy linen, shall inherit his kingdom; but the midwives say, the children are not in the fault, whereupon the world increases, and kindreds are mightily strengthened.

Poyntz. How ill it follows, after you have laboured so hard, you should talk so idly! Tell me, how many good young princes would do so, their fathers being so sick as yours at this time is?

P. Hen. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poyntz?

Poyntz. Yes, faith, and let it be an excellent good thing.

P. Hen. It shall serve among wits of no higher breeding than thine.

Poyntz. Go to; I stand the push of thy one thing that you will tell.

P. Hen. Marry, I tell thee,—it is not meet that I should be so sad, now my father is sick: albeit I could tell to thee, (as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend) I could be sad, and sad indeed too.

Poyntz. Very hardly upon such a subject.

P. Hen. By this hand, thou think'st me as far in the devil's book, as thou and Falstaff, for obstinacy and persistency: let the end try the man. But I tell thee, my heart bleeds inwardly, that my father is so sick; and keeping such vile company as thou art, hath in reason taken from me all ostentation of sorrow.

Poyntz. The reason?

P. Hen. What wouldst thou think of me, if I should weep?

Poyntz. I would think thee a most princely hypocrite.

P. Hen. It would be every man's thought; and thou art a blessed fellow, to think as every man thinks: never a man's thought in the world keeps the road-way better than thine; every man would think me an hypocrite indeed. And what excites your most worshipful thought to think so?

Poyntz. Why, because you have been so lewd, and so much engrafted to Falstaff.

P. Hen. And to thee.

Poyntz. By this light, I am well spoken on; I can hear it with mine own ears: the worst that they can say of me is, that I am a second brother, and that I am a proper fellow of my hands, and those two things, I confess, I cannot help. By the mass, here comes Bardolph.

P. Hen. And the boy that I gave Falstaff: he had him from me Christian; and look, if the fat villain have not transformed him ape.

Enter Bardolph and Page.

Bardolph. God save your grace.

P. Hen. And yours, most noble Bardolph.

Bardolph. Come, you virtuous ass, [To the Page.] you bawdshalfe fool, must you be blushing? wherefore blush you now? What a maidenly man at arms are you become? Is it such a matter to get a pottelee's maidenhead?

Page. He called me even now, my lord, through a red lattice, and I could discern no part of his face from the window: at last, I spied his eyes; and, methought, he had made two holes in the ale-wife's new red petticoat, and peeped through.

P. Hen. Hath not the boy profited?

Page. Marry, my lord, Althea's dream was delivered of a fire-brand, and therefore I call him her dream.

P. Hen. A crown's worth of good interpretation.—There it is, boy. [Giving him money.]

Poyntz. O, that this good blossom could be kept from cankers!—Well, there is sixpence to preserve thee.

Bardolph. An you do not make him be hanged among you, the gallows shall have wrong.

P. Hen. And how dost thy master, Bardolph?

Bardolph. Well, my lord. He heard of your grace's coming to town: there's a letter for you.

Poyntz. Delivered with good respect. And how dost the martelins, your master?

Bardolph. In bodily health, sir.

Poyntz. Marry, the immortal part needs a physician; but that moves not him: though that be sick, it dies not. P. Hen. I do allow this wen to be as familiar with me as my dog; and he holds his place, for look you how he writes.

Poyntz. [Reads.] "John Falstaff, knight."—every man must know that, as oft as he has occasion to name herself; even like those that are kin to the king, for they never prick their finger, but they say, "There is some of the king's blood spilt." "How comes that?" says he, that takes upon him not to conceive: the answer is, as ready as a borrower's cap; "I am the king's poor cousin, sir."

P. Hen. Nay, they will be kin to us, or they will fetch it from Japheth. But to the letter— Poins. "Sir John Falstaff, knight, to the son of the king, nearest his father, Harry Prince of Wales, greeting."—Why, this is a certificate.

P. Hen. Peace!

Poins. "I will imitate the honourable Romans in revinity;"—he sure means brevity in short-winded,—"I commend thee, I commend thee, and I leave thee. Be not too familiar with Poins; for he misuses thy favours so much, that he swears, thou art to marry his sister Nell. Repent at idle times as thou may'st, and so farewell.

"Thine, by yea and no. (which is as much as to say, as thou usest him.) Jack Falstaff; with my kinsfamiliars John, with my brothers and sisters; and sir John with all Europe."

My lord, I will steep this letter in sack, and make him eat it.

P. Hen. That's but to make him eat twenty of his words. But do you use me thus, Ned? must I marry your sister?

Poins. God send the wench no worse fortune! but I never said so.

P. Hen. Well, thus we play the fools with the time, and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds, and mock us.—Is your master here in London?

Bard. Yes, my lord.

P. Hen. Where sups he? doth the old boar feed in the old frank?

Bard. At the old place, my lord, in Eastcheap.

P. Hen. What company?

Page. Ephesians, my lord; of the old church.

P. Hen. Sup any women with him?

Page. None, my lord, but old mistress Quickly, and mistress Doll Tear-sheet.

P. Hen. What pagan may that be?

Page. A proper gentlewoman, sir, and a kinswoman of my master's.

P. Hen. Even such kin as the parish heifers are to the town bull.—Shall we steal upon them, Ned, at supper?

Poins. I am your shadow, my lord; I'll follow you.

P. Hen. Sirrah, you boy,—and Bardolph;—no word to your master that I am yet come to town: there's for your silence. [Giving money,]

Bard. I have no tongue, sir.

Page. And for mine, sir, I will govern it.

P. Hen. Fare ye well; go. [Exeunt Bardolph and Page.]—This Doll Tear-sheet should be some road.

Poins. I warrant you, as common as the way between Saint Albans and London.

P. Hen. How might we see Falstaff bestow himself to-night in his true colours, and not ourselves be seen?

Poins. Put on two heathen jerkins, and aprons, and wait upon him at his table as drawers.

P. Hen. From a god to a bull? a heavy descent; it was Jove's case. From a prince to a prentice? a low transformation; that shall be mine: for in everything the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned. [Exeunt]
As with the tide swell'd up unto its height,
That makes a still-stand, running neither way:
Fain would I go to meet the archbishop,
But many thousand reasons hold me back.—
I will resolve for Scotland: there am I,
Till time and vantage crave my company. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Boar's Head
Tavern, in Eastcheap.
Enter Two Drawers.

1. Draw. What the devil hast thou brought there?
apple-Johns? thou know'st sir John cannot endure an

2. Draw. Mass, thou sayest true. The prince once set a dish of apple-Johns before him, and told him, there were five more sir Johns; and, putting off his hat, said, "I will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old, withered knights." It angered him to the heart, but he hath forgot that.

1. Draw. Why then, cover, and set them down: and see if thou canst find out Sneak's noise? mistress Tear-sheet would fain hear some music*. Dispatch.—the room where they supped is too hot; they'll come in straight.

2. Draw. Sirrah, here will be the prince, and master
Ponson anon; and they will put on two of our jerkins and aprons, and sir John must not know of it: Bar-dolph hath brought word.

1. Draw. By the mass, here will be old utis*: it will be an excellent stratagem.

2. Draw. I'll see, if I can find out Sneak. [Exit.

Enter Hostess and Doll Tear-sheet.

Host. If, faith, sweet heart, methinks now you are in an excellent good temperance: your pulisde beats as extraordinarily as heart would desire, and your colour,
I warrant you, is as red as any rose; but, i' faith, you have drunk too much canaries, and that's a marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood ere one can say, what's this? How do you now?

Doll. Better than I was. Hem.

Host. Why, that's well said; a good heart's worth gold. Lot! here comes sir John.

Enter Falstaff, singing:

Fal. "When Arthur first in court—Empty the jordain—" And was a worthy king.* [Exit Drawer.

How now, mistress Doll?

Host. Sick of a calm: yea, good sooth.

Fal. So is all her sex; an they be once in a calm, they are sick.

Doll. You muddied rascal, is that all the comfort you give me?

Fal. You make fat rascals, mistress Doll.

Doll. I make them? glutony and diseases make them; I make them not.

Fal. If the cook help to make the gluttony, you help to make the diseases, Doll: we catch of you, Doll, we catch of you; grant that, my pure* virtue, grant that.

Doll. Yea, joy*: our chains, and our jewels.

Fal. "Your brooches, pearls, and owches?*—for to serve bravely, is to come halting off, you know: to come off the breach with his pike bent bravely, and to surgery bravely; to venture upon the charged chambers bravely:—

Doll. Hang yourself, you muddier conger, hang yourself!!

Host. By my troth, this is the old fashion: you two never meet, but you fall to some discord. You are both, in good truth, as rheumatic as two dry toastes:
you cannot one bear with another's cantities. What the good year! one must bear, and that must be you you are the weaker vessel; as they say, the empier verse.

Dol. Can a weak empty vessel bear such a huge full hogshhead? there's a whole merchant's ventur of Bordeaux stuff in him: you have not seen a bulk better stuffed in the hold.—Come, I'll be friends with thee, Jack: thou art going to the wars; and whether I shall ever see thee again, or no, there is nobody cares.

Re-enter Drawer.

Drau. Sir, ancient* Pistol's below, and would speak with you.

Dol. Hang him, swaggering rascal! let him not come hither: it is the foul mouth'd rogue in England.

Host. If he swagger, let him not come here: no, by my faith; I must live amongst my neighbours; I'll no swaggereers. I am in good name and fame with the very best.—Shut the door—there comes no swagger-ners here: I have not lived all this while, to have swag-

ger now.—Shut the door, I pray you.

Fal. Dost thou hear, hostess?

Host. Pray you, pacify yourself, sir John: there comes no swaggereers here.

Fal. Dost thou hear? it is mine ancient.

Host. Tilly-valley, sir John, never tell me: you ancient swaggereer comes not in my doors. I was before master Tisick, the deputy, t'other day; and, as he said to me,—it was no longer ago than Wednesday last,—"Neighbour Quickly," says he;—master Dumb, our minister, was by then.—"Neighbour Quickly," says he, "receive those that are civill; for," said he,
"you are in an ill name?"—now, he said so, I can tell whereupon; "for," says he, "you are an honest woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what guests
you receive: receive," says he, "no swaggereers companions. —There comes none here:—you would bless you to hear what he said.—No, I'll no swaggereers.

Fal. He's no swaggereer, hostess; a tame cheater.
i' faith; you may stroke him as gently as a puppy greyhound: he will not swagger with a Barbary hen, if her feathers turn back* in any show of resistence.—Call him up, drawer.

Host. Cheater, call you him? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater;* but I do not love swaggereing: by my troth, I am the worse, when one says—swaggereer. Feel, masters, how I shake; look you.

I warrant you.

Dol. So you do, hostess.

Host. Do I? yea, in very truth do I, an't were an aspen leaf. I cannot abide swaggereers.

Enter Pistol, Bardolph, and Page.

Pist. God save you, sir John!

Fal. Welcome, ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol, I charge you with a cup of sack; do you discharge upon mine hostess.

Pist. I will discharge upon her, sir John, with two bullets.

Fal. She is pistol-proof, sir; you shall hardly offend her.

Host. Come, I'll drink no proofs, nor no bullets.
I'll drink no more than will do me good, for no man's pleasure, I.

Pist. Then to you, mistress Dorothy: I will charge you. I charge me? I scorn you, scurvy companion. What! you poor, base, rascally, cheating, lack-linen mate! Away, you moulard rogue, away! I am meet for your master.

Pist. I know you, mistress Dorothy. Away, you cut-purse rascal! you filthy bug, away! By this wine, I'll thrust my knife in your mouldy chaps, an you play the saucy cuttle with me. Away, you battle-ale rascal! you basket-hilt stage juggler, you!—Since when, I pray you, sir?—God's light! with two points on your shoulder! much!

Pist. I will murder your ruff for this.

Fal. No more, Pistol: I would not have you go off here. Discharge yourself of our company, Pistol.

Host. No, good captain Pistol; not here, sweet captain. Dol. Captain! thou abominable damned cheater, art thou not ashamed to be called captain? An captains would give a song, they would trancheon you out, for taking their names upon you before you have earned them. You a captain, you slave! for what? for tearing a poor where's ruff in a bawdy-house?—He a captain! Hang him, rogue! He lives upon mouldy stewed prunes, and dried cakes. A captain! these villains will make the word captain as odious as the word ocuppy, which was an excellent good word before it was ill sorted: therefore captains had need look to't.

Bard. Pray thee, go down, good ancient.

Fal. Hark thee lither, mistress Doll.

Pist. Not!—I tell thee what, corporal Bardolph; I could tear her.—I'll be revenged of her.

Page. Pray thee, go down.

Pist. I'll see her damned first:—to Pinto's damned lake, by this hand, to the infernal deep, with Erebus and tortures vile also. Hold hock and line, say I. Down? down, dogs! down!—Have we not Hiren here?

Host. Good captain Pecsel, be quiet; it is very late, I' faith. I beseech you now, aggravate your choler.

Pist. These be good humour, indeed! Shall pack—And hollow-pamper'd jades of Asia, [horses Which cannot go but thirty miles a day. A Compare with Cassars, and with Cannibals, And Trojan Greeks? nay, rather damn them with King Cerberus, and let the wrinkled roars. Shall we fall foul for toys?

Host. By my troth, captain, these are very bitter words.

Bard. Begone, good ancient; this will grow to a brawl anon.

Pist. Die men, like dogs; give crowns like pins. Have we not Hiren here?

Host. On my word, captain, there's none such here. What the good-year! do you think I would deny her? for God's sake, be quiet.

Pist. Then feed, and be fat, my fair Calipolis. Come, give's some sack.

Se fortuna me tormenta, il sperare me contenta.— Fear we broadsides? no, let the fiend give fire: Give me some sack; and, sweetheart, lie thou there.

[Laying down his sword.]

Come we to full points here, and are et ceteras nothing?

Fal. Pistol, I would be quiet.

Pist. Sweet knight, I kiss thy neif.—What: we have seen the seven stars.

Dol. For God's sake, thrust him down stairs: I cannot endure such a fistian rascal.

Pist. Thrust him down stairs! know we not Galloway nass?

Fal. Quoit him down, Bardolph, like a shove-grea shilling, nay, an he do nothing but speak nothing, he shall be nothing here.

Bard. Come, get you down stairs.

Pist. What! shall we have meaning? shall we imbrue?—[Snatching up his sword."

Then, death, rock me asleep, abridge my doleful days! Why then, let grievous, ghastly, gaping wounds Unwane the sisters three! Come. Atropos, I say!

Host. Here's goodly stuff to wound.

Fal. Give me my rapier, boy.

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, I pray thee, do not draw.

Fal. Get you down stairs. [Drawing. Host. Here's a goodly tumult! I'll forswear keeping house, afe. I'll be in these territts and frights: So, murder, I warrant now.—Alas, alas! put up your naked weapons; put up your naked weapons.

[Exeunt Bardolph and Pistol.

Fal. I pray thee, Jack, be quiet: the rascal is gone. Ah! you whoreson little villain, you.

Host. Are you not hurt i' the groin? methought he made a shrewd thrust at your belly.

Re-enter Bardolph.

Fal. Have you turned him out of doors?

Bard. Yes, sir: the rascal's drunk. You have hurt him, sir, in the shoulder.

Fal. A rascal, to brave me!

Dol. Ah, you sweet little rogue, you! Alas, poor ape, how thou sweat'st! Come, let me wipe thy face—come on, you whoreson chaps.—Ah, rogue! 'tis faith, I love thee. Thou art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and ten times better than the nine worthies. Ah, villain!

Fal. A rascally slave! I will toss the rogue in a blanket.

Dol. Do, if thou darest for thy heart: if thou dost, I'll canvass thee between a pair of sheets.

Enter Music.

Page. The music is come, sir.

Fal. Let them play.—[Play, sirs.—Sit on my knee, Doll. A rascal braggling slave! the rogue fled from me like quicksilver.

Dol. 'tis faith, and thou followedst him like a church. Thou whoreson little tidy Bartholomew boy-pig, when wilt thou leave fighting o' days, and foaming o' nights, and begin to patch up thine old body for heaven?

Enter behind, Prince Henry and Poins, disguised like Drawers.

Fal. Peace, good Doll! do not speak like a death's head: do not bid me remember mine end.

Dol. Sirrah, what humour is the prince of?

Fal. A good shallow young fellow; he would have made a good pantler, he would have chapp'd bread well.

Dol. They say, Poins has a good wit.

Fal. He a good wit? hang him, Robin! his wit is as thick as Tewksbury mustard: there is no more con- ceit in him, than is in a mallet.

Dol. Why does the prince love him so, then?

Fal. Because their legs are both of a bigness; and he plays at quorts well; and eats canger and fenmel; and drinks off candles' ends for flapp-dragons; and rides the wild mare with the boys; and jumps upon joint-stools; and swears with a good grace; and wears his boot very smooth like unto the sign of the leg; and breeds no bates with telling of discreet stories; and such other gambol faculties he has, that show a weak mind and an able body, for the which the prince admits him: for the prince himself is such another; the weight of a hair will turn the scales between their avoidance.

P. Hen. Would not this naye of a wheel have his ears cut off?

Poi. Let's beat him before his whore.

P. Hen. Look, whether the withered elder hath not his poll clawed like a parrot.

Poi. Is it not strange, that desire should so many years outlive performance?

Fal. Kiss me, Doll.

P. Hen. Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! what says the almanack to that?

Poi. And, look, whether the fiery Trigon, his man, be not clapping to his master's old tables, his note-book, his counsel-keeper.

Fal. Thou dost give me flattering busses.

Dol. Nay, truly; I kiss thee with a most constant heart.

Fal. I am old, I am old.

Dol. I love thee better than I love e'er a sevvy young boy of them all.

Fal. What stuff wilt have a kirtle of? I shall receive money on Thursday; thou shalt have a cap tomorrow. A merry song! come: it grows late; we'll to bed. Thou'll forget me, when I am gone.

Dol. By my troth, thou'lt set me a weeping, an thou say'st so: prove that ever I dress myself handsome till thy return.—Well, hearken the end.

Fal. Some sack, Francis!

Fal. Ha! a bastard son of the king's.—And art not thou Poi's, his brother?

P. Hen. Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead.

Fal. A better than thou: I am a gentleman; thou art a drawer.

P. Hen. Very true, sir, and I come to draw you out by the ears.

Host. O, the Lord preserve thy good grace! by my troth, welcome to London.—Now, the Lord bless that sweet face of thine! O Jesu! are you come from Wales?

Fal. Thou whorsen mad compound of majesty.—by this light flesh and corrupt blood, thou art welcome.

Poi. My lord, he will drive you out of your revenge, and turn all to a merriment, if you take not the heat.

P. Hen. You whorsen candle-mine, you, how vilely did you speak of me even now, before this honest, virtuous, civil gentlewoman.

Host. God's blessing of your good heart! and so she is by my troth.

Fal. Didst thou hear me?

P. Hen. Yes; and you knew me, as you did, when you ran away by Gah's-hill: you know, I was at your back, and spoke it on purpose to try my patience.

Fal. No, no, no; not so; I did not think thou wast within hearing.

P. Hen. I shall drive you, then, to confess the wilful abuse; and then I know how to handle you.

Fal. No abuse, Hal, on mine honour; no abuse.

P. Hen. Not to dispraise me, and call me pantler, and bread-chipper, and I know not what?

Fal. No abuse, Hal.

Poi. No abuse!

Fal. No abuse, Ned, 'tis the world; honest Ned, none I disprais'd him before the wicked, that the wicked might not fall in love with him—in which doing, I have done the part of a careful friend, and a true subject, and thy father is to give me thanks for it. No abuse, Hal;—none, Ned, none;—no, faith boys, none.

P. Hen. See now, whether pure fear, and entire cowardice, doth not make thee wrong this virtuous gentlewoman to close with us? Is she of the wicked? Is thine hostess here of the wicked? Or is thy boy of the wicked? Or honest Bardolph, whose zeal burns in his nose, of the wicked?

Poi. Answer, thou dead elm, answer.

Fal. The fiend hath pricked down Bardolph irrecon- vocably: and his face is Lucifer's privy kitchen, where he doth nothing but roast malt-worms. For the boy,—there is a good angel about him, but the devil outbids him too.

P. Hen. For the women?

Fal. For one of them. she is in hell already, and burns, poor soul. For the other. I owe her money, and whether she be damned for that, I know not.

Host. No, I warrant you.

Fal. No, I think thou art not; I think, thou art quin. for that. Marry, there is another indictment upon thee. for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law; for the which, I think, thou wilt howl.

Host. All victuallers do so: what's a joint of mutton or two in a whole Lent?

P. Hen. You, gentlewoman.—

Dol. What says your grace?

Fal. His grace says that which his flesh rebels against.

Host. Who knocks so loud at door? look to the door there, Francis.

P. Hen. Peto, how now! what news?

Peto. The king your father is at Westminster, and there are twenty weak and wearied posts. Come from the north: and as I came along I met, and overtook, a dozen captains, bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the taverns, and asking every one for sir John Falstaff. [Enter, Poi. Biaime, P. Hen. By heaven, Poi's, I feel me much to So idly to profane the precious time. When tempest of commotion, like the south Borne with black vapour, doth begin to melt, And drop upon our bare unarm'd heads. Give me my sword, and cloak.—Falstaff. good night. [Exeunt Prince Henry, Poi's, Peto, and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Now comes in the sweetest morse of the night, and we must hence, and leave it unpicked. [Knocking heard.] More knocking at the door?

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

SCENE I.

Bard. You must away to court, sir, presently: A dozen captains stay at door for you. Fal. Pay the musicians, sirrah. [To the Page.] Farewell, hostess;—farewell. Doll. You see, my good wenches, how men of merit are sought after: the under- server may sleep, when the man of action is called on. Farewell, good wenches. If I be not sent away post, I will see you again ere I go. Doll. I cannot speak;—if my heart be not ready to burst.—Well, sweet Jack, have a care of thyself. Fal. Farewell, farewell. ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry in his Nightgown, with a Page.

K. Hen. Go, call the earls of Surrey and of Warwick; But ere they come, bid them o'er-read these letters, And well consider of them. Make good speed.

[Exit Page.]

How many thousand of my poorest subjects Are at this hour asleep!—O sleep! O gentle sleep! Nature's soft nurse, how have I frighted thee, That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down, And sleep my senses in forgetfulness? Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs, Upon uncomely pallets stretching thee, And hush'd with buzzing night-flies to thy slumber, Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great, Under high canopies of costly state, And lull'd with sound of sweetest melody? O, thou dull god! why liest thou with the vile, In loathsome beds, and leav'st the kingly couch, A watch-case, or a common larum bell? Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast Seal up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains In cradle of the rude imperious surge, And in the visitation of the winds, Who take the ruffian billows by the top, Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging them With deafening clamours in the slippery shrouds, That with the hurly death itself awakes? Canst thou, O partial sleep! give thy repose To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude: And in the calmest and most stillest night, With all appliances and means to boot. Deny it to a king? Then, happy low, lie down! Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

Enter Warwick and Surrey.

War. Many good morrows to your majesty! K. Hen. Is it good morrow, lords? War. 'Tis one o'clock; and past. K. Hen. Why then, good morrow to you all, my lords. Have you read o'er the letters that I sent you? War. We have, my liege. K. Hen. Then you perceive, the body of our kingdom How foul it is: what rank diseases grow, And with what danger, near the heart of it. War. It is but as a body, yet, distemper'd, Which to his former strength may be restor'd, With good advice, and little medicine. My lord Northumberland will soon be cool'd. K. Hen. Of God! that one might read the book of fate,

Host. Well, fare thee well: I have known thee these twenty-nine years: come peacod-time; but an honest and truer-hearted man.—Well, fare thee well.

Bard. [Within.] Mistress Tear-sheet!

Host. What's the matter? Bard. [Within.] Bid Mistress Tear-sheet come to my master.

Host. O! run, Doll. run; run, good Doll. Come.—She comes blubbered.—Yea—will you come, Doll? [Exeunt.]

And see the revolution of the times
Make mountains level, and the continent,
Weary of solid firmness, melt itself
Into the sea: and, other times, to see
The beachy girdle of the ocean
Too wide for Neptune's hips; how chances mock,
And changes fill the cup of alteration
With divers liquors! O, if this were seen,
The happiest youth, viewing his progress through,
What perils past, what crosses to ensue,
Would shut the book, and sit him down and die.¹
'Tis not ten years gone,
Since Richard, and Northumberland, great friends,
Did feast together; and in two years after
Were they at wars: it is but eight years, since
This Percy was the man nearest my soul;
Who like a brother toil'd in my affairs,
And laid his love and life under my foot;
Yea, for my sake, even to the eyes of Richard,
Gave him defiance. But which of you was by,
(You, cousin Nevil, as I may remember) [To Warwick]
When Richard, with his eye brimfull of tears,
Then check'd and rated by Northumberland,
Did speak these words, now prov'd a prophecy?
"Northumberland, thou ladder, by the which My cousin Bolingbroke ascends my throne:"—
Though then, God knew, I had no such intent,
But that necessity so bow'd the state,
That I and greatness were compell'd to kiss.
"The time shall come," thus did he follow it,
"The time will come, that foul sin, gathering head Shall break into corruption:"—so went on,
Foretelling this same time's condition,
And the division of our amity.

War. There is a history in all men's lives,
Figuring the nature of the times decreas'd: The which observ'd, a man may prophesy.
With a near aim, of the main chance of things As yet not come to life, which in their seeds, And weak beginnings, lie untreasured.
Such things become the hatch and brood of time: And, by the necessary form of this, King Richard might create a perfect guess. That great Northumberland, then false to him, Would, of that seed, grow to a greater falseness, Which should not find a ground to root upon, Unless on you.

K. Hen. Are these things, then, necessities?
Then let us meet them like necessities; And that same word even now cries out on us. They say, the bishop and Northumberland

ACT III

Are fifty thousand strong.

War. It cannot be, my lord:
flavour doth double, like the voice and echo,
The numbers of the fear'd.—Please it your grace,
To go to bed; upon my soul, my lord,
The powers that you already have sent forth,
Shall bring his prize in very early.
To comfort you the more, I have receiv'd
A certain instance that Glendower is dead.
Your majesty hath been this fortnight ill,
And these unseason'd hours, perforce, must add
Unto your sickness.

K Hen. I will take your counsel:
And were these inward wars once out of hand.
We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Court before Justice Shallow's House in Gloucestershire.

Enter Shallow and Silence, meeting; Mouldy, Shadow, Wart, Feelfull Bull-calf, and Servants, behind.

Shal. Come on, come on, come on, sir; give me your hand, sir, give me your hand, sir: an early stirrer, by the rood.
And how doth my good cousin Silence?

Sil. Good morrow, good cousin Shallow.

Shal. And how doth my cousin, your bedfellow? and your fairest daughter and mine, my god-daughter Ellen?

Sil. Alas! a black ouzel, cousin Shallow.

Shal. By yea and nay, sir, I dare say, my cousin William is become a good scholar. He is at Oxford, still, is he not?

Sil. Indeed, sir; to my cost.

Shal. He must then to the inns of court shortly. I once was of Clement's inn; where, I think, they will talk of mad Shallow yet.

Sil. You were called lusty Shallow then, cousin.

Shal. By the mass, I was called any thing; and I would have done any thing, indeed, and roimdly too. There was I, and little John Doit of Staffordshire, and black George Barnes, and Francis Pickbone, and Will Squele, a Cotswold man; you had not four such swinglebucklers in all the inns of court again; and I may say to you, we knew where the bon-robas were, and had the best of them all at commandment. Then was Jack Falstaff, now sir John, a boy, and page to Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk.

Sil. This sir John, cousin, that comes hither anon about soldiers?

Shal. The same sir John, the very same. I saw him break Skogan's head at the court gate, when he was a crack not thus high: and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stockfish, a fruiter, behind Gray's inn. Jesu! Jesu! the mad days that I have spent! and to see how many of mine old acquaintance are dead!

Sil. We shall all follow, cousin.

Shal. Certain, it is certain; very sure, very sure; death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all: all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair?

Sil. Truly, cousin, I was not there.

Shal. Death is certain.—Is old Double of your town living yet?

Sil. Dead, sir.

Shal. Jesu! Jesu! Dead!—he drew a good bow;—and dead!—he shot a fine shot:—John of Gaunt loved him well, and betted much money on his head.

Dead!—he would have clapped in the clout at twelve score: and carried you a forehand shaft a fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see.—How a score of ewes now?

Sil. Thereafter as they be; a score of good ewes may be worth ten pounds.

Shal. And is old Double dead?

Enter Bardolph, and one with him.

Sil. Here come two of sir JohnFalstaff's men, as I think.

Shal. Good morrow, honest gentlemen.

Bard. I beseech you, which is justice Shallow?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow, sir; a poor esquire of this county, and one of the king's justices of the peace. What is your good pleasure with me?

Bard. My captain, sir, commands me to you; my captain, sir John Falstaff: a tall gentleman, by heaven, and a most gallant leader.

Shal. He greets me well, sir: I knew him a good backword man. How doth the good knight? may I ask, how my lady his wife doth?

Bard. Sir, pardon; a soldier is better accommodated than with a wife.

Sil. It is well said, in faith, sir; and it is well said indeed too. Better accommodated!—it is good; yea, indeed, is it: good phrases are surely, and ever were, very commendable. Accommodated:—it comes of accommoda: very good; a good phrase.

Bard. Pardon me, sir; I have heard the word. Phrase, call you it? By this good day, I know not the phrase; but I will maintain the word with my sword to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command, by heaven. Accommodated; that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated or, when a man is,—being,—whereby,—he may be thought to be accommodated, which is an excellent thing.

Enter Falstaff.

Shal. It is very just.—Look, here comes good sir John.—Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand. By my troth, you like well, and bear your years very well: welcome, good sir John.

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good master Robert Shallow.—Master Sure-card. as I think.

Shal. No, sir John; it is my cousin Silence, in commission with me.

Fal. Good master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace.

Sil. Your good worship is welcome.

Fal. Fie! this is hot weather.—Gentlemen, have you provided me here half a dozen sufficient men?

Sil. Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit?

Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you.

Shal. Where's the roll? where's the roll? where's the roll?—Let me see, let me see; so, so, so, so. Yea, marry, sir.——Ralph Mouldy!—let them appear as I call; let them do so, let them do so.—Let me see; where is Mouldy?

Mould. Here, an it please you.

Shal. What think you, sir John? a good limbed fellow: young, strong, and of good friends.

Fal. Is thy name Mouldy?

Mould. Yea, an it please you.

Fal. 'Tis the more time thou wert used.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! most excellent, y'faith! things that are mouldy lack use: very singular good!—In faith, well said, sir John; very well said.
Fal. Prick him.

Moun. I was prick’d well enough before, an you could have let me alone; my old dame will be undone now, for one to do her husbandry, and her drudgery. You need not to have prick’d me; there are other men fitter to go out than I.

Fal. Go to; peace, Mouldy! you shall go. Mouldy, it is time you were spent.

Moun. Spent!

Skal. Peace, fellow, peace! stand aside: know you where you are?—For the other, sir John,—let me see.

—Simon Shallow.

Fal. Ye may marry, let me have him to sit under: he’s like to be a cold soldier.

Skal. Where’s Shadow?

Skad. Here, sir.

Fal. Shadow, whose son art thou?

Skad. My mother’s son, sir.

Fal. Thy mother’s son! like enough; and thy father’s shadow: so the son of the female is the shadow of the male. It is often so, indeed; but not of the father’s substance.

Skal. Do you like him, sir John?

Fal. Shadow will serve for summer, prick him; for we have a number of shadows to fill up the muster-book.

Skal. Thomas Wart!

Fal. Where’s he?

Wart. Here, sir.

Fal. Is thy name Wart?

Wart. Yea, sir.

Fal. Thou art a very ragged wart.

Skal. Shall I prick him, sir John?

Fal. It were superfluous; for his apparel is built upon his back; and the whole frame stands upon pins: prick him no more.

Skal. Ha, ha, ha!—you can do it, sir; you can do it: I commend you well.—Francis Feeble!

Fee. Here, sir.

Fal. What trade art thou, Feeble?

Fee. A woman’s tailor, sir.

Skal. Shall I prick him, sir?

Fal. You may; but if he had been a man’s tailor, he would have prick’d you. Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemy’s battle, as thou hast done in a woman’s petticock?

Fee. I will do my good will, sir: you can have no more.

Fal. Well said, good woman’s tailor! well said, courageous Feeble! Thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathful dove, or most magnanimous mouse.—Prick the woman’s tailor well, master Shallow; deep master Shallow.

Fee. I would Wart might have gone, sir.

Fal. I would thou wert a man’s tailor, that thou mightest mend him, and make him fit to go. I cannot put him to a private soldier, that is the leader of so many thousands: let that suffice, most forcible Feeble.

Fee. It shall suffice, sir.

Fal. I am bound to thee, reverend Feeble.—Who is next?

Skal. Peter Bull-calf of the green!

Fal. Yea, marry, let us see Bull-calf.

Bull. Here, sir.

Fal. ́Fore God, a likely fellow!—Come, prick me. Bull-calf till he roar again.

Bull. O lord! good my lord captain,—

Fal. What, dost thou roar before thou art prick’d?

Bull. O Lord! sir, I am a diseased man.

Fal. What disease hast thou?

Bull. A whoreson cold, sir; a cough, sir; which I caught with ringing in the king’s affairs upon his coronation day, sir.

Fal. Come, thou shalt go to the wars in a gown. We will have away thy cold; and I will take such order, that thy friends shall ring for thee.—Is here all?

Skal. Here is two more called than your number: you must have but four here, sir,—and so, I pray you, go in with me to dinner.

Fal. Come, I will go drink with you, but I cannot tarry dinner. I am glad to see you, by my troth, master Shallow.

Skal. O, sir John! do you remember since we lay all night in the windmill in Saint George’s fields?

Fal. No more of that, good master Shallow; no more of that.

Skal. Ha, it was a merry night. And is Jane Night work alive?

Fal. She lives, master Shallow.

Skal. She never could away with me.

Fal. Never, never: she would always say, she could not abide master Shallow.

Skal. By the mass, I could anger her to the heart.

She was then a bona-roba. Dost she hold her own well?

Fal. Old, old, master Shallow.

Skal. Nay, she must be old; she cannot choose but be old; certain she’s old; and had Robin Night-work by old Night-work, before I came to Clement’s-inn.

Sir. That’s fifty-five year ago.

Skal. Ha, cousin Silence, that thou hast ad seen that that this knight and I have seen!—Ha, sir John, said I well?

Fal. We have heard the chimes at midnight, master Shallow.

Skal. That we have, that we have, that we have; in faith, sir John, we have. Our watch-word was, “Horn, boys!”—Come, let’s to dinner; come, let’s to dinner.

—O, the days that we have seen!—Come, come.

[Exeunt Falstaff, Shallow, and Silence.

Bull. Good master corporal Bardolph, stand by my friend, and here is four Harry ten shillings in French crowns for you. In very truth, sir, I had as lief be hanged, sir, as go: and yet, for mine own part, sir, I do not care; but rather, because I am unwilling, and, for mine own part, have a desire to stay with my friends: else, sir, I did not care, for mine own part, so much.

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Moun. And good master corporal captain, for my old dame’s sake, stand by my friend: she has nobody to do any thing about her, when I am gone; and she is old, and cannot help herself. You shall have forty, sir.

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Fee. By my troth, I care not: a man can die but once—we owe God a death. I’ll never bear a base mind;—an’t be my destiny, so: an’t be not, so. No man’s too good to serve his prince; and let it go which way it will, he that dies this year is quit for the next.

Bard. Well said; thou art a good fellow.

Fee. ’Faith, I’ll bear no base mind.

Re-enter Falstaff, and Justices.

Fal. Come, sir, which men shall I have?

Shal. Four, of which you please.

Bard. Sir, a word with you.—I have three pounds and a crown, Mouldy and Bull-calf.

Fal. Go to; well.

Skal. Come, sir John, which four will you have?

Fal. Do you choose for me.

Fal. Mouldy, and Bull-calf.—For you, Mouldy, stay at home till you are past service:— and, for your part, Bull-calf, grow till you come unto it: I will none of you.

Skal. Sir John, sir John, do not yourself wrong. They are your likeliest men, and I would have you served with the best.

Fal. Will you tell me, master Shallow, how to choose a man? Care I for the limb, the thewes, the stature, bulk and big assembly of a man? Give me the spirit, master Shallow.—Here's Wart:—you see what a ragged appearance it is: he shall charge you, and discharge you, with the motion of a potters' hammer: come off, and on, swifter than he that gibs-bets on the brewer's bucket. And this same half-faced fellow, Shadow:—give me this man: he presents no mark to the enemy: the fomman may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife. And, for a retreat,—how swiftly will this Feecile, the woman's tailor, run off? O, give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones.—Put me a caliver into Wart's hand, Bardolph.

Bard. Hold, Wart: traverse: thus, thus, thus.

Fal. Come, manage me your caliver. So:—very well:—go to:—very good:—exceeding good.—O, give me always a little, lean, old, chopped, bald shot:—

Well said, i' faith, Wart: thou'rt a good sead; hold, there's a tester for thee.

Skal. He is not his craft's master, Wart, he doth not do it right. I remember at Mile-end green, (when I lay at Clement's inn) I was then sir Dagonet in Arthur's show, there was a little quiver fellow, and he would manage you his piece thus: and he would about, and about, and come you in, and come you in:— "rah, tah, tah," would he say; "bonnece;" would he say; and away again would he go, and again would he come:—

I shall never see such a fellow.

Fal. These fellows will do well, master Shallow.

God keep you, master Silence: I will not use many words with you.—Fare you well, gentlemen both: I thank you: I must a dozen mile to-night.—Bardolph, give the soldiers coats.

Skal. Sir John, the Lord bless you, and God prosper your affairs, and send us peace. At your return, visit our house. Let our old acquaintance be renewed; poradventure, I will with you to the court.

Fal. Fore God, I would you would.

Skal. Go to; I have spoke at a word. Fare you well.

[Exeunt Shallow and Silence.]

Fal. Fare you well, gentle gentlemen. On, Bardolph; lead the men away. [Exeunt Bardolph, Recruits, &c.] As I return, I will fetch off these justices: I do see the bottom of justice Shallow. Lord, lord, how subject we old men are to this vice or lying! This same starved justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildness of his youth, and the feats he hath done about Turnull-street; and every third word a lie, dier paid to the hearer than the Turk's tribute. I do remember him at Clement's inn, like a man made after supper of a cheese-parings: when he was naked, he was, for all the world, like a forked radish, with a beard fantastically carved upon it with a knife: he was so forlorn, that his dimensions to any thick sight were invisible: he was the very genius of famine: yet lecherous as a monkey, and the whores called him—mandrake. He came ever in the rear-ward of the fashion: and sung those tunes to the over-scutched huswifes that he heard the cownmen whistle, and aawre—they were his fancies, or his good-nights.

And now is this Vice's dagger become a squire, and talks as familiarly of John of Gaunt, as if he had been sworn brother to him; and I'll be sworn he never saw him but once in the Tilt-yard, and then he burst his head, for crowding among the marshals men. I saw it; and told John of Gaunt, he beat his own name; for you might have thrust him, and all his apparel, into an eel-skin: the case of a treble hautboy was a mansion for him, a court; and now has he land and beesees. Well, I will be acquainted with him, if I return; and it shall go hard, but I will make him a philospher's two stones to me. If the young daee be a bait for the old pike, I see no reason in the law of nature but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end. [Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. —A Forest in Yorkshire.

Enter the Archbishop of York, Mowbray, Hastings, and Others.

Arch. What is this forest call'd?

Hast. 'Tis Gaultree forest, an't shall please your grace.

Arch. Here stand, my lords; and send discoverers forth,

To know the numbers of our enemies.

Hast. We have sent forth already.

Arch. 'Tis well done.—

My friends and brethren in these great affairs,
I must acquaint you, that I have receive'd New-dated letters from Northumberland;
Their cold intent, tenour and substance, thus:—

Here doth he wish his person, with such powers

As might hold sortance with his quality, the which he could not levy; whereupon he is retir'd, to ripe his growing fortunes, to Scotland; and concludes in hearty prayers, that your attempts may overlive the hazard, and fearful meeting of their opposite.

Moub. Thus do the hopes we have in him touch ground, and dash themselves to pieces.

Mss. West of this forest, scarcely off a mile, in goodly form comes on the enemy: and, by the ground they hide, I judge their number upon, or near, the rate of thirty thousand.

Moub. The just proportion that we gave them out let's away on, and face them in the field.

Enter Westmoreland.

Arch. What well-appointed leader fronts us here? Mowbr. I think it is my lord of Westmoreland.

West. Health and fair greeting from our general, the prince, lord John and duke of Lancaster. Arch. Say on, my lord of Westmoreland, in peace; what doth concern your coming?

West. Then, my lord,
Unto your grace do I in chief address
The substance of my speech. If that rebellion
Came like itself, in base and abject routs,
Led on by bloody youth, guarded with rags,
And countenanced by boys, and beggary;
I say, if damn’d communion so appear’d.
In his true, native, and most proper shape.
You, reverend father, and these noble lords,
Had not been here, to dress the ugly form
Of base and bloody insurrection
With your fair honours. You, lord archbishop,
Whose see is by a civil peace maintain’d;
Whose beard the silver hand of peace hath touch’d;
Whose learning and good letters peace hath tutor’d;
Whose wise investments figure innocence,
The dove and very blessed spirit of peace.
Wherefore do you so ill translate yourself,
Out of the speech of peace, that bears such grace,
Into the harsh and boisterous tongue of war?
Turning your books to gloves, your ink to blood,
Your pens to lances, and your tongue divine
To a loud trumpet, and report of war?

Arch. Wherefore do I this?—so the question stands:
Briefly to this end.—We are all discus’d:
And, with our suffering, and wanton hours,
Have brought ourselves into a burning fever,
And must be bled for: of which disease
Our late king, Richard, being infected, died.
But, my most noble lord of Westmoreland,
I take not on me here as a physician,
Nor do I, as an enemy to peace,
Troop in the throns of military men:
But, rather, show a while like fearful war,
To diet rank minds, sick of happiness,
And purge the obstructions, which begin to stop
Our very veins of life. Hear me more plainly.
I have in equal balance justly weigh’d
What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs we suffer,
And find our griefs heavier than our offences.
We see which way the stream of time doth run,
And are confus’d from our most quiet chair
By the rough torrent of occasion:
And have the summary of all our griefs,
When time shall serve, to show in articles,
Which, long ere this, we offer’d to the king,
And might by no suit gain an audience.
When we are wrong’d, and would unfold our griefs,
We are denied access unto his person,
Even by those men that most have done us wrong.
The dangers of the days but newly gone,
Whose memory is written on the earth
With yet appearing blood, and the examples
Of every minute’s instance, present now,
Have put us in these ill-becoming arms,
Not to break peace, or any branch of it,
But to establish here a peace indeed,
Concurring both in name and quality.

West. When ever yet was your appeal denied?

Wherein have you been galled by the king?
What peer hath been suborn’d to grante on you,
That you should seal this lawless bloody book
Of forg’d rebellion with a seal divine,
And consecrate commotion’s bitter edge?

Arch. My brother general, the commonwealth,
To brother born an household cruelty!

I make my quarrel in particular.

West. There is no need of any such redress;
Or, if there were, it not belongs to you.
Mowbr. Why not to him, in part, and to us all,
That feel the bruises of the days before,
And suffer the condition of these times
To lay a heavy and unequal hand
Upon our honours?

West. O! my good lord Mowbray,
Construe the times to their necessaries.
And you shall say indeed, it is the time,
And not the king, that doth you injuries.
Yet, for your part, it not appears to me.

Either from the king, or in the present time,
That you should have an inch of any ground
To build a grief on. Were you not restored
To all the duke of Norfolk’s sigouries,
Your noble and right-well-remember’d father’s?

Mowbr. What thing, in honour, had my father lost,
That need to be reviv’d, and breath’d in me?
The king that lov’d him, as the state stood then,
Was force perforce, compel’d to banish him:
And when that Harry Bolingbroke, and he,
Being mounted, and both roosed in their seats,
Their neighing coursers daring of the spur,
Their armed staves in charge, their beavers down,
Their eyes of fire sparkling through sights of steel,
And the loud trumpet blowing them together;
Then, then, when there was nothing could have stay’d
My father from the breast of Bolingbroke,
O! when the king did throw his warder down,
His own life hung upon the staff he threw:
Then threw he down himself; and all their lives,
That, by indictment, and by dint of sword,
Have since miscarried under Bolingbroke.

West. You speak, lord Mowbray, now you know not what.
The earl of Hereford was reputed, then,
In England the most valiant gentleman:
Who known, on whom fortune would then have smil’d;
But if your father had been victor there,
He never had borne it out of Coventry;
For all the country, in a general voice,
Cried hate upon him; and all their prayers, and love,
Were set on Hereford, whom they doted on,
And bless’d, and grac’d, indeed, more than the king.
But this is more digression from my purpose.
Here come I from our princely general,
To know your griefs; to tell you from his grace,
That he will give you audience; and wherein
It shall appear that your demands are just,
You shall enjoy them; every thing set off,
That might so much as think you enemies.

Mowbr. But he hath forc’d us to compel this offer
And it proceeds from policy, not love.

West. Mowbray, you overween, to take it so.
This offer comes from mercy, not from fear;
For, lo! within a ken our army lies,
Upon mine honour, all too confident.
To give admittance to a thought of fear.

Our battle is more full of names than yours,

Our men more perfect in the use of arms,

Our armour all as strong, our cause the best:

Then, reason will our hearts should be as good;

Say you not, then, our offer is compell'd.

Mowbr. Well, by my will, we shall admit no parley.

West. That argues but the shame of your offence:

A rotten case abides no handling.

Hast. Hath the prince John a full commission,

In very ample virtue of his father,

To hear, and absolutely to determine

Of what conditions we shall stand upon?

West. That is intended in the general's name.

I must you make so slight a question.

Arch. Then take, my lord of Westmoreland, this schedule,

For this contains our general grievances:

Each several article herein recited;

All members of our cause, both here and hence,

That are insinu'd to this action,

Acquitted by a true substantial form;

And present execution of our wills

To us, and to our purposes, confin'd;

We come within our awful banks again,

And knit our powers to the arm of peace.

West. This will I shew the general. Please you, lords,

In sight of both our battles we may meet:

And either end in peace, which God so frame,

Or to the place of difference call the swords

Which must decide it.

Arch. My lord, we will do so. [Exit West.

Mowbr. There is a thing within my bosom tells me,

That no conditions of our peace can stand.

Hast. Fear you not that? if we can make our peace

Upon such large terms, and so absolute,

As our conditions shall consist upon,

Our peace shall stand as firm as rocky mountains.

Mowbr. Ay, but our valuation shall be such,

That every slight and false-derived cause,

Yea, every idle, nice, and wanton reason,

Shall to the king taste of this action:

That were our royal faiths martyrs in love,

We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind,

That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff,

And good from bad find no partition.

Arch. No, no, my lord. Note this,—the king is weary

Of dainty and such picking grievances:

For he hath found, to end one doubt by death

Revives two greater in the heirs of life.

And therefore will he wipe his tables clean,

And keep no tell-tale to his memory,

That may repeat and history his loss

To new remembrance. For full well he knows,

He cannot so precisely weed this land,

As his misdoubts present occasion:

His foes are so enrooted with his friends,

That, plucking to unfix an enemy,

He doth unfasten so, and shake a friend.

So that this land, like an offensive wife,

That hath enraged her man to offer strokes,

As he is striking, holds his infant up,

And hangs resolv'd correction in the arm

That was appear'd to execution.

Hast. Besides, the king hath wasted all his rods

On late offenders, that he now doth lack

The very instruments of chastisement;

So that his power, like to a fangless lion.

May offer, but not hold.

Arch. 'T is very true:

And therefore be assurance, my good lord marshal,

If we do now make our atonement well,

Our peace will, like a broken limb united,

Grow stronger for the breaking.

Mowbr. Be it so.

Here is return'd my lord of Westmoreland.

Re-enter Westmoreland.

West. The prince is here at hand. Pleaseth your lordship,

To meet his grace just distance betwixt our armies?

Mowbr. Your grace of York, in God's name then, set forward.

Arch. Before, and greet his grace, my lord: we come.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Forest.

Enter, from one side, MOWBRAY, the Archbishop, Hasting, and Others: from the other side, Prince John of Lancaster, Westmoreland, Officers and Attendants.

P. John. You are well encounter'd here, my cousin

Mowbray.—

Good day to you, gentle lord archbishop; And so to you, lord Hastings,—and to all.

My lord of York, it better show'd with you, When that your flock, assembled by the belt, Encircled you to hear with reverence Your exposition on the holy text, Than now to see you here an iron man, Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum, Turning the word to sword, and life to death.

That man, that sits within a monarch's heart, And ripens in the sunshine of his favour, Would he abuse the countenance of the king, Alack! what mischief might be set abroad, In shadow of such greatness. With you, lord bishop, It is even so. Who hath not heard it spoken, How deep you were within the books of God? To us, the speaker in his parliament; To us, th' imagin'd voice of God himself; The very opener and intelligence, Between the grace, the sanctities of heaven, And our dull workings: O! who shall believe, But you misuse the reverence of your place, Employ the countenance and grace of heaven, As a false favourite doth his prince's name, In deeds dishonourable? You have taken up, Under the counterfeit'd seal of God, The subjects of his substitute, my father; And, both against the peace of heaven and him, Have here up-swarm'd them.

Arch. Good my lord of Lancaster, I am not here against your father's peace; But, as I told my lord of Westmoreland, The time misorder'd doth, in common sense, Crowd us, and crush us to this monstrous form To hold our safety up. I sent your grace To the parcels and particulars of our grief; The which have been with scorn shov'd from the court, Whereon this Hydra-son of war is born; Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleep, With grant of our most just and right desires, And true obedience, of this madness cur'd, Stoop tamely to the foot of majesty.

Mowbr. If not, we ready are to try our fortunes To the last man.
SCENE II.

KING HENRY IV.

395

Hast. And though we here fall down,
We have supplies to second our attempt;
If they miscarry, theirs shall second them;
And so success of mischief shall be born.
And heir from heir shall hold this quarrel up,
Whiles England shall have generation.

P. John. You are too shallow, Hastings, much too shallow.
To sound the bottom of the after-times.

West. Pleadeth your grace, to answer them directly,
How far-forth you do like their articles.

P. John. I like them all, and do allow them well:
And swear, here, by the honour of my blood,
My father’s purposes have been mistook:
And some about him have too lavishly
Wrested his meaning, and authority.—
My lord, these griefs shall be with speed redress’d;
Upon my soul, they shall. If this may please you,
Discharge your powers unto their several counties,
As we will ours: and here, between the armies,
Let’s drink together friendly, and embrace.
That all their eyes may bear those tokens home
Of our restored love, and amity.

Arch. I take your princely word for these redresses.

P. John. I give it you, and will maintain my
And thereupon I drink unto your grace. [word: Hast. Go, captain, [To an Officer] and deliver to the
This news of peace: let them have pay, and part.
I know, it will please them: lie thee, captain.
[Exit Officer.]

Arch. To you, my noble lord of Westmoreland.

West. I pledge your grace: [Drinks.] and, if you knew what pains
I have bestow’d to breed this present peace,
You would drink freely; but my love to you
Shall show itself more openly hereafter.

Arch. I do not doubt you.

West. I am glad of it.—
Health to my lord, and gentle cousin, Mowbray.

Mowb. You wish me health in very happy season:
For I am, on the sudden, something ill.

Arch. Against ill chances men are ever merry,
But heaviness forruns the good event.

West. Therefore be merry, coz; since sudden sorrow
Serves to say thus.—some good things comes to-morrow.

Arch. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit.

Mowb. So much the worse, if your own rule be true.
[Shouts within.]

P. John. The word of peace is render’d. Hark, how they shout!

Mowb. This had been cheerful, after victory.

Arch. A peace is of the nature of a conquest,
For then both parties nobly are subdued,
And neither party loser.

P. John. Go, my lord,
And let our army be discharged too.—
[Exit Westmoreland. And good my lord, so please you, let your trains
Match by us, that we may peruse the men.
We should have cop’d withal.

Arch. Go, good lord Hastings;
And, ere they be dismiss’d, let them march by.
[Exit Hastings.]

P. John. I trust, lords, we shall lie to-night to-gether.—

Re-enter Westmoreland.

Now, cousin, wherefore stands our army still?
West. The leaders having charge from you to stand
Will not go off, until they hear you speak.

P. John. They know their duties.

Re-enter Hastings.

Hast. My lord, our army is dispers’d already.²
Like youthful steers unyok’d, they take their course
East, west, north, south; or, like a school broke up,
Each hurries towards his home and sporting-place.

West. Good tidings, my lord Hastings; for the which
I do arrest thee, traitor, of high treason:
And you, lord archbishop,—and you, lord Mowbray;
Of capital treason I attach you both.

Mowb. Is this proceeding just and honourable?

West. Is your assembly so?

Arch. Will you thus break your faith?

P. John. I pawn’d thee none
I promis’d you redress of these same grievances,
Whereof you did complain; which, by mine honour,
I will perform with a most christian care.
But, for you, rebels, look to taste the due
Meet for rebellion; and such acts, as yours.
Most shallowly did you these arms commence,
Fondly brought here, and foolishly sent hence.—
Strike up our drums! pursue the scatter’d stray;
Heaven, and not we, hath safely fought to-day.

Some guard these traitors to the block of death:
Treason’s true bed, and yielder up of breath. [Exeunt

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Forest.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter Falstaff and Coleville, meeting.

Fal. What’s your name, sir? of what condition are you; and of what place, I pray?

Cole. I am a knight, sir; and my name is Coleville of the dale.

Fal. Well then, Coleville is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place, the dale: Coleville shall still be your name, a traitor your degree, and the dungeon your dale,—a dale deep enough; so shall you be still Coleville of the dale.

Cole. Are not you sir John Falstaff?

Fal. As good a man as he, sir, who’er I am. Do ye yield, sir, or shall I sweat for you? If I do sweat, they are the drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death: therefore, rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy.

Cole. I think, you are sir John Falstaff, and in that thought yield me.

Fal. I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine, and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifference, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe: my womb, my womb, my womb undone me.

—Here comes our general.

Enter Prince John of Lancaster, Westmoreland, and Others.

P. John. The heat is past, follow no farther now.—

Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland.—

Now, Falstaff, where have you been all this while?
When every thing is ended, then you come:
These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life.
One time or other break some gallows’ back.

Fal. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus: I never knew yet but rebuke and check was the reward of valour. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? have I, in my poor and old motion, the expedition of thought? I have speeded hither with the very extremest inch of possibility: I have founndered nine-score and odd posts; and here, travel-tainted as I am, have, in my pure and immaculate valour, taken sir John Coleville of the dale, a most furious knight, and valorous enemy. But what of that?
tis saw me, and yielded: that I may justly say with the hook-nosed fellow of Rome, I came, saw, and overcame.

P. John. It was more of his courtesy than your deserving.

Fal. I know not: here he is, and here I yield him, and I beseech your grace, let it be booked with the rest of this day’s deeds; or, by the lord, I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top of it, Coleville kissing my foot. To the which course if I be enforced, if you do not all show like gilt two-pencecs to me, and I, in the clear sky of fame, o’ershine you as much as the full moon doth the cinder
s of the element, which show like pins’ heads to her, believe not the word of the noble. Therefore let me have right, and let desert mount.

P. John. Thine’s too heavy to mount.

Fal. Let it shine then.

P. John. Thine’s too thick to shine.

Fal. Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you will.

P. John. Is thy name Coleville?

Col. It is, my lord.

P. John. A famous rebel art thou, Coleville.

Fal. And a famous true subject took him.

Cole. I am, my lord, but as my betters are,
That led me hither: had they been ruled by me,
You should have won them dearer than you have.

Fal. I know not how they sold themselves, but thou, ike a kind fellow, gavest thyself away gratis; and I thank thee for thee.

Re-enter Westmoreland.

P. John. Now, have you left pursuit?

West. Retreat is made, and execution stay’d.

P. John. Send Coleville, with his confederates,
To York, to present execution.

Blunt, lead him hence, and see you guard him sure.

[Exit Coleville, guarded.

And now despatch we toward the count our lords.
I hear, the king my father is sore sick:
Our news shall go before us to his majesty.—
Which, cousin, you shall bear,—to comfort him;
And we with sober speed will follow you.

Fal. My lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go through Glosiershire; and, when you come to court, stand my good lord, pray, in your good report.

P. John. Fare you well, Falstaff: I, in my condition,
Shall better speak of you than you deserve. [Exit.

Fal. I would, you had but the wit: ’t were better han your dukedom.—Good faith, this same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me, nor a man cannot make him laugh: but that’s no marvel, he drinks no wine. There’s never any of these demure boys come to any proof, for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, and making many fish-meals, that they fall into a kind of male green-sickness; and then, when they marry, they get wenches. They are generally fools and cowards, which some of us should be too, but for inflammation. A good sherris-sack hath a two-fold operation in it: it ascends me into the brain; dries me there all the foolish, and dull, and crummy vapours which environ it: makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetful.

full of nimble, fiery, and delectable shapes; which, deliver’d o’er to the voice, (the tongue) which is the birth, becomes excellent wit. The second property of your excellent sherris is, the warming of the blood; which, before cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice;
but the sherris warms it, and makes it course from the inwards to the parts extreme. It illumineth the face, which, as a beacon, gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm; and then the vital commoners, and inland petty spirits, muste me all to their captain, the heart, who, great, and puissed up with this retinue, doth any deed of courage; and this valour comes of sherris. So that skill in the weapon is nothing without sac, for that sets it a-work; and learning, a mere hoard of gold kept by a devil, till sack commences it, and sets it in act and use. Hereof comes it, that prince Harry is valiant: for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his father, he hath,
like lean, sterile, and bare land, manured, husbanded,
and tilled, with excellent endeavour of drinking good,
and good store of fertile sherris, that he is become very hot, and valiant. If I had a thousand sons, the first human principle I would teach them should be, to swear thin potations, and to addict themselves to sack.

Enter Bardolph.

How now, Bardolph?

Bard. The army is discharged all, and gone.

Fal. Let them go. I’ll through Glosiershire: and there will I visit master Robert Shallow, esquire: I have him already tempering between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. Come away. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Westminster. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, Clarence, Prince Humphrey,
Warwick, and Others.

K. Hen. Now, lords, if God doth give successful end
To this debate that bleceth at our doors,
We will our youth lead on to higher fields,
And draw no swords but what are sanctified.
Our navy is address’d: our power collected,
Our substitutes in absence, well invested,
And every thing lies level to our wish:
Only, we want a little personal strength,
And pause us, till these rebels, now afoot,
Come underneath the yoke of government.

Warr. Both which, we doubt not but your majesty
Shall soon enjoy.

K. Hen. Humphrey, my son of Gloster,
Where is the prince your brother?

P. Humph. I think, he’s gone to hunt, my lord, at Windsor.

K. Hen. And how accompanied?

P. Humph. I do not know, my lord

K. Hen. Is not his brother, Thomas of Clarencce, with him?

P. Humph. No, my good lord: he is in presence here.

Clair. What would my lord and father?

K. Hen. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence.

How chance thou art not with the prince thy brother?
He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him, Thomas.
Thou hast a better place in his affection,
Than all thy brothers: cherish it, my boy
And noble offices thou mayst effect
O’er me, and to thee the crown of mediation, after I am dead.
Between his greatness and thy other brethren.
Therefore omit him not: blunt not his love.
Nor lose the good advantage of his grace,
By seeming cold, or careless of his will,
For he is gracious, if he be observ'd:
He hath a tear for pity, and a hand
Open as day for melting charity;
Yet, notwithstanding, being incens'd, he's flor,
As humorous as winter, and as sudden
As flaws1 congealed in the spring of day.
His temper, therefore, must be well observ'd:
Chide him for fault, and do it reverently
When you perceive his blood inclin'd to mirth,
But, being moody, give him line and scope,
Till that his passions, like a whale on ground,
Confound themselves with working. Learn this, Thomas,
And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends,
A hoop of gold to bind thy brothers in,
That the united vessel of their blood,
Mingled with venom of suggestion,
(As, force perforce, the age will pour it in)
Shall never leak, though it do work as strong
As aconitum, or rash gunpowder.

K. Hen. Why art thou not at Windsor with him?
Thomas?

Cla. He is not there to-day: he dines in London.

K. Hen. And how accompanied? canst thou tell that?

Cla. With Poinz, and other his continual followers.

K. Hen. Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds,
And he, the noble image of my youth,
Is overspread with them: therefore, my grief
Stretches itself beyond the hour of death.
The blood weeps from my heart, when I do shape
In forms imaginary, th' unguarded days,
And rotten times, that you shall look upon
When I am sleeping with my ancestors.
When for his headstrong riot hath no curb,
When rage and hot-blood are his counsellors.
When means and lavish manners meet together,
O, with what wings shall his affections fly
Towards fronting peril and oppos'd decay!
When my greatness, and his far removed from me.
The prince but studies his companions.
Like a strange tongue: wherein, to gain the language,
'Tis needful, that the most immodest word
Be look'd upon, and learn'd: which once attain'd,
Your highness knows, comes to no further use,
But to be known, and hated. So, like gross terms,
The prince will, in the perfection of time,
Cast off his followers, and their memory
Shall as a pattern or a measure live,
By which his grace must mete the lives of others,
Turning past evils to advantages.

K. Hen. 'Tis seldom, when the bee doth leave her comb
In the dead carrión. [Enter Westmoreland] Who's here? Westmoreland?

West. Health to my sovereign, and new happiness
Added to that that I am to deliver!
Prince John, your son, doth kiss your grace's hand:
Nowbray, the bishop Scroop, Hastings, and all,
Are brought to the correction of your law.
There is not now a rebel's sword unshedd'd,
But peace puts forth her olive everywhere.
The manner how this action hath been borne,
Here at more leisure may your highness read,
With every course in his particular. [Giving a packet,]

K. Hen. O Westmoreland! thou art a summer bird,
Which ever in the henneth of winter sings
The lifting up of day. [Enter Harcourt.] Look! here's more news.

Har. From enemies heaven keep your majesty;
And, when they stand against you, may they fall
As those that I am come to tell you of.
The earl Northumberland, and the lord Bardolph.
With a great power of English, and of Scots,
Are by the sheriff of Yorkshire overthrown.
The manner and rude order of the fight.
This packet, please it you, contains at large.

K. Hen. And wherefore should these good news make me sick?
Will fortune never come with both hands full,
But write her fair words still in foulest letters?
She either gives a stomach, and no food,—
Such are the poor, in health; or else a feast,
And takes away the stomach,—such are the rich,
That have abundance, and know it not.
I should rejoice now at this happy news,
And now my sight fails, and my brain is giddy.—
O me! come near me; now I am much ill. [Falls back.]

P. Humph. Comfort, your majesty!

Cla. O my royal father!
West. My sovereign lord, cheer up yourself: look up!

War. Be patient, princes: you do know, these fits
Are with his highness very ordinary.
Stand from him, give him air; he'll straight be well.

Cla. No, no; he cannot long hold out these pangs.
Th' incessant care and labour of his mind
Hath wrought the more, that should confine it in.
So thin, that life looks through, and will break out.

P. Humph. The people fear me, for they do observe
Unfather'd heirs, and lansmock births of nature:
The seasons change their manners, as the year
Had found some months asleep, and leapt' them over.

Cla. The river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb between;
And the old folk, time's doing chronicles,
Say, it did so, a little while ago.
That our great grand sire, Edward, sick'd and died.

War. Speak lower, princes, for the king recovers
P. Humph. This apoplexy will, certain, be his end.

K. Hen. I pray you, take me up, and bear me hence
Into some other chamber: softly, pray.

Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends;
Unless some dull and favourable hand
Will whisper music to my weary spirit.

War. Call for the music in the other room.

K. Hen. Set me the crown upon my pillow here.

Cla. His eye is hollow, and he changes much.

War. Less noise, less noise!

[Enter Prince Henry.

P. Hen. Who saw the duke of Clarence?

Cla. I am here, brother, full of heaviness.

P. Hen. How now! rain within doors, and none abroad?

How doth the king?

P. Humph. Exceeding ill.

P. Hen. Heard he the good news yet?

Tell it him.

P. Humph. He alter'd much upon the hearing it.

P. Hen. If he be sick with joy, he will recover
Without physic.

5 Daniel (Civil Wars)
6 1995, book III, act 116, speaking of the illness of Henry IV, says:

Wearing the wall so thin, that now the mind,
Might well look thorough, and his frailty find.
War. Not so much noise, my lords.—Sweet prince, speak low.
The king your father is dispos'd to sleep.
Clas. Let us withdraw into the other room.
War. Will't please your grace to go along with us?
P. Hen. No; I will sit and watch here by the king.

[Except all but Prince Henry.]

Why doth the crown lie there, upon his pillow,
Being so troublsome a belfellow?
O polish'd perturbation! golden care!
That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide
To many a watchful night, sleep with it now!
Yet not so sound, and half so deeply sweet,
As he, whose brow with homely biggin bound,
Snores out the watch of night. O majesty!

When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit
Like a rich armour worn in heat of day,
That scaleth with safety.—By his gates of breath
There lies a downy feather, which stirs not:
Did he suspect, that light and weightless down
Perforce must move.—My gracious lord! my father!—
This sleep is sound indeed: this is a sleep.
That from this golden ringel hath divorce'd
So many English kings. Thy due from me
Is tears and heavy sorrow of the blood,
Which nature, love, and filial tenderness,
Shall, O dear father! pay thee plenteously:
My due from thee is this imperial crown.
Which, as immediate from thy place and blood,
Derives itself to me.—Lo! here it sits,

Which heaven shall guard: and put the world's whole
Strength into one giant arm, it shall not force
This lineal honour from me. This from thee
Will I to mine leave, as 'tis left to me. [Exit.

K. Hen. Warwick! Gloster! Clarence!—
Re-enter Warwick, and the rest.

Clas. Doth the king call?
War. What would your majesty? How fares your grace?
K. Hen. Why did you leave me here alone, my lords?
Clas. We let the prince, my brother, here, my liege,
Who undertook to sit and watch by you.
K. Hen. The prince of Wales! Where is he? let me see him:
He is not here. War. This door is open; he is gone this way.
P. Humf. He came not through the chamber where we stay'd.
K. Hen. Where is the crown? who took it from my pillow?
War. When we withdrew, my liege, we left it here.
K. Hen. The prince hath ta'en it hence:—go, seek him out.
Is he so hasty, that he doth suppose
My sleep my death?—Find him, my lord of Warwick: chide him hither.

[Exit Warwick.]

This part of his conjoins with my disease,
And helps to end me.—See, sons, what things you are;
How quickly nature falls into revolt.
When gold becomes her object.
For this the foolish over-careful fathers
Have broke their sleeps with thoughts,
Their brains with care, their bones with industry:
For this they have engrossed and pile'd up
The earner'd heaps of strange-achieved gold;
For this they have been thoughtful to invest
Their sons with arts, and martial exercises:
When, like the bee, tolling from every flower
The virtuous sweets. Our thighs pack'd with wax, our mouths with honey,
We bring it to the hive, and like the bees,
Are murder'd for our pains. This bitter taste
Yield his engrossments to the ending father.—

Re-enter Prince Henry.

Now, where is he that will not stay so long,
Till his friend sickness' hands determin'd me?
War. My lord, I found the prince in the next room,
Washing with kindly tears his gentle cheeks;
With such a deep demeanour in great sorrow,
That tyranny, which never quaff'd but blood,
Would, by beholding him, have wash'd his knife
With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither.
K. Hen. But wherefore did he take away the crown?

Re-enter Prince Henry.
Lo, where he comes.—Come hither to me, Harry—
Depart the chamber, leave us here alone.

[Exit Clarence, Prince Humphrey, Lords, &c.
P. Hen. I never thought to hear you speak again.
K. Hen. Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought
I stay too long by thee, I weary thee.
Dost thou so hunger for mine empty chair,
That thou wilt needs invest thee with mine honours
Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth,
Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm thee!
Stay but a little; for my cloud of dignity
Is held from falling with so weak a wind,
That it will quickly drop: my day is dim.
Thou hast stol'n that, which, after some few hours.
Were thine without offence, and at my death
Thou hast seal'd up my expectation:
Thy life did manifest thou lov'dst me not,
And thou wilt have me die assur'd of it.
Thou hast a thousand daggers in thy thoughts;
Which thou hast whetted on thy stony heart,
To stab at half an hour of my life.
What! canst thou not forbear me half an hour?
Then get thee gone, and dig my grave thyself,
And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear
That thou art crowned, not that I am dead.
Let all the tears that should bedew my hearse.
Be drops of balm to sanctify thy head;
Only compound me with forgotten dust:
Give that which gave thee life unto the worms
Pluck down my officers, break my decrees;
For now a time is come to mock at form.
Harry the fifth is crown'd!—Up, vanity! Down, royal state! All you wise counsellors, hence
And to the English court assemble now;
From every region, apes of idleness!
Now, neighbour confin'd, purge you of your seed;
Have you a ruffian that will swear, drink, dance,
Revel the night, rob, murder, and commit
The oldest sins—let the newest kind of ways?
Be happy, he will trouble you no more:
England shall double gild his treble guilt,
England shall give him office, honour, might:
For the fifth Harry from curb'd license plucks
The muzzle of restraint, and the wild dog
Shall gild his tooth in every innocent.
O my poor kingdom, sick with civil blows!
When that my care could not withstand thy riots
What wilt thou do when riot is thy care?
O! thou wilt be a wilderness again,
Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants.

P. Hen. O, pardon me, my liege! but for my tears,

[Shaking me.]

The moist impediments unto my speech,
I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke,
Ere you with grief had spoke, and I had heard
The course of it so far. There is your crown;
And he that wears the crown immortally,
Long guard it yours! If I affect it more,
Than as your honour, and as your renown,
Let me no more from this obedience rise,
Which my most true and inward duteous spirit
Teacheth, this prostrate and exterior bending.
Heaven witness with me, when I here came in,
And found no course of breath within your majesty,
How cold it struck my heart! if I do feign,
O! let me in my present wildness die,
And never live to show th' incredible world
The noble change that I have purposed.
Coming to look on you, thinking you dead,
And dead almost, my liege, to think you were,
I spake unto the crown, as having sense.
And thus upbraided it: "The care on thee depending Hath fed upon the body of my father;
Therefore, thou, best of gold, art worst of gold.
Other, less fine in carat, is more precious,
Preserving life in medicine potable:
But thou, most fine, most honour'd, most renown'd,
Hast eat thy bearer up." Thus, my most royal liege,
Accusing it, I put it on my head;
To try it with, as with an enemy
That had before my face murder'd my father,
The quarrel of a true inheritor:
But if it did infect my blood with joy,
Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride
If any rebel or vain spirit of mine
Did, with the least affection of a welcome,
Give entertainment to the weight of it,
Let God for ever keep it from my head,
And make me as the poorest vassal is,
That doth with awe and terror kneel to it!

K. Hen. O my son! God put it in thy mind to take it hence,
That thou might'st win the more thy father's love,
Pleading so wisely in excuse of it.
Come hither, Harry: sit thou by my bed.
And hear, I think, the very latest counsel
That ever I shall breathe. God knows, my son,
By what by-paths, and indirect crook'd ways,
I met this crown; and I myself know well
How troublesome it sat upon my head:
To thee it shall descend with better quiet,
Better opinion, better confirmation;
For all the soil of the achievement goes
With me into the earth. It seem'd in me,
But as an honour snatch'd with boisterous hand,

And I had many living to upbraid
My gain of it by their assistances;
Which daily grew to quarrel, and to bloodshed.
Wounding supposed peace. All these bold fears,
You see, with peril I have answered;
For all my reign hath been but as a scene
Acting that argument, and now my death
Changes the mode: for what in me was purchase,
Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort;
So, thou the garland wear'st successively.
Yet, though thou stand'st more sure than I could do
Thou art not firm enough: since griefs are green,
And all my friends, which thou must make thy friends,
Have but their strings and teeth newly ta'en out:
By whose fell working I was first advanced,
And by whose power I well might lodge a fear
To be again displac'd. Which to avoid,
I cut some off; and had a purpose now
To lead out many to the Holy Land,
Lest rest, and lying still, might make them look Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry,
Be it thy course to busy giddy minds
With foreign quarrels; that action, hence borne out,
May waste the memory of the former days.
More would I. but my lungs are wasted so.
That strength of speech is utterly denied me.
How I came by the crown, O God, forgive,
And grant it may with thee in true peace live!

P. Hen. My gracious liege! You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me;
Then plain, and right, must my possession be:
Which, I with more than with a common pain,
Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain.

Enter Prince John of Lancaster, Warwick, Lords, and Others.

P. John. Health, peace, and happiness, to my royal father!

K. Hen. Thou bring'st me happiness, and peace, son John:
But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown
From this bare, wither'd trunk: upon thy sight,
My worldly business makes a period.
Where is my lord of Warwick?

P. Hen. My lord of Warwick! K. Hen. Doth any name particular belong
Unto the lodging where I first did swoon?
War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord.
K. Hen. Laud be to God!--even there thy life must end.
It hath been prophesied to me many years,
I should not die but in Jerusalem,
Which vainly I supposed the Holy Land.—
But bear me to that chamber; there I'll lie:
In that Jerusalem shall Harry die.

[Exit]

ACT V.

Enter Shallow, Falstaff, Bardolph, and Page.

Shal. By cock and pie, sir, you shall not away to-night.—What, Davy, I say!

Fal. You must excuse me, master Robert Shallow.

Shal. I will not excuse you; you shall not be excused; excuses shall not be admitted; there is no excuse shall serve; you shall not be excused.—Why, Davy!
Enter Davy.

Davy. Here, sir.

Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy, Davy,—let me see, Davy; let me see,—yea, marry, William cook, bid him come hither.—Sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy. Marry, sir, thus; those precepts cannot be served: and, again, sir,—shall we now the headland with wheat?

Shal. With red wheat, Davy. But for William cook,—are there no young pigeons?

Davy. Yes, sir.—Here is, now, the smith's note for shoeing, and plough iron.

Shal. Let it be cast, and paid.—Sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy. Now, sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be had.—and, sir, do you mean to stop any of William's wages, about the sack he lost the other day at Huckley fair?

Shal. He shall answer it.—Some pigeons, Davy; a couple of short-legged hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook.

Davy. Doth the man of war stay all night, sir?

Shal. Yea, Davy. I will use him well. A friend i' the court is better than a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy; for they are arrant knaves, and will backbite.

Davy. No worse than they are back bitten; for they have marvelous foul linen.

Shal. Well conceited, Davy. About thy business, Davy.

Davy. I beseech you, sir, to countenance William Visor of Wincot against Clement Perkes of the hill.

Shal. There are many complaints, Davy, against that Visor: that Visor is an arrant knave, on my knowledge.

Davy. I grant your worship, that he is a knave, sir; but yet, God forbid, sir, but a knave should have some countenance at his friend's request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not. I have served your worship truly, sir, this eight years; and if I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship. The knave is mine honest friend, sir; therefore, I beseech your worship, let him be countenanced.

Shal. Go to: I say, he shall have no wrong. Look about, Davy. [Exit Davy.] Where are you, sir John? Come, come, come; off with your boots.—Give me your hand, master Bardolph.

Bard. I am glad to see your worship.

Shal. I thank thee with all my heart, kind master Bardolph.—And welcome, my tall fellow. [To the Page.] Come, sir John. [Exit Shalow.

Fal. I'll follow you, good master Robert Shallow. Bardolph, look to our horses. [Exit Bardolph and Page.] If we were sawed into quantities, I should make four dozen of such bearded hermit's staves as master Shallow. It is a wonderful thing to see the semblable coherence of his men's spirits and his: they, by observing him, do bear themselves like foolish judges; he, by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like serving man. Their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society, that they flock together in consent, like so many wild geese. If I had a suit to master Shallow, I would honour his men with the imputation of being near their master; if to his men, I would cury with master Shallow, that no man could better command his servants. It is certain, that either wise bearing, or ignorant carriage, is caught, as men take diseases, one of another: therefore, let men take heed of their company. I will devise matter enough out of this Shallow, to keep prince Harry in continual laughter the wearing-out of six fashions, (which is four terms, or two actions) and he shall laugh without intervals. O! it is much, that a lie with a slight oath, and a jest with a sad brow, will do with a fellow that never had the awh in his shoulders. O! you shall see him laugh, till his face be like a wet cloak ill laid up.

Shal. [Within.] Sir John!

Enter Warwick, and the Lord Chief Justice

War. How now, my lord chief justice! whither away?

Ch. Just. How doth the king?

War. Exceeding well: his cares are now all ended

Ch. Just. I hope, not dead.

War. He's walk'd the way of nature.

And to our purposes he lives no more.

Ch. Just. I would, his majesty had call'd me with him:

The service that I truly did his life,

Hath left me open to all injuries.

War. Indeed, I think the young king loves you not

Ch. Just. I know he doth not, and do arm myself To welcome the condition of the time;

Which cannot look more hideously upon me Than I have drawn it in my fantasy.

Enter Prince John, Prince Humphrey, Clarence, Westmoreland, and Others.

War. Here come the heavy issue of dead Harry: O! that the living Harry had the temper Of him, the worst of these three gentlemen! How many nobles then should hold their places, That must strike sail to spirits of vile sort.

Ch. Just. O God! I fear all will be overturn'd.

P. John. Good morrow, cousin Warwick, good morrow.

P. Humph. Cl. Good morrow, cousin.

P. John. We meet like men that had forgot to speak.

War. We do remember; but our argument Is all too heavy to admit much talk.

P. John. Well, peace be with him that hath made us heavy!

Ch. Just. Peace be with us, lest we be heavier!

P. Humph. O! good my lord, you have lost a friend, indeed;

And I dare swear, you borrow not that face Of seeming sorrow. it is, sure, your own.

P. John. Though no man be assured what grace to You stand in coldest expectation: [find, I am the sorrier; 'twould be otherwise.

Ch. Just. Peace, princes, what I did, I did in honour Led by th' impartial conduct of my soul; And never shall you see, that I will beg A ragged and forestall'd remission. If truth and upright innocency fail me, I'll to the king my master, that is dead, And tell him who hath sent me after him.

War. Here comes the prince.

Enter King Henry V.

Ch. Just. Good morrow, and heaven save your majesty!
KING. This new and gorgeous garment, majesty,
Sits not so easy on me as you think—
Brothers, you mix your sadness with some fear:
This is the English, not the Turkish court;
Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds,
But Harry Harry. Yet be sad, good brothers,
For, to speak truly, it very well becomes you:
Sorrow so royally in you appears,
That I will deeply put the fashion on,
And wear it in my heart. Why then, be sad;
But entertain no more of it, good brothers,
Than a joint burden laid upon us all.
For me, by heaven, I bid you be assured,
I'll be your father and your brother too;
Let me but bear your love, I'll bear your care;
Yet weep, that Harry's dead, and so will I;
But Harry lives, that shall convert those tears,
By number, into hours of happiness.

P. John. Jc. We hope no other from your majesty.

K IN G. You all look strangely on me:—and you most.

To the Chief Justice.

You are, I think, assured I love you not.

Ch. Just. I am assured, if I be measured rightly,
Your majesty hath no just cause to hate me.

KING. No!

How might a prince of my great hopes forget
So great indignities you laid upon me?
What! rate, rebuke, and roughly send to prison
The immediate heir of England! Was this easy?
May this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten?

Ch. Just. I then did use the person of your father;
The image of his power lay then in me:
And, in the administration of his law
While I was busy for the commonwealth.
Your piaceness pleased to forget my place,
The majesty and power of law and justice,
The image of the king whom I presented,
And struck me in my very seat of judgment:
Whereon, as an offender to your father,
I gave bold way to my authority,
And did commit you. If the deed were ill,
Be you contented, wearing now the garland,
To have a son set your decrees at nought;
To pluck down justice from your awful bench;
To trip the course of law, and blunt the sword
That guards the peace and safety of your person:
Nay, more; to spurn at your most royal image,
And mock your workings in a second body.
Question your royal thoughts, make the case yours,
Be now the father, and propose a son;
Hear your own dignity so much profan'd,
See your most dreadful laws so loosely slighted,
Behold yourself so by a son disdain'd.
And then imagine me taking your part,
And in your power soft silencing your son.
After this cold consideration, sentence me;
And, as you are a king, speak in your state
What I have done, that miebecame my place,
My person, or my liege's sovereignty.

KING. You are right, justice; and you weigh this well.
Therefore still bear the balance, and the sword;
And do I wish your honours may increase,
Till you do live to see a son of mine
Offend you, and obey you, as I did.
So shall I live to speak my father's words:

"Happy am I, that have a man so bold,
That dares do justice on my proper son;
And not less happy; having such a son,
That would deliver up his greatness so
Into the hands of justice."—You did commit me,
For which, I do commit into your hand
Th' untaught sword that you have used to bear;
With this remembrance,—that you use the same
With the like bold, just, and impartial spirit.
As you have done against me. There is my hand.
You shall be as a father to my youth:
My voice shall sound as you do prompt mine ear,
And I will stoop and humble my intents
To your well-practic'd, wise directions.—
And, princes all, believe me, I beseech you:
My father is gone wild into his grave,
For in his tomb lie my affections,
And with his spirit sadly I survive,
To mock the expectation of the world,
To frustrate prophecies, and to raze out
Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down
After my seeming. The tide of blood in me
Hath proudly flow'd in vanity till now:
Now doth it turn, and ebb back to the sea,
Where it shall mingle with the state of floods,
And flow henceforth in formal majesty.
Now, call we our high court of parliament,
And let us choose such limits of noble counsel,
That the great body of our state may go
In equal rank with the best govern'd nation;
That war, or peace, or both at once, may be
As things acquainted and familiar to us.
In which you, father, shall have foremost hand.

To the Lord Chief Justice.

Our coronation done, we will accite,
As I before remember'd, all our state:
And (God consigning to my good intents)
No prince, nor peer, shall have just cause to say,
God shorten Harry's happy life one day.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Glostershire. The Garden of SHALLOW's House.

Enter Falstaff, Shallow, Silence, Bardolph, the Page, and Davy.

Shal. Nay, you shall see mine orchard; where, in an arbour, we will eat a last year's pippin of my own grafting, with a dish of carraways, and so forth.—Come, cousin Silence:—and then to bed.

Fal. 'Fore God, you have here a goodly dwelling, and a rich.

Shal. Barren, barren, barren; beggars all, beggars all, sir John.—merry, good air.—Spread, Davy; spread, Davy; well said, Davy.

Fal. This Davy serves you for good uses: he is your serving-man, and your husband.

Shal. A good varlet, a good varlet, a very good varlet, sir John.—By the mass, I have drunk too much sack at supper:—a good varlet. Now sit down, now sit down.—Come, cousin.

Sil. Ah, sirrah I quoth-a,—we shall

Do nothing but eat, and make good cheer,
And praise heaven for the merry year;
When flesh is cheap and females dear,
And lusty lads roam here and there,
So merrily,

And ever among so merrily.

Fal. There's a merry heart!—Good master Silence,
I'll give you a health for that anon.

Shal. Give master Bardolph some wine, Davy.

Davy. Sweet sir, sit; I'll be with you anon:—most sweet sir, sit.—Master page, good master page, sit: grosser!—What you want in meat, we'll have in drink.

But you must bear: the heart's all.

[Exit.
Shall. Be merry, master Bardolph;—and my little soldier there, be merry.
Sil. Be merry, be merry, my wife has all; [Singing. For women are scarce, both short and tall;
’Tis merry in hall, when beards wag all,
And welcome shrieve-tide.
Be merry, be merry, &c.
Fal. I did not think master Silence had been a man of this mettle.
Sil. Who? I have been merry twice and once, ere now.
Re-enter Davy.
Davy. There is a dish of leather-coats! for you. [Setting them before BARDOLPH.
Shal. Davy,—
Davy. Your worship.—I’ll be with you straight.—
A cup of wine, sir?
Sil. A cup of wine, that’s brisk and fine, [Singing.
And drink unto the lemon wine; And a merry heart lives long-a.
Fal. Well said, master Silence.
Sil. An we shall be merry, now comes in the sweet of the night.
Fal. Health and long life to you, master Silence.
Sil. Fill the cup, and let it come; I’ll pledge you a mile to the bottom.
Shal. Honest Bardolph, welcome; if thou wastest any thing, and wilt not call, be shrewd thy heart.—Welcome, my little thin thief; and welcome, indeed, too.—I’ll drink to master Bardolph, and to all the cavaliers about London.
Davy. I hope to see London once ere I die.
Bard. An I might see you there, Davy,—
Shal. By the mass, you’ll crack a quart together.
Ha! will you not, master Bardolph?
Bard. Yea, sir, in a pottle pot.
Sil. By God’s legs, I thank thee.—The knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that: he will not out; he is true bred.
Bard. And I’ll stick by him, sir.
Sil. Why, there spoke a king. Lack nothing; be merry. [Knocking heard.] Look, who’s at the door there? Ho! who knocks?
[Exit Davy.
Fal. Why, now you have done me right.
Sil. Do me right? [Singing. And dub me knight:
Saminga.
Is’t not so?
Fal. ’Tis so.
Sil. Is’t so? Why, then say, an old man can do somewhat.
Re-enter Davy.
Davy. An’t please your worship, there’s one Pistol come from the court with news.
Fal. From the court? let him come in.—
Enter Pistol.
How now, Pistol?
Pist. Sir John, God save you, sir.
Fal. What wind blew you hither, Pistol?
Pist. Not the ill wind which blows no man to good.
Sweet knight, th’art now one of the greatest men In the realm.
Sil. By’t, lady, I think he be, but Goodman Puff of Pist. Puff!—[Harson.
Puff in thy teeth, most recreant coward base!—
Sir John, I am thy Pistol, and thy friend, And helter-skelter have I rode thee; And tidings do I bring, and lucky joys, And golden times, and happy news of price.
Fal. I pr’ythee now, deliver them like a man of the world.
Pist. A foutra for the world, and worldlings base! I speak of Africa, and golden joys.
Fal. O base Assyrian knight! what is thy news? Let king Cophetua know the truth thereof.
Sil. And Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John. [Sings.
Pist. Shall duellish curs confront the Helicons? And shall good news be baffled? Then, Pistol, lay thy head in Furies’ lap
Shal. Honest gentleman, I know not your breeding Pist. Why then, lament therefore.
Sil. Give me pardon, sir—if, sir, you come with news from the court, I take it, there is but two ways, either to utter them, or to conceal them. I am, sir, under the king, in some authority.
Pist. Under which king, Bezonian! speak, or die.
Shal. Under king Harry.
Pist. Harry the fourth? or fifth?
Shal. Harry the fourth.
Pist. A foutra for thine office!—
Sir John, thy tender lambkin now is king:
Harry the fifth’s the man. I speak the truth:
When Pistol lies, do this; and fig’ me, like
The bragging Spaniard.
Fal. What! is the old king dead?
Pist. As nail in door: the things I speak are just.
Bard. O joyful day!—I would not take a knight hood for my fortune.
Pist. What! I do bring good news.
Fal. Carry master Silence to bed.—Master Shallow, my lord Shallow, be what thou wilt, I am fortune’s steward. Get on thy boots: we’ll ride all night.—O, sweet Pistol!—Away, Bardolph. [Exit Bard.]
Pist. Pistol, utter more to me, and, withal, devise something to do thyself good.—Boot, boot, master Shallow: I know, the young king is sick for me. Let us take any man’s horses; the laws of England are at my commandment. Happy are they which have been my friends, and was unto my lord chief justice!
Pist. Let vultures vile seize on his lungs also! “Where is the life that late I led,” say they; Why, here it is: welcome this pleasant day!” [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—London. A Street.

Enter Beadles, dragging in Hostess Quickly, and Doll Tear-sheet.

Host. No, thou arrant knave: I would to God I might die, that I might have thee hanged; thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joint.

1 Bead. The constables have delivered her over to me, and she shall have whipping-cheer enough. I warrant her. There hath been a man or two lately killed about her.

Doll. Nut-hook, nut-hook, you lie. Come on: I’ll tell thee what, thou dammed tripe-visaged rascal, an child I now go with do miscarry, thou hast better then hast struck thy mother, thou paper-faced villain.

Host. O the Lord, that sir John were come! he would make this a bloody day to somebody. But I pray God the fruit of her womb miscarry!
King. My lord chief justice, speak to that vain man.

Ch. Just. Have you your wits? know you what 'tis you speak?

Fal. My king! my Jove! I speak to thee, my heart! King. I know thee not, old man. fal. to thy prayers

How ill white hairs become a fool, and jester!

I have long dream'd of such a kind of man,
So surfeit-swell'd, so old, and so profane;
But, being awake, I do despise my dream.

Make less thy body, hence, and more thy grace,
Leave gormandizing; know, the grave doth gape
For thee thrice wider than for other men,
Reply not to me with a fool-born jest:
Presume not that I am the thing I was;
For God doth know, so shall the world perceive,
That I have turn'd away my former self:
So will I those that kept me company.
When thou dost hear I am as I have been,
Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast,
The tutor and the feeder of my riots.

Till then, I banish thee, on pain of death,
As I have done the rest of my misleaders,
Not to come near our person by ten mile.

For competence of life I will allow you,
That lack of means enforce you not to evil;
And as we hear you do reform yourselves,
We will, according to your strength and qualities,
Give you advancement.—Be it your charge, my lord
To see perform'd the tenor of our word.—

Set on.

[Exeunt King and his Train.

Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound.

Shal. Ay, marry, sir John; which I beseech you to let me have home with me.

Fal. That can hardly be, master Shallow. Do not you grieve at this: I shall be sent for in private to him. Look you, he must seem thus to the world. Fear not your advancement; I will be the man yet that shall make you great.

Shal. I cannot perceive how, unless you should give me your doublet, and stuff me out with straw. I beseech you, good sir John, let me have five hundred of my thousand.

Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word: this that you heard was but a colour.

Shal. A colour, I fear, that you will die in, sir John.

Fal. Fear no colours: go with me to dinner. Come, lieutenant Pistol;—come, Bardolph.—I shall be sent for soon at night.

Re-enter Prince John, the Chief Justice, Officers, &c.

Ch. Just. Go, carry sir John Falstaff to the Fleet.

Take all his company along with him.

Fal. My lord, my lord!—

Ch. Just. I cannot now speak: I will hear you soon

Take them away.

Pist. Se foruno me tormenuta, il sperane me contemtus.

P. John. I like this fair procceeding of the king's.
He hath intent, his wonted followers
Shall all be very well provided for;
But all are banish'd, till their conversations
Appear more wise and modest to the world.

Ch. Just. And so they are.

P. John. The king hath call'd his parliament, my lord

Ch. Just. He hath.

P. John. I will lay odds, that, ere this year expire
We hear our civil swords, and native fire,
As far as France. I heard a bird so sing,
Whose music, to my thinking, pleas'd the king.

Come, will you hence?

[Exeunt]
EPLOGUE,

BY ONE THAT CAN DANCE. ¹

First my fear, then my courtesy, last my speech. My fear is your displeasure, my courtesy my duty, and my speech to beg your pardon. If you look for a good speech, now, you undo me; for what I have to say, is of mine own making, and what indeed I should say, will, I doubt, prove mine own marring. But to the purpose, and so to the venture.—Be it known to you, (as it is very well) I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play, to pray your patience for it, and to promise you a better. I did mean, indeed, to pay you with this; which, if, like an ill venture, it come unluckily home, I break, and you, my gentle creditors, lose. Here, I promised you, I would be, and here I commit my body to your mercies: bate me some, and I will pay you some; and, as most debtors do, promise you infinitely.

If my tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs? and yet that were but light payment, to dance out of your debt; but a good conscience will make any possible satisfaction, and so will I. All the gentlewomen here have forgiven me; if the gentlemen will not, then the gentlemen do not agree with the gentlewomen, which was never seen before in such an assembly.

One word more, I beseech you. If you be not too much cloyed with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story, with sir John in it, and make you merry with fair Katharine of France; where, for any thing I know, Falstaff shall die of a sweat, unless already he be killed with your hard opinions; for Oldeastle died a martyr, and this is not the man. My tongue is weary; when my legs are too, I will bid you good night: and so kneel down before you; but, indeed, to pray for the queen.

CHORUS.

Enter Chorus, as Prologue.¹

O for a muse of fire, that would ascend
The brightest heaven of invention!
A kingdom for a stage, princes to act,
And monarchs to behold the swelling scene!
Then should the warlike Harry, like himself,
Assume the port of Mars; and at his heels,
Leash'd in like hounds, should famine, sword, and fire,
Crouch for employment. But pardon, gentle all,
The flat unraised spirit that hath da'd
On this unworthy scaffold, to bring forth
So great an object: can this cockpit hold
The vasty fields of France? or may we cram
Within this wooden O the very casques,
That did affright the air at Agincourt?
O! pardon, since a crooked figure may
Attest in little place a million;

And let us, cyphers to this great accompt,
On your imaginary forces work.
Suppose, within the girdle of these walls
Are now confin'd two mighty monarchies,
Whose high upreared and abutting fronts
The perilous, narrow ocean parts asunder.
Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts;
Into a thousand parts divide one man,
And make imaginry puissance:
Think, when we talk of horses, that you see them
Printing their proud hoofs on the receiving earth;
For 'tis your thoughts that now must deck our kings
Carry them here and there, jumping o'er times,
Turning th' accomplishment of many years
Into an hour-glass; for the which supply,
Admit me chorus to this history;
Who, prologue-like, your humble patience pray,
Gently to hear, kindly to judge, our play.²

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. An Antechamber in the King's Palace.

Enter the Archbishop of Canterbury, and Bishop of Ely.

Cant. My lord, I'll tell you, that self bill is urg'd,
Which in the eleventh year of the last king's reign
Was like, and had indeed against us pass'd,
But that the scrambling* and unquiet time
Did push it out of farther question.

¹ The words, as Prologue: not in s. e. ² The Globe Theatre, where the play was probably first acted. ³ All the choruses were first printed in the folio. ⁴ Scrambling.
Of indigent faint souls, past corporal toil,
A hundred almshouses, right well supplied;
And to the coffers of the king beside,
A thousand pounds by the year. Thus runs the bill.

Ely. This would drink deep.

Cant. 'T would drink the cup and all.

Ely. But what prevention?

Cant. The king is full of grace, and fair regard.

Ely. And a true lover of the holy church.

Cant. The courses of his youth promis'd it not;
He breath no sooner left his father's body,
But that his wildness, mortified in him,
Seem'd to die too; yea, at that very moment,
Consideration like an angel came,
And whipp'd the offending Adam out of him,
Leaving his body as a paradise,
T' envelop and contain celestial spirits.

Ely. Never was such a sudden scholar made:
Never came reformation in a flood,
With such a heady current, scouring faults;
Nor never Hydra-headed wilfulness
So soon did lose his seat, and all at once,
As in this king.

Ely. We are blessed in the change.

Cant. Hear him but reason in divinity,
And, all-admiring, with an inward wish
You would desire the king were made a prelate:
Hear him debate of commonwealth affairs,
You would say, it hath been all-in-all his study:
List his discourse of war, and you shall hear
A fearful battle render'd you in music:
Turn him to any cause of policy,
The Gordian knot of it he will unloose,
Familiar as his garter: that, when he speaks,
The air, a char'd libertine, is still,
And the mute wonder lurketh in men's ears,
To steal his sweet and honeyed sentences;
So that the art and practice part of life
Must be the mistress to this theorie:
Which is a wonder, how his grace should glean it,
Since his addiction was to courses vain;
His companies unletter'd, rude, and shallow:
His hours fill'd up with riots, banquets, sports;
And never noted in him any study,
Any retirement, any sequesterance
From open haunts and popularity.

Ely. The strawberry grows underneath the nettle,
And wholesome berries thrive and ripen best,
Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality:
And so the prince obscur'd his contemplation
Under the veil of wildness; which, no doubt,
Grew like the summer grass, fastest by night,
Unseen, yet excessive in his faculty.

Cant. It must be so; for miracles are cas'd,
And therefore we must needs admit the means,
How things are perfected.

Ely. But, my good lord,
How now for mitigation of this bill
Urg'd by the commons? Doth his majesty
Incline to 't, or no?

Cant. He seems indifferent,
Or rather, swaying more upon our part,
Than cherishing th' exhibitors against us.
For I have made an offer to his majesty,—
Upon our spiritual conversation,
And in regard of causes now in hand,
Which I have open'd to his grace at large,
As touching France,—to give a greater sum
Than ever at one time the clergy yet

Did to his predecessors part with.

Ely. How did this offer seem receiv'd, my lord?

Cant. With good acceptance of his majesty;
Save, that there was not time enough to hear
(As I perceiv'd, his grace would fain have done)
The several, and unhidden passages
Of his true titles to some certain dukedoms,
And, generally, to the crown and seat of France,
Deriv'd from Edward, his great grandfather.

Ely. What was th' impediment that broke this off?

Cant. The French ambassador upon that instant
Cra'v'd audience; and the hour, I think, is come,
To give him hearing. Is it four o'clock?

Ely. It is.

Cant. Then go we in, to know his embassy,
Which I could with a ready guess declare,
Before the Frenchman speak a word of it.

Ely. I'll wait upon you, and I long to hear it. [Exeunt

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room of State in the Same
Enter King Henry, Gloster, Bedford, Exeter,
Warwick, Westmoreland, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Where is my gracious lord of Canterbury?
Ely. Not here in presence.

K. Hen. Send for him, good uncle.

West. Shall we call the ambassador, my liege?

K. Hen. Not yet, my cousin: we would be resolv'd
Before we hear him, of some things of weight,
That task our thoughts, concerning us and France.

Enter the Archbishop of Canterbury, and Bishop Ely.

K. Hen. God, and his angels, guard your sacred throne
And make you long become it!

Ely. Sure, we thank you.

My learned lord, we pray you to proceed,
And justly and religiously unfold
Why the law Salique, that they have in France,
Or should, or should not, bar us in our claim.
And God forbid, my dear and faithful lord,
That you should fashion, writ, or bow your reading
Or nicely charge your understanding soul,
With opening titles miscreate, whose right
Suits not in native colours with the truth;
For God doth know, how many, now in health,
Shall drop their blood in approbation
Of what your reverence shall invite us to.
Therefore, take heed how you impawn our person,
How you awake our sleeping sword of war:
We charge you in the name of God, take heed;
For never two such kingdoms did contend,
Without much fall of blood; whose guiltless drops
Are every one a woe, a sore complaint.
Against him whose wrongs give edge unto the swords
That make such waste in brief mortality.
Under this conjuration, speak, my lord,
And we will hear, note, and believe in heart,
That what you speak is in your conscience wash'd.
As pure as sin with baptism.

Cant. Then hear me, gracious sovereign, and you peers,
That owe yourselves, your lives, and services,
To this imperial throne.—There is no bar
To make against your highness' claim to France,
But this, which they produce from Pharamond,—
In terram Salicam nulliter nè succedant.
"No woman shall succeed in Salique land."
Which Salique land the French unjustly groze,
To be the realm of France, and Pharamond
The founder of this law, and female bar

1 & the second folio; the first: current. 2 In the quartos, the play commences here.
Yet their own authors faithfully affirm,
That the land Salique is in Germany,
Between the floods of Salza and of Elbe;
Where Charles the great, having subdued the Saxons,
There left behind and settled certain French;
Who, holding in disdain the German women
For some dishonest manners of their life,
Establish’d then this law,—to wit, no female
Should be inheritrix in Salique land:
Which Salique, as I said, ’twixt Elbe and Sala,
Is at this day in Germany call’d Meissen.
Then doth it well appear, the Salique law
Was not devised for the realm of France;
Nor did the French possess the Salique land
Until four hundred one and twenty years
After definition of king Pharamond,
Idly supposed the founder of this law;
Who died within the year of our redemption
Four hundred twenty-six, and Charles the great Subdued the Saxons, and did seat the French
Beyond the river Sala in the year
Eight hundred five. Besides their writers say,
King Pepin, which disposed Childeric,
Did, as heir general, be descended
Of Blithild, which was daughter to king Clothair,
Make claim and title to the crown of France.
Hugh Capet also,—who usurp’d the crown
Of Charles the duke of Lorain, sole heir male
Of the true line and stock of Charles the great,—
To found4 his title with some shows of truth,
Though, in pure truth, it was corrupt and naught,
Convey’d himself as th’ heir to the lady Lingare,
Daughter to Charlemain, who was the son
To Lewis the emperor, and Lewis the son
Of Charles the great. Also king Lewis the tenth,
Who was sole heir to the usurper Capet,
Could not keep quiet in his conscience,
Wearing the crown of France, till satisfied
That fair Queen Isabel, his grandmother,
Was lineal of the lady Ermengarde,
Daughter to Charles the foresaid duke of Lorain:
By the which marriage the line of Charles the great
Was reunited to the crown of France.
So that, as clear as is the summer’s sun,
King Pepin’s title, and Hugh Capet’s claim,
King Lewis’s satisfaction, all appear
To hold in right and title of the female.
So do the kings of France unto this day,
Howbeit they would hold up this Salique law,
To bar your highness claiming from the female;
And rather choose to hide them in a net,
Than amply to imbibe their crooked titles
Usurp’d from you and your progenitors.
K. Hen. May I with right and conscience make this claim?
Cant. The sin upon my head, dread sovereign;
For in the book of Numbers is it writ,
When the man dies, let the inheritance
Descend unto the daughter. Gracious lord,
Stand for your own; unwind your bloody flag;
Look back into your mighty ancestors:
Go, my dread lord, to your great grand sire’s tomb,
From whom you claim; invoke his warlike spirit,
And your great uncle’s, Edward the black prince,
Who on the French ground play’d a tragedy,
Making a defect on the full power of France,
While his most mighty father on a hill
Stood smiling, to behold his lion’s whelp
Forage in blood of French nobility.

O noble English! that could entertain
With half their forces the full pride of France,
And let another half stand laughing by,
All out of work, and cold for action
Ely. Awake remembrance of these valiant dead,
And with your puissant arm renew their feats.
You are their heir, you sit upon their throne;
The blood and courage, that renowned them,
Runs in your veins; and my thrice-puissant liege
Is in the very May-morn of his youth,
Ripe for exploits, and mighty enterprises.
Exe. Your brother kings, and monarchs of the earth,
Do all expect that you should rouse yourself,
As did the former lions of your blood.
West. They know your grace hath cause, and means,
And might;
So hath your highness:—never king of England
Had nobles richer, and more loyal subjects,
Whose hearts have left their bodies here in England,
And lie pavilion’d in the fields of France.
Cant. O! let their bodies fall on my dear liege,
With blood, and sword, and fire, to win your right:
In aid whereof, we of the spirituality,
Will raise your highness such a mighty sum,
As never did the clergy at one time
Bring in to any of your ancestors.
K. Hen. We must not only arm the invade the French,
But lay down our proportions to defend Against the Scot; who will make road upon us
With all advantages.
Cant. They of those marches, gracious sovereign,
Shall be a wall sufficient to defend
Our inland from the pilfering borderers.
K. Hen. We do not mean the coursing snatchers only,
But fear the main intention of the Sot,
Who hath been still a greedy5 neighbour to us:
For you shall read, that my great grandfather
Never went with his forces into France,
But that the Scot on his unfinish’d kingdom
Came pouring, like the tide into a breach,
With ample and brim fulness of his force;
Galling the gleaned land with hot essays,
Girding with grievous siege castles and towns;
That England, being empty of defence,
Hath shoke, and trembled at th’ ill neighbourhood.
Cant. She hath been than more fear’d than harm’d your liege;
For hear her but exampled by herself:
When all her chivalry hath been in France,
And she a mourning widow of her nobles,
She hath herself not only well defended,
But taken, and impounded as a stray,
The king of Scots; whom she did send to France
To fill king Edward’s train4 with prisoner kings,
And make their chronicles as rich with praise,
As is the ounce and bottom of the sea,
With sunken wreck and sunless treasures.
West. But there’s a saying, very old and true—
"If that you will France win,
Then with Scotland first begin."
For once the eagle, England, being in prey,
To her ungarded nest the weasel, Scot,
Comes sneaking, and so seeks her princely eggs,
Playing the mouse in absence of the cat,
To tear and havoc more than she can cat.
Exe. It follows then, the ca. must stay at home
Yet that is not a crush’d necessity,
Since we have locks to safeguard necessaries,
And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves.
While that the armed hand doth fight abroad,
Th' advised head defends itself at home:
For government, though high, and low, and lower,
Put into parts, doth keep in one consent,
Congreasing in a full and natural close,
Like music.

_Cant._
Therefore doth heaven divide
The state of man in divers functions,
Setting endeavour in continual motion;
To which is fixed, as an aim or butt,
Obedience; for so work the honey bees,
Creatures that by a rule in nature teach
The art of order to a peopled kingdom;
They have a king, and officers of state;¹
Where some, like magistrates, correct at home,
Others, like merchants, venture trade abroad,
Others, like soldiers, armed in their stings,
Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds;
Which pillage they with merry march bring home
To the tent-royal of their emperor:
Who, busied in his majesty, surveys
The singing masons building roofs of gold,
The civil citizens kneading up the honey,
The poor mechanic porters crowding in
Their heavy burdens at his narrow gate,
The sad-ey'd justice, with his surly hum,
Delivering o'er to executors pale
The lazy yawning drone.  I this infer,—
That many things, having full reference
To one consent, may work contrariously;
As many arrows, loosed several ways,
Come to one mark; as many ways unite;²
As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea;
As many lines close in the dial's center;
So may a thousand actions, once afoot,
End in one purpose, and be all well borne
Without defect.  Therefore, to France, my liege.
Divide your happy England into four;
Whereof take you one quarter into France,
And you withal shall make all Gallia shake.
If we, with three such powers left at home,
Cannot defend our own doors from the dog,
Let us be worried, and his bane lose
The name of hardiness, and policy.

_K. Hen._ Call in the messengers sent from the Dauphin.

_[Exit an Attendant._

Now are we well resolv'd, and, by God's help,
And yours, the noble sinews of our power,
France being ours, we'll bend it to our awe,
Or break it all to pieces: or there we'll sit,
Ruling in large and ample empery.
O'er France, and all her almost kingly dukedoms,
Or lay these bones in an unworthy urn,
Tombless, with no remembrance over them:
Either our history shall, with a full mouth,
Speak freely of our acts, or else our grave,
Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueless mouth,
Not worship'd with a waxen epitaph.

_Enter ambassadors of France._

Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure
Of our fair cousin Dauphin; for, we hear,
Your greeting is from him, not from the king.

_Amb._ May 't please your majesty, to give us leave
Freely to render what we have in charge;
Or shall we sparingly show you far off,
The Dauphin's meaning, and our embassy?

_K. Hen._ We are no tyrant, but a Christian king,
Unto whose grace our passion is as subject,
As are our wretches fetter'd in our prisons;
Therefore, with frank and with uncurbed plainness,
Tell us the Dauphin's mind.

_Amb._
Thus then, in few.
Your highness, lately sending into France,
Did claim some certain dukedoms, in the right
Of your great predecessor, Edward third.
In answer of which claim, the prince our master
Says, that you savour too much of your youth,
And bids you be advis'd, there's sought in France
That can be with a nimble galliard won:
You cannot revel into dukedoms there.
He therefore sends you, meeriter for your spirit,
This sum of treasure; and, in lieu of this, _[Show it._
Desires you, let the dukedoms, that you claim,
Hear no more of you.  This the Dauphin speaks.

_K. Hen._ What treasure, uncle?

_Esc._
Tennis-balls, my liege.  _[Opening it._

_K. Hen._ We are glad the Dauphin is so pleasant with us.
His present, and your pains, we thank you for:
When we have match'd our rackets to these balls,
We will, in France, by God's grace, play a set,
Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard.
Tell him, he hath made a match with such a wrangler,
That all the courts of France will be disturb'd
With chases.  And we understand him well,
How he comes o'er us with our wilder days,
Not measuring what use we made of them.
We never valued this poor seat of England,
And therefore, living hence, did give ourself
To barbarous license; as 't is ever common.
That men are merriest when they are from home.
But tell the Dauphin,—I will keep my state;
Be like a king, and show my soul of greatness,
When I do rouse me in my throne of France:
For here I have laid by my majesty,
And plodded like a man for working days,
But I will rise there with so full a glory,
That I will dazzle all the eyes of France,
Yea, strike the Dauphin blind to look on us.
And tell the pleasant prince, this mock of his
Hath turn'd his balls to gun-stones;² and his soul
Shall stand sore charg'd for the wasteful vengeance
That shall fly with them: for many a thousand widows
Shall this his mock mock out of their dear husbands;
Mock mothers from their sons, mock castles down,
And some are yet ungotten, and unborn,
That shall have cause to curse the Dauphin's scorn.
But this lies all within the will of God,
To whom I do appeal; and in whose name,
Tell you the Dauphin, I am coming on,
To venge me as I may, and to put forth
My rightful hand in a well hallow'd cause.
So get you hence in peace; and tell the Dauphin,
His jest will savour but of shallow wit,
When thousands weep, more than did laugh at it.
—Convey them with safe conduct.—Fare you well.

_[Exeunt ambassadors._

_Esc._
This was a merry message.

_K. Hen._ We hope to make the sender blush at it.
Therefore, my lords, omit no happy hour,
That may give furtherance to our expedition;
For we have now no thought in us but France,
Save those to God, that run before our business.
Therefore, let our proportions for these wars
Be soon collected, and all things thought upon,

¹ sorts: in f. e. ² as many ways meet in one town: in f. e. ³ Not in f. e. ⁴ A match at tennis, in which the struggler conveys to seeing who will keep up the ball the longest. ⁵ sail: in f. e. ⁶ Cannon balls were, at first, of stone.
ACT II.

Nym. 'Faith, I will live so long as I may, that's the certain of it; and when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may: that is my rest, that is the rendezvous of it.

Bard. It is certain, corporal, that he is married to Nell Quickly; and, certainly, she did you wrong, for you were troth-plight to her.

Nym. I cannot tell: things must be as they may: men may sleep, and they may have their throats about them at that time, and some say knives have edges. It must be as it may: though patience be a tired jade, yet she will plod. There must be conclusions. Well, I cannot tell.

Enter Pistol and Mrs. Quickly.

Bard. Here comes ancient Pistol, and his wife.—Good corporal, be patient here.—How now, mine host, Pistol?—Pist. Base^tike^, call'st thou me host? Now, by this hand I swear, I scorn the term; Nor shall my Nell keep lodgers.

Quick. No, by my troth, not long: for we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen gentlewomen, that live honestly by the prick of their needles, but it will be thought we keep a bawdy-house straight. [Nym draws his sword.] O well-a-day, lady! if he be not hewn^now^ now!—we shall see wilful adultery and murder committed.

Bard. Good lieutenant,—good corporal, offer nothing here.

Nym. Pistil!

Pist. Pist. Pish! for thee, Iceland dog; thou prick-erected ear of Iceland! [Draws his sword.]

Quick. Good corporal Nym, show thy valour, and put up your sword.

Nym. Will you show off? I would have you solus.13

Pist. Solus. Egregious dog? O viper vile! The solus in thy most marvellous face; The solus in thy teeth, and in thy throat, And in thy hateful lungs, yea, in thy maw, perdy; And, which is worse, within thy nasty mouth! I do retract the solus in thy bowels: For I can take, and Pistol's cock is up, And flashing fire will follow.

Nym. I am not Barbazon; you cannot conjure me. I have an humour to knock you indifferently well. If you grow foul with me, Pistol, I will scour you with my rapier, as I may, in fair terms: if you would walk off, I would prick your guts a little, in good terms, as I may; and that's the humour of it.

Pist. O bragart vile, and damned furious wight! The grave doth gape, and doating death is near; Therefore exhale.14

Bard. Hear me; hear me what I say:—he that strikes the first stroke, I'll run him up to the hills, as I am a soldier. [Draws]

Pist. An oath of mickle might, and fury shall abate Give me thy fist, thy fore-fist to me give; Thy spirits are most tall.15

[Pistol and Nym sheathe their swords.]

Enter Nym and Bardolph.

Bard. Well met, corporal Nym.

Nym. Good morrow, lieutenant Bardolph.

Bard. What are ancient Pistol and you friends yet? Nym. For my part I care not: I say little; but when time shall serve, there shall be smites;—but that shall be as it may. I dare not fight; but I will wink, and hold out mine iron. It is a simple one; but what though? it will trot teaste, and it will endure cold as another man's sword will; and there's an end.14

Bard. I will bestow a breakfast to make you friends, and we'll be all three sworn brothers to France: let it be so, good corporal Nym.
Nym. I will cut thy throat, one time or other, in fair terms; that is the humour of it.

Pist. Coupe le gorge, that's the word?—I defy thee again.

O hound of Crete, think'st thou my spouse to get?
No; to the spital go,
And from the powdering tub of infamy
Fetch forth the Lazar kite of Cressid's kind,
Doll Tear-sheets she by name, and her espouse:
I have, and I will hold, the quondam Quickly
For the only she; and—pauca, there's enough.1

Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine host Pistol, you must come to my master, and your2 hostess.—He is very sick, and would to bed.

—Good Bardolph, put thy face between his sheets, and do the office of a warming-pan: 'faith, he's very ill.

Bard. Away, you rogue.

Quick. By my troth, he'll yield the crow a pudding one of these days: the king has killed his heart.

Good husband, come home presently.

[Exeunt Mrs. Quickly and Boy.

Bard. Come, shall I make you two friends? We must to France together. Why, the devil, should we keep knives to cut one another's throats?

Pist. Let floods o'erwhelm, and floods for food howl on!

Nym. You'll pay me the eight shillings I won of you at betting?

Pist. Base is the slave that pays.

Nym. That now I will have; that's the humour of it.

Pist. As manhood shall compound. Push home.

Bard. By this sword, he that makes the first thrust, 'll kill him; by this sword, I will.

Pist. Sword is an oath, and oaths must have their course.

Bard. Corporal Nym, an thou wilt be friends, be friends: an thou wilt not, why then be enemies with me too. Pr'ythee, put up.

Nym. I shall have my eight shillings, I won of you at betting?

Pist. A noble shalt thou have, and present pay:
And liquor likewise will I give to thee,
And friendship shall combine, and brotherhood:
I'll live by Nym, and Nym shall live by me.—
Is not this just? for I shall suffer bet
Unto the camp, and profits will accrue.

Give me thy hand.

Nym. Shall I have my noble?

Pist. In cash most justly paid.

Nym. Well then, that's the humour of it.

[They shake hands.2

Re-enter Mrs. Quickly.

Quick. As ever you come of women, come in quickly to sir John. Ah, poor heart! he is so shaken of a burning quotidian tetter, that it is most lamentable to behold. Sweet men, come to him.

Nym. The king hath run bad humours on the knight, that's the even of it.

Pist. Nym, thou hast spoke the right;
His heart is fracted and corroborate.

Nym. The king is a good king; but it must be as it may: he passes some humours, and careers.

Pist. Let us console the knight, for lambkins we will live.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Southampton. A Council-Chamber.

Enter Exeter, Bedford, and Westmoreland.

Bed. 'Fore God, his grace is bold to trust these traitors
Exe. They shall be apprehended by and by.
West. How smooth and even they do bear themselves,
As if allegiance in their bosoms sat,
Crowned with faith, and constant loyalty.

Bed. The king hath note of all that they intend,
By interception which they dream not of.

Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bed-fellow,3
Whom he hath duld'd and cloyd' with gracious favours;
That he should, for a foreign purse, so sell
His sovereign's life to death and treachery!

Trumpets sound. Enter King Henry, Scroop, Cambridge, Grey, Lords, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Now sits the wind fair, and we will aboard
My lord of Cambridge,—and my kind lord of Marshall,—
And you, my gentle knight, give me your thoughts.
Think you not, that the powers we bear with us
Will cut their passage through the force of France,
Doing the execution, and the act,
For which we have in head assembled them?

Scroop. No doubt, my liege, if each man do his best.

K. Hen. I doubt not that: since we are well persuaded,
We carry not a heart with us from hence,
That grows not in a fair consent with ours;
Nor leave not one behind, that doth not wish
Success and conquest to attend on us.

Cam. Never was monarch better feared, and lov'd,
Than is your majesty: there's not a subject,
That sits in heart-grief and uncasiness
Under the sweet shade of your government.

Grey. True; those that were your father's enemies,
Have steep'd their gall in honey, and do serve you
With hearts create of duty and of zeal.4

K. Hen. We therefore have great cause of thank-
And shall forget the office of our hand,
Sooner than quittance of desert and merit,
According to the weight and worthiness.

Scroop. So service shall with steel'd sinews toil,
And labour shall refresh itself with hope,
To do your grace incessant services.

K. Hen. We judge no less.—Uncle of Exeter,
Enlarge the man committed yesterday,
That rai'd against our person: we consider,
It was excess of wine that set him on;
And, on our5 more advice, we pardon him.

Scroop. That's mercy, but too much security.
Let him be punish'd, sovereign; lest example
Breed by his sufferance more of such a kind.

K. Hen. O! let us yet be merciful, my lord.
Cam. So may your highness, and yet punish too.
Grey. You show great mercy, if you give him life
After the taste of much correction.

K. Hen. Alas! your too much love and care of me
Are heavy orisons against this poor wretch
If little faults, proceeding on distemper,
Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch our eye,
When capital crimes, chew'd, swallow'd, and digested
Appear before us?—We'll yet enlarge that man,
Though Cambridge, Scroop, and Grey, in their dear care,
And tender preservation of our person,
Would have him punish'd. And now to our French causes:

Who are the state6 commissioners?

Cam. I one, my lord:

---

1 The folio adds to go to; which most, eds. usually print: go to. 2 you, seems a better reading. 3 Darius: in f. o. This speech is only in the quarto. 4 Not in f. o. 5 The practice here alluded to, seems to have been not unusual. 6 his: in f. o. 7 into: in f. o.
KING HENRY V.

Scene II.

Your highness bade me ask for it to-day.

Scroop. So did you me, my liege.

Grey. And I, my royal sovereign.

K. Hen. Then, Richard, earl of Cambridge, there is yours:

There yours, lord Scroop of Marsham:—and, sir knight, Grey of Northumberland, this same is yours:

Read them; and know, I know your worthiness.

They read and start.

My lord of Westmoreland, and uncle Exeter,

We will aboard to-night.—Why, how now, gentlemen! What see you in these papers, that you lose So much complexion?—look ye, how they change:

Their checks are paper.—Why, what read you there, That hath so cowardly and chas'd your blood Out of appearance?

Can. I do confess my fault,

And do submit to your highness' mercy,

Grey. Scroop. To which we all appeal.

K. Hen. The mercy that was quick in us but late,

By your own counsel is suppress'd and kill'd:

You must not dare, for shame, to talk of mercy;

For your own reasons turn into your bosoms,

As do upon their marvels, and upon you*.

See you, my princes, and my noble peers,

These English monsters! My lord of Cambridge here,—

You know, how apt our love was to accord To furnish him with all appetitents Belonging to his honour: and this man

Hath, for a few light crowns, lightly conspir'd,

And sworn unto the practices of France,

To kill us here in Hampton: to the which,

This knight, no less for bounty bound to us Than. Cambridge is, hath likewise sworn.—But O! What shall I say to thee, lord Scroop? thou cruel, Ingrateful, savage, and inhuman creature!

Thou that didst bear the key of all my counsels, That knew'st the very bottom of my soul, That almost mightest have coin'd me into gold, Wouldst thou have practis'd on me for thy use? May it be possible, that foreign hire Could out of thee extract one spark of evil, That might annoy my finger? 'tis so strange, That, though the truth of it stands off as gross As black and white, my eye will severely see it.

Treason and murder ever kept together, As two yoke-devils sworn to either's purpose, Working so grossly in a natural course, That admiration did not whoop at them:

But thou, 'gainst all proportion, didst bring in Wonder to wait on treason, and on murder:

And whatsoever cunning fiend it was, That wrought upon thee so preposterously, Hath got the voice in hell for excellence, And other devils, that suggest by treasons, Do both and bungle up damnation

With patches, colours, and with forms, being fetch'd From gleaming semblances of piety: But he that temper'd thee bade thee stand up, Gave thee no instance why thou shouldst do treason, Unless to dub thee with the name of traitor. If that same demon, that hath gull'd thee thus, Should with his lion gait walk the whole world, He might return to wavy Tartar back, And tell the legion—'I can never win A soul so easy as that Englishman's.

O, how hast thou with jealousy infected The sweetness of alliance! Show men duteful?

Why, so didst thou; seem they grave and learned? Why, so didst thou; conic they of noble family? Why, so didst thou; seem they religious? Why, so didst thou; or are they spare in diet; Free from gross passion, or of mirth or anger; Constant in spirit, not swerving with the blood; Garnish'd and deck'd in modest complement; Not working with the eye without the ear, But in due judgment trusting neither? Such. and so finely bled, didst thou seem; And thus thy fall hath left a kind of blot, To mark? the full-fragrant man, and best judged, With some suspicion. I will weep for thee, For this revolting of thine, methinks, is like Another fall of man.—Their faults are open; Arrest them to the answer of the law, And God acquit them of their practices.

Exe. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Richard earl of Cambridge.

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Henry lord Scroop, of Marsham.

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Thomas Grey, knight of Northumberland.

Our purposes God justly hath discover'd, And I repeat my fault more than my death; Which I beseech your highness to forgive, Although my body pay the price of it.

Cam. For me.—the gold of France did not seduce, Although I did admit it as a motive, The sooner to effect what I intended: But God be thanked for prevention; Which I in suffrance heartily will rejoice, Beseeching God and you to pardon me.

Grey. Never did faithful subject more rejoice At the discovery of most dangerous treason, Than I do at this hour joy o'er myself, Prevented from a damned enterprise.

My fault, but not my body, pardon, sovereign.

K. Hen. God quit you in his mercy! Hear you sentence.

You have conspir'd against our royal person, Join'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his coffers Receiv'd the golden earnest of our death; Wherein you would have sold your king to slaughter, His princes and peers, with their reward. His subjects to oppression and contempt, And his whole kingdom unto desolation. Touching our person, seek we no revenge; But we our kingdom's safety must so render, Whose ruin you have* sought, that to her laws We do deliver you. Get you therefore hence, Poor miserable wretches, to your death; The taste whereof, God, of his mercy, give you Patience to endure, and true repentance Of all your dear offences.—Bear them hence.

Exeunt Conspirators, guarded.

Now, lords, for France; the enterprise whereof Shall be to you, as us, like glorious. We doubt not of a fair and lucky war, Since God so graciously hath brought to light This dangerous treason, lurking in our way To hinder our beginnings: we doubt not now, But every rub is smoothed on our way. Then, forth, dear countrymen: let us deliver Our puissance into the hand of God, Putting it straight in expedition. Cheeryly to see; the signs of war advance:

No king of England, if not king of France.
SCENE III.—London. Mrs. Quickly's House, in Eastcheap.

Enter Pistol, Mrs. Quickly, Nym, Bardolph, and Boy.

Quick. Pr'ythee, honey-sweet husband, let me bring thee to Staines.

Pist. No; for my manly heart doth yearn.—
Bardolph, be blythe: Nym, rouse thy vaunting veins; Boy, bristle thy courage up! for Falstaff he is dead, and we must yearn therefore.

Bard. 'Would I were with him, wheresoever he is, either in heaven, or in hell.

Quick. Nay, sure, he's not in hell: he's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom. 'Made a fine end and went away, as it had been any christom child; 'a parted ev'n just between twelve and one, ev'n at the turning o' the tide: for after I saw him fumble with the sheets, and play with flowers, and smile upon his finger's end, I knew there was but one way; for his nose was as sharp as a pen on a table of green frieze. How now, sir John? quoit 1: what, man! be of good cheer. So a' cried out—God, God, God! three or four times: now I, to comfort him, bid him, 'a should not think of God; I hoped, there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet. So, 'a bade me lay more clothes on his feet: I put my hand into the bed, and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone; then I felt to his knees, and so upward, and upward, and all was as cold as any stone.

Nym. They say, he cried out of sack.

Quick. Ay, that 'a did.

Bard. And of women.

Quick. Nay, that 'a did not.

Boy. Yes, that 'a did; and said, they were devils incarnate.

Quick. 'A could never abide carnation; 't was a colour he never liked.

Boy. 'A said onee, the devil would have him about women.

Quick. 'A did in some sort, indeed, handle women; but then he was rheumatic, and talked of the whore of Babylon.

Boy. Do you not remember, 'a saw a fleec sticke upon Bardolph's nose, and 'a said it was a black soul burning in hell?

Bard. Well, the fuel is gone that maintained that fire: that's all the riches I got in his service.

Nym. Shall we shew the king will be gone from Southampoton.

Pist. Come, let's away.—My love, give me thy lips. Look to my chattlest, and my moveables; Let senses rule; the word is, "Pitch and pay;" Trust none; For oaths are strawes, men's faiths are wafer-cakes, And hold-fast is the only dog, my duck: Therefore, aveto be thy counsellor.

Go, clear thy crystals.—Yoke-fellows in arms, Let us to France: like horse-beeches, my boys, To suck, to suck, the very blood to suck!

Boy. And that is but unwelcome food, they say.

Pist. Touch her soft mouth, and march.

Bard. Farewell, hostess. [Kissing her.]

Nym. I cannot kiss, that is the humour of it; but Pist. Let housewifery appear: keep close, I thee [command.]

Quick. Farewell; adieu. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—France. A Room in the French King's Palace.

Flourish. Enter the French King attended; the Dauphin, the Duke of Burgundy, the Constable, and Others.

Fr. King. Thus come the English with full power upon us, and more than carefully it us concerns, To answer royalty in our defences. Therefore the dukes of Berry, and of Bretagne, Of Brabant, and of Orleans, shall make forth, And you, prince Dauphin, with all swift despatch, To line, and new repair, our towns of war With men of courage, and with means defendant: For England his approaches makes an fierce, As waters to the sucking of a gulph. It fits us, then, to be as provident As fear may teach us, out of late examples Left by the fatal and neglected English Upon our fields.

Dau. My most redoubted father, It is most meet we arm us 'gainst the foe; For peace itself should not so dill a kingdom, (Though war, nor no known quarrel, were in question; But that defences, musters, preparations Should be maintain'd, assembled, and collected, As were a war in expectation. Therefore, I say, 't is meet we all go forth, To view the sick and noble parts of France; And let us do it with no show of fear; No, with no more, than if we heard that England Were busied with a Whitsun morris dance; For, my good liege, she is so jelly king'd, Her sceptre so fantastically borne By a vain, giddy, shallow, humorous youth, That fear attends her not.

Con. O peace, prince Dauphin, You are too much mistaken in this king. Question your grace the late ambassadors, With what great state he heard their embassy, How well supplied with noble counsellors, How modest in exception, and, withal, How terrible in constant resolution, And you shall find, his vanities forespent Were but the outside of the Roman Brutus, Covering discretion with a coat of folly; As gardeners do with ordure hide those roots That shall first spring, and be most delicate. Dau. Well, 't is not so, my lord high constable; But though we think it so, it is no matter: In cases of defence, 't is best to weigh The enemy more mighty than he seems, So the proportions of defence are fill'd; Which, of a weak and niggardly projection, Doth like a miser, spoil his coat with scanting A little cloth.

Fr. King. Think we king Harry strong; And, princes, look, you strongly arm to meet him. The kindred of him hath been flesh'd upon us, And he is bred out of that bloody strain, That haunted us in our familiar paths: Witness our too much memorable shame, When Cressy battle fatally was struck, And all our princes captivi'd by the hand Of that black name, Edward black prince of Wales,

1 The christom, was a white cloth placed upon the head of a child after it was anointed with the chrism, or sacred oil. The name was afterwards given to the white cloth in which the child was wrapped at the ceremony, and which was used as its shroud, if it died within a month of its birth. Children so dying were called Christoms, in the old bills of mortality. 2 The old copies read: a table of green fields, which Theobald conjecturally altered to: "a babble of green fields."
OF a monarchy you are the head:
Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin
As self-neglecting.

Re-enter Lords, with Exeter and Train.
Fr. King. From our brother of England.
Exe. From him; and thus he greets your majesty.
He wills you, in the name of God Almighty,
That you divest yourself, and lay apart
The borrow'd glories, that by gift of heaven,
By law of nature, and of nations, long
To him, and to his heirs; namely, the crown,
And all wide-stretched honours that pertain,
By custom and the ordinance of times,
Unto the crown of France. That you may know,
'Tis no sinister, nor any awkward claim,
Pick'd from the worm-holes of long-vanish'd days,
Nor from the dust of old oblivion rak'd,
He sends you this most memorable line,
In every branch truly demonstrative;
Willing you overlook this pedigree,
And when you find him evenly deriv'd
From his most fam'd of famous ancestors,
Edward the third, he bids you then resign
Your crown and kingdom, indirectly held
From him, the native and true challenger.
Fr. King. Or else what follows?
Exe. Bloody constraint; for if you hide the crown
Even in your hearts, there will be raze for it:
Therefore, in fierce tempest is he coming,
In thunder, and in earthquake, like a Jove,
That, if requiring fail, he will compel:
And bids you, in the bowels of the Lord,
Deliver up the crown, and to take mercy
On the poor souls, for whom this hungry war
Opens his vasty jaws; and on your head
Turning the widows' tears, the orphans' cries
The dead men's blood, the pining maidens' groans.
For husbands, fathers, and betrothed lovers,
That shall be swallow'd in this controversy:
This is his claim, his threatening, and my message;
Unless the Dauphin be in presence here,
To whom expressly I bring greeting too.

Fr. King. For us, we will consider of this farther
To-morrow shall you bear our full intent
Back to our brother of England.

Dau. For the Dauphin,
I stand here for him: what to him from England?
Exe. Scorn, and defiance, slight regard, contempt,
And any thing that may not misbecome
The mighty sender, doth he prize you at.
Thus says my king: and, if your father's highness
Do not, in grant of all demands at large,
Sweeten the bitter mock you sent his majesty,
He'll call you to so hot an answer of it,
That caves and woody vaultages of France
Shall chide your trespass, and return your mock
In second accent of his ordinance.
Dau. Say, if my father render fair return,
It is against my will; for I desire
Nothing but odds with England: to that end,
As matching to his youth and vanity,
I did present him with the Paris balls.
Exe. He'll make your Paris Louvre shake for it,
Were it the mistress court of mighty Europe.
And, be assured, you'll find a difference,
As we his subjects have in wonder found,
Between the promise of his greener days,
And these he masters now. Now he weighs time,
Even to the utmost grain; that you shall read
In your own losses, if he stay in France.
Fr. King. To-morrow shall you know our mind at full
Exe. Despatch us with all speed, lest that our king
Come here himself to question our delay,
For he is footed in this land already.
Fr. King. You shall be soon despatch'd with fair conditions,
A night is but small breath, and little pause,
To answer matters of this consequence.

Flourish. Exeunt

ACT III.

Enter Chorus.
Chor. Thus with imagin'd wing our swift scene flies,
In motion of no less celerity
Than that of thought. Suppose, that you have seen
The well-appointed king at Hampton pier
Embark his royalty; and his brave fleet
With silken streamers the young Phoebus fanning:
Play with your flanecies, and in them behold,
Upon the beamen tackle ship-boys climbing;
Hear the shrill whistle, which doth order give
To sounds confus'd: behold the threaden sails,
Blown with th' invisible and creeping wind,
Work, work your thoughts, and therein see a siege:
Behold the ordnance on their carriages,
With fatal mouths gaping on girded Harfleur,
Suppose, th' ambassador from the French comes back;
Tells Harry that the king doth offer him
Katherina, his daughter; and with her, to dowry,
Some petty and unprofitable dukedoms,
The offer likes not: and the nimble gunner
With limstock now the devilish cannon touches,
[Alarum; and Chambers go off.
And down goes all before them. Still be kind;
And eke out our performance with your mind. [Exit.

SCENE I.—France. Before Harfleur.

Alarum. Enter King Henry, Exeter, Bedford,
Gloster, and Soldiers, with Scaling Ladders.

K. Hen. Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more;
Or close the wall up with our English dead!
In peace, there's nothing so becomes a man,
As modest stillness, and humility;
But when the blast of war blows in our ears,
Then imitate the action of the tiger;
Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood,
Disguise fair nature with hard-favoured rage:
Then lend the eye a terrible aspect;
Let it pry through the portage of the head,
Like the brass cannon; let the brow o'erwhelm it,
As fearfully, as doth a galled rock
O'ertopped with a巨大的 confounded base,
Swiftly with the wild and wasteful ocean.
Now set the teeth, and stretch the nostrils wide;
Hold hard the breast, and bend upon every spirit,
To his full height!—On, on, on you noblest English!
Whose blood is fat from fathers of war professed,
Fathers, that, like so many Alexanders,
Have in these parts from morn till even fought,
And sheath'd their swords for lack of argument.
Dishonour not your mothers: now attest,
That those whom you call'd fathers did beget you.
Be copy now to men of grosser blood,
And teach them how to war. And you, good yeomen,
Whose limbs were made in England, show us here
The mettle of your pasture: let us swear
That you are worth your breeding; which I doubt not,
For there is none of you so mean and base,
That hath not noble lustre in your eyes.
I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips.
Straining upon the start. The game's afoot:
Follow your spirit; and upon this charge,
Cry—God for Harry! England! and Saint George!
[Exeunt. Alarum, and Chambers go off.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Forces pass over; then enter Nym, Bardolph, Pistol, and Boy.

Bard. On, on, on, on! to the breach, to the breach!

Nym. Pray thee, corporal, stay: the knacks are too hot;
And for mine own part, I have not a case of 4 lives;
the humour of it is too hot, that is the very plain-song of it.

Pist. The plain song is most just, for humour do abound:
Knocks go and come,
And sword and shield,
In bloody field,
Doth win immortal fame.

Boy. Would I were in an alehouse in London! I would give all my fame for a pot of ale, and safety
Pist. And I;
If it's wishes would prevail with me,
My purpose should not fail with me,
But thither would I now. 6

Boy. And 8 as duly,
But not as truly.
As bird doth sing on bough.
[Enter Fluellen.

Flu. Up to the breach, you dogs! avante, you eat lions!
[Driving them forward
Pist. Be merciful, great duke, to men of mould;
Abate thy rage, abate thy manly rage;
Abate thy rage, great duke!
Good bawcock, bate thy rage; use lenity, sweet chuck!

Nym. These be good humours!—your honour wins bad humours.

Fluellen drives out Nym, Pistol, and Bardolph. 11
Boy. As young as I am, I have observed these three swashers.
I am boy to them all three, but all they three, though they would serve me, could not be man to me; for, indeed, three such antics do not amount to a man. For Bardolph, he is white-hivered, and red-faced; by the means whereof, 2 faces it out, but fights not. For Pistol, he hath a killing tongue, and a quiet sword; by the means whereof, 2 breaks words, and keeps whole weapons. For Nym, he hath heard, that men of few words are the best men; and therefore he seems to say his prayers, lest 3 should be thought a coward: but his few bad words are match'd with as few good deeds; for a never broke any man's head but his own, and that was against a post when he was drunk. They will steal any thing, and call it purchase. Bardolph stole a lute-case; bore it twelve leagues, and sold it for three halfpence. Nym and Bardolph are sworn brothers in fitching, and in Calais they stole a fire-shovel: I knew by that piece of service the men would carry coals. They would have me as familiar with men's pockets, as their gloves or their handkerchiefs; which makes much against my manhood, if I should take from another's pocket, to put into mine, for it is plain pocketing up of wrongs. I must leave them, and seek some better service: their villainy goes against my weak stomach, and therefore I must cast it up.

Exeunt. Re-enter Fluellen, Gower following.

Gower. Captain Fluellen, you must come presently to the mines: the duke of Gloster would speak with you.

Flu. To the mines? tell you the duke, it is not so good to come to the mines; for, look you, the mines is not according to the disciplines of the war: the cavities of it is not sufficient; for, look you, th' athervenary (you may discuss unto the duke, look you) is digged himself four yards under the countermines. By Cheshu, I think, 4 will plew up all, if there is not better directions.

Gower. The duke of Gloster, to whom the order of the siege is given, is altogether directed by an Irishman; a very valiant gentleman, i' faith.

Flu. It is captain Macmorris, is it not?

Gower. I think it be.

Flu. By Cheshu, he is an ass, as in the world. I will verify as much in his heard: he has no more directions.
in the true disciplines of the wars, look you, of the Roman disciplines, than is a puppy-dog.

Enter Macmorris and Jamy, at a distance.

Goe. Here a comes; and the Scots captain, captain Jamy, with him.

Flu. Captain Jamy is a marvellous furious gentleman, that is certain; and of great expedition, and knowledge in the ancient wars, upon my particular knowledge of his directions: by Cheshu, he will maintain his argument as well as any military man in the world, in the disciplines of the pristine wars of the Romans.

Jamy. I say, gude day, captain Fluellen.

Flu. God-den to your worship, good captain James.

Goe. Now how, captain Macmorris! have you quitted the mines? have the pioneers given o'er?

Mac. By Cheshu I, tis ill done: the work ish give over, the trumpet sound the retreat. By my hand, I swear, and my father's soul, the work ish ill done; it ish give over: I would have blew up the town, so Chresh sa've me, la, in an hour. O! tish ill done, tish ill done; by my hand, tish ill done.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I peseech you now will you vouche safe me, look you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the wars, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication; partly, to satisfy my opinion, and partly, for the satisfaction, look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline: that is the point.

Jamy. It shall be very gude, gude faith, gude captains bath: and I sill quit' you with gude leve, as I may pick occasion; that sill I, marry.

Mac. It is no time to discourse, so Chresh save me. The day is hot, and the weather, and the wars, and the king, and the dukes; it is no time to discourse. The town is beseeched, and the trumpet calls us to the breach, and we talk, and, by Chresh, do nothing: 'tis shame for us all; so God sa'me, 'tis shame to stand still; it is shame, by my hand: and there is throats to be cut, and works to be done, and there ish nothing done, so Chresh sa'me, la.

Jamy. By the mess, ere these eyes of mine take themselves to slumber, aisle do gude service, or aisle lig' the grund for it: ay, or go to death; and aisle pay it as valorously as I may, that sa'll I surely do, that is the brief and the long. Marr, I was full fetal heard some question 'tween you tway.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I think, look you, under your correction, there is not many of your nation—

Mac. Of my nation! What ish my nation? ish a villain, and a bastard, and a knave, and a rascal? What ish my nation? Who talks of my nation?

Flu. Look you, if you take the matter otherwise than is meant, captain Macmorris, peradventure, I shall think you do not use me with that affability as in discretion you ought to use me, look you; being as good a man as yourself, both in the disciplines of wars, and in the derivation of my birth, and in other particularities.

Mac. I do not know you so good a man as myself; so Chris sa'me, I will cut off your head.

Goe. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other.

Jamy. Au! that's a foul fault. [A Parley sounded. trow. The town sounds a parley.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, when there is more better opportunity to be required, look you, I will be so bold as to tell you, I know the disciplines of wars; and there is an end.

---

Scene III.—The Same. Before the Gates of Harfeur

Enter King Henry, his Train and Forces. The Governor and some Citizens on the Walls.

K. Hen. How yet resolves the governor of the town?

This is the latest part we will admit:

Therefore, to our best mercy give yourselves, or, like to men proud of destruction, day us to our worst: for, as I am a soldier, a name that in my thoughts becomes me best,

If I begin the battery once again, I will not leave the half-achieved Harfeur,

Till in her ashes she lie buried.

The gates of mercy shall be all shut up;

And the flesh'd soldier, rough and hard of heart,

In liberty of bloody hand shall range

With conscience wide as hell, mowing like grass

Your fresh fair virgins, and your flowering infants

What is it then to me, if impious war,

Array'd in flames like to the prince of fiends,

Do, with his smirch'd complexion, all fell feats

Enlink'd to waste and desolation?

What is it to me, when you yourselves are cause,

If your pure maidens fall into the hand

Of hot and forcing violation?

What rain can hold licentious wickedness,

When down the hill he holds his fierce career?

We may as bootless spend our vain command

Upon the enraged soldiers in their spoil,

As send precepts to the Leviathan.

To come ashore. Therefore, you men of Harfeur

Take pity of your town, and of your people,

Whilest yet our soldiers are in my command;

Whilest yet the cool and temperate wind of grace

O'erblows the filthy and contagious clouds

Of heady murder, spoil, and villany.

If not, why, in a moment look to see

The blind and bloody soldier with foul hand

Defile the locks of your shrill-shrinking daughters

Your fathers taken by the silver beards,

And their most reverend heads dash'd to the walls;

Your naked infants spitted upon pikes,

Whilest the mad mothers with their howls confus'd

Do break the clouds, as did the wives of Jewry

At Herod's bloody-hunting slaugthermen.

What say you? will you yield, and this avoid,

Or, guilty in defence, be thus destroyed?

Goe. Our expectation hath this day an end.

The Dauphin, whom of succour we entreated,

Returns us that his powers are not yet ready

To raise so great a siege. Therefore, great king,

We yield our town and lives to thy soft mercy.

Enter our gates; dispose of us, and ours,

For we no longer are defensible.

K. Hen. Open your gates!—Come, uncle Exeter,

Go you and enter Harfeur; there remain, [Gates opened

And fortiify it strongly against the French:

Use mercy to them all. For us, dear uncle,

The winter coming on, and sickness growing

Upon our soldiers, we will retire to Calais.

To-night in Harfeur will we be your guest:

To-morrow for the march are we address'd.

[Flourish. The King, &c. enter the Town

---

Scene IV.—Rouen. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Katharine and Alice.

Kath. Alice, tu as esté en Angletierre, et tu parles bien le langage.

Alice. Un peu, madame.
Kath. Je te prie, m’enseigne; il faut que j’apprenne à parler. Comment appelles vous la main, en Anglais?

Alice. La main? Elle est appelée, de hand.

Kath. De hand. Et les doigts?

Alice. Les doigts? ma foi, je oublie les doigts; mais je me souviendrai. Les doigts? je pense, qu’ils sont appelés de fingres; ouy, de fingres.

Kath. La main, de hand; les doigts, de fingres. Je pense, que je suis le bon escolier. J’ay gagné deux mots Anglais virement. Comment appelles vous les ongles?

Alice. Les ongles? les appellons, de nails.

Kath. De nails. Écoutez; dites moi, si je parle bien; de hand, de fingres, de nails.

Alice. C’est bien dit, madame; il est fort bon Anglais.

Kath. Dites moi l’Anglais pour le bras.

Alice. De arm, madamane.

Kath. Et le coude.

Alice. De elbow.

Kath. De elbow. Je m’en fuit la répétition de tous les mots, que vous m’avez appris dès à présent.

Alice. Il est trop difficile, madame, comme je pense.

Kath. Excusez moi, Alice; écoutez: de hand, de fingre, de nails, de arm, de bilbow.

Alice. De elbow, madamane.

Kath. O Seigneur Dieu! je m’en oublie, de elbow.

Comment appelles vous le col?

Alice. De neck, madame.

Kath. De neck: Et le menton?

Alice. De chin.

Alice. Oui. Sauf votre honneur; en vérité, vous prononcez les mots aussi droit que les natifs d’Angleterre.

Kath. Je ne doute point d’apprendre par la grâce de Dieu, et en peu de temps.

Alice. N’aurez vous pas déjà oublie ce que je vous ay enseigne?

Kath. Non, je réciterai à vous promptement. De hand, de fingre, de nails,— Alice. De nails, madame.

Kath. De nails, de arme, de ilbow.

Alice. Sauf votre honneur, de elbow

Kath. Ainsi dis je; de elbow, de neck, et de sin:

Comment appelles vous le pied et la robe?

Alice. De foot, madame; et de con.

Kath. De foot, et de con? O Seigneur Dieu! ces sont mots de son mauvais, corruptible, grosse, et imprud., et non pour les dames d’honneur d’user. Je ne voudrais prononcer ces mots devant les seigneurs de France, pour tout le monde. Il faut de foot, et de con, n’antmoins. Je réciterai une autre fois un leçon ensemble: de hand, de fingre, de nails, de arm, de elbow, de neck, de sin, de foot, de con.

Alice. Excellent, madame!

Kath. C’est assez pour une fois: allons nous à disner. [Exeunt, And overlook their graftiers?

Bour. Normans, but bastard Normans, Norman bastards.

Mort de ma vie! if they march along

Untoufht withai, but I will sell my dukedom,

To buy a slobbery and a dirty farm

In that nook-shotton1 isle of Albion.

Con. Dieu de batailles! where have they this mettle?

Is not their climate foggy, raw, and dull.

On whom, as in despite, the sun looks pale,

Killing their fruit with frowns? Can solden water,

A drench for our-rein’d jades, their barley broth,

Drench their cold blood to such valiant heat?

And shall our quick blood, spirited with wine,

Seem frosty? O! for honour of our land,

Let us not hang like roping jeicles

Upon our houses’ tithes, whiles a more frosty people

Sweat drops of gallant youth in our rich fields,

Poor we may call them, in their native lords.

Dau. By faith and honour,

Our madams mock at us, and plainly say,

Our mettle is bred out; and they will give

Their bodies to the lust of English youth,

To new-store France with bastard warriors.

Bour. They bid us to the English dancing-schools,

And teach lavolans2 high, and swift eorantes;

Saying, our grace is only in our heels,

And we are most lofty runaways.

Fr. King. Where is Montjoy, the herald? speeche tim hence;

Let him greet England with our sharp defiance.—

Up, princes! and, with spirit of honour, edg’d

More sharper than your swords,tie to the field.

Charles De-la-bret, high constable of France;

You dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and of Berry;

Alençon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy;

Jaques Chatillon, Hambures, Vaudemont,

Beaumont, Grandpré, Roussé, and Fauconberg,

Foix, Lestrade, Boneciqult, and Charolois,

High dukes, great princes, barons, lords, and knights,

For your great states, now quit you of great shame.

Bar. Harry England, that sweeps through our land

With pennons painted in the blood of Harleour;

Rush on his host, as doth the melted snow

Upon the valleys, whose low vassal seat

The Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon.

Go, down upon him,—you have power enough,—

And in a captive chariot into Rouen

Bring him your prisoner.

Con. This becomes the great.

Sorry am I, his numbers are so few,

His soldiers sick, and famish’d in their march,

For, I am sure, when he shall see our army,

He’ll drop his heart into the sink of fear,

And for achievement offer us his ransom.

Fr. King. Therefore, lord constable, haste on Montjoy;

And let him say to England, that we send

To know what willing ransum he will give,—

Prince Dauphin, you shall stay with us in Rouen.

Dau. Not so, I do beseech your majesty.

Fr. King. Be patient, for you shall remain with us.—

Now, forth, lord constable, and princes all,

And quickly bring us word of England’s fall. [Exeunt, SCENE VI. —The English Camp in Picardy. Enter GOWER and FLUELLEN.

Gow. How now, captain Fluellen? come you from the bridge?

1 An island that shoots out into capes and promontories. 2 An Italian dance resembling a waltz.
Flu. I assure you, there is very excellent services committed at the pride.

Gow. Is the duke of Exeter safe?

Flu. The duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Agamemnon; and a man that I love and honour with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my life, and my living, and my uttermost power: he is not (God be praised, and pleased!) any hurt in the world; but keeps the pride most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an ancient, heutenant1, there, at the pride,—I think, in my very conscience, he is as valiant a man as Mark Antony, and he is a man of no estimation in the world: but I did see him do as gallant service.

Gow. What do you call him?

Flu. He is called ancient Pistol.

Gow. I know him not.

Flu. Here is the man.

Pist. Captain, I thee beseech to do me favours:

The duke of Exeter doth love thee well.

Flu. Ay, I praise Got; and I have merited some love at his hands.

Pist. Bardolph, a soldier firm and sound of heart, and buxom valour, hath, by cruel fate and giddy fortune's furious sicken wheel, That goddess blind, That stands upon the rolling restless stone.—

Flu. By your patience, ancient Pistol. Fortune is painted plaid, with a muffler afore her eyes, to signify to you that fortune is plaid; and she is painted also with a wheel, to signify to you, which is the moral of it, that she is turning, and incessant, and mutability, and variation: and her foot, look you, is fixed upon a spherical stone, which rolls, and rolls, and rolls. In good truth, the poet makes an excellent description of it: fortune is an excellent moral.

Pist. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns on him; For he hath stol'n a paon,2 and hanged must 'a be. A damned death! Let gallows gape for dog, let man go free, And let not bungip his wine-pipe souceoate. But Exeter hath given the doom of death, For paore of price: Therefore, go speak, the duke will hear thy voice, And let not Bardolph's vital thread be cut With edge of penny cord, and vile reproach: Speak, captain, for his life, and I will thee requite.

Flu. Ancient Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning.

Pist. Why then, rejoice therefore.

Flu. Certainly, ancient, it is not a thing to rejoice at; for if, look you, he were my brother, I would desire the duke to use his gent pleasure, and put him to execution, for discipline ought to be used.

Pist. Die and be damned; and fare for thy friendship!

Flu. It is well.

Pist. The fig of Spain! [Exit Pistol, making the sign].

Flu. Very good.

Gow. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit rascal: I remember him now; a bawd; a cutpurse.

Flu. I'll assure you, 'a utter'd as prave words at the pride, as you shall see in a summer's day. But it is very well, what he has spoke to me: that is well. I warrant you, when time is serve.

Gow. Why, 'tis a gull, a fool, a rogue; that now and then goes to the wars, to grace himself at his return into London under the form of a soldier. And such fellows are perfect in the great commanders' names, and they will learn you by rote where services were done;—at such and such a scene, at such a breach, at such a convey; who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgraced, what terms the enemy stood on: and this they con perfectly in the phrase of war, which they trick up with new-coined oaths: and what a heard of the general's cut, and a horrid suit of the camp, will do among foaming bottles, and ale-washed wits, is wonderful to be thought on. But you must learn to know such slanders of the age, or else you may be marvellously mistook.

Flu. I tell you what, captain Gower; I do perceive he is not the man that he would gladly make show to the world he is: if I find a hole in his coat, I will tell him mankind. [Drum heard.] Hark you, the king is coming, and I must speak with him from the pride.

Enter King Henry, Gloster, and Soldiers sick and tattered.

Flu. Got plesse your majesty!

K. Hen. How now, Friellen? canst thon from the bridge?

Flu. Ay, so please your majesty. The duke of Exeter has very gallantly maintained the pride: the French is gone off, look you, and there is gallant and most brave passages. Marry, th' anniversary was have possession of the pride, but he is enforced to retire. And the duke of Exeter is master of the pride. I can tell your majesty, the duke is a brave man.

K. Hen. What men have you lost, Friellen?

Flu. The perdition of th' anniversary hath been very great, reasonable great: marry, for my part, I think the duke hath lost never a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbing a church; one Bardolph, it your majesty know the man: his face is all babbukes, and wheels, and knobs, and flames of fire; and his lips plows at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes blue, and sometimes red; but his nose is executed, and his fire's out.

K. Hen. We would have all such offenders so cut off; and we give express charge, that in our marches through the country, there be nothing compelled from the villages, nothing taken but paid for: none of the French upbraided, or abused in disdainful language, for when lenity and cruelty play for a kingdom, the gentler gamaster is the soonest winner.

Tucket. Enter Montjoy.

Mont. You know me by my habit.

K. Hen. Well then, I know thee: what shall I know of thee?

Mont. My master's mind.

K. Hen. Unfold it.

Mont. Thus says my king:—Say thou to Harry of England, Though we seemed dead, we did but sleep: advantage is a better soldier than rashness. Tell him we could have rebuked him at Harfleur: but that we thought not good to bruise an injury, till it were full ripe: now we speak upon our cue, and our voice is imperial. England shall repent his folly, see his weakness, and admire our sufferance. Bid him, therefore, consider of his ransom: which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subjects we have lost the disgrace we have digested: which, in weight to re-answer, his petition we would bow under. For our lessee, his exchequer is too poor; for the effusion of our blood, the master of his kingdom too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his own person, knell-ing at our feet, but a weak and worthless satisfaction.
To this add defiance: and tell him, for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condensation is pronounced. So far my king and master: so much my office.
K. Hen. What is thy name? I know thy quality.
Mont. Montjoy.
K. Hen. Thou dost thy office fairly. Turn thee back,
And tell thy king,—I do not seek him now,
But could be willing to march on to Calais
Without impeachment; for, to say the sooth,
Though 't is no wisdom to confess so much
Unto an enemy of craft and vantage,
My people are with sickness much enfeebled;
My numbers lessen'd, and those few I have,
Almost no better than so many French:
Who, when they were in health, I tell thee, herald,
I thought upon one pair of English legs
Did march three Frenchmen.—Yet, forgive me, God,
That I do brag thus,—this your air of France
Hath blown that vice in me: I must repent.
Go, therefore, tell thy master, here I am:
My ransom is this frail and worthless trunk,
My arm but a weak and sickly guard;
Yet, God before, tell him we will come on,
Though France herself, and such another neighbour,
Stand in our way. There's for thy labour, Montjoy.

Glo. I hope they will not come upon us now.
K. Hen. We are in God's hand, brother, not in theirs.
March to the bridge; it now draws toward night.
Beyond the river we'll encamp ourselves,
And on to-morrow bid them march away. [Exeunt.

Scene III.—The French Camp, near Agincourt.

Enter The Constable of France, the Lord Rambures, the Duke of Orleans, the Dauphin, and others.

Con. Tunt! I have the best armour of the world.
Would it were day!
Ofl. You have an excellent armour; but let my horse have his due.
Con. It is the best horse of Europe.
Ofr. Will it never be morning?
Dau. My lord of Orleans, and my lord high constable, you talk of horse and armour—
Ofl. You are as well provided of both as any prince in the world.

Dau. What a long night is this!—I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four panniers.
Ca, ha! He bounds from the earth, as if his entrails were air, le cheval volant, the Pegasus, qui a les narines de feu! When I bestride him, I soar, I am a hawk:
he trots the air; the earth sings when he touches it:
the basse horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes.
Ofl. He's of the colour of the nutmeg.
Ram. He longs to eat the English.
Con. I think he will eat all he kills.
Orl. By the white hand of my lady, he's a gallant prince.
Con. Swear by her foot, that she may tread out the oath.
Orl. He is simply the most active gentleman of France.
Con. Doing is activity, and he will still be doing.
Orl. He never did harm, that I heard of.
Con. Nor will do none to-morrow: he will keep that good name still.
Orl. I know him to be valiant.
Con. I was told that, by one that knows him better than you.
Orl. What's he?
Con. Marry, he told me so himself; and he said, he cared not who knew it.
Orl. He needs not; it is no hidden virtue in him.
Con. By my faith, sir, but it is; never any body saw it, but his lackey: 'tis a hooded valour, and when it appears it will bite.
Orl. I'll never said well.
Con. I will cap that proverb with—there is flattery in friendship.
Orl. And I will take up that with—give the devil his due.
Con. Well placed: there stands your friend for the devil: have at the very eye of that proverb, with—a pox of the devil.
Orl. You are the better at proverbs, by how much—a fool's bolt is soon shot.
Con. You have shot over.
Orl. 'Tis not the first time you were overshot.

ACT IV.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My lord high constable, the English lie with fifteen hundred paces of your tents.
Con. Who hath measured the ground?
Mes. The lord Grandpré.
Con. A valiant and most expert gentleman.—Would it were day!—Alas, poor Harry of England!—he longs not for the dawning, as we do.
Orl. What a wretched and peevish* fellow is the king of England, to mope with his fat-brained followers so far out of his knowledge.
Con. If the English had any apprehension, they would run away.
Orl. That they lack: for if their heads had any intellectual armour, they could never wear such heavy head-pieces.

Ram. That island of England breeds very valiant creatures; their mastiffs are of unmatchable courage.

Orl. Foolish curs! that run winking into the mouth of a Russian bear, and have their heads crushed like rotten apples. You may as well say that's a valiant flea, that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion.
Con. Just, just: and the men do sympathize with the mastiffs in robustious and rough coming on, leaving their wits with their wives: and, then, give them great meals of beef, and iron and steel, they will eat like wolves, and fight like devils.

Orl. Ay, but these English are shrewdly out of beef.
Con. Then shall we find to-morrow they have only stomachs to eat, and none to fight. Now is it time to arm: come, shall we about it?

Orl. It is now two o'clock: but, let me see; by ten, we shall have each a hundred Englishmen. [Exeunt

Good morrow, brother Bedford.—God Almighty! There is some soul of goodness in things evil, Would men observing distil it out, For our bad neighbour makes us early stirrers, Which is both healthful, and good husbandry: Besides, they are our outward consciences, And preachers to us all; admonishing That we should dress us fairly for our end. Thus may we gather honey from the weed, And make a moral of the devil himself.

Enter Erpingham.

Good morrow, old Sir Thomas Erpingham: A good soft pillow for that good white head Were better than a churlish turf of France. Erp. Not so, my liege: this lodging likes me better; Since I may say, now lie I like a king.

K. Hen. 'Tis good for men to love their present pains, Upon example: so the spirit is cased:
And when the mind is quicken'd, out of doubt, The organs, though delfunct and dead before, Break up their drowsy grave, and newly move With casted slough and fresh legiter.
Lend me thy cloak, sir Thomas.—Brothers both, Commend me to the princes in our camp; Do my good morrow to them; and, anon, Desire them all to my pavilion.

Glo. We shall, my liege.

[Exeunt Gloster and Bedford.

Erp. Shall I attend your grace?

K. Hen. No, my good knight; Go with my brothers to my lords of England: I and my bosom must debate a while, And then, I would no other company.

Erp. The Lord in heaven bless thee, noble Harry! [Exit Erpingham.

K. Hen. God-a-mercy, old heart! thou speakest so cheerfully.

Enter Pistol.

Pst. Qui va là?

K. Hen. A friend.

Pst. Discuss unto me; art thou officer?

Or art thou base, common, and popular?

K. Hen. I am a gentleman of a company.

Pst. Trail'st thou the puissant pike?

K. Hen. Even so. What are you?

Pst. Art good a gentleman as the emperor, K. Hen. Then you are a better than the king. Pst. The king's a hawcoak, and a heart of gold, A lad of life, an imp of fame;

Of parents good, of fist most valiant: I kiss his dirty shoe, and from heart-string I love the lovely bully. What's thy name?

Pst. Le Roy! a Cornish name; art thou of Cornish stock?

K. Hen. No, I am a Welshman. [Crew?

Pst. Know'st thou Fluellen?

K. Hen. Yes.

Pst. Tell him, I'll knock his look about his pate.

Upon Saint David's day.

K. Hen. Do not you wear your dagger in your cap that day, lest he knock that about yours.

Pst. Art thou his friend?

K. Hen. And his kinsman too.

Pst. The fieo for thee then!

K. Hen. I thank you. God be with you!

Pst. My name is Pistol called.

K. Hen. It sors well with your fierceness.

Enter Fluellen and Gower, severally

Gow. Captain Fluellen!
If his cause be wrong, our obedience to the king wipes the crime of it out of us.

Will. But, if the cause be not good, the king himself hath a heavy reckoning to make: when all those legs, and arms, and heads, chopped off in a battle, shall join together at the latter day, and cry all—"We died at such a place!" some swearing, some crying for a surgeon, some upon their wives left poor behind them, some upon the debts they owe, some upon their children, that I am afraid there are two cowards, that die in a battle: for how can they charitably dispose of any thing, when blood is their argument? Now, if those men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the king that led them to it, whom to disbelieve are against all proportion of subjection.

K. Hen. So, if a son, that is by his father sent about merchandise, do sinfully miscarry upon the sea, the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his father that sent him: or if a servant, under his master's command, transporting a sum of money, be assaulted by robbers, and die in many irreconcilable imputations, you may call the business of the master the author of the servant's damnation. But this is not so: the king is not bound to answer the particular endings of his soldiers, the father of his son, nor the master of his servant, for they purpose not their death, when they purpose their services. Besides, there is no king, be his cause never so spotless; if it come to the arbitrement of swords, can try it out with all unsold officers. Some, peradventure, have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived murder; some of beguiling virgins with the broken seals of perjury; some, making the wars their bulwark, that have before gored the gentle bosom of peace with pillage and robbery. Now, if these men have defeated the law, and outrun native punishment, though they can outstrip men, they have no wings to fly from God: war is his beadle: war is his vengeance; so that here men are punished, for before-break of the king's laws, in now the king's quarrel: where they feared the death, they have borne life away, and where they would be safe, they perish: then, if they die unprovided, no more is the king guilty of their damnation, than he was before guilty of those impieties for the which they are now visited. Every subject's duty is the king's: but every subject's soul is his own. Therefore, should every soldier in the wars do as every sick man in his bed, wash every mote out of his conscience: and dying so, death is to him advantage; or not dying, the time was blessedly lost, wherein such preparation was gained: and, in him that escapes, it were not sin to think, that making God so free an offer, he let him out-live that day to know his greatness, and to teach others how they should prepare.

Will. 'Tis certain, every man that dies ill, the ill upon his own head: the king is not to answer it.

Bates. I do not desire he should answer for me; and yet I determine to fight lustily for him.

K. Hen. I myself heard the king say, he would not be ransomed.

Will. Ay, he said so to make us fight cheerfully; but when our throats are cut, he may be ransomed, and we never the wiser.

K. Hen. If I live to see it, I will never trust his word after.

Will. You pay him then! That's a perilous shot out of an elder gun, that a poor and a private displeasure can do against a monarch. You may as well go about to turn the sun to ice with fanning in his face with a peacock's feather. You'll never trust his word after! come, 'tis a foolish saying.

K. Hen. Your reproof is something too round: I should be angry with you, if the time were convenient.

Will. Let it be a quarrel between us, if you live.

K. Hen. I embrace it.

Will. How shall I know thee again?

K. Hen. Give me any gage of thine, and I will wear it in my bonnet: then, if ever thou dost acknowledge it, I will make it my quarrel.

Will. Here's my glove: give me another of thine.

K. Hen. There.

Will. This will I also wear in my cap: if ever thou come to me and say, after to-morrow, "This is my glove," by this hand, I will take thee a box on the ear.

K. Hen. If ever I live to see it, I will challenge it.

Will. Thou dost as well be hanged.

K. Hen. Well, I will do it, though I take thee in the king's company.

Will. Keep thy word: fare thee well.

Bates. Be friends, you English fools, be friends: we have French quarrels enough, if you could tell how to reckon.

K. Hen. Indeed, the French may lay twenty French crowns to one they will beat us, for they bear them on their shoulders: but it is no English treason to cut French crowns, and to-morrow the king himself will be a clipper.

Will. Upon the king! let us our lives, our souls, Our debts, our careful wives, our children, and Our sins, lay on the king!—we must bear all.

O hard condition! twin born-with greatness, Subject to the breath of every fool, Whose sense no more can feel but his own wringing What infinite heart's ease must kings neglect, That private men enjoy!

And what have kings, that private have not too Save ceremony, save general ceremony? And what art thou, thou idol ceremony? What kind of god art thou, that suffer'st more Of mortal griefs, than do thy worshippers? What are thy sects? what are thy comings-in? O ceremony, show me but thy worth! What is thy soul but adulation? Art thou ang'lt else but place, degree, and form? Creating awe and fear in other men, Wherein thou art less happy, being fear'd, Than they in fearing.

What drink'st thou oft, instead of homage sweet, But poison'd flattery? O! be sick, great greatness, And bid thy ceremony give thee cure.

Think'st thou, the fiery fever will go out With titles blown from adulation? Will it give place to flexure and low bending? Canst thou, when thou command'st the beggar's knee Command the health of it? No, thou proud dream, That play'st so subtly with a king's repose: I am a king, that find thee; and I know, 'Tis not the balm, the sceptre, and the ball, The sword, the mace, the crown imperial, The inter-tissued robe of gold and pearl, The farced tail running 'fore the king, The throne he sits on, nor the tide of pomp That beats upon the high shore of this world; No, not all these, thrice-gorgeous ceremony, Not all these laid in bed majestic, Can sleep so soundly as the wretched slave, Who, with a body fill'd, and vacant mind, Gets him to rest, cram'd with distasteful bread,
Never sees horrid night, the child of hell,
But, like a lackey, from the rise to set,
Sweats in the eye of Phoebus, and all night
Sleeps in Elysium; next day, after dawn,
Doth rise and help Hyperion to his horse,
And follows so the ever running year
With profitable labour to his grave:
And, but for ceremony, such a wretch,
Winding up days with toil, and nights with sleep,
 Hath the fore-hand and vantage of a king.
The slave, a member of the country's peace,
Enjoy its, but in gross brain little wots,
What watch the king keeps to maintain the peace,
Whose hours the peasant best advantages.

Enter Ensign.

Erp. My lord, your nobles, jealous of your absence,
Seek through your camp to find you.

K. Hen. Good old knight, Collect them all together at my tent: I'll be before thee.

Erp. I shall do't, my lord. [Exit.

K. Hen. O, God of battles! steel my soldiers' hearts:
Possess them not with fear: take from them now
The sense of reckoning, if th' opposed numbers
Pluck their hearts from them!—Not to-day, O Lord!
O! not to-day, think not upon the fault
My father made in compassing the crown.
I Richard's body have interred new,
And on it have bestow'd more contrite tears,
Than from it issued forced drops of blood.
Five hundred poor I have in yearly pay,
Who twice a day their wither'd handes hold up
Toward heaven, to pardon blood; and I have built
Two chapiters, where the sad and solemn priests
Sing still for Richard's soul. More will I do;
Though all that I can do is nothing worth,
Since that my penitence comes after all,
Imploring pardon.

Enter Gloster.

Glo. My liege!

K. Hen. My brother Gloster's voice?—Ay; I knew thy errand, I will go with thee.—
The day, my friends, and all things stay for me. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The French Camp.

Enter Dauphin, Orleans, Rambures, and others.

Orl. The sun doth gild our armour; up, my lords!
Dau. Montes à cheval—My horse! valet! lacquay! ha!
Orl. O brave spirit!
Dau. Via!—les eaux et la terre!
Orl. Rien puis? l'air et le feu!
Dau. Ciel! cousin Orleans.

Enter Constable.

Now, my lord Constable!

Con. Hark, how our steeds for present service neigh.
Dau. Mount them, and make meision in their hides,
That their hot blood may spin in English eyes,
And doubt them with superbus courage: Ha!

Ram. What, will you have them weep our horses' blood?
How shall we then behold their natural tears?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The English are embattled, you French peers.
Con. To horse, you gallant princes! straight to horse!
Do but behold you poor and starved band,
And your fair show shall suck away their souls,
Leaving them but the shalas and husks of men.
There is not work enough for all our hands;
Scarce blood enough in all their sickly veins,

To give each naked curtle-ax a stain,
That our French gallants shall to-day draw out,
And sheath for lack of sport; let us but blow on them
The vapour of our valour will o'erturn them.
'Tis positive against all exceptions, lords,
That our superfluous lackeys, and our peasants,
Who in unnecessary action swarm
About our squares of battles, were enow
To purge this field of such a hindling foe,
Though we upon this mountain's basis by
Took stand for idle speculation:
But that our honours must not. What's to say?
A very little little let us do,
And all is done. Then, let the trumpets sound
The tucket-somanes*, and the note to mount:
For our approach shall so much dare the field,
That England shall cough down in fear, and yield.

Enter Grandpre.

Grand. Why do you stay so long, my lords of France?
Your island carriions, desperate of their bones,
Ill-favour'dly become the morning field:
Their ragged curtauns poorly are let loose,
And our air shallakes them passing scornfully.
Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar'd host,
And faintly through a rusty beaver peeps.
The horsemen sit like fixed candlesticks,
With torch-staves in their hands,* and their poor jades
Lob down their heads, dropping the hides and hops,
The gum down-roping from their pale-dead eyes,
And in their pale diui mouths the gimmal* bit
Lies, foul with chew'd grass, still and motionless;
And their executors, the knaviish crows,
Fly o'er them, all impatient for their hour.
Description cannot suit itself in words,
To demonstrate the life of such a battle,
In life so lifeless as it shows itself. [death.

Con. They have said their prayers, and they stay for
Dau. Shall we go send them dinners, and fresh salts,
And give their fasting horses provender,
And after fight with them?

Con. I stay but for my guard. On, to the field!
I will the banner from a trumpet take,*
And use it for my haste. Come, come away!
The sun is high, and we outwear the day. [Exeunt

SCENE III.—The English Camp.

Enter all the English Host; Gloster, Bedford, Exeter, Salisbury, and Westmorland.

Glo. Where is the king?

Bed. The king himself is rode to view their battle.

West. Of fighting men they have full three-score thousand.

Exe. There's five to one; besides, they all are fresh.
Sal. God's arm strike with us! 'tis a fearful odds.
God be wi' you, princes all; I'll to my charge:
If we no more meet, till we meet in heaven,
Then, joyfully, my noble lord of Bedford,—
My dear lord Gloster,—and my good lord Exeter,—
And my kind kinsman,—warriors all, adieu!

Bed. Farewell, good Salisbury; and good luck go with thee!

Exe. Farewell, kind lord. Fight vauntly to-day:
And yet I do thee wrong, to mind thee of it.
For thou art fram'd of the firm truth of valour.

Bed. He is as full of valour, as of kindness;
Primely in both.

West. O! that we now had here

* of: in folio: which Singer retains, removing the period from the middle of the next line to its close. * Sheils. * The best of a trumpet. * Candlesticks were often made in the figure of a knight, the candle being set in the hand. * Doubt.
Enter King Henry.

But one ten thousand of those men in England,
That do no work to-day.

K. Hen. What's he, that wishes so?

My cousin Westmoreland?—No, my fair cousin:
If we are mark'd to die, we are eonow
To do our country loss; and if to live,
The fewer men, the greater share of honour.

God's will! I pray thee, wish not one man more.

By Jove, I am not covetous for gold;
Nor care I who doth feed upon my cost;
It yearns1 me not if men my garments wear;
Such outward things dwell not in my desires.
But, if it be a sin to covet honour,
I am the most offending soul alive.

No, faith, my coz, wish not a man from England:
God's peace! I would not lose so great an honour,
As one man more, methinks, would share from me,
For the best hope I have. O! do not wish one more:
Rather proclaim it, Westmoreland, through my host,
That he, which hath no stomach to this fight,
Let him depart; his passport shall be made,
And crowns for convoy put into his purse;
We would not die in that man's company,
That fears his fellowship to die with ns.
This day is call'd—the feast of Crispian:
He, that outlives this day, and comes safe home,
Will stand a tip-toe when this day is nam'd,
And rouse him at the name of Crispian.
He, that shall live this day, and see9 old age,
Will yearly on the vigil feast his friends,
And say—to-morrow is Saint Crispian:
Then will he strip his sleeve, and show his scars.
Old men forget; yet all shall be forgot.
But he'll remember with advantages
What feats he did that day.
Then shall our names,
Familiar in their mouths as household words,—
Harry the king, Bedford and Exeter,
Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Glaster.
Be in their flowing cups freshly remember'd.
This story shall the good man teach his son,
And Crispin Crispian shall ne'er go by,
From this day to the ending of the world,
But we in it shall be remember'd;
We few, we happy few, we band of brothers:
For he, to-day that sheds his blood with me,
Shall be my brother: be he ne'er so vile,
This day shall gentle8 his condition:
And gentlemen in England, now a-bed,
Shall think themselves accurs'd they were not here,
And hold their manhood cheap, whiles any speaks
That fought with us upon Saint Crispin's day.

Enter Salisbury.

Sal. My sovereign lord, bestow yourself with speed:
The French are bravely in their batteries set,
And will with all expedition charge on us.

K. Hen. All things are ready, if our minds be so.

West. Perish the man whose mind is backward now!

K. Hen. Thou dost not wish more help from England, cousin?

West. God's will! my liege, would you and I alone,
Without more help, might3 fight this royal battle.

K. Hen. Why, now thou hast unwish'd five thousand
Which lease me better than to wish us one. —[men,
You know your places: God be with you all]

Tucket. Enter Montjoy.

Mont. Once more I come to know of thee, king Harry,

If for thy ransom thou wilt now compound,
Before thy most assured overthrow?
For, certainly, thou art so near the gulf,
Thou needs must be engulfed. Besides, in mercy,
The Constable desires thee thou wilt mind
Thy followers of repentance; that their souls
May make a peaceful and a sweet retire
From off these fields, where, wretches, their poor bodies
Must lie andester.

K. Hen. Who hath sent thee now?

Mont. The Constable of France.

K. Hen. I pray thee, bear my former answer back:
Bid them achieve me, and then sell my bones.

Good God! why should they mock poor fellows thus?
The man, that once did sell the lion's skin
While the beast liv'd, was kill'd with hunting him
A many of our bodies shall, no doubt,
Find native graves, upon the which, I trust,
Shall witness live in brass of this day's work;
And those that leave their valiant bones in France,
Dying like men, though buried in your dunghills,
They shall be fam'd: for there the sun shall greet them
And draw their honours recking up to heaven,
Leaving their earthly parts to choke your clime,
The smell whereof shall breed a plague in France.
Mark, then, rebounding5 valour in our English;
That, being dead, like to the bullet's grazings,
Break out into a second course of mischief,
Killing in reflex' of mortality.

Let me speak proudly:—Tell the Constable,
We are but warriors for the working-day;
Our gayness and our gilt are all besmirch'd
With rainy marching in the painful field;
There's not a piece of feather in our host,
(Good argument, I hope, we will not fly)
And time hath worn us into sloveny:
But, by the mass, our hearts are in the trim;
And my poor soldiers tell me, yet ere night
They'll be in fresher robes, for they will pluck
The gay new coats o'er the French soldiers' heads,
And turn them out of service.
If they do this,
As, if God please, they shall, my ransom then
Will soon be levied. Herald, save thou thy labour,
Come thou no more for ransom, gentle herald:
They shall have none, I swear, by these my joints,
Which, if they have as I will leave 'em them,
Shall yield them little, tell the Constable.

Mont. I shall, king Harry: and so fare thee well.
Thou never shalt hear herald any more.

[Exit.]

K. Hen. I fear, thou wilt once more come here for a ransom.

Enter the Duke of York.

York. My lord, most humbly on my knee I beg
The leading of the vaward. 4

K. Hen. Take it, brave York,—Now, soldiers, march away:
And outh whom pleasest, God, dispose the day! [Exit York.

SCENE IV.—The Field of Battle.

Alarums: Excursions Enter French Soldier, Pistol, and Boy.

Pist. Yield, cur.
Fr. Sol. Je pense, que vous êtes le gentilhomme de bonne qualité.

Pist. Quality? Callino, castore me ! art thou a gentleman?

What is thy name? discers.
Fr. Sol. O sieurier Dieu!

Pist. O! signieur Dew should be a gentleman

Grievous. 2 Die and see, are transposed in the folio. 3 Make him gentleman. 4 folio: could. 5 rebounding: in f. s. 6 relapse: in 1 7 Viannard. 8 Th- name of an old tune, to which a song was sung, printed in the "Handful of Pleasant Ballads," 1824
Perpend my words, O signeur Dew, and mark:—
O signeur Dew, thou diest on point of fox1.

Except, O signeur, thou do give to me
Egregious ransom.

Fr. Sol. O, prenez miséricorde! avez pitié de moi!
Pist. Moy shall not serve, I will have forty mumps;
For I will fetch thy rime2 out at thy throat,
In drops of crimson blood.

Fr. Sol. Est il impossible d'échapper la force de ton bras?
Pist. Brass, eur?
Thou damned and luxurious mountain goat,
Offer'st me brass?

Fr. Sol. O pardonnez moi!
Pist. Say'st thou me so? is that a ton of mumps?—
Come hither, boy: ask me this slave in French,
What is his name.

Boy. Escautez; comment êtes vous appelé?
Fr. Sol. Monsieur le Fer.
Pist. He says his name is master Fer.
Pist. Master Fer! I'll fer him, and firk him, and fertil him.—Discuss the same in French unto him.

Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and firk.
Pist. Bid him prepare, for I will cut his throat.

Fr. Sol. Que dit-il, monseur?
Boy. Il me commande à vous dire que vous faites vous prêt; car ce soldat ici est disposé tout à cette heure de couper votre gorge.

Pist. Oui, couper la gorgie, par ma foi, paissant,
Unless thou give me crowns, brave crowns;
Or mangled shalt thou be by this my sword.

Fr. Sol. O! je vous supplie pour l'amour de Dieu, me pardonnez. Je suis le gentilhomme de bonne moisson; gardez ma vie, et je vous donnerai deux cents écus.
Pist. What are his words?

Boy. He prays you to save his life: he is a gentleman of a good house; and for his ransom, he will give you two hundred crowns.

Pist. Tell him,—my fury shall abate, and I
The crowns will take.

Fr. Sol. Petit monsieur, que ditz-il?
Boy. Encore qu'il est contre mon jurement de pardonner aucun prisonnier; néanmoins, pour les écus que vous l'avez promis, il est content à vous donner la liberté, le franchissement.

Fr. Sol. Sur mes genoux, je vous donne mille remerci-ements; et je m'entende heureux que je suis tombé entre les mains d'un chevalier, je pense, le plus brave, vallant, et tres distingué seigneur d'Angleterre.
Pist. Expound unto me, boy.

Boy. He gives you, upon his knees, a thousand thanks: and he esteems himself happy that he hath fallen into the hands of one (as he thinks) the most brave, valorous, and thirsathe seigneur of England.

Pist. As I suck blood, I will some mercy shew.

Follow me! Exit Pistol.

Boy. Suivez vous le grand capitaine. I did never know so full a voice issue from so empty a heart: but the song is true,—"the empty vessel makes the greatest sound." Bardolph, and Nym, had ten times more valour than this roaring devil i the old play3 that every one may pare his nails with a wooden dagger, and they are both hanged; and so would this be, if he durst steal any thing adventurously. I must stay with the lackeys, with the luggage of our camp: the French might have a good prey of us, if they knew of it, for there is none to guard it, but boys.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field of Battle.

Retreat sounded.4 Enter Dauphin, Orleans, Bourbon
Constable, Rambures, and others.

Con. O doubte!
Orl. O seigneur!—le jour est perdu! tout est perdu!
Dau. Morit de ma vie! all is confounded, all!
Approach and everlasting shame
Sit meekly in our plumes.—O méchante fortune! —
Do not run away. [A short Atem
Con. Why, all our ranks are broke.
Dau. O perdurable shame!—let's stab ourselves.
Be these the wretches that we play'd at dice for?
Orl. Is this the king we sent to for his ransom?
Bour. Shame, and eternal shame, nothing but shame!
Let us not fly:— in!—One more back again;
And he that will not follow Bourbon now.
Let him go hence, and, with his ear in hand,
Like a base pander, hold the chamber-door,
Whilst by a slave, no gentler than my dog,
His fairest daughter is contaminat.

Con. Disorder, that hath spoil'd us, friend us now!
Let us in heaps go offer up our lives.

Orl. We are enough, yet living in the field,
To smoother up the English in our throats,
If any order might be thought upon.

Bour. The devil take order now. I'll to the throng
Let life be short, else shame will be too long. [Exit

SCENE VI.—Another part of the Field.

Alarums. Enter King Henry and Forces; Exit and others.

K. Hen. Well, have we done, thrice valiant country-
men;
But all's not done; yet keep the French the field.

Exe. The duke of York commend's him to your majesty.

K. Hen. Lives he, good uncle? thie within this hour
I saw him down, three up again, and fighting;
From helmet to the spur all blood he was.

Exe. In which array, brave soldier, doth he lie.

Loading' the plain; and by his bloody side,
(Yoke-fellow to his honour-owing wounds)
The noble earl of Suffolk also lies.
Suffolk first died: and York, all haggled over,
 Comes to him, where in gore he lay insteep'd,
 And takes him by the heard, kisses the gashas,
 That bloodily did yawn upon his face;
 He cries aloud,—"Tarry, dear cousin Suffolk!
 My soul shall thine keep company to heaven:
 Tarry, sweet soul, for mine; then fly a-breast,
 As in this glorious and well-foughten field,
 We kept together in our chivalry"?

Upon these words I came and cheer'd him up:
 He smil'd me in the faee, raught me his hand,
 And, with a feeble gripe, says, "Dear my lord,
 Commend my service to my sovereign."
 So did he turn, and over Suffolk's neck
 He threw his wounded arm, and kiss'd his lips;
 And so, espous'd to death, with blood he seal'd
 A testament of noble-ending love.
 The pretty and sweet manner of it fore'd
 Those waters from me, which I would have stopp'd;
 But I had not so much of man in me;
 But all my mother came into mine eyes,
 And gave me up to tears.

K. Hen. I blame you not:

For, hearing this, I must perforse compound

1 A name for a sword. 2 The soul in which the bowels are wrapped.—Coke's Dic. 1677. 3 An allusion to the old Moralties in wate-the devil usually took part. 4 Alarums: in f. e. 5 Let us die instant: in f. e. 6 Larding: in f. e.
If they'll do neither, we will come to them,
And make them skirr away, as swift as stones
Enforced from the old Assyrian slings.
Besides, we'll cut the throats of those we have;
And not a man of them that we shall take,
Shall taste our mercy.—Go, and tell them so.

Enter MONTJOY.

Exc. Here comes the herald of the French, my liege.

Glo. His eyes are humbler than they us'd to be.

K. Hen. How now! what means this, herald? know'st thou not,

That I have find'd these bones of mine for ransom?

Com'th thou again for ransom?

Mont. No, great king: I come to thee for charitable license,

That we may wander o'er this bloody field,

To look' thine dead, and then to bury them;

To sort our nobles from our common men;

For many of our princes, woe the while!

Lie drown'd and soak'd in mercenary blood;

So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbs

In blood of princes, and their wounded steeds

Fret fetlock deep in gore, and with wild rage

Yerk out their armed heels at their dead masters,

Killing them twice. O! give us leave, great king

To view the field in safety, and dispose
Of their dead bodies.

K. Hen. I tell thee truly, herald, I know not if the day be ours, or no;

For yet a many of your horsemen peer,

And gallop o'er the field.

Mont. The day is yours.

K. Hen. Praised be God, and not our strength, for it!—

What is this castle call'd, that stands hard by?

Mont. They call it Agincourt.

K. Hen. Then call we this the field of Agincourt,

Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

Flu. Your grandfather of famous memory, an't please your majesty, and your great-nucle Edward the plack prince of Wales, as I have read in the chronicles, fought a most brave pattle here in France.

K. Hen. They did, Fluellen.

Flu. Your majesty says very true. If your majesty is remembered of it, the Welshmen did gout service in a garden where leeks did grow, wearing leeks in their Monmouth caps which your majesty knows, to this hour is an honourable padge of the service; and, I do believe, your majesty takes no soorn to wear the leek upon Saint Tavy's day.

K. Hen. I wear it for a memorable honour:

For I am Welsh, you know, good countryman.

Flu. All the water in Wye cannot wash your majesty's Welsh blood out of your pollys, I can tell you that: Got pless it, and preserve it, as long as it pleases his grace, and his majesty too!

K. Hen. Thanks, good my countryman.

Flu. By Cheshun, I am your majesty's countryman, I care not who know it; I will confess it to all the world: I need not to be ashamed of your majesty, praised be God, so long as your majesty is an honest man.

K. Hen. God keep me so!—Our heralds go with him.

Bring me just notice of the numbers dead,

On both our parts.—Call yonder fellow hither.

[Points to WILLIAMS. Exc. MONTJOY and others. Exc. Soldier, you must come to the king.

K. Hen. Soldier, why wear'st thou that glove in thy cap?
Will. An't please your majesty, 'tis in the gage of one that I should fight withal, if he be alive.
K. Hen. An Englishman?
Will. An't please your majesty, a rascal that swagged with me last night; who, if' it live, and ever dare to challenge this glove, I have sworn to take him a box o' the ear; or, if I can see my glove in his cap, (which he swore, as he was a soldier, he would wear, if alive) I would strike it out soundly.
K. Hen. What think you, captain Fluellen? is it fit this soldier keep his oath?
Flu. He is a craven and a villain else, an't please our majesty, in my conscience.
K. Hen. It may be, his enemy is a gentleman of great sort, quite from the answer of his degree.
Flu. Though he be as good a gentleman as the devil is, as Lucifer and Belzobub himself, it is necessary, look your grace, that he keep his vow and his oath. If he be perfurred, see you now, his reputation is as arrant a villain, and a Jaek-saucer, as ever his plac shoe trod upon God's ground and his earth, in my conscience, la.
K. Hen. Then keep thy vow, sirrah, when thou meet'st the fellow.
Will. So I will, my liege, as I live.
K. Hen. Who serv'st thou under?
Will. Under Captain Gower, my liege.
Flu. Gower is a good captain, and is a good knowledge, and literatur'd in the wars.
K. Hen. Call him hither to me, soldier.
Will. I will, my liege.
K. Hen. Here, Fluellen; wear thou this favour for me, and stick it in thy cap. When Aleneon and myself were down together, I plucked this glove from his helm: if any man challenge this, he is a friend to Aleneon, and an enemy to our person; if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, an thou dost me love.
Flu. Your grace does me as great honours, as can be desired in the hearts of his subjects: I would fain see the man, that has but two legs, that shall find himself aggrieved at this glove, that is all; but I would fain see it once, and please God of his grace, that I might see.
K. Hen. Knowest thou Gower?
Flu. He is my dear friend, and please you.
K. Hen. Pray thee, go seek him, and bring him to my tent.
Flu. I will fetch him.
K. Hen. My lord of Warwick, and my brother Gloster.
Follow Fluellen closely at the heels.
The glove, which I have here for a favour, May haply purchase him a box o' the ear: It is the soldier's; I, by bargain, should Wear it myself. Follow, good cousin Warwick: If that the soldier strike him, (as, I judge By his blunt bearing, he will keep his word) Some sudden mischief may arise of it, For I do know Fluellen valiant, And, touch'd with choler, hot as gunpowder, And quickly will return an injury: Follow, and see there be no harm between them.— Go you with me, uncle of Exeter. [Exit.

SCENE VIII.—Before King Henry's Pavilion.

Enter Gower and Williams.

Will. I warrant it is to knight you, captain.

Enter Fluellen.

Flu. Got's will and his pleasure, captain, I passeth you now, come space to the king: there is more goot toward you, peradventure, than is in your knowledge to dream of.

Will. Sir, know you this glove?
Flu. Know the glove? I know, the glove is a glove
Will. I know this, and thus I challenge it. [Strikes him
Flu. 'Sblood! an arrant traitor, as any's in the universal world, or in France, or in England.
Gow. How now, sir! you villain!
Will. Do you think I'll be forsworn?
Flu. Stand away, captain Gower: I will give treason his payment into plows: I warrant you.
Will. I am no traitor.
Flu. That's a lie in thy throat.—I charge you in his majesty's name, apprehend him: he is a friend of the duke Aleneon's.

Enter Warwick and Gloster.

War. How now, how now! what's the matter?
Flu. My lord of Warwick, here is, praised be God for it! a most contagious treason come to light, look you, as you shall desire in a summer's day. Here is his majesty.

Enter King Henry and Exeter.

K. Hen. How now! what's the matter?
Flu. My liege, here is a villain, and a traitor, that, look your grace, has struck the glove which your majesty is take out of the helmet of Aleneon.
Will. My liege, this was my glove; here is the fellow of it; and he that I gave it to in change promised to wear it in his cap: I promised to strike him if he did. I met this man with my glove in his cap, and I have been as good as my word.

Flu. Your majesty hear now, saving your majesty's manhood, what an arrant, rascally, beggarly, lowly knave it is. I hope your majesty is hear me testimony, and witness, and avouchments, that this is the glove of Aleneon, that your majesty is give me, in your conscience now.

K. Hen. Give me thy glove, soldier: look, here is the fellow of it.
'T was I, indeed, thou promisedst to strike; And thou hast given me most bitter terms.

Flu. An please your majesty, let his neck answer for it, if there is any martial law in the world.

K. Hen. How canst thou make me satisfaction?
Will. All offences, my lord, come from the heart: never came any from mine, that might offend your majesty.

K. Hen. It was ourself thou didst abuse.
Will. Your majesty came not like yourself: you appeared to me but as a common man; witness the night, your garments, your lowliness; and what your highness suffered under that shape, I beseech you, take it for your own fault, and not mine: for had you been as I took you for, I had made no offence; therefore, I beseech your highness, pardon me.

K. Hen. Here, uncle Exeter, fill this glove with crowns,
And give it to this fellow.—Keep it, fellow, And wear it for an honour in thy cap, Till I do challenge it.—Give him the crowns.— And, captain, you must needs be friends with him.

Flu. By this day and this light, the fellow has mettle enough in his pistol.—Hold, there is twelve pence for you, and I pray you to serve Got, and keep you out of pratts, and prabbles, and quarrels, and dissensions; and, I warrant you, it is the better for you.

Will. I will none of your money.

Flu. It is with a goot will. I can tell you, it will serve you to mend your shoes: come, wherefore should you be so pashful? your shoes is not so goot: it is a goot silling, I warrant you, or I will change it
Enter an English Herald.

K. Hen. Now, herald, are the dead number'd?
Her. Here is the number of the slaughter'd French.

[Delivers a Paper.]

K. Hen. What prisoners of good sort are taken, uncle?
Exe. Charles duke of Orleans, nephew to the king;
John duke of Bourbon, and lord Bouicqualt:
Of other lords, and barons, knights, and squires,
Full fifteen hundred, besides common men.

K. Hen. This note doth tell me of ten thousand French,
That in the field lie slain: of princes, in this number,
And nobles bearing banners, there lie dead [Reads,]
One hundred twenty-six: added to these,
Of knights, esquires, and gallant gentlemen.
Eight thousand and four hundred; of the which,
Five hundred were but yesterday dubb'd knights:
So that, in these ten thousand they have lost,
There are yet sixteen hundred mercenaries;
The rest are princes, barons, lords, knights, squires,
And gentlemen of blood and quality.
The names of those their nobles that lie dead—
Charles De-la-bret, high constable of France;
Jaques Chatillon, admiral of France;
The master of the cross-bows, lord Rambures: [phon;
Great-master of France, the brave sir Guiscard Dau-
John duke of Alencon; Antony duke of Brabant,
The brother to the duke of Burgundy:
And Edward duke of Bar: of lusty ears,
Grandpre, and Roussi, Fauconberg, and Foix,
Beaunopt, and Marie, Vaudemont, and Lestrale.

Here was a royal fellowship of death!—
Where is the number of our English dead?

[Herald presents another Paper—]
Edward the duke of York, the earl of Suffolk,
Sir Richard Ketyl, Davy Gam, esquire:
None else of name, and of all other men
But five and twenty. O God! thy arm was here.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Vouchsafe all those that have not read the story,
That I may prompt them: and for such as have,
I humbly pray them to admit th' excuse
Of time, of numbers, and due course of things,
Which cannot in their huge and proper life
Be here presented. Now, we hear the king
Toward Calais: grant him there; there seen,
Heave him away upon your winged thoughts.
Athat the sea. Behold, the English beach
Paits in the flood with men, with wives, and boys,
Whose shouts and claps out-voice the deep-mouth'd sea.
Which, like a mighty whiffer, [fure the king
Seems to prepare his way. So, let him land,
And solemnly see him set on to London.
So swift a pace hath thought, that even now
You may imagine him upon Blackheath;
Where, that his lords desire him, to have borne
His bruised helmet, and his bended sword,
Before him, through the city, he forhinds it,
Being free from vaineless and self-glorous pride,
Giving full trophgy, signal, and content,
Quite from himself, to God. But now behold
In the quick forge and working-house of thought.
How London doth pour out her citizens
The mayor, and all his brethren, in best sort.
Like to the senators of th' antique Rome.
With the plebeians swarming at their heels,
Go forth, and fetch their conquering Caesar in:
As, by a lower but by loving likelihood,
Were now the general of our gracious empress

[As in good time he may] from Ireland coming,
Bringing rebellion broched on his sword,
How many would the peaceful city quit,
To welcome him! much more, and much more cause,
Did they this Harry. Now, in London place him.
As yet the lamentation of the French
Invites the king of England's stay at home:
The emperor's coming in behalf of France,
To order peace between them: and omit
All the occurrences, whatever chanced,
Till Harry's back-return again to France:
There must we bring him: and myself have play'd
The interim, by remembering you, 'tis past.
Then brook abridgment, and your eyes advance,
After your thoughts, straight back again to France.

[Exit.

SCENE I.—France. An English Court of Guard.

Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Gow. Nay, that's right: but why weary you your look to-day? Saint Davy's day is past.

Flu. There is occasions, and causes, why and wherefore, in all things: I will tell you, as my friend, captain Gower. The rascal, scold, baggarly, lowsey, praging knave, Pistol, which you and yourself, and all the world, know to be no better than a fellow, look you now, o' no merits, he is come to me, and prings me pread and salt yesterday, look you, and bid me eat my leek. It was in a place where I could not but breed no contention with him; but I will be so pold as to wear it in my cap till I see him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my desires.

Gow. Why, here he comes, swelling like a turkey-cock...
Enter Pistol.

Flu. 'Tis no matter for his swellings, nor his turkey-cocks.—Got pless you, ancient Pistol! you scurril, lowly knave! Got pless you!

Pist. Ha! art thou bedlam? dost thou thurst, base Trojan,

To have me fold up Parea's fatal web?

Hence! I am Qualcomm at the smell of leek.

Flu. I peseech you heartily, scurril lowly knave, at my desires, and my requests, and my petitions, to eat, look you, this leek; because, look you, you do not love it, nor your affections, and your appetites, and your digestions, does not agree with it, I would desire you to eat it.

Pist. Not for Cadwallader, and all his goats.

Flu. There is one goat for you. [Strikes him.] Will you be so gout, scald knave, as eat it?

Pist. Base Trojan, thou shalt die.

Flu. You say very true, scald knave, when Got's will is. I will desire you to live in the mean time, and eat your victuals: come, there is sauce for it. [Striking him again.] You called me yesterday, mountain-squire, but I will make you to-day a squire of low degree!—I pray you, fall to: if you can mock a leek, you can eat a leek.

Gow. Enough, captain: you have astonished him.

Flu. I say, I will make him eat some part of my leek, or I will pect his pate four days.—Pite, I pray you: it is gout for your green wound, and your ploody coxcomb.

Pist. Must I bite?

Flu. Yes, certainly, and out of doubt, and out of question too, and ambiguities.

Pist. By this look, I will most horribly revenge. I eat, and eat I swear—

Flu. Eat, I pray you. Will you have some more sauce to your leek? there is not enough leek to swear by.

Pist. Quiet thy cudgel; then dost see, I eat.

Flu. Much gout do you, scald knave, heartily. Nay, pray you, throw none away; the skin is gout for your broken coxcomb. When you take occasions to see leeks hereafter, I pray you, mock at 'em; that is all.

Pist. Good.

Flu. Ay, leeks is gout.—Hold you; there is a great to heal your pate.

Pist. Me a great!

Flu. Yes; verily, and in truth, you shall take it, or I have another leek in my pocket, which you shall eat.

Pist. I take thy gout in earnest of revenge.

Flu. If I owe you any thing I will pay you in cudgels: you shall be a woodmangler, and buy nothing of me but cudgels. God be wi' you, and keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.

Pist. All hell shall stir for this.

Gow. Go, go; you are a counterfeit cowardly knave. Will you mock at an ancient tradition, begun upon an honourable respect, and worn as a memorable trophy of deceased valour, and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words? I have seen you gleeking and galling at this gentlemen twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speak English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English cudgel: you find it otherwise; and, henceforth, let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition.

Pist. Doth fortune play the huswife with me now?

News have I, that my Nell is dead? the spital

Of malady of France;
And there my rendezvous is quite cut off.
Oth! I do wax, and from my weary limbs
Honour is raged! Well, bawd! I'll turn,
And something lean to outpurse of quick hand
To England will I steal, and there I'll steal:
And patches will I get into these cudgell'd scars,
And swear, I got them in the Gallia wars. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Troyes in Champagne. An Apartment in the French King's Palace.

Enter, at one door, King Henry, Bedford, Gloster, Exeter, Warwick, Westmoreland, and other Lords; at another, the French King, Queen Isabel, the Princess Katharine, Lords, Ladies, &c., the Duke of Burgundy, and his Train.

K. Hen. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met
Unto our brother France, and to our sister,
Health and fair time of day:—joy and good wishes
To our most fair and princely cousin Katharine;—
And, as a branch and member of this royalty,
By whom this great assembly is contriv'd,
We do salute you, duke of Burgundy:—
And, princes French, and peers, health to you all.
Fr. King. Right joyous are we to behold your face
Most worthy brother England; fairly met:—
So are you, princes English, every one.
Q. Isa. So happy be the issue, brother England;
Of this good day, and of this gracious meeting,
As we are now glad to behold your eyes;
Your eyes, which hitherto have borne in them
Against the French, that met them in their bent,
The fatal balls of murdering basilisks:
The venom of such looks, we fairly hope,
Have lost their quality, and that this day
Shall change all griefs and quarrels into love.
K. Hen. To ery amen to that thus we appear.
Q. Isa. So happy be the issue, brother England;
Of this good day, and of this gracious meeting,
Great kings of France and England, that I have labour'd
With all my wits, my pains, and strong endeavors
To bring your most imperial majesties
Unto this bar and royal interview,
Your mightiness on both parts best can witness.
Since, then, my office hath so far prevail'd,
That face to face, and royal eye to eye,
You have conversed, let it not disgrace me,
If I demand before this royal view,
What rub, or what impediment, there is,
Why that the naked, poor, and mangled peace,
Dears nurse of arts, plenty, and joyful births,
Should not in this best garden of the world,
Our fertile France, lift up her lovely visage?
Alas! she hath from France too long been chased,
And all her husbandry doth lie on heaps,
Corrupting in its own fertility.
Her vine, the merry cheerer of the heart,
Unpruned dies: her hedges even-pleached,
Like prisoners wildly overgrown with hair,
Put forth disorder'd twigs: her fallow leas
The darning, hemlock, and rank fumitory.
Do root upon, while that the couler rusts,
That should deracinate such sauvagey:
The even mead, that erst brought sweetly forth
The freighted cowslip, burnet, and green clover,
Wanting the scythe, all uncorrected, rank,
Conceive by idleness, and nothing tenant,
But hateful docks, rough thistles, coxcombies, burs, Losing both beauty and utility; And as our vineyards, fallows, meads, and hedges, Detective in their nature, grow to wildness; Even so our houses, and ourselves, and children.

Have lost, or do not learn, for want of time, The sciences that should become our country,

But grew, like savages,—as soldiers will, That nothing do but meditate on blood,— To swearing, and stern looks, diffus'd attire.

And everything that seems unnatural, Which to reduce into our former favour,

You are assembled; and my speech a treat,

That I may know the let, why gentle peace

Should not expel these inconveniences,

And bless us with her former qualities.

K. Hen. If, duke of Burgundy, you would the peace,

Which you have cited, you must buy that peace

With full accord to all our just demands;

Whose tenors and particular effects

You have, enschedul'd briefly, in your hands.

But, the king hath heard them; to the which, as yet,

There is no answer made.

K. Hen. Well then, the peace,

Which you before so urg'd, lies in his answer.

Fr. King. I have but with a cursory eye

O'er-gian'd the articles: please then your grace
To appoint some of your council presently
To sit with us once more, with better heed
To re-survey them, we will suddenly
Pass, or accept,' and peremptory answer.

K. Hen. Brother, we shall.—Go, uncle Exeter,—

And brother Clarence—and you, brother Gloster,—

Warwick, and Huntingdon,—go with the king;

And take with you free power, to ratify,

Augment, or alter, as your wisdoms best
Shall see advantage, for our dignity,

Any thing in, or out of our demands,

And we'll consign thereto.—Will you, fair sister.

Go with the princes, or stay here with us?

Q. Isst. Our gracious brother, I will go with them.

Haply a woman's voice may do some good,

When articles, too nicely urg'd, be stood on.

K. Hen. Yet leave our cousin Katharine here with us:

She is our capital demand, compris'd

Within the fore-rank of our articles.

Q. Isst. She hath good leave,

[Execut all but King Henry, Katharine, and her Gentlewoman.

K. Hen. Fair Katharine, and most fair!

Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms,

Such as will enter at a lady's ear;

And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart?

Kath. Your majesty shall mock at me: I cannot speak but my tongue is English.

K. Hen. O fair Katharine! if you will love me

Soundly with your French heart, I will be glad to hear you confess it brokenly with your English tongue. Do you like me, Kate?

Kath. Pardonnez moi. I cannot tell vat is—like me.

K. Hen. An angel is like you, Kate: and you are like an angel.

Kath. Que dit-il? que je suis semblable a les angels?

Alice. Ouy, traitant, sauf votre grace, ainsi dit il.

K. Hen. I said so, dear Katharine, and I must not blush to affirm it.

Kath. O bon Dieu! les langues des hommes sont pleines de tromperies.

K. Hen. What says she, fair one? that the tongues of men are full of deceits?

Alice. Ouy! que de tongues de de mains is be full de deceits; de is de princess.

K. Hen. The princess is the better English-woman.

I' faith, Kate, my wooing is fit for thy understanding
I am glad thou canst speak no better English; for, if thou wouldst, thou woldst find me such a plain king that thou wouldst think I had sold my farm to buy my crown. I know no ways to mince it in love, but directly to say—I love you: then, if you urge me farther than to say—Do you in faith? I wear out my suit. Give me your answer: if faith, do, and so clap hands and a bargain. How say you, lady?

Kath. Sauf votre honneur, me understand well.

K. Hen. Marry, if you would put me to verses, or to dance for your sake, Kate, why you undid me: for the one, I have neither words nor measure: and for the other, I have no strength in measure, yet a reasonable measure in strength. If I could win a lady at leap-frog, or by vaulting into my saddle with my armour on my back, under the correction of bragging be it spoken, I should quickly leap into a wife; or if I might buffet for my love, or bound my horse for her favours. I could lay on like a butcher, and sit like a jack-an-apes, never off; but, before God, Kate.

I cannot look greenly, nor gazp out my eloquence,

nor I have no cunning in protestation; only downright oaths, which I never use till urged, nor never break for urging. If thou canst love a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose face is not worth sunburn'n, that never looks in his glass for love of any thing he sees there, let thine eye be thy cook, speak to thee plain soldier: if thou canst love me for this, take me; if not, to say to thee that I shall die is true; but for thy love, by the Lord, no; yet love thee too. And while thou livest, dear Kate, take a fellow of plain and unconscion constancy, for he perforce must do thee right, because he hath not the gift to woo in other places: for these fellows of infinite tongue, that can rhyme themselves into ladies' favours, they do always reason themselves out again. What!

a speaker is but a prater: a rhyme is but a ballad.

A good leg will fall, a straight back will stuop, a black beard will turn white, a curled pate will grow

bald, a fair face will wither, a full eye will wax hollow; but a good heart, Kate, is the sun and the moon;

or, rather, the sun, and not the moon, for it shines bright, and never changes, but keeps his course truly.

If thou would have such a one, take me: and take me, take a soldier; take a king, and what sayest thou then to my love? speak, my fair, and fairly

I pray thee.

Kath. Is it possible dat I should love de enemy of France?

K. Hen. No: it is not possible you should love the enemy of France, Kate; but, in loving me, you should love the friend of France, for I love France so well, that I will not part with a village of it: I will have it defote mine: and, Kate, when France is mine and I am yours, then yours is France, and you are mine.

Kath. I cannot tell vat is dat.

K. Hen. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French which I am sure will hang upon my tongue like a newly married wife about her husband's neck, hardly to be shook off.—Quand j'ai la possession de France, et quans vous avez la possession de moi, (let me see, what then?

Saint Dennis be my speed!)—donc vostre est France, et vos êtes miene. It is as easy for me, Kate, to con-

This moral ties me over to time, and a hot summer: and I shall catch the fly, your cousin, in the latter end, and she must be blind too.

Fr. King. Yes, my lord, you see them perspective: the cities turned into a maid, for they are all girdled with maiden walls, that war hath not entered.
K. Hen. Shall Kate be my wife?
Fr. King. So please you.
K. Hen. I am content, so the maiden cities you talk of, may wait on her; so the maid, that stood in the way of my wish, shall show me the way to my will.
Fr. King. We have consented to all terms of reason.
K. Hen. Is’t so, my lords of England?
West. The king hath granted every article:
His daughter, first; and then in sequel, all,
According to their firm proposed natures.
Ere. Only, he hath not yet subscribed this:
Where your majesty demands,—that the king of France,
having any occasion to write for matter of grant, shall name your highness in this form, and with this addition, in French.—Notre très cher fils Henry roi d’Angleterre, heretier de France; and thus in Latin.—•Præclarissimus filius •noster Henricus, rex Anglie, et hæres Francie.
Fr. King. Nor this I have not, brother, so denied,
But your request shall make me let it pass.
K. Hen. I pray you, then, in love and dear alliance
Let that one article rank with the rest;
And, thereupon, give me your daughter.
Fr. King. Take her, fair son; and from her blood raise up
Issue to me, that the contending kingdoms
Of France and England, whose very shores look pale,
With envy of each other’s happiness.
May cease their hatred; and this dear conjunction Plant neighbourhood and christian-like accord
In their sweet bosoms, that never war advance
His bleeding sword ’twixt England and fair France.
All. Amen!
K Hen. Now welcome, Kate,—and bear me witness all,
That here I kiss her as my sovereign queen. [Flourish
Q. Isa. God, the best maker of all marriages,
Combine your hearts in one, your realms in one!
As man and wife, being two, are one in love,
So be there ’twixt your kingdoms such a spousal,
That never may ill office, or fell jealousy,
Which troubles oft the bed of blessed marriage,
Thrust in between the paction of these kingdoms,
To make divorce of their incorporate league;
That English may as French, French Englishmen,
Receive each other!—God speak this Amen!
All. Amen!
K. Hen. Prepare we for our marriage:—on which day
My lord of Burgundy, we’ll take your oath,
And all the peers for surety of our leagues.
Then shall I swear to Kate, and you to me:
And may our oaths well kept and prosperous be!

SCENE, partly in England, and partly in France.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Westminster Abbey.

Dead March. The Corpse of King Henry the Fifth is discovered, lying in state; attended on by the Dukes of Bedford, Gloster, and Exeter: the Earl of Warwick, the Bishop of Winchester, Heralds, &c.

Red. Hung be the heavens with black, yield day to night! Comets, importing change of times and states, Brandish your crystal tresses in the sky; And with them scourge the bad revolting stars, That have consented unto Henry's death! Henry the fifth, too famous to live long! England ne'er lost a king of so much worth.

Glo. England ne'er had a king until his time. Virtue he had deserving to command: His brandish'd sword did blind men with his beams: His arms spread wider than a dragon's wings: His sparkling eyes, replete with wrathful fire, More dazzled and drove back his enemies, Than mid-day sun fierce bent against their faces. What should I say? his deeds exceed all speech: He ne'er lift up his hand, but conquered.

Exe. We mourn in black: why mourn we not in blood? Henry is dead, and never shall revive. Upon a wooden coffin we attend; And death's dishonourable victory

We with our stately presence glorify, Like captives bound to a triumphal car. What! shall we curse the planets of mishap. That plotted thus our glory's overthrow? Or shall we think the subtle-witted French Conjurers and sorcerers, that, afraid of him, By magic verses have contriv'd his end? Win. He was a king, bless'd of the King of kings. Unto the French the dreadful judgment day So dreadful will not be, as was his sight. The battles of the Lord of hosts he fought: The church's prayers made him so prosperous.

Glo. The church! where is it? Had not churchmen pray'd, His thread of life had not so soon decay'd: None do you like but an effeminate prince, Whom, like a school boy, you may over-awe.

Win. Gloster, whate'er we like, thou art protector, And lookest to command the prince, and realm. Thy wife is proud; she holdeth thee in awe. More than God, or religious churchmen may.

Glo. Name not religion, for thou lov'st the flesh; And ne'er throughout the year to church thou go'st, Except it be to pray against thy foes.

Red. Cease, cease these jars, and rest your minds in peace.

Let's to the altar:—Heralds, wait on us — Instead of gold, we'll offer up our arms.
SCENE I.

FIRST PART OF

Since arms avail not, now that Henry's dead,
Posterity, await for wretched years.
When at their mothers' moist eyes babes shall suck,
Our isle be made a nourish'd salt tears,
And none but women left to wail the dead.—
Henry the fifth! thy ghost I invoke;
Prosper this realm, keep it from civil broils!
Combat with adverse planets in the heavens!
A far more glorious star thy soul will make,
Than Julius Caesar, or bright Cassiope.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My honourable lords, health to you all.
Bad tidings bring to you out of France,
Of loss, of slaughter, and discontent:
Guemrene, Champagne, Rheims, Orleans,
Paris, Gisors, Poitiers, are all quite lost.

Bed. What say'st thou, man, before dead Henry's corse?
Speak softly, or the loss of those great towns
Will make him burst his lead, and rise from death.
Glo. Is Paris lost? is Rouen fled up?
If Henry were recall'd to life again,
These news would cause him once more yield the ghost.

Exe. How were they lost? what treachery was used?
Mess. No treachery; but want of men and money.
Among the soldiers this is muttered,—
That here you maintain several factions;
And whilst a field should be despatch'd and fought,
You are disputing of your generals.
One would have lingering wars with little cost;
Another would fly swift, but wanteth wings;
A third man thinks, without expense at all,
By guileful fair words peace may be obtain'd.
Awake, awake, English nobility!
Let not sloth dim your honours new-beget;
Cropp'd are the flower-de-luces in your arms;
Of England's coat one half is cut away.

Exe. Were our tears wanting to this funeral,
These tidings would call forth her flowing tides.

Bed. Me they concern; regent I am of France,
Give me my steel'd coat! I'll fight for France.

Exe. Away with these disgraceful van-rob's
Wounds will I lend the French instead of eyes,
To weep their interminable miseries.

Enter another Messenger.

2 Mess. Lords, view these letters, full of bad mischance.

France is revolted from the English quite,
Except some petty towns of no import:
The Dauphin Charles, is crowned king in Rheims;
The bastard of Orleans with him is join'd;
Reignier, duke of Anjou, doth take his part;
The duke of Alençon flieth to his side.

Exe. The Dauphin crowned king! all fly to him!
O! whither shall we fly from this reproach?
Glo. We will not fly, but to our enemies' throats—
Belford, if thou be slack, I'll fight it out.

Bed. Gloster, why doubt'st thou of my forwardness?
An army have I muster'd in my thoughts,
Wherewith already France is over-run.

Enter a third Messenger.

3 Mess. My gracious lords, to add to your lamentations,
Wherewith you now bedew Henry's hearse,
I must inform you of a dismal sight.
Betwixt the stout lord Talbot and the French.

Win. What! wherein Talbot overcame? is't so?

3 Mess. O! no; wherein lord Talbot was o'ershrown:
The circumstance it large.

The tenth of August last, this dreadful lord,
Retiring from the siege of Orleans,
Having full scarce six thousand in his troop,
By three-and-twenty thousand of the French
Was round encompassed and set upon.
No leisure had he to enrank his men;
He wanted pikers to set before his archers,
Instead whereof, sharp stakes, pluck'd out of hedges
They pitched in the ground confusedly,
To keep the horsemen off from breaking in.
More than three hours the fight continued:
Where valiant Talbot, above human thought,
Enacted wonders with his sword and lance.
Hundreds he sent to hell, and none durst stand him;
Here, there, and every where, char'd he flew.
The French exclaim'd, the devil was in arms;
All the whole army stood aghast on him.
His soldiers, spying his undaunted spirit,
A Talbot! A Talbot! cried out amain,
And rush'd into the bowels of the battle.
Here had the conquest fully been consum'd up,
If sir John Fastolfe had not play'd the coward:
He being in the rearward plac'd behind
With purpose to relieve and follow them,
Cowardly fled, not having struck one stroke.
Hence grew the general wreck and massacre:
Enclosed were they with their enemies.
A base Walloon, to win the Dauphin's grace,
Thrust Talbot with a spear into the back;
Whom all France, with their chief assembled strength,
Durst not presume to look once in the face.

Bed. Is Talbot slain? then, I will slay myself,
For living idly here in pomp and ease,
Whilst such a worthy leader, wanting aid,
Unto his dastard foe-men is betray'd.

3 Mess. O, no! he lives; but is took prisoner,
And lord Scales with him, and lord Hungerford:
Most of the rest slay'd and taken, likewise.

Bed. His ransom, there is none but I shall pay.
I will have the Dauphin headlong from his throne;
His crown shall be the ransom of my friend.
Four of their lords I'll change for one of ours.—
Farewell, my masters, till our masters come.
Bonfires in France forthwith I am to make,
To keep our great Saint George's feast withal.
Ten thousand soldiers with me I will take,
Whose bloody deeds shall cause all Europe quake.

3 Mess. So you had need; for Orleans is besieg'd
The English army is grown weak and faint;
The earl of Salisbury's caveth supply
And hardly keeps his men from mutiny,
Since they, so few, watch such a multitude.

Exe. Remember, lords, your oaths to Henry sworn.
Either to quell the Dauphin utterly,
Or bring him in obedience to your yoke.

Bed. I do remember it; and here take my leave,
To go about my preparation.

Exit

Glo. I'll to the Tower, with all the haste I can,
To view th' artillery and munition;
And then I will proclaim young Henry king.

Exit. To Eltham will I, where the young king is.

Bed. To Eltham will I, where his special governor;
And for his safety there I'll best devise.

Win. Each hath his place and function to attend:
I am left out; for me nothing remains.
But long I will not be Jack-out-of-office;
The king from Eltham I intend to steal;
And sit at chiefest stern of public weal.

SCENE II.—France. Before Orleans.

Flourish. Enter CHARLES, with his Forces; ALBION, REIGNIER, and others.

Char. Mars his true moving, even as in the heavens, So in the earth, to this day is not known. 1 Late did he shine upon the English side; Now we are victors, upon us he smiles. What towns of any moment but we have? At pleasure here we lie near Orleans; The whites, the famish’d English, like pale ghosts, Feintly besiege us one hour in a month.

Aien. They want their porridge, and their fat bull-bees: Either they must be dieted like mules, And have their provender tied to their mouths, Or piteous they will look like drowned mice.

Reig. Let’s raise the siege. Why live we idly here?

Tabot is taken whom we wont to fear: Remaineth none but mad-brain’d Salisbury, And he may well in fretting spend his gall; Nor men, nor money, hath he to make war.

Char. Sound, sound alarum! we will rush on them. Now, for the honour of the fairest French! Him I forgive my death that killeth me.
When he sees me go back one foot, or flee.” [Exeunt.

Alarums: Excursions; afterwards a Retreat.

Re-enter CHARLES, ALBION, REIGNIER, and others.

Char. Who ever saw the like? what men have I!— Dogs! cowardly dastards!—I would ne’er have fled, But that they left me ‘midst my enemies.

Reig. Salisbury is a desperate homicide; He fighth as one weary of his life: The other lords, like lions wanting food, Do rush upon us as their hungry prey.

Aien. Froissart, a countryman of ours, records, England all Olivers and Rowlands bro’d, During the time Edward the third did reign. More truly now may this be verified; For none but Samsons and Golasses, It sendeth forth to skirmish. One to ten! Lean raw-boned rascals! who would e’er suppose They had such courage and audacity?

Char. Let’s leave this town; for they are hair-brain’d slaves, And hunger will enforce them be more eager: Of old I knew them; rather with their teeth The walls they’ll tear down, than forswake the siege.

Reig. I think, by some odd gimmals 2 or device, Their arms are set like clocks still to strike on; Else ne’er could they hold out so, as they do. By my consent, we’ll e’en let them alone.

Aien. Be it so.

Enter the Bastard of Orleans.

Bast. Where’s the prince Dauphin? I have news for him.

Char. Bastard of Orleans, thrice welcome to us.

Bast. Methinks your looks are sad, your cheer appall’d: Hath the late overthrow wrought this offence? Be not dismay’d, for succour is at hand: A holy maid hitter with me I bring, Which, by a vision sent to her from heaven, Ordained is to raise this tedious siege, And drive the English forth the bounds of France. The spirit of deep prophecy she hath, Exceeding the nine sibyls of old Rome; What’s past and what’s to come, she can desery.

Speak, shall I call her in? Believe my words, For they are certain and unattailable.

Char. Go, call her in. [Exit Bastard.] But first, to try her skill.

Reignier, stand thou as Dauphin in my place: Question her proudly, let thy looks be stern. By this means shall we sound what skill she hath

Enter LA PUCELLE, Bastard of Orleans, and others.

Reig. Fair maid, is’t thou will do these wondrous feats?

Puc. Reignier, is’t thou that thinkest to beguile me? Where is the Dauphin?—Come, come from behind! I know thee well, though never seen before. Be not amazed, there’s nothing hid from me. In private will I talk with thee apart.—

Stand back, my lords, and give us leave awhile.

Reig. She takes upon her bravely at first dash.

Puc. Dauphin, I am by birth a shepherd’s daughter. My wit untrain’d in any kind of art, Heaven and our gracious Lady hath it pleas’d To shine on my contemptible estate: Let whilst I wait on my tender lambs, And to sun’s parching heart display’d my cheeks, God’s mother deigned to appear to me; And, in a vision full of majesty, Will’d me to leave my base vocation, And free my country from calamity. Her aid she promises, and assured success: In complete glory she reveal’d herself; And, whereas I was black and swart before, With those clear rays which she inflam’d me, That beauty am I bless’d with, which you see. Ask me what question thou canst possible, And I will answer unpersuaded: My courage try by combat, if thou dar’st, And thou shalt find that I exceed my sex. Resolve on this; thou shalt be fortunate, If thou receive me for thy warlike mate.

Char. Thou hast astonish’d me with thy high terms Only this proof I’ll of thy valour make: In single combat thou shalt buckle with me, And if thou vanquishest, thy words are true; Or, 3 I renounce all confidence in you. 4

Puc. I am prepar’d. Here is my keen-edg’d sword, Deck’d with five flower-de-luces on each side; The which at Tournai, in Saint Katharine’s churchyard, Out of a great deal of old iron I chose forth.

Char. Then, come o’ God’s name: I fear no woman.

Puc. And, while I live, I’ll never fly from man. 5

[They fight

Char. Stay, stay thy hands! thou art an Amazon, And fightest with the sword of Deborah.

Puc. Christ’s mother helps me, else I were too weak.

Char. Whoe’er helps thee, ’tis that must help me. Impatiently I burn with thy desire; My heart and hands thou hast at once subdued. Excellent Pucelle, if thy name be so, Let me thy servant, and not sovereign be: ’T is the French Dauphin sueth thus to thee. Puc. I must not yield to any rites of love. For my profession’s sacred from above; Where I have chased all thy foes from hence, Then will I think upon a recompense.

Char. Mean time look gracious on thy prostrate thrall.

Reig. My lord, methinks, is very long in talk. 6

SCENE III.—London. Tower Hill.

Enter at the Gates, the Duke of Gloster, with his Serving-men.

Glo. I am come to survey the Tower this day; Since Henry's death, I fear, there is conveyance. Where be these warders, that they wait not here? Open the gates! 'Tis Gloster that now calls.

1 Ward. [Within.] Who's there, that knocks so importunately?

1 Serv. It is the noble duke of Gloster.

2 Ward. [Within.] Whoe'er he be, you may not be let in.

2 Serv. Villains, answer you now the lord protector? 1 Ward. [Within.] The Lord protect him! so we answer him.

We do no otherwise than we are will'd.

Glo. Who will'd you so? or whose wills stand but mine? There's none protector of the realm but I. Break up the gates, I'll be your warrantize. Shall I be flouted thus by dunghill groans?

GLOSTER'S Men rush at the Tower Gates. Enter, to the gates, Woodville, the Lieutenant.

Wood. [Within.] What noise is this? what traitors have we here?

Glo. Lieutenant, is it you whose voice I hear? Open the gates! here's Gloster that would enter.

Wood. [Within.] Have patience, noble duke; I may not open; The cardinal of Winchester forbids:

From him I have express commandment, That thou, nor none of thine, shall be let in.

Glo. Faint-hearted Woodville, prizest hum'fore me! Arrogant Winchester, that haughty prelate, Whom Henry, our late sovereign, ne'er could brook? Thou art no friend to God, or to the king: Open the gates, or I'll shut thee out shortly.

1 Serv. Open the gates unto the lord protector. We'll burst them open, if you come not quickly.

Enter WINCHESTER, and SERVANTS in tawney coats;

Win. How now, ambitious Humphrey! what mean this,

Glo. P Malcolm priest, dost thou command me be shut out? Win. I do, thou most usurping prorator, And not protector, of the king or realm.

Glo. Stand back, thou manifest conspirator, Thou that contrib'best to murder our dead lord, Thou that giv'st whores indulgences to sin. I'll canvase thee in thy bold cardinal's hat, If thou proceed in this thy insolence.

Win. Nay, stand thou back; I will not budge a foot: This be Damascus, be thou cursed Cain, To slay thy brother Abel, if thou wilt.

Glo. I will not slay thee, but I'll drive thee back. Thy scarlet robes, as a child's bearing-cloth I'll use to carry thee out of this place.

Win. Do what thou dar'st; I'll hear thee to thy face. Glo. What! am I dar'd, and bearded to my face?—Draw, men, for all this is a privileg'd place; Blue coats to tawney coats. Priest, beware your beauty! [Gloster and his Men attack the Bishop]

Gloster and his Men attack the Bishop.

I mean to tug it, and to cuff you soundly. Under my feet I stamp thy cardinal's hat, In spite of pope or dignities of church; Here by the checks I'll drag thee up and down.

Win. Gloster, thou'll answer this before the pope. Glo. Winchester goose! I cry—a rope! a rep're! Now beat them hence; why do you let them stay? Thee I'll chase hence, thou wolf in sheep's array. Out, tawney coats!—out, scarlet hypocrites! Here Gloster's Men beat out the Cardinal's Men, and enter, in the hurly-burly, the Mayor of London and his Officers.

May. Fie, lords! that you, being supreme magistrates Thus contumely should break the peace! Glo. Peace, mayor! thou knowest little of my wrongs Here's Beaufort, that regards nor God nor king, Hath here restrain'd the Tower to his use.

Win. Here's Gloster too, a foe to citizens; One that still motions war, and never peace, O'recharging your free purses with large fines; That seeks to overthrow religion, Because he is protector of the realm; And would have armour, here, out of the Tower, To crown himself king, and suppress the prince.

Glo. I will not answer thee with words, but blows. [Here they skirmish again.

May. Nought rests for me, in this tumultuous strife, But to make open proclamation.—

Come, officer: as loud as thou canst cry.

Off. All manner of men, assembled here in arms this day, against God's peace, and the king's, we charge and command you, in his highness' name, to repair to your several dwelling-places; and not to wear, handle, or use, any sword, weapon, or dagger, henceforward, upon pain of death.

Glo. Cardinal, I'll be no breaker of the law; But we shall meet, and break our minds at large.

Win. Gloster, we'll meet to thy dear cost be sure:

1 Not in F. e. 2 Fraud. theft. 3 This, according to Stow, was the dress of a bishop's attendants. 4 Skorn. 5 The steers in South- wark were under the jurisdiction of the Bishop of Winchester, whose palace stood near by. 6 It was the old popular belief, that the site of Damascus was the place where Cain killed Abel. 7 This was the usual livery of servants. 8 A title applied to those who had contracted a malady to which frequenters of the steaws are liable
Thy heart blood I will have for this day's work.
May. I'll call for clubs if you will not away.—
This cardinal's more haughty than the devil.
Glo. Mayor, farewell: thou dost but what thou may'st.
Win. Abominable Gloster! guard thy head:
For I intend to have it off ere long. [Exeunt.
May. See the coast clear'd, and then we will depart.
Good God! that nobles should such stomachs bear!
I myself fight not once in forty year. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—France. Before Orleans.

Enter on the Walls, the Master-Gunner and his Son.

M Gun. Sirrah, thou know'st how Orleans is besieged,
And how the English have the suburbs won.
Son. Father, I know; and oft have shot at them,
Hower'd unfortunate I miss'd my aim.
M Gun. But now thou shalt not. Be thou ruled by me:
Chief master-gunner am I of this town;
Something I must do to procure me grace.
The prince's espias have informed me,
How the English, in the suburbs close entrench'd,
Wont through a secret grate of iron bars
In yonder tower, to overpeer the city;
And thence discover, how, with most advantage,
They may vex us with shot, or with assault.
To intercept this inconvenience,
A piece of ordnance 'gainst it I have plac'd;
And fully even these three days have I watch'd,
If I could see them. Now, boy, do thou watch,
For I can stay no longer on my post.
If thou spy'st any, run and bring me word,
And thou shalt find me at the governor's. [Exit.
Son. Father, I warrant you; take you no care:
U'll never trouble you, if I may spy them.

Enter, in a upper Chamber of a Tower, the Lords Salisbury and Talbot; Sir William Glansdale,
Sir Thomas Garrawe, and others.
Sal. Talbot, my life, my joy! again return'd?
How wert thou handled, being prisoner,
Or by what means got'st thou to be releas'd,
Disservice, I pray thee, on this turret's top.
Tal. The duke of Bedford had a prisoner,
Called the brave lord of Ponton de Santrailes;
For him I was exchang'd and ransomed.
But with a baser man of arms by far,
Once, in contempt, they would have barter'd me:
Which I, disdaining, scorn'd; and cravest death,
Rather than I would be so vile esteem'd:
In fine, redeem'd I was as I desire'd.
But, O! the treacherous Fastolfe wounds my heart:
Whom with my bare fists I would execute,
If I now had him brought into my power.
Sal. Yet tell'st thou not, how thouwert entertain'd?
Tal. With scoffs, and scorns, and contumelious taunts.
In open market-place produc'd they me,
To be a public spectacle to all:
Here, said they, is the terror of the French.
The scare-crow that affrights our children so.
Then broke I from the officers that led me,
And with my nails digg'd stones out of the ground,
To Lord at the beholders of my shame.
My grisly countenance made others fly;
None durst come near for fear of sudden death.
In iron walls they deem'd me not secure;
So great fear of my name amongst them was spread,
That they suppos'd I could rend bars of steel,
And spurn in pieces posts of adamant.
Wherefore a guard of chosen shot I had
That walk'd about me every minute-while,
And if I did but stir out of my bed,
Ready they were to shoot me to the heart.
Sal. I grieve to hear what tortures you endure;
But we will be reveng'd sufficiently.
Now, it is supper time in Orleans.
Here, through this gate, I can count every one.
And view the Frenchmen how they fortify:
Let us look in; the sight will much delight thee.—
Sir Thomas Gargrave, and Sir William Glansdale,
Let me have your express opinions,
Where is best place to make our battery next.
Gar. I think, at the north gate: for there stand lords.
Glan. And I, here, at the bulwark of the bridge.
Tal. For aught I see, this city must be famish'd
Or with light skirmishes enfeebled. [Gabelle fall [Shot from the Town. Salisbury and Sir Tho. Sal. O Lord! have mercy on us, wretched sinners.
Gar. O Lord! have mercy on me, woeful man.
Tal. What chance is this, that suddenly hath cross'd
Speak Salisbury; at least, if thou canst speak: [us?
How far'st thou, mirror of all martial men?
One of thine eyes, and thy cheek's side struck off!—
Accursed tower! accursed fatal hand,
That hath contriv'd this woeful tragedy!
In thirteen battles Salisbury o'ercame;
Henry the fifth he first train'd to the wars;
Whilst any trump did sound, or drum struck up.
His sword did ne'er leave striking in the field.—
Yet liv'st thou, Salisbury? though thy speech doth fail
One eye thou hast to look to heaven for grace:
The sun with one eye vie'steth all the world.—
Heaven, be thou gracious to none alive,
If Salisbury want mercy at thy hands!—
Bear hence his body, I will help to bury it.—
Sir Thomas Gargrave, hast thou any life?
Speak unto Talbot; nay, look up to him.
Salisbury, cheer thy spirit with this comfort;
Thou shalt not die, whiles——
He beckons with his hand, and smiles on me,
As who should say, "When I am dead and gone,
Remember to avenge me on the French?"
Plantagenet, I will; and, Nero-like,
Play on the lute, beholding the towns burn:
Wretched shall France be only in my name.

[An Alarum: it thunders and lightens
What stir is this? What tumult's in the heavens?
Whence cometh this alarum, and the noise?
Enter a Messenger.
Mess. My lord, my lord! the French have gather'd
The Dauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle join'd; [head.
A holy prophetess, new risen up,
Is come with a great power to raise the siege.
Salisbury lifts himself up and groans.
Tal. Hear, hear, how dying Salisbury doth groan!
It rks his heart he cannot be reveng'd.—
Frenchmen, I'll be a Salisbury to you,
Pucelle or puzzel, dolphin or dogfish,
Your hearts I'll stamp out with my horse's heels,
And make a quagmire of your mangled brains.—
Convey me Salisbury into his tent.
And then we'll try what vastard Frenchmen dare.

[Exeunt, bearing out the bodies

SCENE V.—The Same. Before one of the Gates.

Alarum. Skirmishings. Talbot pursues the Dauphin, and drives him; then enter Joan la Pucelle, driving
Englishmen before her. Then enter Talbot.

Tal. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force,

1 The usual city cry in times of tumult.
2 these: in folio.
3 went: in folio.
4 pill'd: in folio.
SCENE 1.

KING HENRY VI.

Our English troops retire, I cannot stay them;
A woman clad in armour chargeth them.

Enter La Pucelle.

Here, here she comes.—I'll have a bout with thee:
Devil, or devil's dam, I'll conjure thee:
Blood will I draw on thee; thou art a witch,
And straightforward give thy soul to him thou serv'st.

Puc. Come, come; 'tis only I that must disgrace thee.

[Tal. Heavens, can you suffer hell so to prevail?
My breast I'll burst with straining of my courage,
And from my shoulders crack my arms asunder,
But I will chastise this high-minded trumpeter.

Puc. Talbot, farewell; thy hour is not yet come:
I must go victual Orleans forthwith.
O'ertake me if thou canst; I scorn thy strength.
Go, go, cheer up thy hunger-starved men;
Help Salisbury to make his testament:
This day is ours, as many more shall be.

[La Pucelle enters the town, with Soldiers.

Tal. My thoughts are whirled like a potter's wheel:
I know not where I am, nor what I do.
A witch by fear, not force, like Hammibal,
Drives back our troops, and conquers as she lists:
So bees with smoke, and doves with noisome stench,
Are from their lives and houses driven away.
They call'd us for our fierceness English dogs;
Now, like to wheelers, we crying run away.

[A short Alarm.

Hark, countrymen! either renew the fight,
Or tear the lions out of England's coat;
Renounce your soil, give sheep in lions' stead:
Sleep run not half so treacherous from the wolf,
Or horse, or oxen, from the leopard,
As you fly from your oft-subdued slaves.

[Enter Sergeant.

It will not be.—Retire into your trenches:
You all consented unto Salisbury's death,
For none would strike a stroke in his revenge.—
Pucelle is enter'd into Orleans.

In spite of us, or aught that we could do.
O! would I were to die with Salisbury,
The shame hereof will make me hide my head.

[Alarm. Retreat. Exeunt Talbot and his Forces

SCENE VI.—The Same.

Flourish. Enter, on the Wall, Pucelle, Charles,
Reignier, Alençon, and Soldiers.

Puc. Advance our waving colours on the wall!
Rescue'd is Orleans from the English wolves;
Thus Joan la Pucelle hath performed her word.

Char. Divinest creature, bright Astra's daughter,
How shall I honour thee for this success?
Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens,
That one day bloom'd, and fruitful were the next—
France, triumph in thy glorious prophetess!—
Recover'd is the town of Orleans:
More blessed hap did never befall our state.

Reig. Why ring not out the bells aloud through the town?

Dauphin, command the citizens make bonfires
And feast and banquet in the open streets,
To celebrate the joy that God hath given us,

Alen. All France will be replièt with mirth and joy.
When they shall hear how we have play'd the men,
Char. 'T is Joan, not we, by whom the day is won,
For which I will divide my crown with her;
And all the priests and friars in my realm
Shall in procession sing her endless praise.

A stately pyramis to her I'll rear,
Than Rhedope's, or Memphis', ever was:
In memory of her, when she is dead,
Her ashes, in an urn more precious
Than the rich-jewel'd coffer of Darius,
Transported shall be at high festivals
Before the kings and queens of France.
No longer on Saint Dennis will we cry,
But Joan la Pucelle shall be France's saint.
Come in; and let us banquet royally,
After this golden day of victory.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Same.

Enter the Gates, a French Sergeant, and Two Sentinels.

Serg. Sirs, take your places, and be vigilant.
If any noise, or soldier, you perceive,
Near to the walls, by some apparent sign
Let us have knowledge at the court of guard.

[Exit Sergeant.

I Sent. Sergeant, you shall. Thus are poor servants
[When others sleep upon their quiet beds
Constraining to watch in darkness, rain, and cold.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, Burgundy, and Forces, with scaling Ladders; their Drums beating a dead march.

Tal. Lord regent, and redoubted Burgundy,
By whose approach the regions of Artois,
Walloon, and Picardy, are friends to us,
This happy night the Frenchmen are secure,
Having all day carous'd and banqueted.
Embrace we, then, this opportunity,
As fitting best to quittance their deceit,
Contriv'd by art, and baleful sorcery.

Bed. Coward of France!—how much he wrongs his fame,

Despairing of his own arm's fortune,
To join with witches, and the help of hell.

Bur. Traitors have never other company.
But what's that, Pucelle, whom they term so pure?

Tal. A maid, they say.

Bed. A maid, and be so martial!

Bur. Pray God, she prove not masculine ere long;
If underneath the standard of the French,
She carry armour, as she hath begun.

Tal. Well, let them practice and converse with spirits;
God is our fortress, in whose conquering name
Let us resolve to scale their flinty bulwarks.

Bed. Ascend, brave Talbot; we will follow thee.

Tal. Not all together: better far, I guess,
That we do make our entrance several ways,
That if it chance the one of us do fail,
The other yet may rise against their force.

Bed. Agreed. I'll to you corner.

Bur. And I to this.

Tal. And here will Talbot mount, or make his grave.

Now, Salisbury, for thee, and for the right
Of English Henry, shall this night appear
How much in duty I am bound to both.

[The English scale the Walls, crying St George! a Talbot! and all enter the Town.]

Sent. [Within.] Arm, arm! the enemy doth make assault! Frenchmen leap over the Walls in their shirts. Enter several way. Bastard, Alençon, Reingnien, half-ready! and half unready.

Aen. How now, my lords! what, all unready so?

Bast. Unready? ay, and glad we 'scape'd so well.

Reig. 'T was time, I trow, to wake and leave our beds.

Hearing alarms at our chamber doors.

Aen. Of all exploits, since first I followed arms,

Ne'er heard I of a warlike enterprise

More ventures, or desperate than this.

'Bast. I think, this Talbot be a fiend of hell.

Reig. If not of hell, the heavens, sure, favour him.

Aen. Here cometh Charles: I marvel, how he sped.

Enter Charles and La Pucelle.

Bast. Tut! holy Joan was his defensive guard.

Char. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitful dame?

Didst thou at first, to flatter us withal,

Make us partakers of a little gain,

That now our loss might be ten times so much?

Puc. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend?

At all times will you have my power alike?

Sleeping or waking must I still prevail;

Or will you blame, and lay the fault on me?—

Improvident soldiers! had your watch been good,

This sudden mischief never could have fallen.

Char. Duke of Alençon, this was your default,

That, being captain of the watch to-night,

Did look no better to that weighty charge.

Aen. Had all your quarters been as safely kept,

As that whereof I had the government.

We had not been thus shamefully surpris'd.

Bast. Mine was secure.

Reig. And so was mine, my lord.

Char. And for myself, most part of all this night,

Within her quarter, and mine own precinct,

I was employ'd in passing to and fro,

About relieving of the sentinels:

Then, how, or which way, should they first break in?

Puc. Question, my lords, no further of the ease,

How, or which way: 'tis sure, they found some place

But weakly guarded, where the breach was made;

And now there rests no other shift but this,—

To gather our soldiers, scatter'd and dispers'd,

And lay new platforms to endanger them.

Alarum. Enter an English Soldier, crying, a Talbot! a Talbot! They fly, leaving their Clothes behind.

Sold. I'll be so bold to take what they have left.

The cry of Talbot serves me for a sword;

For I have loaden me with many spoils,

Using no other weapon but his name.

SCENE II.—Orleans. Within the Town.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, Burgundy, a Captain, and others.

Bast. The day begins to break, and night is fled,

Whose pitchy mantle over-veil'd the earth.

Here sound retreat, and cease our hot pursuit.

[Retreat sounded.]

Tal. Bring forth the body of old Salisbury;

And here advance it in the market-place,

The middle centre of this cursed town.—

Now have I paid my vow unto his soul;

For every drop of blood was drawn from him,

There have at least five Frenchmen died to-night.

And that hereafter ages may behold

What ruin happen'd in revenge of him,

Within their chieftest temple I'll erect

A tomb, wherein his corpse shall be inter'd:

Upon the which, that every one may read,

Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orleans.

The treacherous manner of his mournful death,

And what a terror he had been to France.

But, lords, in all our bloody massacre,

I muse, we met not with the Dauphin's grace,

His new-come champion, virtuous Joan of Are,

Nor any of his false confederates.

Bed. 'T is thought, lord Talbot, when the fight began

Rons'd on the sudden from their drowsy beds,

They did, amongst the troops of armed men,

Leap o'er the walls for refuge in the field.

Bur. Myself, as far as I could well discern,

For smoke, and dusky vapours of the night,

Am sure I see'r'd the Dauphin, and his trutl;

When arm in arm they both came swiftly running,

Like to a pair of loving turtle-doves,

That could not live asunder, day or night.

After that things are set in order here,

We'll follow them with all the power we have.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. All hail, my lords! Which of this princely train

Call ye the warlike Talbot, for his acts

So much applauded through the realm of France?

Tal. Here is the Talbot; who would speak with him?

Mess. The virtuous lady, countess of Auvergne,

With modesty admiring thy renown,

By me entreats, great lord, then wouldst vouesafe

To visit her poor castle where she lies;

That she may boast she hath beheld the man

Whose glory fills the world with loud report.

Bur. Is it even so? Nay, then, I see, our wars Will turn unto a peaceful comic sport,

When ladies brave to be encounter'd with.—

You may not, my lord, despise her gentle suit.

Tal. Ne'er trust me then; for when a world of men

Could not prevail with all their oratory,

Yet hath a woman's kindness over-rul'd.—

And therefore tell her, I return great thanks,

And in submission will attend on her.—

Will not your honours hear me company?

Bed. No, truly, it is more than manners will,

And I have heard it said, unbidden guests

Are often welcomest when they are gone.

Tal. Well then, alone, since there's no remedy,

I mean to prove this lady's courtesy. [mound

Come hither, captain. [Whispers.—You perceive my

Capt. I do, my lord, and mean accordingly.

[Exeunt]

SCENE III.—Auvergne. Court of the Castle.

Enter the Countess and her Porter.

Port. Porter, remember what I gave in charge:

And, when you have done so, bring the keys to me.

Port. Madam, I will.

[Exit

Port. The plot is laid: if all things fall out right I shall as famous be by this exploit,

As Seythian Thomyris by Cyrus' death.

Great is the rumour of this dreadful knight,

And his achievements of no less account:

Pain would mine eyes be witness with mine ears,

To give their consuere of these rare reports.
Enter Messenger and Talbot.

Mess. Madam, according as your ladyship desireth, by message crave d, so is lord Talbot come.

Count. And he is welcome.—What! is this the man?

Mess. Madam, it is.

Count. Is this the Soearth of France?

Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad, or with his name the mothers still their babies? I see report is fabulous and false:

I thought I should have seem some Hercules, a second Hector for his grim aspect, and large proportion of his strong-knit limbs.

Alas! this is a child, a silly dwarf: it cannot be, this weak and withered shrimp should strike such terror to his enemies.

Tal. Madam, I have been bold to trouble you; but, since your ladyship is not at leisure, I'll sort some other time to visit you.

Count. What means he now?—Go, ask him, whither he goes.

Mess. Stay, my lord Talbot; for my lady craves to know the cause of your abrupt departure.

Tal. Marry, for that she's in wrong belief, I go to certify her Talbot's here.

Re-enter Porter, with Keys.

Count. If thou be he, then art thou prisoner.

Tal. Prisoner! to whom?

Count. To me, blood-thirsty lord; and for that cause I train d thee to my house.

Long time thy shadow hath been thrall to me, for in my gallery thy picture hangs; but now the substance shall endure the like, and I will chain these legs and arms of thine, that hast by tyranny these many years, wasted our country, slain our citizens, and sent our sons and husbands captive.

Tal. Ha, ha, ha!

Count. Laughest thou, wretch? thy mirth shall turn to moan.

Tal. I laugh to see your ladyship so fond, to think that you have aught but Talbot's shadow, whereon to practise your severity.

Count. Why, art thou not the man?

Tal. Count. Then have I substance too.

Tal. No, no, I am but shadow of myself: you are deceiv'd, my substance is not here; for what you see, is but the smallest part, and least proportion of humanity.

I tell you, madam, were the whole frame here, it is of such a spacious lofty pitch, your roof were not sufficient to contain it.

Count. This is a riddling merchant^ for the nonce; he will be here, and yet he is not here:

How can these contrarieties agree?

Tal. That will I show you, lady, presently, he winds his Horn, Drums strike up; a Peal of Ordinance, The Gates being forced, enter Soldiers.

How say you, madam? are you now persuaded that Talbot is but shadow of himself? These are his substance, sinewes, arms, and strength, with which he yoketh your rebellious necks, razzeth your cities, subverts your towns, and in a moment makes them desolate.

Count. Victorious Talbot, pardon my abuse; I find, thou art no less than fame hath bruited, and more than may be gather'd by thy shape. Let my presumption not provoke thy wrath; for I am sorry, that with reverence

I did not entertain thee as thou art.

Tal. Be not dismay'd, fair lady; nor misconstrue the mind of Talbot, as you did mistake the outward composition of his body.

What you have done hath not offended me: no other satisfaction do I crave, but only, with your patience, that we may taste of your wine, and see what cates you have; for soldiers' stomachs always serve them well.

Count. With all my heart; and think me honoured to feast so great a warrior in my house. [Exit]

SCENE IV.—London. The Temple Garden.

Enter the Earl of Somerset, Suffolk, and Warwick.

Richard Plantagenet, Vernon, and a Lawyer.

Plan. Great lords, and gentlemen, what means this? Dare no man answer in a case of truth? silence.

Suf. Within the Temple hall we were too loud: the garden here is more convenient.

Plan. Then say at once, if I maintain'd the truth, or else was wrangling Somerset in the error?

Suf. Faith, I have been a truant in the law, and never yet could frame my will to it: and, therefore, frame the law unto my will.

Som. Judge you, my lord of Warwick, then, between us.

War. Between two hawks, which flies the higher pitch,

Between two dogs, which hath the deeper mouth,

Between two blades, which bears the better temper,

Between two horses, which doth bear him best,

Between two girls, which hath the merriest eye,

I have, perhaps, some shallow spirit of judgment:

But in these nice sharp quillet's of the law,

Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw.

Plan. Tut, tut! here is a mannerly forbearance.

The truth appears so naked on my side,

That any purblind eye may find it out.

Som. And on my side it is so well appareld, so clear, so shining, and so evident.

That it will glimmer through a blind man's eye.

Plan. Since you are tongue-tied, and so loath to speak,

In dumb significants proclaim your thoughts.

Let him, that is a true-born gentleman,

And stands upon the honour of his birth,

If he suppose that I have pleaded truth,

From off this brier pluck a white rose with me.

Som. Let him that is no coward, nor no flatterer

But dare maintain the party of the truth.

Pluck a red rose from off this thorn with me.

War. I love no colours; and, without all colour

Of base insinuating flattery,

I pluck this white rose with Plantagenet.

Suf. I pluck this red rose with young Somerset.

And say withal, I think he held the right.

Ver. Stay, lords, and gentlemen; and pluck no more till you conclude that he, upon whose side the fewest roses are cropp'd from the tree, shall yield the other in the right opinion.

Som. Good master Vernon, it is well objected:

If I have fewest, I subscribe in silence.

Plan. And I.

Ver. Then, for the truth and plainness of the case,

I pluck this pale and maiden blossom here,

Giving my verdict on the white rose side.

Som. Prick not your finger as you pluck it off;

Lest, bleeding, you do paint the white rose red,

And fall on my side so, against your will.

This word was oft employ'd as a term of contempt. This ged is not in L.
Ver. If I, my lord, for my opinion bleed, Opinion shall be surcease to my hurt, And keep me on the side where still I am. * Som. Well, well, come on: who else? Law. Unless my study and my books be false, The argument you hold was wrong in you; In sign whereof, I pluck a white rose too. * Plan. Now, Somerset, where is your argument? Som. Here, in my seaboard; meditating that, Shall dye your white rose in a bloody red. Plan. Mean time, your cheeks do counterfeit our roses; For pale they look with fear, as witnessing The truth on our side. * Som. No, Plantagenet, 'Tis not for fear, but anger; and thy cheeks blush for pure shame to counterfeit our roses, And yet thy tongue will not confess thy error. Plan. Hath not thy rose a canker, Somerset? Som. Hath not thy rose a thorn, Plantagenet? Plan. Ay, sharp and piercing, to maintain his truth, Whiles thy consuming canker eats his falsehood. Som. Well, I'll find friends to wear my bleeding-roses, That shall maintain what I have said is true, Where false Plantagenet dare not be seen. Plan. Now, by this maiden blossom in my hand, I scorn thee and thy faction1, peevish boy. Suf. Turn not thy sores this way, Plantagenet. Plan. Proud Poole, I will; and scorn both him and thee. Suf. I'll turn my part thereof into thy throat. Som. Away, away, good William De-la-Poole. We grace the yeoman, by conversing with him. War. Now, by God's will, thou wrong'st him, Somerset: His grandfather was Lionel, Duke of Clarence. Third son to the third Edward, king of England. Spring crested yeomen from so deep a root? Plan. He braves2 him on the place's privilege, Or durst not, for his craven heart, say thus. Som. By him that made me, I'll maintain my words On any plot of ground in Christendom. Was not thy father, Richard earl of Cambridge, For treason executed in our late king's days? And by his treason stand'st thou attainted, Corrupted, and exempt from ancient gentry? His trespass yet lives guilty in thy blood; And till thou be restor'd, thou art a yeoman. Plan. My father was attached, not attainted, Condemn'd to die for treason, but no traitor; And that I'll prove on better men than Somerset, Were growing time once ripen'd to my will. For your partaker Poole, and you yourself, I'll note you in my book of memory, To scourge you for this apprehension: Look to it well, and say you are well warn'd. Som. Ah! thou shalt find us ready for thee still, And know us by these colours for thy foes: For these my friends in spite of thee shall wear. Plan. And, by my soul, this pale and angry rose, As cognizance of my blood-drinking hate, Will I for ever, and my faction, wear, Until it wither with me in my grave, Or flourish to the height of my degree. Suf. Go forward, and be chok'd with thy ambition: And so farewell, until I meet thee next. * Som. Haste with thee, Poole.—Farewell, ambitious Richard. [Exit. Plan. How I am brav'd, and must perforce endure it. War. This blot, that they object against your house Shall be wip'd out in the next parliament, Call'd for the truce of Winchester and Gloster, And if thou be not then creat't York, I will not live to be account'd Warwick. Mean time, in signal of my love to thee, Against proud Somerset, and William Poole, And I will upon thy party wear this rose, And here I prophesy,—this brawl to-day, Grown to this faction in the Temple garden Shall send, between the red rose and the white, Ten thousand souls to death and deadly night. Plan. Good master Vernon, I am bound to you, That you on my behalf would pluck a flower. Ver. In your behalf still will I wear the same. Law. And so will I. Plan. Thanks, gentle sir: Come, let us four to dinner. I dare say, This quarrel will drink blood another day. [Exeunt SCENE V.—The Same. A Room in the Tower. Enter Mortimer, blind, brought in a Chair by two Keepers. Mor. Kind keepers of my weak decaying age, Let dying Mortimer here rest himself. Even like a man new haled from the rack, So fare my limbs with long imprisonment; And these grey locks, the pursuivants of death, Nestor-like aged in a cage of care, Argue the end of Edward Mortimer. These eyes, like lamps whose wasting oil is spent, Wax dim, as drawing to their exigent. Weak shoulders, overborne with burdening grief, And pitiful arms, like to a wither'd vine That droops his sapless branches to the ground: Yet are these facets, whose strengthless stay is numb, Unable to support this lump of clay, Swift-winged with desire to get a grave, As witting I no other comfort have. But tell me, keeper, will my nephew come? 1 Keep. Richard Plantagenet, my lord, will come: We sent unto the Temple, to his chamber, And answer was return'd that he will come. [Exit Keeper. Mor. Enough; my soul shall then be satisfied. Poor gentleman, his wrong doth equal mine. Since Henry Monmouth first began to reign, Before whose glory I was great in arms, This loathsome sequestration have I had; And even since then hath Richard been obscur'd, Depriv'd of honour and inheritance: But now, the arbitrator of despair, Just death, kind umpire of men's miseries, With sweet enlargement doth dismiss me hence. I would his troubles likewise were expir'd, That so he might recover what was lost. Enter Richard Plantagenet, and Keeper. 1 Keep. My lord, your loving nephew now is come. Mor. Richard Plantagenet, my friend, is he come? Plan. Ay, noble uncle, thus ignobly us'd. Your nephew, late despis'd Richard, comes. Mor. Direct mine arms I may embrace his neck, And in his bosom spend my latter gasp. O! tell me, when my lips do touch his cheek, That I may kindly give one fainting kiss. And now declare, sweet stem from York's great stock Why didst thou say,—of late thou wert des-pis'd? The words, "and keeper," are not in f. e 1 fashion; in folio. Theobald changed the word 2 bear: in f. e 3 This word is not in f. e. 4 End. 5 Not in f. e
Plan. First, lean thine aged back against mine arm,
And in that ease I’ll tell thee my disease.
This day, in argument upon a case,
Some words there grew twixt Somerset and me;
Among which terms he us’d his lavish tongue,
And did upbraid me with my father’s death:
Which obloquy set bars before my tongue,
Else with the like I had requited him.
Therefore, good uncle, for my father’s sake,
In honour of a true Plantagenet,
And for alliance’s sake, declare the cause
My father, earl of Cambridge, lost his head.
Mor. That cause, fair nephew, that imprison’d me,
And hath detain’d me all my flowing youth
Within a loathsome dungeon, there to pine,
Was cursed instrument of his decease.
Plan. Discover more at large what cause that was:
For I am ignorant, and cannot guess.
Mor. I will, if that my fading breath permit,
And death approach not ere my tale be done.
Henry the fourth, grandfather to this king.
Depos’d his nephew Richard, Edward’s son,
The first-begotten, and the lawful heir
Of Edward, king the third of that descent:
During whose reign the Percies of the north,
Finding his usurpation most unjust,
Endeavour’d my advancement to the throne.
The reason mov’d these warlike lords to this,
Was for that young king Richard thus remov’d,
(Leaving no heir begotten of his body)
I was the next by birth and parentage;
For by my mother I derived am
From Lionel duke of Clarence, the third son
To king Edward the third, whereas he
From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigree,
Being but fourth of that heroic line.
But mark: as, in this haughty great attempt
They labour’d to plant the rightful heir,
I lost my liberty, and they their lives.
Long after this, when Henry the fifth.
(Succeeding his father Bolingbroke) did reign,
Thy father, earl of Cambridge, then deriv’d
From famous Edmund Langley, duke of York,
Marrying my sister, that thy mother was,
Again, in pity of my hard distress,
Levièd an army, weening to redeem,
And have install’d me in the diadem;
But, as the rest, so fell that noble earl,
And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers,
In whom the title rested, were suppress’d.
Plan. Of which, my lord, your honour is the last.
Mor. True: and thou seest, that I no issue have,
And that my fainting words do warrant death.
Thou art my heir: the rest, I wish thee gather;
But yet be wary in thy studious care.
Plan. Thy grave admonishments prevail with me
But yet, methinks, my father’s execution
Was nothing less than bloody tyranny.
Mor. With silence, nephew, be thou politic:
Strong-fixed is the house of Lancaster.
And, like a mountain, not to be remov’d.
But now thy uncle is removing hence,
As princes do their courts, when they are cloy’d
With long continuance in a settled place.
Plan. O, uncle! would some part of my young years
Might but redeem the passage of your age.
Mor. Thou dost, then, wrong me; as the slaughterer doth,
Which giveth many wounds, when one will kill.
Mourn not, except thou sorrow for my good;
Only, give order for my funeral.
And so farewell; and fair be all thy hopes,
And prosperous be thy life, in peace, and war!
[Dies.
Plan. And peace, no war, befit thy parting soul!
In prison hast thou spent a pilgrimage,
And like a hermit overpass’d thy days.—
Well, I will lock his counsel in my breast;
And what I do imagine, let that rest.—
Keepers, convey him hence: and I myself
Will see his burial better than his life.—
[Exit Keepers, bearing out Mortimer
Here dies the dusky torch of Mortimer,
Chok’d with ambition of the meaner sort:
And, for those wrongs, those bitter injuries
Which Somerset hath offer’d to my house,
I doubt not but with honour to redress;
And therefore haste I to the parliament,
Either to be restored to my blood,
Or make my will th’ advanced of my good.
[Exit]

ACT III.

Flourish. Enter King Henry, Exeter, Gloster, Warwick, Somerset, and Suffolk: the Bishop of Winchester, Richard Plantagenet, and others. Gloster offers to put up a Bill; Winchester snatches it, and tears it.

Win. Comest thou with deep premeditated lines,
With written pamphlets studiously devis’d?
Humphrey of Gloster, if thou canst accuse,
Or ought intend’st to lay unto my charge,
Do it without invention, suddenly;
As I with sudden and extemporal speech
Purpose to answer what thou canst object.

Glo. Presumptuous priest! this place commands my patience,
Or thou shouldst find thou hast dishonour’d me.
Thank not, although in writing I prefer

The manner of thy vile outrageous crimes,
That therefore I have forg’d, or am not able,
Verbatim to rehearse the method of my pen:
No, prelate; such is thy audacious wickedness,
Thy lewd, pestiferous, and dissentious pranks,
As very infants prattle of thy pride.
Thou art a most pernicious usurper,
Froward by nature, enemy to peace;
Lascivious, wanton, more than well beseems
A man of thy profession, and degree:
And for thy treachery, what’s more manifest,
In that thou laidst a trap to take my life,
As well at London bridge, as at the Tower?
Beside, I fear me, if thy thoughts were lifted,
The king, thy sovereign, is not quite exempt
From envious malice of thy swelling heart.

Win. Gloster, I do defy thee.—Lords, vouchsafe
To give me hearing what I shall reply.
To hold your slaughtering hands, and keep the peace.
To pray, uncle Gloster, mitigate this strife.
1  Serv. Nay, if we be Forbidden stones, we'll fall to it with our teeth.
2  Serv. Do what ye dare; we are as resolute.

| [Skirmish again |

| Glo. You, of my household, leave this peevish broil,
And set this unaccustomed fit aside.
1  Serv. My lord, we know your grace to be a man
Just and upright; and, for your royal birth,
Inferior to none but to his majesty;
And ere that we will suffer such a prince,
So kind a father of the commonwealth,
To be disgraced by an insatiate main,
We, and our wives, and children, will fight,
And have our bodies slaughter'd by thy foes.
3  Serv. Ay, and the very parings of our nails
Shall pitch a field, when we are dead.

| Stay, stay! |

| And, if you love me, as you say you do,
Let me persuade you to forbear awhile.
K. Hen. O, how this discord doth affliet my soul!—
Can you, my lord of Winchester, behold
My sighs and tears, and will not once relent?
Who should be pitiful, if you be not?
Or who should study to preserve a peace,
If holy churchmen take delight in broils?
War. Yield, lord protector; and yield, Winchester
Except you mean, with obstinate repulse,
To slay your sovereign, and destroy the realm.
You see what mischief, and what murder too,
Hath been enacted through your enmity;
Then, be at peace, except ye thirst for blood;
Win. He shall submit, or I will never yield.

| Glo. Compassion on the king command's me stoop,
Or I would see his heart out, ere the priest
Should ever get that privilege of me.

| War. Behold, my lord of Winchester, the duke
Hath banish'd so moody discontented fury,
As by his smoothed brows it doth appear:
Why look you still so stern, and tragic?
Glo. Here, Winchester; I offer thee my hand.
[Winchester refuses it! |

| K. Hen. Fye, uncle Beaufort! I have heard you preach,
That malice was a great and grievous sin;
And will not you maintain the thing you teach.
But prove a chief offender in the same?
War. Sweet king!—the bishop hath a kindly gird,
For shame, my lord of Winchester, relent;
What! shall a child instruct you what to do?
Win. Well, duke of Gloster. I will yield to thee,
Love for thy love, and hand for hand I give.

| [Gives his hand.  |

| Glo. Ay; but I fear me, with a hollow heart.

| [Aside.  |

| See here, my friends, and loving countrymen;
This token serveth for a flag of truce,
Betwixt ourselves, and all our followers.
So help me God, as I dissemble not!
Win. So help me God, as I intend it not!

| [Aside  |

| K. Hen. O, loving uncle, and kind duke of Gloster,
How joyful and made by this extract!
Away, my masters; trouble us no more,
But join in friendship, as your lords have done.
1  Serv. Content: I'll to the surgeon's.
2  Serv.

| And so will I |

| 3  Serv. And I will see what physic the tavern affords |

| [Exeunt Mayor, Citizens, Servants, &c.  |
And that we find the slothful watch but weak,
I'll by a sign give notice to our friends,
That Charles the Dauphin may encounter them.

War. Accept this scroll, most gracious sovereign,
Which in the right of Richard Plantagenet
We do exhibit to thy majesty.

Glo. Well urg'd, my lord of Warwick:—for, sweet prince,
And if your grace mark every circumstance,
You have great reason to do Richard right;
Especially for those occasions
At Eltham-place I told your majesty.

K. Hen. And those occasions, uncle, were of force:
Therefore, my loving lords, our pleasure is,
That Richard be restored to his blood.

War. Let Richard be restor'd to his blood;
So shall his father's wrongs be recompens'd.

Win. As will the rest. so will the Winchester.

K. Hen. If Richard will be true, not that alone,
But all the whole inheritance I give,
That doth belong unto the house of York,
From whence you spring by lineal descent.

Plan. The honour'd servant vows obedience,
And humble service, till the point of death.

K. Hen. Stoop then, and set your knee against my foot;
And in regard of that duty done,
I girt thee with the valiant sword of York.

Rise, Richard, like a true Plantagenet,
And rise created princele duke of York.

Plan. And so thrive Richard as thy foes may fall:
And as my duty springs, so perish they
That grudge one thought against your majesty.

All. Welcome, high prince, the mighty duke of York!

Som. Perish, base prince, ignoble duke of York!

[Aside.

Glo. Now will it best avail your majesty,
To cross the seas, and to be crown'd in France.
The presence of a king engenders love
Amongst his subjects, and his loyal friends,
As it disanimates his enemies.

K. Hen. As when Gloster says the word, King Henry goes;
For friendly counsel cuts off many foes.

Glo. Your ships already are in readiness.

[Flourish. Exeunt all but Exeuter.

Eze. Ay, we may march in England, or in France, Not seeing what is likely to ensue.
This late dissension, grown betwixt the peers,
Burns under feigned ashes of forg'd love,
And will at last break out into a flame:
As fester'd members rot but by degrees.
Till bones, and flesh, and sinews, fall away,
So will this base and envious discord breed.
And now I fear that fatal prophecy,
Which, in the time of Henry, nam'd the fifth,
Was in the mouth of every sucking babe,—
That Henry, born at Monmouth, should win all,
And Henry, born at Windsor, should lose all:
Which is so plain, that Exeuter doth wish
His days may finish ere that hapless time.

SENE II.—France. Before Rouen.

Enter La Pucelle disguised, and Soldiers dressed like Countrymen, with Sacks upon their Backs.

Puc. These are the city gates, the gates of Rouen, Through which our policy must make a breach. Take heed, be wary how you place your words; Talk like the vulgar sort of market-men, That come to gather money for their corn. If we have entrance, (as I hope we shall),

And that we find the slothful watch but weak,
I'll by a sign give notice to our friends,
That Charles the Dauphin may encounter them.

1 Sold. Our sacks shall be a mean to sack the city, And we be lords and rulers over Rouen; Therefore we'll knock.

Guard. [Within.] What is this heard?—
Puc. Valets, les pauvres gens de France:
Poor market-folks that come to sell their corn.

Guard. Enter: go in: the market-bell is rung.

Puc. Now, Rouen, I'll shake thy bulwarks to the ground.

[Exeunt Pucelle, &c. Enter the City.

Char. Saint Dennis bless this happy stratagem,
And once again we'll sleep secure in Rouen.

Bast. Here enter'd Pucelle, and her practisants. Now she is there, how will she specify
Where is the best and safest passage in?

Alen. By thrusting out a torch from yonder tower; Which, once discern'd, shows, that her meaning is,—
No way to that, for weakness, which she enter'd.

Enter La Pucelle on a Battlement, holding out a Torch burning.

Puc. Behold! this is the happy wedding torch, That joineth Rouen unto her countrymen, But burning fatal to the Talbotites.

Bast. See, noble Charles, the beacon of our friend: The burning torch in yonder turret stands.

Char. Now shine it like a comet of revenge, A prophet to the fall of all our foes!

Alen. Defer no time; delays have dangerous ends:

Enter, and cry The Dauphin! presently,
And then do execution on the watch. [They enter.

Alarums. Enter Talbot, and English Soldiers.

Tal. France, thou shall rue this treason with thy tears, If Talbot but survive thy treachery.

Pucelle, that witch, that damned sorceress,
Hath wrought this hellish mischief unawares.
That hardly we escap'd the pride of France.

[Exeunt to the Town.

Tal. Foul fiend of France, and bag of hell's despite, Encompass'd with thy lustful paramours,
Comes it thee to taunt his valiant age,
And twist with cowardice a man half dead?

Damsel, I'll have a bout with you again,
Or else let Talbot perish with this shame.

Puc. Are you so hot, sir?—Yet, Pucelle, hold thy
If Talbot do but thunder, rain will follow.— [peace

[Talbot and the rest, consult together]
Fiest. Warlike and matchless Talbot, Burgundy

Enshrines thee in his heart; and there erects
Thy noble deeds, as valor's monument.

Tal. Thanks, gentle duke. But where is Pucelle now?

I think her old familiar is asleep:
Now where's the Bastard's braves, and Charles ngleeks?

What, all a-mord? Rouen hangs her head for grief.

That such a valiant company are fled.

Now will we take some order in the town,
Placing therein some expert officers,
And then depart to Paris to the king;
For there young Henry with his nobles lies.

Tal. But yet, before we go, let's not forget
The noble duke of Bedford, late deceased,
But see his exequies fulfill'd in Rouen:
A braver soldier never couched lance,
A gentler heart did never sway in court;
But kings, and mightiest potentates must die,
For that's the end of human misery.

[Exeunt]

Scene III.—The Same. The Plains near the City

Enter CHARLES, the Bastard, Alençon, La Pucelle, and Forces.

Puc. Dismay not, princes, at this accident,
Nor grieve that Rouen is so recovered:
Care is no cure, but rather corrosive,
For things that are not to be remedied.

Let frantic Talbot triumph for a while,
And like a peacock sweep along his tail.
We'll pull his plumes, and take away his train,
If Dauphin and the rest will be but rul'd.

Char. We have been guided by thee hitherto,
And of thy cunning had no disidence:

One sudden foil shall never breed distrust.

Best. Search out thy wit for secret policies,
And we will make thee famous through the world.

Alen. We'll set thy statue in some holy place,
And have thee reverenced like a blessed saint:
Employ thee, then, sweet virgin, for our good.

Puc. Then thus it must be; this doth Joan devise.

By fair persuasions, mix'd with sugar'd words,
We will entice the duke of Burgundy
To leave the Talbot, and to follow us.

Char. Ay, marry, sweeting, if we could do that.
France were no place for Henry's warriors;
Nor should that nation boast it so with us,
But be extirped from our provinces.

Alen. For ever should they be expuls'd from France.
And not have title of an earldom here.

Puc. Your honours shall perceive how I will work,
To bring this matter to the wished end.

[Drums heard afar off]

Hark! by the sound of drum you may perceive
Their powers are marching unto Paris-ward.

An English March. Enter, and pass over, Talbot and his Forces.

There goes the Talbot, with his colours spread,
And all the troops of English after him.

A French March. Enter the Duke of Burgundy and Forces.

Now, in the rearward comes the duke, and his:
Fortune in favour makes him lag behind.

Summon a parley; we will talk with him.

Char. A parley with the duke of Burgundy.
Bur. Who craves a parley with the Burgundy?

Enter King Henry, Gloster, and other Lords, Vernon, Basset, &c. To them Talbot, and some of his Officers.

Tal. My gracious prince, and honourable peers
Heating of your arrival in this realm,
I have a while given truce unto my wars,
To do my duty to my sovereign:
In sign whereof, the feast—thou hast accepted
To your obedience forty thousand.

Twelve cities, and seven walled towns of strength,
Beside five hundred prisoners of esteem,—
Let's fall his sword before your highness' feet;
And with submissive loyalty of heart,
Ascribes the glory of his conquest got,
First to his God, and next unto your grace.
K. Hen. Is this the lord Talbot, uncle Gloster,
That hath so long been resident in France?
Glo. Yes, if it please your majesty, my liege.
K. Hen. Welcome, brave captain, and victorious lord
When I was young, (as yet I am not old)
I do remember how my father said,
A stouter champion never handled sword.
Long since we were resolved of that truth,
Your faithful service, and your toil in war;
Yet never have you tasted our reward,
Or been regnered with so much as thanks.
Because till now we never saw your face:
Therefore, stand up; and, for these good deserts,
We here create you earl of Shrewsbury;
And in our coronation take your place.

[Flourish. Exeunt King Henry, Gloster, Talbot.
Ver. Now, sir, to you, that were so hot at sea,
Disgracing of these colours, that I wear
In honour of my noble lord of York,
Darest you maintain the former words thou spak'st?
Bas. Yes, sir; as well as you dare patronage
The envious barking of your saucy tongue
Against my lord, the duke of Somerset.
Ver. Sirrah, thy lord I honour as he is.
Bas. Why, what is he? as good a man as York.
Ver. Hark ye; not so: in witness, take ye that [Striking him.
Bas. Villain, thou know'st, the law of arms is such
That, whose draws a sword, 'tis present death.
Or else this blow should branch thine dearest blood.
But I'll unto his majesty, and crave
I may have liberty to venge this wrong,
When thou shalt see, I'will meet thee to thy cost.
Ver. Well, miscreant, I'll be there as soon as you
And after meet you sooner than you would.

[Exeunt

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same. A Room of State.

Enter King Henry, Gloster, Exeter, York, Suffolk, Somerset, Winchester, Warwick, Talbot; The Governor of Paris, and others.

Glo. Lord bishop, set the crown upon his head.
Win. God save king Henry, of that name the sixth!

[Sound Trumpets.

Puc. The princely Charles of France, thy countryman.
Char. Speak, Pucelle, and enchant him with thy words.
Puc. Brave Burgundy, unyielding hope of France,
Stay; let thy humble handmaid speak to thee.
Bur. Speak on; but be not over-timidous.

Puc. Look on thy country, look on fertile France,
And see her cities and her towns defac'd by wasting ruins of the cruel foe.
As looks the mother on her lovely babe,
When death doth close his tender dying eyes,
See, see, the pining malady of France:
Behold the wounds, the most unnatural wounds,
Which thou thyself hast given her woful breast.
O! turn thy edged sword another way;
Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that help,
One drop of blood, drawn from thy country's bosom,
Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore;
Return thee, therefore, with a flood of tears,
And wash away thy country's stained spots.

Bur. Either she hath bewitch'd me with her words,
Or nature makes me suddenly relent.

Puc. Besides, all French and France exclaims on thee,
Doubting thy birth and lawful progeny,
Whom join'st thou with, but with a lordly nation
That will not trust thee but for profit's sake?
When Talbot hath set footing once in France,
And fashion'd thee that instrument of ill,
Who then but English Henry will be lord,
And thou be thrust out, like a fugitive?
Call we to mind, and mark but this for proof,
Was not the duke of Orleans thy foe?
And was he not in England prisoner?
But, when they heard he was in enemy,
They set him free, without his ransom paid,
In spite of Burgundy, and all his friends.
See, then, then fight'st against thy countrymen,
And join'st with them will be thy slayer-men.
Come, come, return; return, thou wand'ring lord.
Charles, and the rest, will take thee in their arms.

Bur. I am vanquished: these haughty words of hers,
Have batter'd me like roaring cannon-shot,
And made me almost yield upon my knees.
Forgive me, country, and sweet countrymen!
And, lords, accept this hearty kind embraces:
My forces and my power of men are yours.

So, farewell, Talbot: I'll no longer trust thee.

Puc. Done like a Frenchman; turn, and turn again!

Char. Welcome, brave duke! thy friendship makes us fresh.
Bas. And doth heget new courage in our breasts.
Aren. Pucelle hath bravely played her part in this,
And doth deserve a coronet of gold.
Char. Now let us on, my lords, and join our powers
And seek how we may prejudice the foe.

[Exeunt
Enter Sir John Fastolfe.

Fast. My gracious sovereign, as I rode from Calais,
To haste unto your coronation,
A letter was deliver'd to my hands,
Writ to your grace from the duke of Burgundy. [Gives it.]

Tal. Shame to the duke of Burgundy, and thee!
I vow'd, base knight, when I did meet thee next,
To tear the garter from thyavar's leg:
[Plucking it off.]

Which I have done, because unworthy
Thou wast install'd in that high degree,—
Pardon me, proudest Henry, and the rest.
This dastard, at the battle of Patay,
When but in all I was six thousand strong,
And that the French were almost ten to one,
Before we met, or that a stroke was given,
Like to a trustee squire, did run away:
In which assault we lost twelve hundred men,
Myself, and divers gentlemen beside,
Were there surpris'd, and taken prisoners.
Then, judge, great lords, if I have done amiss;
Or whether that such cowards ought to wear
This ornament of knighthood, yea, or no?

Glo. To say the truth, his fact was infamous,
And ill beseeming any common man,
Much more a knight, a captain, and a leader.

Tal. When first this order was ordain'd, my lords
Knights of the garter were of noble birth,
Valiant and virtuous, full of haughty courage,
Such as were grown to credit by the wars;
Not fearing death, nor shrinking for distress,
But always resolute in worst extremes.
He, then, that is not furnish'd in this sort,
Doth but usurp the sacred name of knight,
Profaning this most honourable order;
And should (if I were worthy to be judge)
Be quite degraded, like a hedge-born swain
That doth presume to boast of gentle blood.

K Hen. Stain to thy countrymen! thou hast thy doon,
Be packing therefore, thou that wast a knight.
Henceforth we banish thee on pain of death. —

[Exit Fastolfe.]

And, now, my lord protector, view the letter
Sent from our uncle duke of Burgundy.

Glo. What means his grace, that he hath charg'd
His style?
No more but, plain and bluntly,—"To the king?"
Hath he forgot he is his sovereign?
Or doth this churlish superscription
Portend some alteration in good will?
What's here? [Reads.] "I have upon especial cause,—
A Mov'd with compassion of my country's wreck,
Together with the pitiful complaints
Of such as your oppression feeds upon,—
"Pursen'd by your pernicious faction,
And join'd, with Charles, the rightful king of France"
O, monstrous treachery! Can this be so?
That in alliance, amity, and oaths,
There should be found such false dispensing guile?

K Hen. What! doth my uncle Burgundy revolt?
Glo. He doth, my lord; and is become thy foe.

K Hen. Is that the worst this letter doth contain?
Glo. It is the worst, and all, my lord, he writes.

K Hen. Why then, lord Talbot, there, shall talk with him,
And give him chastisement for this abuse.—

How say you, my lord? are you not content?—

Tal. Content, my liege? Yes, but that I'm prevented,
I should have begg'd I might have been employ'd.

K. Hen. Then gather strength, and march unto him straight.

Let him perceive how ill we brook his treason,
And what offence it is to flout his friends.

Tal. I go, my lord; in heart desiring still,
You may behold confusion of your foes. [Exeunt.]
SCENE II.—France. Before Bourdeaux.

Enter Talbot, with his Forces.

Tal. Go to the gates of Bourdeaux, trumpeter:
Summon their general unto the wall.
Trumpet sounds a Parley. Enter, on the Walls, the General of the French Forces, and others.

English John Talbot, captains, calls you forth,
Servant in arms to Harry king of England;
And thus he would.—Open your city gates,
Be humble to us, call my sovereign yours,
And do him homage as obedient subjects.
And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power,
But, if you frown upon this professed peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants,
Lean famine, quartering steel, and climbing fire.
Who, in a moment, even with the earth
Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.

Gen. Thou ominous and fearful owl of death,
Our nation's terror, and their bloody seourge,
The period of thy tyranny approacheth.
On us thou canst not enter but by death;
For, I protest, we are well fortified,
And strong enough to issue out and fight:
If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed,
Stands with the snares of war to tangle thee.
On either hand thee there are squadrongs pitch'd
To wall thee from the liberty of flight,
And no way canst thou turn thee for redress,
But death doth front thee with apparent spoil,
And pale destruction meets thee in the face.
Ten thousand French have taken the sacrament,
To rive their dangerous artillery
Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot.
Lo! there thou standst, a breathing valiant man,
Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit;
This is the latest glory of thy praise,
That I, thy enemy, 'due' thee withal;
For ere the glass, that now begins to run,
Finish the process of his sandy hour,
These eyes, that see thee now well coloured,
Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead.

[Drum after off
Hark! hark! the Dauphin's drum, a warning bell,
Sings heavy music to thy timorous soul;
And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.

Exeunt General, &c., from the Walls.

Tal. He fables not; I hear the enemy.—
Out, some light horsemen, and peruse their wings.—
O, negligent and heedless discipline!
How are we park'd, and bounded in a pale!
A little herd of England's timorous deer,
Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French eurs!
If we be English deer, be then in blood;
Not rascal-like* to fall down with a pinch,
But rather moody mad, and desperate stags,
Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel;
And make the cowards stand alook at bay:
Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
And they shall find dear dear of us, my friends.—
God, and Saint George, Talbot, and England's right,
Preser our colours in this dangerous fight! [Exeunt

SCENE III.—Plains in Gascony.

Enter York, with Forces; to him, a Messenger.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd again,
That dogg'd the mighty army of the Dauphin?

Mess. They are return'd, my lord; and give it out,
That he is march'd to Bourdeaux with his power,
To fight with Talbot. As he march'd along,
By your espials were discovered
Two mightier troops than that the Dauphin led;
Which join'd with him, and made their march for Bourdeaux.

York. A plague upon that villain Somerset,
That thus delays my promised supply
Of horsemen, that were levied for this siege!
Renowned Talbot doth expect my aid,
And I am low'ted by a traitor villain,
And cannot help the noble chevalier,
God comfort him in this necessity!
he miscarry, farewell wars in France.
Enter Sir William Lucy.

Lucy. Thou princely leader of our English strength,
Never so needful on the earth of France,
Spur to the rescue of the noble Talbot,
Who now is girdled with a waist of iron,
And hemm'd about with grim destruction.
To Bourdeaux, warlike duke! to Bourdeaux, York!
Else, farewell Talbot, France, and England's honour.
York. O God! that Somerset—who in proud heart
Doth stop my cornets—were in Talbot's place!
So should we save a valiant gentleman,
By forfearing a traitor and a coward.
Mad ire, and wrathful fury, make me weep,
That thus we die, while remiss traitors sleep.
Lucy. O, send some succour to the distressed lord!
York. He dies, we lose; I break my warlike word:
We mourn, France smiles; we lose, they daily get;
All long of this vile traitor Somerset.

Lucy. Then, God take mercy on brave Talbot's soul!
And on his son, young John;
whom two hours since
I met in travel toward his warlike father.
This seven years did not Talbot see his son.
And now they meet where both their lives are done.
York. Alas! what joy shall noble Talbot have,
To bid his young son welcome to his grave?
Away! vexation almost stops my breath,
That tender'd friends greet in the hour of death.—
Lucy, farewell! no more my fortune can,
But curse the cause I cannot aid the man.
Maine, Blois, Poitiers, and Tours, are won away,
'Long all of Somerset, and his delay.
[Exit York, with his Forces.

Lucy. Thus, while the vulture of sedition
Feeds in the bosom of such great commanders,
Sleeping negligence doth betray to loss
The conquest of our scarce-cold conqueror,
That ever-living man of memory,
Henry the fifth. Whiles they each other cross,
Lives, honours, lands, and all, hurry to loss.
[Exit.

SCENE IV.—Other Plains of Gascony.
Enter Somerset, with his Army; an Officer of Talbot's with him.

Som. It is too late; I cannot send them now.
This expedition was by York, and Talbot,
Too rashly plotted: all our general force
Might with a sally of the very town
Be buckled with. The over-awe'd Talbot
Hath spuel'd all his gloss of former honour,
By this unheedful, desperate, wild adventure.
York set him on to fight, and die in shame,
That Talbot dead, great York might bear the name.
Off. Here is sir William Lucy, who with me
Set from our o'er-match'd forces forth for aid.

Enter Sir William Lucy.

Som. How now, sir William! Whither were you sent?
Lucy. Whither, my lord? from bought and sold lord Talbot;
Who, ring'd about with bold adversity,
Cries out for noble York and Somerset,
To beat assailing death from his weak legions:
And whilst the honourable captain there
Drops bloody sweat from his war-wearied limbs,
And, in advantage lingering, looks for rescue,
You, his false hopes, the trust of England's honour,
Keep off aloof with worthless emulation.
Let not your private discord keep away
The levied succours that should lend him aid,
While he, renowned noble gentleman,
Yields up his life unto a world of odds.
Orleans the Bastard, Charles, and Burgundy,
Alençon, Regnier, compass him about;
And Talbot perisheth by your default.
[Exit.

Som. You set him on, York should have sent him
Lucy. And York as fast upon your grace exclaimeth;
Swearing that you withhold his levied host,
Collected for this expedition.
[Exit.

Som. Come, go; I will despatch the horsermen
straight:
Within six hours they will be at his aid.
Lucy. Too late comes rescue: he is taken, or slain,
For fly he could not, if he would have fled,
And fly would Talbot never, though he might.
Som. If he be dead, brave Talbot, then advise!
Lucy. His fame lives in the world, his shame in you
[Exit.

SCENE V.—The English Camp near Bourdeaux.

Enter Talbot and John his Son.

Tal. O young John Talbot! I did send for thee,
To tutor thee in stragamers of war,
That Talbot's name might be in thee reviv'd,
When sapless age, and weak unable limbs,
Should bring thy father to his drooping chair.
But,—O, malignant and ill-boding stars!—
Now thou art come unto a feast of death,
A terrible and unavoidable danger:
Therefore, dear boy, mount on my swiftest horse,
And I'll direct thee how thou shalt escape
By sudden flight. Come, dally not; be gone.
John. Is my name Talbot? and, am I your son?
And shall I fly? O! if you love my mother,
Dishonour not her honourable name,
To make a bastard, and a slave of me.
The world will say he is not Talbot's blood,
That basely fled, when noble Talbot stood.
Tal. Fly to revenge my death, if I be slain.
John. He that flies so will ne'er return again.
Tal. If we both stay, we both are sure to die.
John. Then let me stay; and father, do you fly
Your loss is great, so your regard should be;
My worth unknown, no loss is known in me.
Upon my death the French can little boast,
In yours they will, in you all hopes are lost.
Flight cannot stain the honour you have won,
But mine it will, that no exploit have done.
SCENE VII.

KING HENRY VI.

You fled for vantage every one will swear,
But if I fly, 'tis they say it was for fear,
There is no hope that ever I will stay,
If the first hour I shrink, and run away.
Here, on my knee, I beg mortality,
Rather than life preserv'd with infamy.

Tal. Shall all thy mother's hopes lie in one tomb?
John. Ay, rather than I'll shame my mother's womb.

Tal. Upon my blessing I command thee go.
John. To fight I will, but not to fly the foe.

Tal. Part of thy father may be sav'd in thee.
John. No part of him but will be shamed in me.

Tal. Thou never hadst renown, nor canst not lose it.
John. Yes, your renowned name; shall fight abuse it?

Tal. Thy father's charge shall clear thee from that stain.
John. You cannot witness for me, being slain.
If death be so apparent, then both fly.

Tal. And leave my followers here, to fight, and die?

My age was never tainted with such shame.
John. And shall my youth be guilty of such blame?
No more can I be sever'd from your side.

Then can your self into twain divide:
Stay, go, do what you will, the like do I;
For live I will not, if my father die.

Tal. Then here I take my leave of thee, fair son,
Born to eclipse thy life this afternoon.
Come, side by side together live and die,
And soul with soul from France to heaven fly.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—A Field of Battle.

Alarum : Excursions, wherein Talbot's Son is hemmed about, and Talbot rescues him.

Tal. Saint George and victory! fight, soldiers, fight!
The regent hath with Talbot broke his word,
And left us to the rage of France's sword.
Where is John Talbot?—pause, and take thy breath;
I gave thee life, and rescued thee from death.

John. O, twice my father! twice am I thy son:
The life thou gav'st me first was lost and done;
Till with thy warlike sword, despite of fate,
To my determin'd time thou gav'st new date.

Tal. When from the Dauphin's crest thy sword struck fire,
It warmed thy father's heart with proud desire
Of bold-face'd victory. Then led them age,
Quicken'd with youthful spleen and warlike rage.
Beat down Alençon, Orleans, Burgundy,
And from the pride of Gallia resolv'd thee.

The urchin bastard Orleans, that drew blood
From thee, my boy, and had the maidenhood
Of thy first fight, I soon encountered,
And, interchanging blows, I quickly shed
Some of his bastard blood; and, in disgrace,
Bespeke him thus: "Contaminated, base,
And misbegotten blood I spill of thine.
Mean and right poor; for that pure blood of mine,
Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave boy:

Hero purposing the Bastard to destroy,
Came in strong rescue. Speak, thy father's care.
Art thou not weary, John? How dost thou fare?
Will thou yet leave the battle, boy, and fly,
Now thou art seal'd the son of chivalry?
Fly to revenge my death, when I am dead;
The help of one stands me in little stead.
O! too much folly is it, well I wot,
To hazard all our lives in one small boat.
If I to-day die not with Frenchmen's rage,
To-morrow I shall die with mickle age:

By me they nothing gain, and if I stay,
'Tis but the short'ning of my life one day:
In thee thy mother dies, our household's name,
My death's revenge, thy youth, and England's fame,
All these, and more, we hazard by thy stay;
All these are sav'd, if thou wilt fly away.

John. The sword of Orleans hath not made me smart;
These words of yours draw life-blood from my heart
On that advantage, bought with such a shame,
(To save a paltry life, and stay bright fame)
Before young Talbot from old Talbot fly,
The coward horse that bears me fall and die!
And like me to the peasant boys of France,
To be shame's scorn, and subject of mischance!
Surely, by all the glory you have won,
An if I fly I am not Talbot's son:
Then, talk no more of flight, it is no boot,
If son to Talbot, die at Talbot's foot.

Tal. Then follow thou thy desperate sire of Crete,
Thou Icarus. Thy life to me is sweet:
If thou wilt fight, fight by thy father's side,
And, commendable prov'd, let's die in pride.
[Exeunt.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter Talbot wounded, supported by a Soldier.

Tal. Where is my other life?—mine own is gone:
O, where's young Talbot? where is valiant John?—
Triumphant death, smear'd with captivity,
Young Talbot's valour makes me smile at thee.
When he perceiv'd me shrink, and on my knee,
His bloody sword he brandish'd over me,
And like a hungry lion did commence
Rough deeds of rage, and stern impatience,
But when my angry guardian stood alone,
Tendering my ruin, and assailing none,
Dizzy-ey'd fury, and great rage of heart,
Suddenly made him from my side to start
Into the clashing battle of the French:
And in that sea of blood my boy did drench
His over-mouting spirit; and there died
My Icarus, my blossom, in his pride.

Enter Soldiers, bearing the body of John Talbot.
Sold. O, my dear lord! lo, where your son is borne!
Tal. Thou antic death, which laugh'st us here to scorn.

Anon, from thy insulting tyranny,
Coupled in bonds of perpetuity,
Two Talbots, winged through the lither' sky,
In thy despite shall 'scape mortality.—
O! thou whose wounds become hard-favour'd death
Speak to thy father, ore thou yield thy breath:
Brave death by speaking, whether he will or no:
Imagine him a Frenchman, and thy foe.—
Poor boy! he smiles, methinks; as who should say,
Had death been French, then death had died to-day:
Come, come, and lay him in his father's arms.

My spirit can no longer bear these harms.
Soldiers, adieu! I have what I would have,
Now my old arms are young John Talbot's grave.

Duo

Alarums. Excusat Soldiers, leaving the two bodies.
Enter Charles, Alençon, Burgundy, Bastard.
La Pucelle, and Forces.
Char. Had York and Somerset brought rescue in,
We should have found a bloody day of this.

Bast. How the young whelp of Talbot's, raging wild,

FIRST PART OF

ACT V.

Enter King Henry, Gloster, and Exeter.

K. Hen. Have you perus’d the letters from the pope,
The emperor, and the earl of Armagnac?
Glo. I have, my lord; and their intent is this:—
They humbly sue unto your excellence,
To have a godly peace concluded of
Between the realms of England and of France.

K. Hen. How doth your grace affect their motion?

Glo. Well, my good lord; and as the only means
To stop effusion of much Christian blood,
And establish quietness on every side.

K. Hen. Ay, marry, uncle; for I always thought,
It was both impious and unnatural,
That such immunities and bloody strife
Should reign among professors of one faith.

Glo. Beside, my lord, the sooner to effect,
And surer bind, this knot of amity,
The earl of Armagnac, near kin to Charles,
A man of great authority in France,
Proffers his only daughter to your grace
In marriage, with a large and sumptuous dowry.

K. Hen. Marriage, uncle? alas! my years are young,
And fitter is my study and my books,
Than wanton dalliance with a paramour.
Yet, call th’ ambassadors; and, as you please,
So let them have their answers every one:
I shall be well content with any choice.

Lord Cromwell of Wingfield, lord Furnival of Sheffield,
The thrice victorious lord of Falconbridge.
Knight of the noble order of St. George,
Worthy Saint Michael, and the golden fleece.
Great marshall to Henry, the sixth
Of all his wars within the realms of France.

Puc. Here is a silly stately style indeed!
The Turk, that two and fifty kingdoms hath,
Writs not so tedious a style as this,—

Lucy. Is Talbot slain? the Frenchman’s only scourge,
Your kingdom’s terror and black Nemesis?
O! were mine eye-balls into bullets turn’d,
That I in rage might shoot them at your faces
O! that I could but call these dead to life.
It were enough to fright the realm of France.

Glo. But his picture left among you here,
It would amaze the proudest of you all.
Give me their bodies that I bear them forth,
And give them burial as becometh their worth.

Puc. I think, this usurp is old Talbot’s ghost,
He speaks with such a proud commanding spirit.
For God’s sake, let him have ‘em; keep them here.
They would but stink, and putrefy the air.

Glo. But from their very ashes shall be rear’d
A phoenix that shall make all France afraid.

Chas. So we be rid of them, do what thou wilt.

[Exeunt]
The sum of money, which I promised
Should be deliver'd to his holiness,
For clothing me in these grave ornaments.
Leg. I will attend upon your lordship's leisure. [Exit.]
Win. Now, Winchester will not submit, I know,
Or be inferior to the proudest peer.
Humphrey, of Gloster, thou shalt well perceive,
That, neither in birth, or for authority,
The bishop will be overborne by thee:
I'll either make thee stoop, and bend thy knee,
Or seek this country with a mutiny. [Exit. 2]

SCENE II.—France. Plains in Anjou.
Enter CHARLES, BURGUNDY, LACÉPÈDE, LA PUCELLE, and Forces, marching.
Char. These news, my lords, may cheer our drooping spirits.
'Tis said the stout Parisians do revolt,
And turn again unto the warlike French.

Aen. Then march to Paris, royal Charles of France,
And keep not back your powers in dalliance.
Puc. Peace be amongst us, if they turn to us;
Else ruin combat with their palaces!

Enter a Scout.
Scout. Success unto our valiant general,
And happiness to his accomplices!
Char. What tidings send our scouts? I pr'ythee, speak.
Scout. The English army, that divided was Into two parties, is now conjoin'd in one,
And means to give you battle presently.
Char. Somewhat too sudden, sirs, the warning is;
But we will presently provide for them.
Bur. I trust, the ghost of Talbot is not there:
Now he is gone, my lord, you need not fear.
Puc. Of all base passions fear is most accurs'd.
Command the conquer. Charles, it shall be thine;
Let Henry fret, and all the world repine.
Char. Then on, my lords; and France be fortunate!

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Before Angiers.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter LA PUCELLE.
Puc. The regent conquers, and the Frenchmen fly—
Now help, ye charming spells, and periapt's; 2
And ye, choice spirits, that admonish me,
And give me signs of future accidents: [Thunder,
You speedy helpers, that are substitutes
Under the lordly monarch of the north, 3
Appear, and aid me in this enterprise!

Enter Fiends. 4
This speedy and quick appearance argues
Proof of your accustom'd diligence to me.
Now, ye familiar spirits, that are call'd
Out of the powerful regions under earth,
Help me this once, that France may get the field.

They walk, and speak not. 5
0! hold me not with silence over-long.
Where I was wont to feed you with my blood,
I'll hop a member off, and give it you,
In earnest of a farther benefit.
So do ye despondent to help me now.—
[They hang their heads.
No hope to have redress?—My body shall Pay recompense, if you will grant my suit.
[They shake their heads.

1. Not in f.e. 2. Excursus: in f.e. 3. Amuletus. 4. Ziminar, one of the four principal devils invoked by witches. The others were: Wicincum, Gerson, and Gamp. Kings of the East, South, and West, all with devil marquises, dukes, princes, knights, presidents, and others under them. 5. pass. in f.e. 6. These two words are from the second Folio. 7. makes the sense 'rough' in f.e.
Suf. She’s beautiful, and therefore to be wo’d:
She is a woman, therefore to be won. [Aside.
Mar. Wi’th thou accept of ransom, yea, or no? [Aside.
Suf. Fond man! remember that thou hast a wife;
Then, how can Margaret be thy paramour? [Aside.
Mar. I were best to leave him, for he will not hear.
Suf. There all is marr’d; there lies a cooling card.
Mar. He talks at random: sure, the man is mad.
Suf. And yet a dispensation may be had.
Mar. And yet I would that you would answer me.
Suf. I’ll win this lady Margaret. For whom?
Why, for my king: tush! that’s a wooden thing.
Mar. He talks of wood: it is some carpenter.
Suf. Yet so my fancy may be satisfied. [Aside.
And peace established between these realms.
But there remains a scruple in that, too;
For though her father be the king of Naples,
Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet is he poor,
And our nobility will seem the match.
Mar. Hear ye, captain? Are you not at leisure?
Suf. It shall be so, disdain they’re so much: [Aside.
Henry is youthful, and will quickly yield.—
Madam, I have a secret to reveal.
Mar. What though I be enthral’d? he seems a knight,
And will not any way dishonour me. [Aside.
Suf. Lady, vouche safe to listen what I say.
Mar. Perhaps, I shall be rescued by the French,
And then I need not crave his courtesy. [Aside.
Suf. Sweet madam, give me hearing in a cause—
Mar. Tush! women have been captivate ere now.
Suf. Lady, pray tell me!, wherefore talk you so?
Mar. I cry you mercy, ’tis but guid for quo.
Suf. Say, gentle princess, would you not then ween?
Your bondage happy, to be made a queen?
Mar. A queen in bondage is more vile to me—
Than a slave in base servility,
For princes should be free.
Suf. And so shall you,
If happy England’s royal king be true.
Mar. Why, what concerns his freedom unto me?
Suf. I’ll undertake to make thee Henry’s queen;
To put a golden sceptre in thy hand,
And set a precious crown upon thy head,
If thou wilt condescend to be my—
Mar. What?
Suf. His love.
Mar. I am unworthy to be Henry’s wife.
Suf. No, gentle madam; I unworthy am
To woo so fair a dame to be his wife,
And have no portion in the choice myself.
How say you, madam; are you so content?
Mar. An if my father please, I give consent.
Suf. Then, call our captains, and our colours forth!
And, madam, at your father’s castle walls
We’ll canvase a parley, to confer with him.
[Troops come forward.
A Parley sounded. Enter REIGNIER, on the Walls.
Reig. To whom?
Suf. To me.
Reig. Suffolk, what remedy?
I am a soldier, and unapt to weep,
Or to exclaim on fortune’s fickleness.
Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough, my lord:
Consent, and for thy honour give consent,
Thy daughter shall be wedded to my king,
Whom I with pain have wo’d and won thereto,
And this her easy-hold imprisonment
Hath gain’d thy daughter princely liberty.
Reig. Speaks Suffolk as he thinks?
Suf. Fair Margaret knows
That Suffolk doth not flatter, face, or feign.
Reig. Upon thy princely warrant I descend
To give thee answer of thy just demand.
[Exit, from the Walls
Suf. And here I will expect thy coming down.
Trumpets sounded. Enter REIGNIER, below.
Reig. Welcome, brave earl, into our territories:
Command in Anjou what your honour pleases.
Suf. Thanks, Reignier, happy for so sweet a child,
Fit to be made companion with a king:
What answer makes your grace unto my suit?
Reig. Since thou dost deign to woo her little worth.
To be the princely bride of such a lord,
Upon condition I may quarterly
Enjoy mine own, the county Maine, and Anjou,
Free from oppression or the stroke of war,
My daughter shall be Henry’s, if he please.
Suf. That is her ransom, I deliver her;
And those two counties, I will undertake,
Your grace shall well and quietly enjoy.
Reig. And I again, in Henry’s royal name,
As deputy unto that gracious king,
Give thee her hand, for sign of plighted faith,
Suf. Reignier of France, I give thee kindly thanks,
Because this is in traffic of a king:
And yet, methinks I could be well content
To be mine own attorney in this case.
I’ll over, then, to England with this news,
And make this marriage to be solemniz’d.
So, farewell, Reignier. Set this diamond safe
In golden palaces, as it becomes,
Reig. I do embrace thee, as I would embrace
The Christian prince, king Henry, were he here.
Mar. Farewell, my lord. Good wishes, praise, and prayers,
Shall Suffolk ever have of Margaret. [Going
Suf. Farewell, sweet madam! But hark you, Margaret;

No princely commendations to my king?
Mar. Such commendations as become a maid,
A virgin, and his servant, say to him.
Suf. Words sweetly plac’d, and modestly directed.
But, madam, I must trouble you again,—
Mar. No living token to his majesty?
Reig. Yes, my good lord: a pure unsoppted heart,
Never yet taint with love, I send the king.
Suf. And this withal.
Mar. That for thyself: I will not so presume,
To send such peevish tokens to a king.
[Exeunt REIGNIER and MARGARET.
Suf. O worth thou for myself!—But, Suffolk, stay;
Thou mayst not wander in that labyrinth:
There Minotaurs, and ugly creatures, lurk.
Solicit Henry with her wondrous praise.
Benthink thee on her virtues that surmount,
Midst natural graces that extinguish art;
Repeat their semblance often on the seas,
That when thou com’st to kneel at Henry’s feet.
Thou mayst beseare him of his wits with wonder.
[Exit
Enter YORK, WAREWICK, and others.
York. Bring forth that soroess, condemn’d to burt.
Enter La Pucelle, guarded; and a Shepherd.
Shep. Ah, Joan! this kills thy father's heart outright.
Have I sought every country far and near,
And, now it is my chance to find thee out,
Must I behold thy timelesse cruel death?
Ah, Joan! sweet daughter Joan, I'll die with thee.
Puc. Decrepit miser! base ignoble wretch!
I am descended of a gentler blood:
Thou art no father, nor no friend, of mine.
Shep. Out, out!—My lords, an please, you, 'tis not so;
I did beget her, all the parish knows:
Her mother liveth yet, can testify,
She was the first fruit of my bachelorship.
War. Graceless! wilt thou deny thy parentage?
York. This argues what her kind of life hath been;
Wicked and vile, and so her death concludes.
Shep. Fie, Joan! that thou wilt be so obstacle!—
God knows, thou art a collop of my flesh,
And for thy sake have I shed many a tear:
Deny me not, I pr'ythee, gentle Joan.
Puc. Peaceant, avante!—You have suborn'd this man,
Of purpose to obscure my noble birth.
Shep. 'Tis true, I gave a noble to the priest,
The morn that I was wedded to her mother.—
Kneel down and take my blessing, good my girl.—
Wilt thou not stoop? Now cursed be the time
Of thy nativity! I would, the milk
Thy mother gave thee, when thou suck'dst her breast,
Had been a little ratsbane for thy sake:
Or else, when thou didst keep my lambs a-field,
I wish some ravenous wolf had eaten thee.
Dost thou deny thy father, cursed drab?—
O! burn her, burn her: hanging is too good.

York. Take her away; for she hath lived too long,
To fill the world with vicious qualities.

Puc. First, let me tell you whom you have condemned:
Not me begotten of a shepherd swain,
But issu'd from the progeny of kings:
Virtuous, and holy: chosen from above,
By inspiration of celestial grace,
To work exceeding miracles on earth.
I never had to do with wicked spirits:
But you,—that are pollute with your lusts,
Stain'd with the guiltless blood of innocents,
Corrupt and tainted with a thousand vices,—
Because you want the grace that others have,
You judge it straight a thing impossible
To compass wonders, but by help of devils.
No: misconceived Joan of Arc hath been
A virgin from her tender infancy,
Chaste and immaclate in very thought;
Whose maiden blood, thus rigorously effus'd,
Will cry for vengeance at the gates of heaven.
York. Ay, ay.—Away with her to execution!
War. And hark ye, sirs: because she is a maid,
Spare for no figgets, let there be enow:—
Place barrels of pitch upon the fatal stake,
That so her torture may be shortened.

Puc. Will nothing turn your unrelenting hearts?
Then, Joan, discover thine infamy,
That warreth by law to be thy privilege.—
I am with child, ye bloody homedics;
Murder not, then, the fruit within my womb,
Although ye hate me to a violent death.
York. Now, heaven forefend! the holy maid with child?
War. The greatest miracle that e'er ye wrought!
Is all your strict preciseness come to this?
York. She and the Dauphin have been juggling:
I did imagine what would be her refuge.
War. Well, go to: we will have no bastards live,
Especially, since Charles must father it.
Puc. You are deceiv'd; my child is none of his;
it was Alençon, that enjoy'd my love.
York. Alençon, that notorious Machiavel.
It dies, as if it had a thousand lives.
Puc. O! give me leave; I have declused you.
'Twas neither Charles, nor yet the duke I nam'd,
But Reignier, king of Naples, that prevail'd.
War. A married man: that's most intolerable.
York. Why, here's a girl! I think she knows not well,
There were so many, whom she may accuse.
War. It's sign she hath been liberal and free.
York. And yet forsooth, she is a virgin pure.—
Strumpet, thy words condemn thy brat, and thee:
Using no entreaty, for it is in vain.
Puc. Then lead me hence:—with whom I leave my curse,
May never glorious sun reflect his beams
Upon the country where you make abode:
But darkness and the gloomy shade of death
Environ you, till mischief, and despair
Drive you to break your necks, or hang yourselves!

York. Break thou in pieces, and consume to ashes.
Thou foul accursed minister of hell!

Enter Cardinal Beaufort, attended.
Car. Lord regent, I do greet your excellence
With letters of commissione from the king.
For know, my lords, the states of Christendom,
Mov'd with remorse of these outrageous broils,
Have earnestly implor'd a general peace
Betwixt our nation and the aspiring French:
And here at hand the Dauphin, and his train,
Approacheth to confer about some matter.
York. Is all our travail turn'd to this effect?
After the slaughter of so many peers,
So many captains, gentlemen, and soldiers,
That in this quarrel have been overthrown,
And sold their bodies for their country's benefit,
Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace?
Have we not lost most part of all the towns.
By treason, falsehood, and by treachery,
Our great progenitors had conquer'd?—
O, Warwick, Warwick! I foresee with grief
The utter loss of all the realm of France.
War. Be patient, York! if we conclude a peace,
It shall be with such strict and severe covenants,
As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby.

Enter Charles, attended; Alençon, Bastard,
Reignier, and others.
Char. Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed,
That peaceful truce shall be proclaimed in France,
We come to be inform'd by yourselves
What the conditions of that league must be.
York. Speak, Winchester; for boiling choler chokes
The hollow passage of my prisoner's voice,
By sight of these our baleful enemies.
Win. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus:—
That, in regard King Henry gives consent,
Of mere compassion, and of lenity,
To ease your country of distressful war,
And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace.
You shall become true liegeman to his crown.

1. miser's person 2. often put in the mouths of uneducated persons, for obstinate, by writers of the time. 3. pseu'd: in i.
And, Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear
To pay him tribute, and submit thyself,
Thou shalt be plac'd as viceroy under him,
And still enjoy thy regal dignity.

_Alen._ Must he be then as shadow of himself?
Adorn his temples with a coronet,
And yet, in substance and authority,
Retain but privilege of a private man?

This mower is absurd and reasonless.

_Char._ 'Tis known, already that I am possess'd
With more than half the Gallien territories,
And therein reverence'd for their lawful king:
Shall I, for sake of the rest unvanquish'd,
Detract so much from that prerogative,
As to be call'd but viceroy of the whole?
No, lord ambassador; I'll rather keep
That which I have, than, coveting for more,
Be cast from possiblity of all.

_York._ Insulting Charles! hast thou by secret means
Used intercession to obtain a league,
And now the matter grows to compromise,
Stand'st thou aloof upon comparisons?
Either accept the title thou art offer'd,
Of benefit proceeding from ourわking,
And not of any challenge of desert,
Or we will plague thee with incessant wars.

_Reign._ My lord, you do not well in obstinacy
To cavil in the course of this contract:
If once it be neglected, ten to one,
We shall not find like opportunity.

_Alen._ To say the truth, it is your policy

[Aside to Charles.]

To save your subjects from such massacre,
And ruthless slaughters as are daily seen
By our proceeding in hostility:
And, therefore take this compact of a truce,
Although you break it when your pleasure serves.

_War._ How say'st thou, Charles? shall our condition stand?

_Char._ It shall; only reserv'd, you claim no interest
In any of our towns of garrison.

_York._ Then swear allegiance to his majesty;
As thou art knight, never to disobey;
Nor be rebellions to the crown of England,
Thou, nor thy nobles, to the crown of England.—

So; now dismiss your army when ye please:
Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still.
For here we interchange a solemn peace.

_[Exeunt._

SCENE V.—London. A Room in the Palace.

_Enter King Henry, in conference with Suffolk; Gloster and Exeter following._

_K._ Hen. Your wondrous rare description, noble earl,
Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish'd me:
Her virtues, grace'd with external gifts,
Do breed love's settled passions in my heart;
And like as rigour of tempestuous gusts
Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide,
So am I driven by breath of her renown,
Either to suffer shipwreck, or arrive
Where I may have fruition of her love.

_Suff._ Tush! my good lord, this superfluous tale
Is but a preface of her worthy praise:
The chief perfections of that lovely dame,
(Had I sufficient skill to utter them)
Would make a volume of enticing lines,
Able to ravish any dull conceit.
And, which is more, she is not so divine,
So full replete with choice of all delights,
But with as humble lowliness of mind,
She is content to be at your command:
Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste intents.
To love and honour Henry as her lord.

_K._ Hen. And otherwise will Henry ne'er presume
Therefore, my lord protector, give consent,
That Margaret may be England's royal queen.

_Glo._ So should I give consent to flatter sin.
You know, my lord, your highness is betroth'd
Unto another lady of esteem:
How shall we, then, dispense with that contract,
And not deface your honour with reproach?

_Suff._ As doth a ruler with unlawful oaths:
Or one that, at a triumph having vow'd
To try his strength, forsaketh yet the lists
By reason of his adversary's odds.
A poor earl's daughter is unequal odds.
And therefore may be broke without offence.

_Glo._ Why, what, I pray, is Margaret, more than that
Her father is no better than an earl.
Although in glorious titles he excel?

_Suff._ Yes, my good lord, her father is a king.
The kind of Naples and Jerusalem;
And of such great authority in France,
As his alliance will confirm our peace,
And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance.

_Glo._ And so the earl of Armagnac may do.
Because he is near kinsman unto Charles.

_Exe._ Beside, his wealth doth warrant a liberal dowry
When Reignier sooner will receive, than give.

_Suff._ A dower, my lords! disgrace not so your king
That he should be so abject, base, and poor,
To choose for wealth, and not for perfect love.
Henry is able to enrich his queen.
And not to seek a queen to make him rich.
So worthless peasants bargain for their wives,
As market-men for oxen, sheep, or horse.
Marriage is a matter of more worth,
Than to be dealt in by attorneyship:
Not whom we will, but whom his grace affects,
Must be companion of his nuptial bed;
And therefore, lords, since he affects her most,
The most of all these reasons bindeth us,
In our opinions she should be preferri'd.
For what is wedlock force'd but a hell.
An age of discord and continual strife?
Whereas the contrary bringeth bliss,
And is a pattern of celestial peace.
Whom should we match with Henry, being a king,
But Margaret, that is daughter to a king?
Her peerless feature, joined with her birth,
Approves her fit for none but for a king;
Her valiant courage, and undaunted spirit,
(Not more than in women commonly is seen)
Will answer our hope in issue of a king;
For Henry, son unto a conqueror,
Is likely to beget more conquerors,
If with a lady of so high resolve.
As is fair Margaret, he be link'd in love.
Then yield, my lords; and here conclude with me,
That Margaret shall be queen, and none but she.

_K._ Hen. Whether it be through force of your report
My noble lord of Suffolk, or for that
My tender youth was never yet attain'd
With any passion of inflaming love.
I cannot tell; but this I am assur'd,
I feel such sharp dissension in my breast,
Such fierce alarms both of hope and fear
As I am sick with working of my thoughts.
Take, therefore, shipping; post, my lord, to France:
Agree to any covenants, and procure
That lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come
To cross the seas to England, and be crown'd
King Henry's faithful and anointed queen.
For your expenses and sufficient charge,
Among the people gather up a tenth.
Be gone, I say; for till you do return,
I rest perplexed with a thousand cares.—
And you, good uncle, banish all offence.
If you do censure me by what you were
Not what you are, I know it will excuse
This sudden execution of my will.
And so conduct me, where from company
I may revolve and ruminate my grief.

Glo. Ay, grief, I fear me, both at first and last.

[Exeunt.]

Suf. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd; and thus he goes,
As did the youthful Paris once to Greece,
With hope to find the like event in love,
But prosper better than the Trojan did.
Margaret shall now be queen, and rule the king;
But I will rule both her, the king, and realm.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE, in various Parts of England.

ACT 1.

SCENE I.—London. A Room of State in the Palace.

Flourish of Trumpets: then Harbours. Enter, on one side, King Henry, Duke of Gloster, Salisbury, Warwick, and Cardinal Beaufort; on the other, Queen Margaret, led in by Suffolk; York, Somerset, Buckingham, and others following.

Suf. As by your high imperial majesty I had in charge at my depart for France,
As procurator to your excellence,
To marry princess Margaret for your grace;
So, in the famous ancient city Tours,
In presence of the kings of France and Sicil,
The dukes of Orleans, Calaber, Bretagne, and Alençon,
Seven earls, twelve barons, and twenty reverence bishops,
I have perform'd my task, and was espous'd;
And humbly now upon my bended knee,
In sight of England and your lordly peers,
Deliver up my title in the queen
To your most gracious hands, that are the substance
Of that great shadow I did represent;
The happiest gift that ever marquess gave,
The fairest queen that ever king receiv'd.

K. Hen. Suffolk, arise.—Welcome, queen Margaret:
I can express no kinder sign of love,
Than this kind kiss.—O Lord! that lends me life,
Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness;
For thou hast given me, in this beausous face,
A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
If sympathy of love unite our thoughts.

Q. Mar. Great king of England, and my gracious lord,
The mutual conference that my mind hath had
By day, by night, waking, and in my dreams,
In courtly company, or at my beads,
With you mine alderheevesent sovereign,
Makes me the bolder to salute my king
With ruder terms, such as my wit affords,
And over-joy of heart doth minister.

K. Hen. Her sight did ravish, out her grace in speech
Her words y-elad with wisdom's majesty,
Makes me from wondering fall to weeping joys:
Such is the fulness of my heart's content.
Lords, with one cheerful voice welcome my love.

All. Long live queen Margaret, England's happiness!

Q. Mar. We thank you all.

[FLOURISH

Suf. My lord protector, so it please your grace,
Here are the articles of contracted peace,
Between our sovereign, and the French king Charles
For eighteen months, concluded by consent.

Glo. [Reads.] "Imprimis: It is agreed between the French king, Charles, and William de la Poole, marquess of Suffolk, ambassador for Henry, king of England,—that the said Henry shall espouse the lady Margaret, daughter unto Reignier king of Naples, Sicilia, and Jerusalem, and crown her queen of England ere the thirtieth of May next ensuing.—Item,—That the duchy of Anjou and the county of Maine, shall be released and delivered to the king her father."
K. Hen. Uncle, how now?

Glo. Pardon me, gracious lord;

Some sudden qualm hath struck me at the heart,
And damm'd mine eyes, that I can read no farther.

K. Hen. Uncle of Winchester, I pray, read on.

Car. [Reads,] "Item: It is farther agreed between them,—that the duchies of Anjou and Maine shall be released and delivered over to the king her father; and she sent over of the king of England's own proper cost and charges, without having any dowry."

K. Ken. They please us well.—Lord marquess, kneel down:
We here execute the first duke of Suffolk,
And girt thee with the sword.—Cousin of York,
We here discharge thy grace from being regent
For the parts of France, till term of eighteen months
Be fall expir'd.—Thy grace, uncle Winchester,
Gloster, York, Buckingham, Somerset,
Salisbury, and Warwick;
We thank you all for this great favour done,
In entertainment to my princely queen.
Come, let us in; and with all speed provide
To see her coronation be perform'd.

[Exeunt King, Queen, and SUFFOLK.

Glo. Brave peers of England, pillars of the state,
To you duke Humphrey must unfold his grief,
Your grief, the common grief of all the land.
What! did my brother Henry spend his youth,
His valour, coin, and people, in the wars?
Did he so often lodge in open field,
In winter's cold, and summer's parching heat,
To conquer France, his true inheritance?
And did my brother Bedford toil his wits,
To keep by policy what Henry got?
Have you yourselves, Somerset, Buckingham,
Brave York, Salisbury, and victorious Warwick,
Receive'd deep scars in France and Normandy?
Or hath mine uncle Beaumont, and myself,
With all the learned council of the realm
Studied so long, sat in the council-house
Early and late, debating to and fro
How France and Frenchmen might be kept in awe?
And hath his highness in his infancy
Been crown'd in Paris, in despite of foes?
And shall these labours, and these honours die?
Shall Henry's conquest, Bedford's vigilance,
Your deeds of war, and all our counsel, die?
O peers of England! shameful is this league;
Fatal this marriage; cancelling your fame,
Blotting your names from books of memory,
Razing the characters of your renown,
Defacing monuments of conquer'd France,
Undoing all, as all had never been.

Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discourse?
This peroration with such circumstance?
For France, 'tis ours; and we will keep it still.

Glo. Ay, uncle, we will keep it, if we can;
But now it is impossible we should.
Suffolk, the new-made duke that rules the roast,
Hath given the duchies of Anjou, and Maine,
Unto the poor king Reuignier, whose large style
Agrees not with the lenness of his purse.

Sal. Now, by the death of him that died for all,
These counties were the keys of Normandy.—
But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valiant son?

War. For grief, that they are past recovery;
For, were there hope to conquer them again,
My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no tears.
Anjou and Maine! myself did win them both;
Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer:
And are the cities that I got with wounds,
Deliver'd up again with peaceful words?

Mort Dieu!

York. For Suffolk's duke, may he be suffocated
That dins the honour of this warlike isle!
France should have torn and rent my very heart,
Before I would have yielded to this league.
I never read but England's kings have had Large sums of gold, and dowries, with their wives.
And our king Henry gives away his own,
To match with her that brings no vantages.

Glo. A proper jest, and never heard before,
That Suffolk should demand a whole fifteenth,
For costs and charges in transporting her!
She should have stay'd in France, and stay'd in France
Before—

Car. My lord of Gloster, now you grow too hot.
It was the pleasure of my lord the king.

Glo. My lord of Winchester, I know your mind.
'Tis not my speeches that you do mislike,
But 'tis my presence that doth trouble ye.
Rancour will out; proud prelate, in thy face
I see thy fury. If I longer stay,
We shall begin our ancient bickerings.—

Lording, farewell; and say, when I am gone,
I prophesied, France will be lost ere long.

[Exit Car.

Car. So, there goes our protector in a rage.
’T is known to you he is mine enemy;
Nay, more, an enemy unto you all,
And no great friend, I fear me, to the king.
Consider, lords, he is the next of blood,
And heir apparent to the English crown;
Had Henry got an empire by his marriage,
And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west,
There's reason he should be displeas'd at it.
Look to it, lords: let not his smoothing words
Bewitch your hearts; be wise, and circumspect.
What though the common people favour him
Calling him “Humphrey the good Duke of Gloster;”
Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voice—
"Jesus maintain your royal excellence!"
With—“God preserve the good Duke Humphrey!”
I fear me, lords, for all this flattering gloss,
He will be found a dangerous protector.

Buck. Why should he, then, protect our sovereign,
He being of age to govern of himself?

Car. Cousin of Somerset, join you with me,
And all together, with the duke of Suffolk,
We'll quickly hoise duke Humphrey from his seat.

Cor. This weighty business will not brook delay;
I'll to the duke of Suffolk presently.

Sal. Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphrey's pride,
And greatness of his place be grief to us,
Yet let us watch the haughty cardinal.
His insolence is more intolerable
Than all the princes in the land beside:
If Gloster be displac'd, he'll be protector.

Buck. Or thou, or I, Somerset, wilt be protector.
Despite Duke Humphrey, or the cardinal.

[Exeunt BUCKINGHAM and SOMERSET.

Sal. Pride went before, ambition follows him.
While these do labour for their own preferment,
Behoves it us to labour for the realm.
I never saw but Humphrey, duke of Gloster.
Did bear him like a noble gentleman.
Oft have I seen the haughty cardinal,
More like a soldier, than a man o' the church,
SECOND PART OF

As stout, and proud, as he were lord of all.
Swear like a ruffian, and demean himself.
Unlike the rulcr of a common-wealth.
Warwick, my son, the comfort of my age,
Thy deeds, thy plainness, and thy house-keeping,
Have won the greatest favour of the commons,
Excepting none but good duke Humphrey:
And, brother York, thy acts in Ireland,
In bringing them to civil discipline;
Thy late exploits, done in the heart of France,
When thou didst reign in our sovereignty,
Have made thee feared, and honour'd of the people.
Join we together, for the public good,
In what we can tobridge and suppress
The pride of Suffolk, and the cardinal,
With Somerset's and Buckingham's ambition;
And as we may, cherish duke Humphrey's deeds,
While they do tend to profit of the land.
War. So God help Warwick, as he loves the land,
And common profit of his country.
York. And so says York, for he hath greatest cause.
Sal. Then let's make haste away, and look unto the main.

War. Unto the main? O father! Maine is lost!
That Maine, which by main force did Warwick win,
And would have kept so long as breath did last.
Main chance, father, you meant; but I meant Maine,
Which I will win from France, or else be slain.

[Except Warwick and Salisbury.
York. Anjou and Maine are given to the French;
Paris is lost; the state of Normandy,
Stands on a tickle point now they are gone.
Suffolk concluded on the articles,
The peers agreed, and Henry was well pleas'd,
To change two dukedoms for a duke's fair daughter.
I cannot blame them all: what is't to them?
'Tis thine they give away, and not their own.
Pirates may make cheap pennyworths of their pillage,
And purchase friends, and give to courtiers,
Still revelling, like lords till all be gone;
While the poor slaves are fleeced of the goods.
Weeps over them, and wrings his helpless hands,
And shakes his head, and trembling stands aloof,
While all is shad'ed, and all is borne away,
Ready to starve, and dare not touch his own;
So York must sit, and fret, and bite his tongue,
While his own hands are bargain'd for, and sold.
Methinks, the realms of England, France, and Ireland,
Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood,
As did the fatal brand Althea burn'd
Unto the prince's heart of Calydon.
Anjou and Maine, both given unto the French!
Cold news for me, for I had hope of France,
Even as I have of fertile England's soil.
A day will come when York shall claim his own;
And therefore I will take the Nevil's parts,
And make a show of love to proud duke Humphrey,
And when I spy advantage, claim the crown,
For that's the golden mark I seek to hit.
Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right,
Nor hold the sceptre in his childrish fist,
Nor wear the diadem upon his head,
Whose church-like honours fit not for a crown.
Then, York, be still awhile, till time do serve:
Watch thou, and wake, when others be asleep,
To pry into the secrets of the state,
Till Henry, surfeiting in joys of love,
With his new bride, and England's dear-bought queen,
And Humphrey with the peers be fall'n at jars.
Then will I raise aloft the milk-white rose,
With whose sweet smell the air shall be perfum'd,
And in my standard bear the arms of York,
To grapple with the house of Lancaster;
And, force perforce, I'll make him yield the crown,
Whose bookish rule hath pull'd fair England down.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in the Duke of GLOSTER'S House.

Enter GLOSTER and the DUCHESS.

Duch. Why droops my lord, like over-rip'en'd corn,
Hanging the head at Ceres' plenteous load?
By doth the great duke Humphrey knit his brows,
As frowning at the favours of the world?
Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth,
Gazing on that which seems to dim thy sight?
What seest thou there? king Henry's diadem,
Enchas'd with all the honours of the world?
If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face,
Until thy head be circled with the same.
Put forth thy hand; reach to the glorious gold.
What, is 't too short? I'll lengthen it with mine;
And having both together hea'rd it up.
We'll both together lift our heads to heaven,
And never more abuse our sight so low,
As to vouchsafe one glance unto the ground.

Glo. O Neil! sweet Neil, if thou dost love thy lord,
Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts;
And may that thought, when I imagine ill
Against my king and nephew, virtuous Henry,
Be my last breathing in this mortal world.
My troublous dream this night doth make me sad.

Duch. What dream'd my lord? tell me, and I'll requite it
With sweet rehearsal of my morning's dream.

Glo. Methought, this staff, mine office-badge in court
Was broke in twain: by whom, I have forgot,
But, as I think, 't was by the cardinal;
And on the pieces of the broken wand
Were plac'd the heads of Edmond duke of Somerset,
And William de la Poole, first duke of Suffolk.
This was my dream: what it doth bode God knows.

Duch. Tis! this was nothing but an argument.
That he that breaks a stick of Gloster's grove
Shall lose his head for his presumption.
But list to me, my Humphrey! my sweet duke;
Methought, I sat in seat of majesty,
In the cathedral church of Westminster,
And in that chair where kings and queens were crown'd
Where Henry, and fair Margaret, kneel'd to me,
And on my head did set the diadem.

Glo. Nay, Eleanor, then must I elude outright.
Presumptuous dame! ill-nurtur'd Eleanor!
Art thou not second woman in the realm,
And the protector's wife, belov'd of him?
Hast thou not worldly pleasure at command,
Above the reach or compass of thy thought?
And wilt thou still be hammering treachery,
To tumble down thy husband, and thyself,
From top of honour to disgrace's feet?
Away from me, and let me hear no more.

Duch. What, what, my lord! are you so choleric
With Eleanor, for telling but her dream?
Next time I'll keep the secrets of my dreams unto myself
And not be check'd.

Glo. Nay, be not angry; I am pleas'd again.

* hapless: in f. o. 2 Meleager, prince of Calydon, died in great torments, when his mother, Althea, threw into the flames the firebrand upon the preservation of which his life depended.—Knight.
Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord protector, 'tis his highness' pleasure, you do prepare to ride unto St. Albans, whereas the king and queen do mean to hawk.

Glo. I go.—Come, Nell; thou wilt ride with us?

Duch. Yes, my good lord, I'll follow presently.

[Exit Gloster and Messenger.

Follow I must: I cannot go before, while Gloster bears this base and humble mind. Were I a man, a duke, and next of blood, I would remove these tedious stumbling-blocks, and smooth my way upon their headless necks: And, being a woman, I will not be shaken to play my part in fortune's pageant.—

Where are you there? Sir John! nay, fear not, man, we are alone; here's none but thou, and I.

Enter Hume.

Hume. Jesus preserve your royal majesty!

Duch. What say'st thou? majesty! I am but grace.

Hume. But, by the grace of God, and Hume's advice. Your grace's title shall be multiplied.

Duch. What say'st thou, man? hast thou as yet conferr'd

With Margery Jourdain, the cunning witch
And Roger Bolingbroke, the conjurer,
And will they undertake to do me good?

Hume. This they have promised; to show your
A spirit rais'd from depth of under ground, [highness]
That shall make answer to such questions,
As by your grace shall be propounded him.

Duch. It is enough: I'll think upon the questions.

When from St. Albans we do make return,
We'll see these things effected to the full.
Here, Hume, take this reward: make merry, man,
With thy confederates in this weighty cause.

[Exit Duchess.

Hume. Hume must make merry with the duchess' gold.

Marry, and shall. But how now, Sir John Hume! Seal up your lips, and give no words but mum: The business asketh silent secrecy.

Dame Eleanor gives gold to bring the witch:
Gold cannot come amiss, were she a devil.
Yet have I gold flies from another coast:
I dare not say, from the rich cardinal,
And from the great and new made duke of Suffolk;
Yet I do find it so: for, to be plain,
They, knowing dame Eleanor's aspiring humour,
Have hired me to undermine the duchess,
And buzz these conjunctions in her brain.

They say, a crafty knave does need no broker;
Yet am I Suffolk's, and the cardinal's broker.
Hume, if you take not heed, you shall go near
To call them both a pair of crafty knaves.
Well, so it stands: and thus, I fear, at last,
Hume's knavery will be the duchess' wrek,
And her attaindance will be Humphrey's fall.

So how it will, I shall have gold for all.

[Exit Hume.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Peter, and others, with Petitions.

1 Pet. My masters, let's stand close: my lord protector will come this way by and by, and then we may deliver our supplcations in sequel.

2 Pet. Marry, the lord protect him, for he's a good man. Jesu bless him.

Enter Suffolk and Queen Margaret.

1 Pet. Here 'a comes, methinks, and the queen with him 'll be the first, sure.

2 Pet. Come back, fool! this is the duke of Suffolk, and not my lord protector.

Suf. How now, fellow! wouldst any thing with me?

1 Pet. I pray my lord, pardon me: I took ye for my lord protector.

Q. Mar. "To my lord protector!" are your supplications to his lordship? Let me see them. What is thine?

1 Pet. Mine is, an't please your grace, against John Goodman, my lord cardinal's man, for keeping my house, and lands, and wife, and all, from me.

Suf. Thy wife too! that is some wrong indeed.—What's yours?—What's here? [Reads.] "Against the duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford."

—How now, sir knave?

2 Pet. Alas! sir, I am but a poor petitioner of our whole township.

Peter. [Presenting his petition.] Against my master, Thomas Horner, for saying, that the duke of York was rightful heir to the crown.

Q. Mar. What say'st thou? Did the duke of York say, he was rightful heir to the crown?

Peter. That my master was? No, forsooth: my master said, that he was; and that the king was an usurper.

Suf. Who is there? [Enter Servants.]—Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuivant presently.—We'll hear more of your matter before the king.

[Exit Servants with Peter.

Q. Mar. And as for you, that love to be protected
Under the wings of our protector's grace,
Begin your suits anew, and sue to him. [Tears the petition away, base cullions!—Suffolk, let them go.]

All. Come, let's be gone. [Exit Petitioners.

Q. Mar. My lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise,
Is this the fashion in the court of England?
Is this the government of Britain's isle, And this the royalty of Albion's king?
What! shall kng Henry be a pupil still,
Under the surly Gloster's government?
Am I a queen in title and in style,
And must be made a subject to a duke?
I tell thee, Poole, when in the city Tours Thou ran'st a tilt in honour of my love,
And stol'st away the ladies' hearts of France,
I thought king Henry had resembled thee,
In courage, courtship, and proportion;
But all his mind is bent to holiness.

To number Ave-Marias on his beads:
His champions are the prophets and apostles:
His weapons, holy saws of sacred writ;
His study is his tilit-yard, and his loves
Are brazen images of canoniz'd saints.
I would, the college of the cardinals
Would choose him pope, and carry him to Rome,
And set the triple crown upon his head:
That were a state fit for his holiness.

Suf. Madam, be patient: as I was cause
Your highness came to England, so will I
In England work your grace's full content.

Q. Mar. Beside the haughty protector, have we
The imperious churchman; Somerset, Buckingham
And grumbling York: and not the least of these,
But can do more in England than the king.
Suf. And he of these that can do most of all,
Cannot do more in England than the Nevils:
Salisbury and Warwick are no simple peers.

Q. Mar. Not all these lords do vex me half so much.
As that proud dame, the lord protector's wife:
She sweeps it through the court with troops of ladies,
More like an empress than duch Humphrey's wife.
Strangers in court do take her for the queen:
She bears a duke's revenues on her back,
And in her heart she scorns our poverty.
Shall I not live to be aveng'd on her?
Contemnous base-born calf as she is,
She vaunted 'mongst her minions t' other day,
The very train of her worst wearing gown
Was better worth than all my father's lands.
Till Suffolk gave two dukedoms for his daughter.

Suf. Madam, myself have him a bough for her;
And pluck'd a quire of such enticing birds,
That she will light to listen to their lays,
And never mount to trouble you again.
So, let her rest; and, madam, list to me,
For I am bold to counsel you in this.
Although we fancy not the cardinal.
Yet must we join with him, and with the lords,
Till we have brought duke Humphrey in disgrace.
As for the duke of York, this late complaint
Will make but little for his benefit:
So, one by one, we will weed all the realm,
And you yourself shall steer the happy helm.

Enter King Henry, York, and Somerset; Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, Cardinal Beaufort, Buckingham,
Safford, and Warwick.

K. Hen. For my part, noble lords, I care not which;
Or Somerset, or York, all's one to me.
York. If York have ill demean'd himself in France,
Then let him be decry'd the regent-bip.
Som. If Somerset be unworthy of the place,
Let York be regent: I will yield to him.

War. Whether your grace be worthy, yea, or no,
Dispute not that York is the worthier.
Car. Ambitious Warwick, let thy betters speak.
War. A cardinal's not my better in the field.
Buck. All in this presence are thy betters, Warwick.
War. Warwick may live to be the best of all.
Sal. Peace, son! and show some reason. Buckingham,
Why Somerset should be prefer'd in this.

Q. Mar. Because the king, forsooth, will have it so.
Glo. Madam, the king is old enough himself.

To give his censure. These are no women's matters.

Q. Mar. If he be old enough, what needs your grace
To be protector of his excellence?
Glo. Madam, I am protector of the realm,
And, at his pleasure, will resign my place.

Suf. Resign it, then, and leave thine insolence.
Since thou wert king, (as who is king but thou?)
The commonwealth hath daily run to wreck:
The Dauphin hath prevail'd beyond the seas,
And all the peers and nobles of the realm
Have been as bondmen to thy sovereignty.
Car. The commons hath thou rent'd; the clergy's baks
Are lank and lean with thy extortions.

Som. Thy sumptuous buildings, and thy wife's attire,
Have cost a mass of public treasury.

Buck. Thy cruelty, in execution
Upon offenders hath exceeded law,
And left thee to the mercy of the law.

Q. Mar. Thy sale of offices, and towns in France,
If they were known, as the suspect is great.
Would make thee quickly hop without thy head.

[Exit Gloster. The Queen drops her Fan.
Give me my fan: what, minion! can you not?

I cry you mercy, madam: was it you?

Duch. Was't I? yea, I it was, proud French-woman
Could I come near your beauty with my nails,
I'd set my ten commandments in your face.

K. Hen. Sweet aunt, be quiet: 'twas against her will Duch. Against her will. Good king, look to 't in time

She'll harner thee, and dandle thee like a baby
Though in this place most master wear no breeches.
She shall not strike dame Eleanor unreveng'd. [Aside

Buck. Lord Cardinal, I will follow Eleanor,
And listen after Humphrey, how he proceeds.
She's tickled now; her flame can need no spurs,
She'll gallop fast enough to her destruction.

[Exit Buckingham.

Re-enter Gloster.

Glo. Now, lords, my cholcr being over-blown
With walking once about the quadrangle,
I come to talk of commonwealth affairs.
As for your spiteful false objections,
Prove them, and I lie open to the law:
But God in mercy so deal with my soul,
As I do duty love my king and country.
But to the matter that we have in hand—
I say, my sovereign, York is meetest man
To be your regent in the realm of France.

Suf. Before we make election, give me leave
To show some reason, of no little force,
That York is most unmect of any man.
York. Well, then, Suffolk, why I am meet.
First, for I cannot flatter thee in pride:
Next, if I be appointed for the place,
My lord of Somerset will keep me there,
Without discharge, money, or furniture.
Till France be won into the Dauphin's hands.
Last time I danc'd attendance on his will,
Till Paris was besieged, famish'd, and lost.
War. That can I witness: and a louder fact
Did never traitor in the land commit.
Suf. Peace, headstrong Warwick!
War. Image of pride, why should I hold my peace?

Enter Servants of Suffolk, bringing in Horner and Peter.

Suf. Because here is a man accus'd of treason:
Pray God, the duke of York excuse himself!
York. Doth any one accuse York for a traitor?
K. Hen. What mean'st thou, Suffolk? tell me, what are these?
Suf. Please it your majesty, this is the man

That doth accuse his master of high treason.
His words were these:—that Richard, duke of York,
Was rightful heir unto the English crown,
And that your majesty was an usurper.
K. Hen. Say, man, were these thy words?
Hor. An't shall please your majesty, I never said
Nor thought any such matter. God is my witness, I Am falsely accused by the villain.

Pet. By these ten bones, my lords, [Holding up his hands] he did speak them to me in the garret one night, as we were scouring my lord of York's armour.
York. Base dung-hill villain, and mechanical,
I'll have thy head for this thy traitor's speech—
I do beseech your royal majesty,
Let him have all the rigour of the law.
Hor. Alas! my lord, hang me, if ever I speak
The words. My accuser is my prentice; and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vow upon his knees he would be even with me. I have good witness of this: therefore, I beseech your majesty
KING HENRY VI.

SCENE I.—Saint Albans.

Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, Gloster, Cardinal, and Suffolk, with Falconers, hunting.

Q. Mar. Believe me, lords, for flying at the brook:

Spir. The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose;
But him outlive, and die a violent death.

[As the Spirit speaks, Southwell writes the answer.]

Boling. What fates await the duke of Suffolk?

Spir. By water shall he die, and take his end.

Boling. What shall befall the duke of Somerset?

Spir. Let him shun castles:
Safer shall he be on the sandy plains
Than where castles imbattled stand.

Have done, for more I hardly can endure.

Boling. Descend to darkness, and the burning lake
Pou! flend, avoid!

[Thunder and lightning. Spirit descends.]

Enter York and Buckingham hastily, with their Guardes.

York. Lay hands upon these traitors, and their trash
Reldame, I think, we watch'd you at an inch.—
What! madam, are you there? the king and common
We are deeply indebted for this piece of pains:
My lord protector will, I doubt it not,
See you well guerdon'd for these good deserts.

Buck. True, madam, none at all. What call you this?

[Showing her the Papers.]

Away with them! let them be clapp'd up close.
And kept asunder.—You, madam, shall with us:
Stafford, take her to thee.—[Exit Duchess from above.]
We'll see your trinkets here are all forth-coming:

All.—Away! [Exit Guards, with Southwell, Boling., &c.
York. Lord Buckingham, methinks, you watch'd her
A pretty plot, well chosen to build upon!—
Now, pray, my lord, let's see the devil's writ.
What have we here?—[Reads.]

"The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose:
But him outlive, and die a violent death."

Why, this is just
Aio te. Etater, Romanos vincere posse.
Well, to the rest:
"Tell me, what fate awaits the duke of Suffolk?—
By water shall he die, and take his end."—
"What shall betide the duke of Somerset?—
Let him shun castles:
Safer shall he be on the sandy plains,
Than where castles mounted stand."

Come, come, my lords;
These oracles are hardly attain'd,
And hardly understood.

The king is now in progress towards Saint Albans,
With him the husband of this lovely lady:
Thither go these news, as fast as horse can carry them
A sorry breakfast for my lord protector.

Buck. Your grace shall give me leave, my lord of York,
To be the post in hope of his reward.
York. At your pleasure, my good lord.—Who 'er within there, ho!

Enter a Servant.

Invite my lords of Salisbury, and Warwick,
To sup with me to-morrow night.—Away!

ACT II.

I saw not better sport these seven years' day.
Yet, by your leave, the wind was very high,
And, ten to one, old Joan had not gone out
K. Hen. But what a point, my lord, your falcon made
And what a pitch she flew above the rest

SCENE II.

an not cast away an honest man for a villain's accusation.

K. Hen. Uncle, what shall we say to this in law?

Glo. This doom, my gracious lord, if I may judge.
Let Somerset be regent o'er the French,
Because in York this breeds suspicion;
And let these have a day appointed them
For single combat in convenient place,
For he hath witness of his servant's malice.

This is the law, and this duke Humphrey's doom.

Som. I humbly thank your royal Majesty.

Hor. And I accept the combat willingly.

Pet. Alas! my lord, I cannot fight: for God's sake,
Pray me no more! The spirit of this man prevails against me.
O, Lord have mercy upon me! I shall never be able to fight a blow. O Lord, my heart!

Glo. Sirrah, or you must fight or else be hang'd.

K. Hen. Away with them to prison; and the day
Of combat shall be the last of the next month.—
Come, Somerset, we'll see thee sent away. —[Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Same. The Duke of Gloster's Garden.

Enter Margery Jourdain, Hume, Southwell, and Bolingbroke.

Hume. Come, my masters: the Duchess, I tell you, even promises of her promises.

Boling. Master Hume, we are therefore provided.

Will her ladyship behold, and hear our exercisings?

Hume. Ay; what else? fear you not her courage.

Boling. I have heard her reported to be a woman of an invincible spirit; but let it be convenient, master Hume, that you be by her aloft, while we be busy below; and so, I pray you, go in God's name, and leave us. —[Exit Hume.] Mother Jourdain, be you prostrate, and grovel on the earth:—John Southwell, read you,

and let us to our work.

Enter Duchess above.

Duch. Well said, my masters, and welcome all. To this gear: the sooner the better.

Boling. Patience, good lady; wizards know their times.

Deep night, dark night, and silence; of the night,
The time of night when Troy was set on fire.
The time when screech-owls cry, and ban-dogs howl,
And spirits walk, and ghosts break open their graves,
That time best fits the work we have in hand.

Madam, sit you, and fear not: whom we raise,

We will make fast within a halow'd verge.

[Here they perform the Ceremonies belonging, and make the Circle: Bolingbrooke, reads, Conjuro, to, &c. It thunders and lightens terribly; then the Spirit riseth.

Spir. Adsum.

M. Jourd. Asmath!

By the eternal God, whose name and power
I thou tremblest at, answer that I shall ask;

For till thou speakest thou shalt not pass from hence.

Spir. Ask what thou wilt.—That I had said and done!

Boling. First of the king: what shall of him become?
To see how God in all his creatures works!
Yea, man and birds are fain of climbing high.
Suf. No marvel, an it like your majesty.
My lord protector's hawks do tower so well:
They know their master loves to be aloft,
And bears his thoughts above his falcon's pitch.
Glo. My lord, 'tis but a base ignoble mind,
That mounts no higher than a bird can soar.
Car. I thought as much: he'd be above the clouds.
Glo. Ay, my lord cardinal; how think you by that?
Were it not good your grace could fly to heaven?
K. Hen. The treasury of everlasting joy.
Car. Thy heaven is on earth: thine eyes and thoughts
Beat on a crown, the treasure of thy heart:
Pernicious protector, dangerous peer.
That smooth'st it so with king and commonweal!
Glo. What, cardinal, is your priesthood grown so peremptory?
Tantane animis calestibus tra?
Churchmen so hot? good uncle, hide such malice;
And with such holiness you well can do it.¹
Suf. No malice, sir: no more than well becomes
So good a quarrel, and so bad a peer.
Glo. As who, my lord?
Suf. Why, as you, my lord;
An't like your lordly lord-protectorship.
Q. Mar. And thy ambition, Gloster.
K. Hen. I pr'ythee, peace,
Good queen; and what not on these furious peers,
For blessed are the peacemakers on earth.
Car. Let me be blessed for the peace I make Against this proud protector with my sword.
Glo. 'Faith, holy uncle, would it come to that?
[Aside to the Cardinal.]
Car. Marry, when thou dar'st.
[Aside.]
Glo. Make up no factious numbers for the matter;
In thine own person answer thy abuse.
[Aside.]
Car. Ay, where thou dar'st not peep: an if thou dar'st,
This evening on the east side of the grove.
[Aside.]
K. Hen. How now, my lords!
Car. Believe me, cousin Gloster,
Had not your man put up the fowl so suddenly,
We had had more sport.—Come with thy two-hand sword.
[Aside to Glo.]
Glo. True, uncle.
Car. Are you advis'd, the east side of the grove.
Glo. Cardinal, I am with you.²
[Aside.]
K. Hen. Why, how now, uncle Gloster!
Glo. Talking of hawking: nothing else, my lord.—
Now, by God's mother, priest, I'll shave your crown
For this, or all my fence shall fail.
[Aside.]
Car. Malice teipsum:
perceptio, see to't well, protect yourself.
[Aside.]
K. Hen. The winds grow high: so do your stomachs, lords.
How irksome is this music to my heart!
When such strings jar, what hope of harmony?
I pray, my lords, let me compound this strife.
Enter one, crying, "A Miracle!"
Glo. What means this noise?
Fellow, what miracle dost thou proclaim?
One. A miracle! a miracle!
Suf. Come to the king: tell him what miracle.
One. Forsooth, a blind man at Saint Alban's shrine,
Within this half hour hath receiv'd his sight;
A man that ne'er saw in his life before.
K. Hen. Now, God be prais'd; that to believing souls
Gives light in darkness, comfort in despair.
Enter the Mayor of St. Albans, and his Brethren; and Simpson, borne between two persons in a Chair; his Wife and the Multitude following.
Cor. Here come the townsmen on procession.
To present your highness with the man.
K. Hen. Great is his comfort in this earthly vale.
Though by his sight his sin be multiplied.
Glo. Stand by, my masters: bring him near the king.
His highness' pleasure is to talk with him.
K. Hen. Good fellow, tell us here the circumstance,
That we for thee may glorify the Lord.

What! hast thou been long blind, and now restor'd?
Simp. Born blind, an't please your grace.
Wife. Ay, indeed, was he.
Suf. What woman is this?
Wife. His wife, an't like your worship.
Glo. Hadst thou been his mother, thou could'st have better told.
K. Hen. Where wert thou born?
Simp. At Berwick in the north, an't like your grace.
K. Hen. Poor soul! God's goodness hath been great to thee:
Let never day nor night unhallow'd pass,
But still remember what the Lord hath done.
Q. Mar. Tell me, good fellow, cam'st thou here by chance,
Of or devotion, to this holy shrine?
Simp. God knows, of pure devotion: being called
And a hundred times, and oft'ner, in my sleep,
By good Saint Alban: who said,"—Sander, come Come, offer at my shrine, and I will help thee."
Wife. Most true, forsooth; and many time and oft Myself have heard a voice to call him so.
Car. What! art thou lame?
Simp. Ay, God Almighty help me!
Suf. How cam'st thou so?
Simp. A fall off of a tree.
Wife. A plum-tree, master.
Glo. How long hast thou been blind?
Simp. O! born so, master.
Glo. What! and wouldst climb a tree?
Simp. But that in all my life, when I was a youth.
Wife. Too true: and bought his climbing very dear
Glo. 'Mass, thou lov'dst plums well, that would'st venture so.
[sons.]
Simp. Alas, good master, my wife desir'd some dam-
And made me climb with danger of my life.
Glo. A subtle knife; but yet it shall not serve.—
Let me see thine eyes:—wink now:—now open them.
In my opinion yet thou seest not well.
Simp. Yes, master, clear as day; I thank God, and Saint Alban.
Glo. Say'st thou me so? What colour is this cloak of?
Simp. Red, master; red as blood.
Glo. Why, that's well said. What colour is my gown of?
Simp. Black, forsooth; coal-black as jet.
K. Hen. Why then, thou know'st what colour jet is Suf. And yet, I think, jet did he never see.
Glo. But cloaks, and gowns, before this day a many.
Wife. Never, before this day, in all his life.
Glo. Tell me, sirrah, what's my name?
Simp. Alas! master, I know not.
Glo. What's his name?
Simp. I know not.
Glo. Nor his?
Simp. No, indeed, master.

SCENE II.

KING HENRY VI.

Glo. What’s thine own name?
Simp. Sander Simpeox, an if it please you, master.
Glo. Then, Sander, sit thou there, the lyingest knave
In Christendom. If thou hast been born blind,
Thou might’st as well have known all our names, as thus
To name the several colours we do wear.
Sight may distinguish colours; but suddenly
To nominate them all, it is impossible.—
My lords, Saint Alban here hath done a miracle;
And would ye not think his cunning to be great,
That could restore this cripple to his legs?
Simp. O, master, that you could!
Glo. My masters of Saint Albans, have you not beadle
In your towns, and things called whips?
May. Yes, my lord, if it please your grace.
Glo. Then send for one presently.
May. Sirrah, go fetch the beadle hither straight.

[Exit an Attendant.

Glo. Now fetch me a stool hither by and by. [A stool brought out.] Now, sirrah, if you mean to save yourself from whipping, leap me over this stool, and run away.
Simp. Alas! master, I am not able to stand alone:
You go about to torture me in vain.
Re-enter Attendant, and a Beadle with a whip.
Glo. Well, sir, we must have your legs.
Sireh beadle, whip him till he leap over that same stool.
Beed. I will, my lord.—Come on, sirrah; off with your doublet quietly.
Simp. Alas! master, what shall I do? I am not able sto stand.

[After the Beadle hath hit him once, he leaps over the stool, and runs away; and the People follow and cry, "A Miracle!"]

K. Hen. O God! seest thou this, and bearest so long?
Q. Mar. It made me laugh to see the villain run.
Glo. Follow the knife; and take this drab away.
Wife. Alas! sir, we did it for pure need.
Glo. Let them be whipped through every town market,
Till they come to Berwick, from whence they came.
[Exeunt Mayor, Beadle, Wife,

Cor. Duke Humphrey has done a miracle to-day.
Suf. True, made the lame to leap, and fly away.
Glo. But you have done more miracles than I;
You made in a day, my lord, whole towns to fly.

Enter Buckingham.

K. Hen. What tidings with our cousin Buckingham?
Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold.
A sort of naughty persons, lowly bent,
Under the countenance and confederacy
Of lady Eleanor, the protector’s wife,
The ringleader and head of all this rout,
Have practis’d dangerously against your state,
Dealing with witches, and with conjurers,
Whom we have apprehended in the fact:
Raising up wicked spirits from under ground,
Demanding of king Henry’s life and death,
And other of your highness’ privy council,
As more at large your grace shall understand.

[Giving a paper.]
Car. And so, my lord protector, by this means
Your lady is forthcoming yet at London.
This news, I think, hath turn’d your weapon’s edge;
’T is like, my lord, you will not keep your hour.
Glo. Ambitious churchman, leave t’ afflicth my heart.
Sorrow and grief have vanquish’d all my powers;
And, vanquish’d as I am, I yield to thee,
Or to the meanest groom.

Jones.

K. Hen. O God! what mischief work the wicked
Heaping confusion on their own heads thereby.
Q. Mar. Gloster, see here the tainture of thy soul:
And look thyself be faultless, thou wert best.
Glo. Madam, for myself, to heaven I do appeal.
How I have lov’d my king, and commonwealth;
And, for my wife, I know not how it stands.
Sorry I am to hear what I have heard;
Noble she is, but if she have forgot
Honour, and virtue, and convers’d with such
As, like to pitch, defy noblest,
I banish her, my bed, and company,
And give her, as a prey to law, and shame,
That hath dishonour’d Gloster’s honest name.
K. Hen. Well, for this night, we will repose us here
To-morrow, toward London, back again,
To lock into this business thoroughly,
And call these foul offenders to their answers;
And poise the cause in justice’s equal scales.
Whose beam stands sure, whose rightful cause prevails.

Flourish. Extant

Enter York, Salisbury, and Warwick.

York. Now, my good lords of Salisbury and Warwick,
Our simple supper ended, give me leave,
In this close walk, to satisfy myself
In craving your opinion of my title,
Which is infallible, to England’s crown.
Suf. My lord, I long to hear it at the full.
War. Sweet York, begin; and if thy claim be good
The Nevils are thy subjects to command.
York. Then thus:—
Edward the third, my lords, had seven sons:
The first, Edward the Black Prince, prince of Wales
The second, William of Hatfield; and the third.
Lionel, duke of Clarence; next to whom,
Was John of Gaunt, the duke of Lancaster.
The fifth was Edmund Langley, duke of York;
The sixth was Thomas of Woodstock, duke of Gloucester.
William of Windsor was the seventh, and last.
Edward, the Black Prince, died before his father,
And left behind him Richard, his only son.
Who, after Edward the third’s death, reign’d as king,
Till Henry Bolingbroke, duke of Lancaster,
The eldest son and heir of John of Gaunt,
Crown’d by the name of Henry the fourth.
Seized on the realm; depos’d the rightful king,
Sent his poor queen to France, from whence she came
And him to Pomfret; where, as all you know,
Harmless Richard was murder’d traitorously.
War. Father, the duke hath told the very truth:
Thus got the house of Lancaster the crown. [right:
York. Which now they hold by force, and not by
For Richard, the first son’s heir being dead,
The issue of the next son should have reign’d.
Suf. But William of Hatfield died without an heir York. The third son, duke of Clarence, from whose line
I claim the crown, had issue—Philippe, a daughter,
Who married Edmond Mortimer, earl of March:
Edmond had issue—Roger, earl of March:
Roger had issue—Edmund, Anne, and Eleanor.
Suf. This Edmond, in the reign of Bolingbroke,
As I have read, laid claim unto the crown.
And but for Owen Glendower, had been king,
Who kept him in captivity, till he died.
But to the rest.
York. His eldest sister, Anne,
My mother, being heir unto the crown.
Married Richard, earl of Cambridge; who was
To Edmund Langley. Edward the third's eldest son, son.
By her I claim the kingdom: she was heir
To Roger, earl of March; who was the son
Of Edmund Mortimer; who married Philippa,
Solo daughter unto Lionel, duke of Clarence:
So, if the issue of the elder son
Succeeded before the younger, I am king.

War. What plain proceeding is more plain than this?
Henry doth claim the crown from John of Gaunt,
The fourth son; York claims it from the third.
Till Lionel's issue fails, his should not reign:
It fails not yet, but flourishes in thee,
And in thy sons, fair slips of such a stock.—
Then, father Salisbury, kneel we together;
And, in this private plot, we be the first.
That shall salute our rightful sovereign
With honour of his birthright to the crown.

Both. Long live our sovereign Richard, England's [Trumpets sound. Enter King HENRY, Queen MARGARET, Gloucester, York, Suffolk, and Salisbury; the Duke of Gloucester, Margery Jourdain, Southwell, Hume, and Bolingbroke, under guard.

K. Hen. Stand forth, dame Eleanor Cobham, Gloster's wife.

In sight of God and us, your guilt is great:
Receive the sentence of the law, for sin
Such as by God's book is adjudged to death.—
You four, from hence to prison back again;

[To Jourd., &c.

From thence, unto the place of execution:
The witch in Smithfield shall be burnt to ashes,
And you three shall be strangled on the gallows.—
You, madam, for you are more notably born,
Despoiled of your honour in your life,
Shall, after three days' open penance done,
Live in your country here, in banishment,
With Sir John Stanley in the Isle of Man.

Duck. Welcome is banishment; welcome were my death.

Glo. Eleanor, the law, thou seest, hath judged thee:
I cannot justify whom the law condemns—
[Exit the Duchess, and the other Prisoners, guarded.

Mine eyes are full of tears, my heart of grief.
Ah, Humphrey! this dishonour in thine age
Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground
I beseech your majesty, give me leave to go;
Sorrow would solace, and mine age would ease.

K. Hen. Stay, Humphrey, duke of Gloucester. Ere thou
Give up thy staff; Henry will to himself
Protector be; and God shall be my hope,
My stay, my guide, and lantern to my feet.
And go in peace, Humphrey; no less than to me.

Q. Mar. I see no reason why a king of years
Should be protected like a child by peers;
God and king Henry govern England's helm.

Glo. Give up your staff, sir, and the king his realm.

Q. Mar. Why, now is Henry king, and Margaret queen;
And Humphrey, duke of Gloucester, searce himself,
That bears so shrewd a maim: two pulls at once,—
His lady banished, and a limb lopp'd off;
This staff of honour raught—there let it stand,
Where it best fits to be, in Henry's hand.

Suf. To thus droops this lofty pine, and hangs his sprays
Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her proudest days.

York. Lords, let him go.—Please it your majesty,
This is the day appointed for the combat;
And ready are the appellant and defendant,
The armourer and his man to enter lists,
So please your highness to behold the fight.

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord; for purposely, therefore Left I the court to see this quarrel tried.

K. Hen. O God's name, see the lists and all things
Here let them end it, and God defend the right! [fit
York. I never saw a fellow worse bested,
Or more afraid to fight, than is the appellant,
The servant of this armourer, my lord.

Enter, on one side, HORNER, and his Neighbours, drinking to him so much that he is drunk; and he enters bearing his staff with a sand-bag fastened to it; a drum before him: at the other side, Peter, with a drum and a similar staff; accompanied by Prentices drinking to him.

1 Neigh. Here, neighbour Horner, I drink to you in a cup of sack. And fear not, neighbour, you shall do well enough.

2 Neigh. And here, neighbour, here's a cup of charneo.'

3 Neigh. And here's a pot of good double beer neighbour: drink, and fear not your man.

Har. Let it come, I' faith, and I'll pledge you all, and a fig for Peter!

1 Pren. Here, Peter, I drink to thee; and be not afraid.

2 Pren. Be merry. Peter, and fear not thy master fight for credit of the prejudices.
Peter. I thank you all: drink and pray for me. I pray you. For, I think, I have taken my last draught in this world.—Here, Robin, an if I die, I give thee my apron: and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer:—and here, Tom, take all the money that I have.—O Lord, bless me! I pray God, for I am never able to deal with my master, he hath learnt so much fence already.
SCENE IV.
KING HENRY VI.

Sat. Come, leave your drinking both, and fall to blows.—
Sirrah, what’s thy name?

Peter. Peter, forsorth.

Sat. Peter! what more?

Peter. Thump.

Sat. Thump! then see thou thump thy master well.

Hor. Masters, I am come hither, as it were, upon my man’s instigation, to prove him a knave and myself an honest man: and touching the duke of York, I will take my death, I never meant him any ill, nor the king, nor the queen. And therefore, Peter, have at thee with a downright blow!

York. Dispatch: this knave’s tongue begins to double.

[Alarum. They fight, and Peter strikes down his Master.

Hor. Hold, Peter, hold, I confess, I confess treason.

[Dies.

York. Take away his weapon.—Fellow, thank God, and the good wine in thy master’s way.

Peter. O God! have I overcome mine enemies in this presence? O Peter! thou hast prevailed in right.

K. Hen. Go, and take hence that traitor from our sight;

For by his death we do perceive his guilt:

And God in justice hath reveal’d to us

The truth and innocence of this poor fellow,

Which he had thought to have murder’d wrongfully.—

Come, fellow; follow us for thy reward.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Street.

Enter Gloster and Servants, in mourning Cloaks.

Glo. Thus, sometimes hath the brightest day a cloud;

And after summer evermore succeeds

Barren winter, with his wrathful nipping cold:

So, cares and joys abound, as seasons fleet.—

Sirs, what’s o’clock?

Serv. Ten, my lord.

Glo. Ten is the hour that was appointed me

To watch the coming of my punish’d duchess:

Unearth may she endure the fitty streets,

To tread them with her tender-feeling feet.

Sweet Nell, ill can thy noble mind abroach

The abject people, gazing on thy face

With envious looks, laughing at thy shame,

That erst did follow thy proud chariot wheels,

When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets.

But, soft! I think, she comes; and I’ll prepare

My tear-stain’d eyes to see her miseries.

Enter the Duchess of Gloster, in a white sheet, with verses written upon her back, her feet bare, and a taper burning in her hand; Sir John Stanley, a Sheriff, and Officers.

Serv. So please your grace, we’ll take her from the sheriff.

Glo. No, stir not for your lives: let her pass by.

Duch. Come you, my lord, to see my open shame?

Now thou dost penance too. Look, how they gaze:

See, how the giddy multitude do point,

And nod their heads, and throw their eyes on thee.

Ah, Gloster! hide thee from their hateful looks;

And in thy closet pent up rue my shame,

And ban thine enemies, both mine and thine.

Glo. Be patient, gentle Nell: forget this grief.

Duch. Ah, Gloster! teach me to forget myself;

For, whilst I think I am thy married wife,

And thou a prince, protector of this land,

Methinks, I should not thus be led along.

Mail’d up in shame, with papers on my back,

And follow’d with a rabble, that rejoice

To see my tears, and hear my deep-set groans.

The ruthless flint doth cut my tender heart;

And when I start the envious people laugh,

And bid me be advised how I tread.

Ah, Humphrey! can I bear this shameful yoke? Trow’st thou, that e’er I’ll look upon the world, Or count them happy that enjoy the sun?

No: dark shall be my light, and night my day:

To think upon my pomp, shall be my hell.

Sometime I’ll say I am Duke Humphrey’s wife,

And he a prince, and ruler of the land:

Yet so he ruled, and such a prince he was,

As he stood by, whilst I, his forlorn duchess,

Was made a wonder, and a pointing-stock,

To every idle rascal follower.

But be thou mild, and blush not at my shame:

Nor stir at nothing, till the axe of death

Hang over thee, as sure, it shortly will;

For Suffolk,—he that can do all in all

With her, that hateth thee, and hates us all,—

And York, and impious Beaufort, that false priest,

Have all lim’d bushes to betray thy wings;

And, fly thou how thou canst, they’ll tangle thee.

But fear not thou, until thy foot be shod;

Nor never seek prevention of thy foes.

Glo. Ah, Nell! forbear; thou almost all away:

I must offend before I be attainted;

And had I twenty times so many foes,

And each of them had twenty times their power,

All these could not procure me any seath,

So long as I am loyal, true, and crinless.

Wouldst thou and1 rescue thee from this reproach?

Why, yet thy semblance were not wip’d away,

But I in danger for the breach of law.

Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell;

I pray thee, sort thy heart to patience:

These few days’ wonder will be quickly worn.

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your grace to his majesty’s parliament, holden at Bury the first of this next month.

Glo. And my consent ne’er ask’d herein before?

This is close dealing.—Well, I will be there.

[Exit Herald.

My Nell, I take my leave:—and, master sheriff,

Let not her penance exceed the king’s commission.

Sher. An’t please your grace, here my commission

And Sir John Stanley is appointed now [stays.

To take her with him to the Isle of Man.

Glo. Must you, sir John, protect my lady here?

Sten. So am I given in charge, may’t please your grace.

Glo. Entreat her not the worse, in that I pray

You use her well. The world may laugh again;

And I may live to do you kindness, if

You do it her: and so, sir John, farewell.

Duch. What! gone, my lord, and bid me not farewell.

Glo. Witness my tears, I cannot stay to speak.

[Exit Gloster and Servants.

Duch. Art thou gone so? All comfort go with thee

For none abides with me: my joy is death;

Death, at whose name I oft have been afraid:

Because I wish’d this world’s eternity.—

Stanley, I pray thee, go, and take me hence;

I care not whither, for I beg no favour,

Only convey me where thou art commanded.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Abbey at Bury.

A Sennet. Enter to the Parliament, King Henry, Queen Margaret, Cardinal Beaufort, Suffolk, York, Buckingham, and others.

K. Hen. I muse, my lord of Gloster is not come: Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man. Whatever occasion keeps him from us now.

Q. Mar. Can you not see, or will you not observe The strangeness of his alter'd countenance? With what a majesty he bears himself; How insolent of late he is become, How proud, how peremptory, and unlike himself? We know the time since he was mild and affable; And if we did but glance a far-off look, Immediately he was upon his knee, That all the court admir'd him for submission: But meet him now, and, be it in the morn, When every one will give the time of day, He looks his brow, and shows an angry eye, And passeth by with stiff unbowed knee, Disclaiming duty that to us belongs. Small curs are not regarded when they grin, But great men tremble when the lion roars: And Humphrey is no little man in England. First note, that he is near you in descent, And should you fall, he is the next will mount. Me seemeth, then, it is no policy, Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears, And his advantage following your decease, That he should come about your royal person, Or be admitted to your highness's council. By flattery hath he won the commons' hearts, And, when he pleases to make commotion, 'Tis but to fear'd, they all will follow him. Now it is the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted; Suffer them now, and they 'll o'ergrow the garden, And choke the herbs for want of husbandry. The reverend care I bear unto my lord Made me collect these dangers in the duke. If it be foul,² call it a woman's fear: Which fear if better reasons can supplant, I will subscribe and say, I wrong'd the duke. My lords of Suffolk, Buckingham, and York, Reprove my allegations if you can, Or else conclude my words effectual.

Suf. Well hath your highness seen into this duke; And had I first been put to speak my mind, I think, I should have told your grace's tale. The duke by his subornation, Upon my life, began her devilish practices: Or if he were not privy to those faults, Yet, by repeating of his high descent, As next the king he was successive heir, Duch. Ay, ay, farewell: thy office is discharge'd.—Come, Stanley, shall we go?

Stan. Madam, your penance done, throw off this sheet, And go we to attire you for our journey.

Duch. My shame will not be shifted with my sheet No, it will hang upon my richest robes, And show itself, attire me how I can. Go, lead the way: I long to see my prison. [Exeunt.

And such high vaunts of his nobility, Did instigate the bedlam brain-sick duchess, By wicked means to frame our sovereign's fall.

Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep, And in his simple show he harbours treason.

The fox barks not when he would steal the lamb: No, no, my sovereign; Gloster is a man Unsounded yet, and full of deep deceit.

Car. Did he not, contrary to form of law, Devise strange deaths for small offences done? York. And did he not, in his protectorship, Levy great sums of money through the realm For soldiers' pay in France, and never sent it? By means whereby the towns each day revolted. Buck. Tut! these are petty faults to faults unknown, Which time will bring to light in smooth duke Humphrey.

K. Hen. My lords, at once: the care you have of us, To mow down thorns that would annoy our foot, Is worthy praise; but shall I speak my conscience? Our kinsman Gloster is as innocent From meaning treason to our royal person, As is the sucking lamb, or harmless dove, The duke is virtuous, mild, and too well given To dream on evil, or to work my downfall.

Q. Mar. Ah! what's more dangerous than this fond alliance? Seems he a dove? his feathers are but borrow'd, For he's dispos'd as the hateful raven. Is he a lamb? his skin is surely lent him, For he's inclin'd as is the ravenous wolf. Who cannot steal a shape, that means deceit? Take heed, my lord; the welfare of us all Hangs on the cutting short that furtul man. [Enter Somerset.

Som. All health unto my gracious sovereign! K. Hen. Welcome, lord Somerset. What's the news from France?²

Som. That all your interest in those territories Is utterly bereft you. all is lost. K. Hen. Cold news, lord Somerset: but God's will be done.

York. Cold news for me; for I had hope of France. [Aside

As firmly as I hope for fertile England, Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud, And caterpillars eat my leaves away; But I will remedy this g?r eye long, Or sell my title for a glorious grave. [Enter Gloster.

Glo. All happiness unto my lord the king! Pardon, my liege, that I have stay'd so long. Suf. Nay, Gloster, know, that thou art come too soon Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art

SCENE I.

KING HENRY VI.  467

I do arrest thee of high treason here.

Glo. Well, Suffolk, yet 'twould shall not see me blush.

Nor change my countenance for this arrest:

A heart unspotted is not easily daunted.

The purest spring is not so free from mud,

As I am clear from treason to my sovereign.

Who can accuse me? wherein am I guilty?

York. 'Tis thought, my lord, that you took bribes of France,

And, being protector, stay'd the soldier's pay:

By means whereof his highness hath lost France.

Glo. Is it but thought so? What are they that think it?

I never robb'd the soldiers of their pay,

Nor ever had one penny bribe from France.

So help me God, as I have watch'd the night.

Ay, night by night, in studying good for England.

That dot that ever I wrested from the king,

Or any great I boarded to my use,

Be brought against me at my trial day.

No: many a pound of mine own proper store,

Because I would not tax the needy commons,

Have I disbursed to the garrisons,

And never ask'd for restitution.

Car. It serves you well, my lord, to say so much.

Glo. I say no more than truth, so help me God!

York. In your protectorship you did devise

Strange tortures for offenders, never heard of,

That England was defam'd by tyranny.

Glo. Why, 'tis well known that, while I was protector,

Pity was all the fault that was in me;

For I should melt at an offender's tears,

And lowly words were ransom for their fault:

Unless it were a bloody murderer,

Or foul felonious thief that fleed poor passengers,

I never gave them condign punishment.

Murther, indeed, that bloody sin, I tortured

Above the felon, or what trespass else.

Suf. My lord, these faults are easily, quickly answer'd;

But mightier crimes are laid unto your charge,

Whereof you cannot easily purge yourself.

I do arrest you in your highness' name;

And here commit you to my lord cardinal

To keep, until your further time of trial.

K. Hen. My lord of Gloster, 'tis my special hope,

That you will clear yourself from all suspect:

My conscience tells me you are innocent.

Glo. Ah, gracious lord! these days are dangerous:

Virtue is chok'd with foul ambition,

And charity chas'd hence by rancour's hand;

Foul subornation is predominant,

And equity exil'd your highness' land.

I know, their complot is to have my life;

And if my death might make this island happy,

And prove the period of their tyranny,

I would expend it with all willingness;

But mine is made the prologue to their play.

For thousands more, that yet suspect no peril,

Will not conclude their plotted tragedy.

Beaufort's red sparkling eyes blos his heart's malice,

And Suffolk's cloudy brow his stormy hate;

Sharp Buckingham unburdens with his tongue

The envious load that lies upon his heart;

And dagg'd York, that reaches at the moon,

Whose overweening arm I have pluck'd back,

By false accuse doth level at my life.—

And you, my sovereign lady, with the rest,
Situation after Henry's death.}

Men's flesh preserved so whole does seldom win.

Q. Mar. Nay then, this spark will prove a raging fire,
If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with.—
No more, good York;—sweet Somerset, be still:—
Thy fortune, York, hast thou been regent there,
Might happily have proved far worse than his.

York. What, worse than nought? nay, then a shame take all.

Som. And, in the number, thee, that wishest shame.

Car. My lord of York, try what your fortune is.

The uncivil kernes of Ireland are in arms,
And temper clay with blood of Englishmen:
To Ireland will you lead a band of men,
Collected, choicely, from each county some,
And try your hap against the Irishmen?

York. I will, my lord, so please his majesty.

Suf. Why our authority is his consent,
And what we do establish, he confirms:
Then, noble York, take thou this task in hand.

York. I am content. Provide me soldiers, lords,
Whiles I take order for mine own affairs.

Suf. A charge, lord York, that I will see perform'd.
But now return we to the false duke Humphrey.

Car. No more of him; for I will deal with him,
That henceforth, he shall trouble us no more:
And so break off; the day is almost spent.

Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event.

York. My lord of Suffolk, within fourteen days,
At Bristol I expect my soldiers,
For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.

Suf. I'll see it truly done, my lord of York.

York. Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful thoughts,
And change misgust to resolution:
Be that thou hop'st to be, or what thou art
Resign to death; it is not worth the enjoying.
Let pale-fac'd fear keep with the mean-born man,
And find no harbour in a royal heart.

Faster than spring-time showers comes thought on thought,
And not a thought but thinks on dignity.
My brain, more busy than the labouring spider,
Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies.
Well, nobles, well; 'tis politely done,
To send me packing with an host of men:
I fear you but warm the starved snake,
Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting your hearts.
'Twas men I lack'd, and you will give them no:
I take it kindly; yet, be well assured,
You put sharp weapons in a madman's hands.
Whiles I in Ireland march a mighty band,
I will stir up in England some black storm,
Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven, or hell;
And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage
Until the golden circuit on my head,
Like to the glorious sun's transparent beams,
Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flaw.

And, for a minister of my intent,
I have seduced a headstrong Kentishman,

Witness the fortune he hath had in France.

Som. If York, with all his far-fet policy,
Had been the regent there instead of me,
He never would have stay'd in France so long.

York. No, not to lose it all, as thou hast done.
I rather would have lost my life betimes,
Than bring a burden of dishonour home,
By staying there so long, till all were lost.
Show me one scar character'd on thy skin:

Men's flesh preserved so whole does seldom win.

Q. Mar. Nay then, this spark will prove a raging fire,
If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with.—
No more, good York;—sweet Somerset, be still:—

Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flaw.

And, for a minister of my intent,
I have seduced a headstrong Kentishman,
John Cade of Ashford,
To make connection as full well he can,
Under the title of John Mortimer.
In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade
Oppose himself against a troop of kerns;
And fought so long, till that his thighs with darts
Were almost like a sharp-quill’d porcine:
And, in the end being res’ed, I have seen
Him caper upright, like a wild Morisco¹,
Shaking the bloody darts, as he bi his heels.
Full often, like a slag-hair’d crafty kerne,
Hath he conversed with the enemy,
And undiscouer’d come to me again,
And given me notice of their villainies.
This devil here shall be my substitute;
For that John Mortimer, which now is dead,
In face, in gait, in speech, he doth resemble:
By this I shall perceive the commons’ mind,
How they affect the house and claim of York.
Say, he be taken, rack’d, and tortured.
I know, no pain they can inflict upon him
Will make him say I mov’d him to those arms.
Say, that he thrive, as ’t is great like he will,
Why, then from Ireland come I with my strength,
And reap the harvest which that rascal sow’d;
For, Humphrey being dead, as he shall be,
And Henry put apart, then next for me. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—Burx. A Room in the Palace.
Enter certain Murderers, running over the Stage.

1 Mur. Run to my lord of Suffolk; let him know,
We have despatch’d the duke, as he commanded.
2 Mur. O, that it were to do!—What have we done?
Didst ever hear a man so penitent?
1 Mur. Here comes my lord.

Enter Suffolk.

Suf. Now, sirs, have you dispatch’d this thing?
1 Mur. Ay, my good lord, he’s dead.
Suf. Why, that’s well said. Go, get you to my house; I will reward you for this venturous deed.
The king and all the peers are here at hand.
Have you laid fair the bed? are all things well,
According as I gave directions?
1 Mur. ’Tis, my good lord.
Suf. Away! be gone. [Exeunt Murderers.

Sound Trumpets. Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, Cardinal Beaufort, Somerset, Lords and others.

K. Hen. Go, call my uncle to our presence straight.
Say, we intend to try his grace today;
If he be guilty, as ’tis published.
Suf. I’ll call him presently, my noble lord. [Exit.

K. Hen. Lords, take your places; and, I pray you all,
Proceed no straiger ‘gainst our uncle Gloster,
Than from true evidence, of good esteem,
He be approv’d in practice culpable.
Q. Mar. God forbid any malice should prevail,
That faultless may condemn a noble man!
Pray God may acquit him of suspicion!
K. Hen. I thank thee, Meg; these words content me much.—

Re-enter Suffolk.

How now! why look’st thou pale? why tremblest thou?
Where is our uncle? what’s the matter, Suffolk?
Suf. Dead in his bed, my lord; Gloster is dead.
Q. Mar. Marry, God foreend!
Car. God’s secret judgment!—I did dream to-night,
The duke was dumb, and could not speak a word.

The King swoons.

Q. Mar. How fares my lord?—Help, ‘ords! the king is dead.
Som. Rear up his body: wring him by the nose.
Q. Mar. Run, go; help, help!—O, Henry, open thine eyes!
Suf. He doth revive again.—Madam, be patient.
K. Hen. O heavenly God!
Q. Mar. How fares my gracious lord?
Suf. Comfort, my sovereign! gracious Henry, confor-

K. Hen. What! doth my lord of Suffolk comfort me?
Came he right now to sing a raven’s note,
Whose dismal tune bereft my vital powers,
And thinks he, that the chirping of a wren,
By crying comfort from a hollow breast,
Can chase away the first-conceived sound?
Hide not thy poison with such sugar’d words.
Lay not thy hands on me; forbear, I say:
Their touch affrights me as a serpent’s sting.
Thou balfeul messenger, out of my sight!
Upon thine eye-balls murderous tyranny
Sits in grim majesty to fright the world.
Look not upon me, for thine eyes are wounding.—
Yet do not go away:—come, basilisk,
And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight,
For in the shade of death I shall find joy.
In life, but double death, now Gloster’s dead.
Q. Mar. Why do you rate my lord of Suffolk thus?
Although the duke was enemy to him,
Yet he, most Christian-like, laments his death:
And for myself, see as he was to me,
Might liquid tears, or heart-offending groans,
Or blood-consuming sighs recall his life.
I would be blind with weeping, sick with groans,
Look pale as primrose with blood-driking sighs,
And all to have the noble duke alive.
What know I how the world may deem of me?
For it is known, we were but hollow friends;
It may be judg’d, I made the duke away:
So shall my name with slander’s tongue be wounded,
And princes’ courts be fill’d with my reproach.
This get I by his death. Ah me, unhappy,
To be a queen, and crown’d with infamy!
K. Hen. Ah, woe is me for Gloster wretched man!
Q. Mar. Be woe for me, more wretched than he is.
What! dost thou turn away, and hide thy face?
I am no loathsome leper! look on me.
What, art thou, like the adder, waxen deaf?
Be poisons too, and kill thy forlorn queen.
Is all thy comfort shut in Gloster’s tomb?
Why, then dame Margaret was ne’er thy joy,
Erect his statue, then², and worship it.
And make my image but an alehouse sign.
Was I for this night wretch’d upon the sea,
And twice by awkward wind from England’s baak
Drove back again unto my native eline?
What boded this, but well-forewarning wind
Did seem to say.—Suck not a scorpion’s nest,
Nor set no footing on this unkind shore.
What did I then, but curs’d th’ ungentle gusis,
And he that loo’d them from their brazen caves:
And bade them blow towards England’s blessed shore
Or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock.
Yet Aeolus would not be a murderer,
But left that hateful office unto thee;
The pretty vaulting sea refus’d to drown me,
Knowing that thou wouldst have me drown’d on shore.
With tears as salt as sea through thy unkindness
The splitting rocks cover’d in the sinking sands

SECOND PART OF

And would not dash me with their ragged sides,
Because thy flinty heart, more hard than they;
Might in thy palace perish Margaret.
As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs,
When from the shore the tempest beat us back,
I stood upon the hatchets in the storm;
And when the dusky sky began to rob
My earnest-gaping sight of thy land's view, took a costly jewel from my neck,— heart it was, bound in with diamonds,— nd threw it towards thy land. The sea receive'd it,
And so I wish'd thy body might my heart:
And even with this I lost fair England's view,
And bade mine eyes be packing with my heart,
And call'd them blind and dusky spectacles,
For losing ken of Albion's wished coast.
How often have I tempted Suffolk's tongue
(The agent of the foul inconstancy)
To sit and with' me, as Ascautus did,
When he to madding Dido would unfold
His father's acts, commenc'd in burning Troy?
Am I not witch'd like her, or thou not false like him?
Ah me! I can no more. Die, Margaret,
For Henry weeps that thou dost live so long.
Noise within. Enter WArwick and SALisbury. The Commons press to the door.

WAr. It is reported, mighty sovereign,
That good duke Humphrey traitorously is murder'd
By Suffolk and the cardinal Beaufort's means.
The commons, like an angry hive of bees
That want their leader, scatter up and down,
And care not who they sting in his revenge.
Myself have calmd their spleenful mutiny,
Until they hear the order of his death.
K. Hen. That he is dead, good Warwick, 'tis too true;
But how he died, God knows, not Henry.
Enter his chamber, view his breathless corpse,
And comment then upon his sudden death.
WAr. That I shall do, my liege.—Stay, Salisbury,
With the rude multitude, till I return.

WAr. goes into an inner Room, and SALisbury retires.

K. Hen. O thou that judgest all things, stay my thoughts!
My thoughts that labour to persuade my soul,
Some violent hands were laid on Humphrey's life.
If my suspect be false, forgive me, God,
For judgment only doth belong to thee.
Fain would I go to chafe his pale lips
With twenty thousand kisses. and to rain?
Upon his face an ocean of salt tears,
To tell my love unto his dumb deaf trunk,
And with my fingers feel his hand unfeeling;
But all in vain are these mean obsequies,
And to survey his dead and earthy image,
What were it but to make my sorrow greater?
The Doors of an inner Chamber are thrown open, and GLOSTER is discovered dead in his Bed: WArwick and others standing by it.
WAr. Come hither, gracious sovereign; view this ooly.

K. Hen. That is to see how deep my grave is made;
For with his soul fled all my worldly solace,
And, seeing him, I see my life in death.
WAr. As surely as my soul intends to live
With that dread King, that took our state upon him
To free us from his Father's wrathful curse,
I do believe that violent hands were laid
Upon the life of this thrice-famed duke.

1 watch: in folio. 2 dran: in t. e. WAr. A dreadful oath, sworn with a solemn tongue
What instance gives lord Warwick for his vow?
WAr. See, how the blood is settled in his face
Oft have I seen a timely-parted ghost,
Of ashy semblance, meagre, pale, and bloodless,
Being all descended to the labouring heart;
Who, in the conflict that it holds with death,
Attracts the same for assistance the enemy;
Which with the heart there cools, and never returneth
To blush and benify the cheek again.
But see, his face is black, and full of blood;
His eye-balls farther out than when he liv'd,
Staring full glastly like a strangled man;
His hair up'rd, his nostrils stretch'd with struggling
His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasp'd,
And tugg'd for life, and was by strength subdued.
Look on the sheets his hair, you see, is sticking;
His well-proportion'd beard made rough and rugged,
Like to the summer's corn by tempest lodg'd.
It cannot be but he was murder'd here:
The least of all these signs were probable.
WAr. Why, Warwick, who should do the duke to death?
Myself, and Beaufort, had him in protection,
And we, I hope, sir, are no murderers.
WAr. But both of you were vow'd duke Humphrey's foes,
And you, forsooth, had the good duke to keep:
'T is like, you would not feast him like a friend,
And 'tis well seen he found an enemy.
Q. Mar. Then you, belike, suspect these noblemen
As guilty of duke Humphrey's timeless death.
WAr. Who finds the heifer dead, and bleeding fresh,
And sees fast by a butcher with an axe,
But will suspect 't was he that made the slaughter?
Who finds the partridge in the puttock's nest,
But may imagine how the bird was dead,
Although the kite soar with unbloodied beak?
Even so suspicious is this tragedy.
Q. Mar. Are you the butcher, Suffolk? where's your knife?
Is Beaufort term'd a kite? where are his talons?
WAr. I wear no knife, to slaughter sleeping men:
But here's a vengeful sword, rusted with ease,
That shall be secured in his rancorous heart,
That slanders me with murder's crimson badge.—
Say, if thou dar'st, proud lord of Warwickshire,
That I am faulty in duke Humphrey's death.

[Exeunt Cardinal, Sost., and others
WAr. What dares not Warwick, if false Suffolk dar' him?
Q. Mar. He dares not calm his contumelious spirit
Nor cease to be an arrogant controller,
Though Suffolk dares him twenty thousand times
WAr. Madam, be still, with reverence may I say,
For every word you speak in his behalf
Is slander to your royal dignity.

WAr. Blunt-witted lord, ignoble in demeanour,
If ever lady wrong'd her lord so much,
Thy mother took into her blameful bed
Some stern mututor'd churl, and noble stock
WAr. Was graft with crab-tree slip; whose fruit thou art,
And never of the Nevils' noble race.
WAr. But that the guilt of murder bucklers thee,
And I should rob the deathsmen of his fee,
Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames,
And that my sovereign's presence makes me mild,
I would, false murderous coward, on thy knee
Make thee beg pardon for thy passed speech.
SCENE II.

KING HENRY VI.

471

K. Hen. Go, Salisbury, and tell them all from me, I thank them for their tender loving care, And had I not been 'eit by so by them, Yet did I purpose as they do entreat; For sure, my thoughts do hourly prophecy Mischance unto my state by Suffolk's means: And therefore, by his majesty I swear, Whose far unworthy deputy I am, He shall not breathe infection in this air But three days longer on the queen of death. [Exit Sat.]

Q. Mar. O Henry! let me plead for gentle Suffolk.

K. Hen. Ungentle queen, to call him gentle Suffolk No more, I say: if thou dost plead for him, Thou wilt but add increase unto my wrath. Had I but said, I would have kept my word, But, when I swear, it is irrevocable.— It after three days' space thou be'st found On any ground that I am ruler of, The world shall not be ransom for thy life.— Come, Warwick, come; good Warwick, go with me, I have great matters to impart to thee. [Exit K. Henry. Warwick, Lords, &c.

Q. Mar. Mischance, and sorrow, go along with you! Heart's discontent, and sour affliction, Be playfellow to keep you company. There's two of you; the devil make a third, And threefold vengeance tend upon your steps! Suf. Cease, gentle queen, these excursions, And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave. Q. Mar. Fie, coward woman, and soft-hearted wretch! Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemy? Suf. A plague upon them! wherefore should I curse them? Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's groan, I would invent as bitter-searching terms, As cruel, as harsh, and horrible to hear, Deliver'd strongly through my fixed teeth, With full as many signs of deadly hate, As lean-fac'd Envy in her loathsome cave. My tongue should stumble in mine earnest words; Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint; My hair be fix'd on end, as one distract; Ay, every joint should seem to curse and ban: And even now my burden'd heart would break, Should I not curse them. Poison be their drink! Gall, worse than gall, the daintiest that they taste! Their sweetest shade, a grove of cypress trees! Their chiepest prospect, murdering basilisks! Their softest touch, as sharp as lizard's stings! Their musing, frightful as the serpent's hiss, And boding ereow-sirens to make the concert full! All the foul terrors in dark-seated hell— Q. Mar. Enough, sweet Suffolk: thou torment'st thyself! And these dread curses, like the sun's against glass, Or like an overcharged gun, recoil, And turn the force of them upon thyself. Suf. You hate me ban, and will you bid me leave? Now, by the ground that I am banish'd from, Well could I curse away a winter's night, Though standing naked on a mountain top, Where hating cold would never let grass grow, And think it but a minute spent in sport. Q. Mar. O! let me entreat thee, cease. Give me thy hand,

1 Company. 2 "They do affymerne that this herbe cometh of the seed of some convicted dead men, and also without the death of some strange things, it cannot be drawn out of the earth to man's use. Therefore, they did take some dogge or other strange beast unto the poete thereof with a cord, and digged the earth in compass round about, and in the meantime steeped their own ears for fears of the terri ble shriek and cry of this Mandrake. In which cry it doth not only die itselfe, but the fear thereof killith the dogge or beast which pains it out of the earth."—Bulstrode's "Bulstrode's Ofence against Sickness" folio, 1579; quoted by Reed. 3 smart: in s.
That I may daw it with my mornful tears;
Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place,
To wash away my woeful monuments
O! could this kiss be printed in thy hand,
That thou might'st think upon these by the seal.
Through whom a thousand sighs are breath'd for thee.
So, get thee gone, that I may know my grief;
'T is but surmis'd whilst thou art standing by;
As one that surfeits, thinking on a want.
I will repeal thee, or, be well assur'd,
Adventure to be banished myself;
And banished I am, if but from thee.
Go; speak not to me: even now be gone.—
O! go not yet.—Even thus two friends condemn'd
Embrace, and kiss, and take ten thousand leaves,
Leather a hundred times to part than die.
Yet now farewell; and farewell life with thee.

Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banished.
Once by the king, and three times thrice by thee.
'T is not the land I care for, wert thou thence:
A wilderness is populous enough,
So Suffolk had thy heavenly company;
For where thou art, there is the world itself,
With every several pleasure in the world,
And where thou art not. desolation.
I can no more.—Live thou to joy thy life;
Myself to joy in nought, but that thou livest.

Enter Vaux.
Q. Mar. Whither goes Vaux so fast? what news, I pray thee?

Vaux. To signify unto his majesty,
That cardinal Beaufort is at point of death;
For suddenly a grievous sickness took him,
That makes him gasp, and stare, and catch the air,
Blaspheming God, and cursing men on earth.
Sometime he talks as if duke Humphrey's ghost
Were by his side; sometimes he calls the king,
And whispers to his pillow, as to him,
The secrets of his overcharged soul:
And I am sent to tell his majesty,
That even now he cries aloud for him.

Q. Mar. Go, tell this heavy message to the king.
[Exit Vaux.

Ah me! what is this world? what news are these?
But wherefore grieve I at an hour's poor loss,
Omitting Suffolk's exile, my soul's treasure?
Why only, Suffolk, mourn I not for thee.
And with the southern clouds contend in tears?
Thiers for the earth's increase, mine for my sorrows.
Now, get thee hence: the king, thou know'st, is coming:
If thou be found by me, thou art but dead.

Suf. If I depart from thee, I cannot live;
And in thy sight to die, what were it else,
But like a pleasant slander in thy lap?
Here could I breathe my soul into the air,
As mild and gentle as the cradle-babe,
Dying with mother's dugs between its lips;
Where, from thy sight, I should be raging mad,
And cry out for thee to close up mine eyes,
To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth:

Q. Mar. Away! though parting be a fretful corro de.
It is applied to a deathful wound.
To France, sweet Suffolk: let me hear from thee
For wheresoe'er thou art in this world's globe,
I'll have an Iris that shall find thee out.

Suf. I go.

Q. Mar. And take my heart with thee.
Suf. A jewel, lock'd into the woeful casket
That ever did contain a thing of worth.
Even as a splitted bark, so sunder we:
This way fall I to death.

Q. Mar. This way for me.
[Exeunt, severally.

Enter King Henry, Salisbury, Warwick, and others
The Cardinal in bed: Attendants with him.

K. Hen. How fares my lord? speak, Beaufort, to thy king.

Car. If thou be'st death, I'll give thee England's treasure,
Enough to purchase such another island,
So thou wilt let me live, and feel no pain.

K. Hen. Ah, what a sign it is of evil life,
Where death's approach is seen so terrible!
War. Beaufort, it is thy sovereign speaks to thee.

Car. Bring me unto my trial when you will,
Died he not in his bed? where should he die?
Can I make men live, wher'e they will or no?—
O! torture me no more, I will confess,— Alive again? then show me where he is;
I'll give a thousand pound to look upon him.—
He hath no eyes; the dust hath blinded them.—
Comh down his hair: look! look! it stands upright,
Like time-twigs set to catch my winged soul.—
Give me some drink; and bid the apothecary
Bring the strong poison that I bought of him.

K. Hen. O, thou eternal mover of the heavens,
Look with a gentle eye upon this wretch!
O! beat away the busy meditating fiend,
That lays strong siege unto this wretch's soul,
And from his bosom purge this black despair.

War. See, how the pangs of death do make him grin
Sal. Disturb him not; let him pass peaceably.

K. Hen. Peace to his soul, if 'tis God's good pleasure to Lord cardinal, if thou think'st at heaven's bliss,
Hold up thy hand, make signal of thy hope.—Car. dies
He dies, and makes no sign.—O God, forgive him:
War. So bad a death argues a monstrous life.

K. Hen. Forbear to judge, for we are sinners all—
Close up his eyes, and draw the curtain close,
And let us all to meditation.
[Exeunt.
ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Kent. The Sea-shore near Dover.

Firing heard at Sea. Then enter from a Boot, a Captain, a Master, a Master's-Mate, Walter Whitmore, and others; with them Suffolk, disguised; and other Gentlemen, prisoners.

Cap. The gaudy, blabbing, and mournful day Is crept into the bosom of the sea, And now loud-howlings wolves arouse the jades That drag the tragic melancholy night; Who with their drowsy, slow, and flagging wings Clipt dead men's graves, and from their misty jaws Breathe foul contagious darkness in the air.

Therefore, bring forth the soldiers of our prize; For whilst our pinance anchors in the Downs, Here shall they make their ransom on the sand, Or with their blood stain this disorder'd shore. —Master, this prisoner freely give I thee;— And, thou that art his mine, make boot of this;— The other, [Pointing to Suffolk.] Walter Whitmore, is thy share.

1 Gent. What is my ransom, master? let me know. Most. A thousand crowns, or else lay down your head.

Mate. And so much shall you give, or off goes yours.

Cap. What! think you much to pay two thousand crowns, And bear the name and port of gentlemen?— Cut both the villains' threats!—for die you shall: Can't lives of those which we have lost in fight, Be counterpois'd with such a petty sum? — 1 Gent. I'll give it, sir; and therefore spare my life.

2 Gent. And so will I, and write home for it straight.

Whit. I lost mine eye in laying the prize a board, And, therefore, to revenge it shall thou die;— [To Suf.] And so should these, if I might have my will.

Cap. Be not so rash: take ransom; let him live.

Suf. Look on my George: I am a gentleman.

Rate me at what thou wilt, thou shalt be paid.

Whit. And so am I; my name is Walter Whitmore.

How now! why start'st thou? what, dost death afflict?— Suf. Thy name affrights me, in whose sound is death. A cunning man did calculate my birth, And told me that by water I should die: Yet let not this make thee be bloody minded; Thy name is Gaultier, being rightly sound'd.

Whit. Gaultier, or Walter, which it is, I care not; Never yet did base dishonour blur our name, But with our sword we wip'd away the blot: Therefore, when merchant-like I sell revenge, Broke be my sword, my arms torn and defac'd, And I proclaim'd a coward through the world! [Leys hold on Suffolk.

Suf. Stay, Whitmore: for thy prisoner is a prince, The duke of Suffolk, William de la Poole.

Whit. The duke of Suffolk mufled up in rags!

Suf. Ay, but these rags are no part of the duke: Jove sometime went disguised, and why not? *

Cap. But Jove was never slain, as thou shalt be. Suf. Obscure and lowly swain, king Henry's blood, The honourable blood of Lancaster, Must not be shed by such a jaded grooms.

Hast thou not kiss'd thy hand, and held my stirrup?

Bare-headed plodded by my foot-cloth mule,
And thought thee happy when I shook my head? How often hast thou waited at my cup,
Fed from my trencher, kneel'd down at the board,
When I have feasted with queen Margaret?
Remember it, and let it make thee crest-fall'n;
Ay, and allay this thy abortive pride.
How in our voiding lobby hast thou stood,
And duly waited for my coming forth.
This hand of mine hath writh in thy behalf,
And therefore shall it charm thy riotous tongue.

Whit. Speak, captain, shall I stab the foul-tong'd slave?

Cap. First let my words stab him, as he hath me.

Suf. Base slave, thy words are blunt, and so art thou.

Cap. Convey him hence, and on our long boat's side Strike off his head.

Suf. Thou dar'st not for thy own.

Cap. Yes, Poole.

Suf. Poole?

Cap. Poole, Sir Poole, lord?

Ay, kennel, puddle, sink; whose filth and dirt Troubles the silver spring where England drinks.

Now, will I dam up this thy yawning mouth,
For swallowing the treasure of the realm:
Thy lips, that kiss'd the queen, shall sweep the ground;
And thou, that smil'st at good duke Humphrey's death,
Against the senseless winds shall grin in vain,
Who in contempt shall kiss at thee again.

And wedded be thou to the bags of hell,
For daring to affy a mighty lord

Unto the daughter of a worthless king,
Having neither subject, wealth, nor diadem
By devilish policy art thou grown great,
And, like ambitious Sylla, overgo'd With gobbets of thy mother's bleeding heart.

By thee Anjou and Maine were sold to France:
The false revolting Normans thorough thee
Disdain to call us lord; and Picardy
Hath slain their governors, surpris'd our forts,
And sent the ragged soldiers wounded home.
The princely Warwick, and the Nevils all,
Whose dreadful swords were never drawn in vain,
As hating thee, are rising up in arms:

And now the house of York—thrust from the crown,
By shameful murder of a guiltless king,
And lofty, proud, encroaching tyranny,—
Bums with revenging fire; whose hopeful colours
Advance our half-fac'd sun, striving to shine; Under the which is writ—Invitis nubibus.
The commons, here in Kent, are up in arms;
And to conclude, reproach, and beggary,
Are crept into the palace of our king,
And all by thee.—Away!—Convey him hence

Suf. O, that I were a god, to shoot forth thunder
Upon these paltry, servile, abrupt drudges!
Small things make base men proud: this villain, here,
Being captain of a pinance, threatens more
Than Bargulus the strong Illyrian pirate.

Drones suck not eagles' blood, but rob bee-hives.
It is impossible, that I should die
By such a lowly vassal as thyself.
Thy words move rage, and not remorse, in me:

1 Embrace. * The: in f. o. * This line, not in the folio, is from the old play of the "Contention." 4 the forlorn swan: in f. o. * These words and the following Poole, are from the "Contention." 4 The device of Edward III. "the rays of the sun dispersing themselves out of a cloud." —Camden. 7 Bargulus, Illyrian late.-Ciceronis Officin. Lib. III., c. ii.
SECOND PART OF

Geo. Then is sin struck down like an ox and iniquity's throat cut like a calf.

John. And Smith, the weaver.

Geo. Argo, their thread of life is spun.

John. Come, come; let's fall in with them.

Drum. Enter Cade, Dick the Butcher, Smith the Weaver, and others in great number.

Cade. We John Cade, so termed of our supposed father.

Dick. Or rather, of stealing a caddie's of herriages.

Cade. — For our enemies shall fall before us, inspired with the spirit of putting down kings and princes.

—Command silence.

Dick. Silence!

Cade. My father was a Mortimer.

Dick. He was an honest man and a good bricklayer.

Cade. My mother a Plantagenet.

Dick. I knew her well; she was a midwife.

Cade. My wife descended of the Lacies.

Dick. She was, indeed, a pedlar's daughter, and sold many laces.

Cade. But, now of late, not able to travel with her forced pack, she washes books here at home.

Cade. Therefore am I of an honourable house.

Dick. Ay, by my faith, the field is honourable, and there was he born under a hedge; for his father had never a house, but the cage.

Cade. Valiant I am.

Smith. 'A must needs, for beggary is valiant.

Cade. I am able to endure much.

Dick. No question of that, for I have seen him whipped three market days together.

Cade. I fear neither sword nor fire.

Smith. He need not fear the sword, for his coat is of proof.

Dick. But, methinks, he should stand in fear of fire, being burnt ' t' hand for stealing of sheep.

Cade. Be brave then; for your captain is brave, and rows reformation. There shall be in England seven half-penny loaves sold for a penny: the three-hooped pot shall have ten hoops: and I will make it feynion, to drink small beer. All the realm shall be in common, and in Cheapside shall my palfrey go to grass. And, when I am king, (as king I will be)—

All. God save your majesty!

Cade. I thank you, good people.—I ere shall be no money: all shall eat and drink on my score; and I will apparel them all in one livery, that they may agree like brothers, and worship me if your lord.

Dick. The first thing we do, let 's kill all the lawyers.

Cade. Nay, that I mean to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment? that parchment, being scribbled o'er, should mudo a man? Some say, the bee stings; but I say, 't is the bee's wax, for I did but sell once to a thing, and I was never mine own man since. How now! who's there?

Enter some, bringing in the Clerk of Chatham.

Smith. The clerk of Chatham: he can write and read, and cast accompt.

Cade. O monstrous!

Smith. We took him setting of 'boys' copies.

Cade. Here's a villain!

Smith. If 't as a book in his pocket, with red letters in 't

Cade. Nay then, he is a conjurer.

Dick. Nay, he can make obligances, and write court hand.
KING.

Tell me, sirrah, I must examine thee: what is thy name?

Clerk. Emmanuel.

Dick. They use to write it on the top of letters. — 'T will go hard with you.

Cade. Let me alone. — Dost thou use to write thy name, or hast thou a mark to thyself, like an honest plain-dealing man?

Clerk. Sir, I thank God, I have been so well brought up that I can write my name.

All. He hath confessed: away with him! he's a villain, and a traitor.

Cade. Away with him, I say! hang him with his pen and inkhorn about his neck.

[Exeunt some with the Clerk.

Enter Michael.

Mich. Where's our general?

Cade. Here I am, thou particular fellow.

Mich. Fly, fly, fly! sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hand by, with the king's forces.

Cade. Stand, villain, stand, or I'll fell thee down.

He shall be encountered with a man as good as himself: he is but a knight, is 'a.

Mich. No.

Cade. To equal him, I will make myself a knight presently. [Kneels.] — Rise up sir John Mortimer.

[Recess.1 Now have at him.

Enter Sir Humphrey Stafford, and William his Brother, with Drum and Forces.

Staff. Rebellious hinds, the fifth and scum of Kent, Mark'd for the gallows, lay your weapons down:

Home to your cottages, forsake this grom.

The king is merciful, if you revolt.

W. Staff. But angry, wrathful, and inclin'd to blood.

If you go forward: therefore yield, or die.

Cade. As for these silken-coated slaves, I pass not; it is to you, good people, that I speak.

O'er whom in time to come I hope to reign;

For I am rightful heir unto the crown.

Staff. Villain! thy father was a plasterer;

And thou thyself a sherman, art thou not?

Cade. And Adam was a gardener.

W. Staff. And what of that?

Cade. Marry, this: — Edmund Mortimer, earl of March.

Married the duke of Clarence's daughter, did he not?

Staff. Ay, sir.

Cade. By her he had two children at one birth.

W. Staff. That's false.

Staff. Ay, there's the question; but, I say, 'tis true.

The elder of them, being put to nurse,

Was by a beggar-woman stolen away;

And, ignorant of his birth and parentage,

Became a bricklayer when he came to age.

His son am I: deny it, if you can.

Dick. Nay, 'tis too true; therefore, he shall be king.

Smit. Sir, he made a chimney in my father's house,

And the bricks are alive at this day to testify it; therefore, deny it not.

Staff. And will you credit this base drudge's words,

That speaks he knows not what?

All. Ay, marry, will we; therefore, get ye gone.

W. Staff. Jack Cade, the duke of York hath taught you this.

Cade. He lies, for I invented it myself. [Aside.] —

Go to, sirrah; tell the king from me, that for his father's sake, Henry the fifth, in whose time boys went to span-couter for French crowns, I am content he shall reign; but I'll be protector over him.

Dick. And, furthermore, we'll have the lord Say's head, for selling the dukedom of Maine.

Cade. And good reason: for thereby is England naimed, and fain to go with a staff, but that my puissance holds it up. Fellow kings. I tell you that that lord Say hath gilded the commonwealth, and made it an eunuch; and more than that, he can speak French and therefore he is a traitor.

Staff. O, gross and miserable ignorance!

Cade. Nay, answer, if you can: the Frenchmen are our enemies: go to, then, I ask but this: can he that speaks with the tongue of an enemy be a good counsellor, or no?

All. No, no: and therefore we'll have his head.

W. Staff. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail,

Assail them with the army of the king.

Staff. Herald, away; and, throughout every town,

Proclaim them traitors that are up with Cade,

That those which fly before the battle ends,

May, even in their wives' and children's night,

Be hang'd up for example at their doors. — All you, that be the king's friends, follow me.

[Exeunt the two Staffords and Fores.

Cade. And you, that love the commons, follow me. —

Now show yourselves men; 'tis for liberty.

We will not leave one lord, one gentleman:

Spare none but such as go in clouted shoon,

For they are thrifti honest men, and such

As would (but that they dare not) take our parts.

Dick. They are all in order, and march toward us.

Cade. But then are we in order, when we are most out of order. Come: March! forward! [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — Another Part of Blackheath.

Alarums. The two Parties enter, and fight, and both the Staffords are slain.

Cade. Where's Dick, the butcher of Ashford?

Dick. Here, sir.

Cade. They fell before thee like sheep and oxen, and thou behavest thyself as if thou hadst been in thine own slaughter-house: therefore, thus will I reward thee. — The Lent shall be as long again as it is; and thou shalt have a license to kill for a hundred years, lacking one.

Dick. I desire no more.

Cade. And, to speak the truth, thou deservest no less. This monument of the victory will I bear; [Putting on Stafford's armour,] and the bodies shall be dragged at my horses' heels, till I do come to London, where we will have the mayor's sword borne before us.

Dick. If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the jails, and let cut the prisoners.

Cade. Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come; let's march towards London. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, reading a Sephilation: the Duke of Buckingham, and Lord Say with him: at a distance, Queen Margaret mourning over Suffolk's Head.

Q. Mar. Oft have I heard that grief softens the mind,

[Aside.1 And makes it fearful and degenerate;

Think, therefore, on revenge, and cease to weep.

But who can cease to weep, and look on this?

Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast;

But where's the body that I should embrace?

1 Not in f. e 2 Care 3 Butchers were only allowed to kill in Lent, by special license 4 Not in f. e
SCENE IV.—The Same.—Wiltshire.

Buck. What answer makes your grace to the rebels' supplication?

K. Hen. I'll send some holy bishop to entreat; for God forbid, so many simple souls should perish by the sword! And I myself, rather than bloody war shall cut them short, Will parley with Jack Cade their general.—But stay, I'll read it over once again.

Q. Mar. Ah, barbarous villains! hath this lovely face Ru'd like a wandering planet over me, And could it not enforce them to relent. That were unworthy to behold the same?

K. Hen. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have thy head. Say, Ay, but I hope, your highness shall have his. K. Hen. How now, madam! Lamenting still, and mourning Suffolk's death? I fear me, love, if that I had been dead, Thou wouldest not have mourn'd so much for me. Q. Mar. No, my love; I should not mourn, but die for thee.

K. Hen. How now! what news? why com'st thou in such haste?

Mess. The rebels are in Southwark: fly, my lord! Jack Cade proclaims himself lord Mortimer, Descended from the duke of Clarence's house, And calls your grace usurper openly. And vows to crown himself in Westminster. His army is a ragged multitude Of hinds and peasants, rude and merciless: Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother's death Hath given them heart and courage to proceed. All scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen, They call false caterpillars, and intend their death.

K. Hen. O graceless men! they know not what they do.

Buck. My gracious lord, retire to Kenilworth,
Until a power be rais'd to put them down.

Q. Mar. Ah! were the duke of Suffolk now alive, These Kentish rebels would be soon appeas'd.

K. Hen. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee, Therefore away with us to Kenilworth. Say. So might your grace's person be in danger. The sight of me is odious in their eyes; And therefore in this city will I stay, And live alone as secret as I may.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. Jack Cade hath gott'n London-bridge: the Fly and forsake their houses. The rascal people, thirsting after prey, Join with the traitor: and they jointly swear, To spoil the city, and your royal court.

Buck. Then linger not, my lord: away, take horse.

K. Hen. Come, Margaret: God, our hope, will succour us.

Q. Mar. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is deceas'd.

K. Hen. Farewell, my lord: [To Lord Say.] trust not the Kentish rebels.

Buck. Trust no body, for fear you be betray'd.

Say. The trust I have is in mine innocenc'e, And therefore am I bold and resolute. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The Same. The Tower.
Enter Lord Scales, and others, walking on the Walls. Then enter certain Citizens, below.

Scales. How now! is Jack Cade slain?

1 Cit. No, my lord, nor likely to be slain; for they have won the bridge, killing all those that withstood them. The lord mayor craves aid of your honour: from the Tower, to defend the city from the rebels.

Scales. Such aid as I can spare, you shall command. But I am troubled here with them myself: The rebels have assay'd to win the Tower. But get you to Smithfield, and gather head. And hither I will send you Matthew Gough. Fight for your king, your country, and your lives; And so farewell: rebellion never thrives. [Exit]

SCENE VI.—The Same. Cannon Street.
Enter Jack Cade, and his Followers. He strikes his Staff on London-stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer lord of this city. And here, sitting upon London-stone, I charge and command, that, of the city's cost, the pissing-conduit run nothing but claret wine this first year of our reign. And now, henceforward, it shall be treason for any that calls me other than lord Mortimer.

Enter a Soldier, running.

Sold. Jack Cade! Jack Cade!

Cade. Knock him down there. [They kill him. Smith. If this fellow be wise, he'll never call you Jack Cade more: I think, he hath a very fair warning.

Dick. My lord, there's an army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come, then, let's go fight with them. But, first, go and set London-bridge on fire: and, if you can, burn down the Tower too. Come, let's away. [Exit.]

SCENE VII.—The Same. Smithfield.

Alarum. Enter, on one side, Cade and his Company: on the other, the Citizens, and the King's Forces, headed by Matthew Gough. They fight; the Citizens are routed, and Matthew Gough is slain.

Cade. So, sirs.—Now go some and pull down the Savoy; others to the imps of court: down with them all.

Dick. I have a suit unto your lordship.

Cade. Be it a lordship, thou shalt have it for that word.

Dick. Only, that the laws of England may come out of your mouth.

John. Mass, 't will be sore law, then: for he was thrust in the mouth with a spear, and 't is not whole yet.

Cade. I have thought upon it; it shall be so. Away, burn all the records of the realm: my mouth shall be the parliament of England.

John. Then we are like to have biting statutes, unless his teeth be pulled out.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, a prize, a prize! here's the lord Say which sold the towns in France; he that made us pay one and twenty fifteen, and one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy.

Cade. Well, he shall be beheaded for it ten times.—Ah, thou say, thou serge, nay, thou buckram lord! now art thou within point-blank of our jurisdiction; what canst thou answer to my majesty, for giving up... of Normandy unto monsieur Basimeau, the dauphin of France? Be it known unto thee by these presents, even the presence of Lord Mortimer, that I am the besom that must sweep the court clean of such filth as thou art. Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm in erecting a grammar-school: and whereas, before, our fore-fathers had no other books but the score and the tally, thou hast caused printing to be used; and, contrary to the king, his crown, and dignity, thou hast built a paper-mill. It will be proved to thy face, that thou hast men about thee, that usually talk of a noun, and a verb, and such abominable words as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed justices of peace, to call poor men before them about matters they were not able to answer:
moreover, thou hast put them in prison: and because they could not read, thou hast hanged them; when, indeed, only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou dost ride in a foot-cloth, dost thou not?
Say. What of that?
Cade. Marry, thou oughtest not to let thy horse wear a cloak, when honest men than go in their hoods and doublets.
Dick. And work in their shirt too; as myself, for example, that am a butcher.
Say. You men of Kent,—
Dick. What say you of Kent?
Say. Nothing but this: "it is bona terra, mala gens."
Cade. Away with him! away with him! he speaks Latin.
Say. Hear me but speak, and bear me where you will.
Kent. In the commentaries Caesar writ,
Is term'd the civil'st place of all this isle;
Sweet is the country, because full of riches;
The people liberal, valiant, active, worthy,
Which makes me hope you are not void of pity.
I sold not Maine, I lost not Normandy;
Yet, to recover them, would lose my life.
Justice with favour have I always done;
Prayers and tears have mov'd me, gifts could never.
When have I sought exacted at your hands.
Kent, to maintain the king, the realm, and you?
Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned clerks,
Because my book preferr'd me to the king:
And, seeing ignorance is the curse of God,
Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven,
Unless you be possess'd with devilish spirits,
You cannot but forbear to murder me.
This tongue hath parley'd unto foreign kings
For your behoof.—
Cade. Tut! when struck'st thou one blow in the field?
Say. Great men have reaching hands: oft have I struck:
Those that I never saw, and struck them dead.
Geo. O monstrous coward! what, to come behind folks?
Say. These cheeks are pale for watching for your Good.
Cade. Give him a box o' the ear, and that will make 'em red again.
Say. Long sitting, to determine poor men's causes,
Hath made me full of sickness and diseases.
Cade. Ye shall have a hempen cauldron, then, and the help4 of hatchet.
Dick. Why dost thou quiver, man?
Say. The palsy, and not fear, provoketh me.
Cade. Nay, he nods at us; as who should say, I'll be even with you. I'll see if his head will stand steadfast on a pole, or no. Take him away, and behead him.
Say. Tell me, wherein have I offended most?
Have I affected wealth, or honour; speak?
Are my chests fill'd up with extorted gold?
Is my apparel sumptuous to behold?
Whom have I injur'd, that ye seek my death?
These hands are free from guiltless blood-shedding,
This breast from harbouring foul deceitful thoughts.
O, let me live.
Cade. I feel remorse in myself with his words; but I'll bridle it; he shall die, an it be but for pleading so well for his life.—Away with him! he has a familiar under his tongue: he speaks not of God's name. Go, take him away, I say, and strike off his head presently;
and then break into his son-in-law's house, sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both upon two poles hither.
All. It shall be done.
Say. Ah, countrymen! if when you make your prayers,
God shall be so obdurate as yourselves,
How would it fare with your departed souls?
And therefore yet relent, and save my life.
Cade. Away with him, and do as I command ye.
[Exeunt some with Lord Say.
The proudest peer in the realm shall not wear a head on his shoulders, unless he pay me tribute: there shall not a maid be married, but she shall pay to me her maidenhead, ere they have it. Men shall hold of me in capite; and we charge and command, that their wives be as free as heart can wish, or tongue can tell.
Dick. My lord, when shall we go to Cheapside, and take up commodities upon our bills?4
Cade. Marry, presently.
All. O brave !
Re-enter Rebels, with the Heads of Lord Say and his Son-in-law.
Cade. But is not this braver?—Let them kiss one other, for they loved well, when they were alive.
[Jest them together.] Now part them again, lest they consult about the giving up of some more towns in France. Soldiers, defer the spoil of the city until night; for with these borne before us, instead of maces, will we ride through the streets; and at every corner have them kiss.—Away! [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—Southwark.

ALARUM. Enter Cade, and all his Rabblement.
Cade. Up Fish-street! down Saint Magnus' corner! kill and knock down! throw them into Thames!—[A Parley sounded, then a Retreat.] What noise is this I hear? Dare any be so bold to sound retreat or parley, when I command them kill?
Enter Buckingham, and Old Clifford, with Forces.
Buck. Ay, here they be that dare, and will disturb thee:
Know, Cade, we come ambassadors from the king
Unto the commons whom thou hast misled;
And here pronounce free pardon to them all,
That will forsake thee, and go home in peace.
Clif. What say ye, countrymen? will ye repent?4
And yield to mercy, whilst it is offer'd you,
Or let a rebel lead you to your deaths?
Who loves the king, and will embrace his pardon,
Fling up his cap, and say—God save his majesty!4
Who hateth him, and honours not his father,
Henry the fifth, that made all France to quake,
Shake the his weapon at us, and pass by.

All. God save the king! God save the king!

Cade. What! Buckingham, and Clifford, are ye so brave? — And you, base peasants, do ye believe him? will you needs be hanged with your pardons about your necks? Hath my sword therefore broke through London Gates, that you should leave me at the White Hart in Southwark? I thought ye would never have given out these arms, till you had recovered your ancient freedom; but you are all recreants, and darts, and delight to live in slavery to the nobility. Let them break your backs with burdens, take your houses over your heads, ravish your wives and daughters before your faces. For me, — I will make shift for one: — and so — God's curse 'light upon you all!

All. We'll follow Cade: we'll follow Cade.

Cliff. Is Cade the son of Henry the fifth,
That thus you do exclaim, you'll go with him?
Will he conduct you through the heart of France,
And make the meanest of you earls and dukes?
Alas, he hath no home, no place to fly to;
Nor knows he how to live, but by the spoil,
Unless by robbing of your friends, and us.
Wer't not a shame, that whilst you live at jar,
The fearful French, whom you late vanquished.
Should make a start o'er seas, and vanquish you?
Methinks, already, in this civil broil,
I see them lording it in London streets,
Crying — Villagcois! unto all they meet.
Better ten thousand base-born Cades miscarry,
Than you should stoop unto a Frenchman's mercy.
To France, to France! and get what you have lost:
Spare England, for it is your native coast.
Henry hath money, you are strong and manly:
God on our side, doubt not of victory.

All. A Clifford! a Clifford! we'll follow the king, and Clifford.

Cade. Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro, as this multitude? the name of Henry the fifth hales them to an hundred mischiefs, and makes them leave me desolate. I see them lay their heads together, to surprize me: my sword, make way for me, for here is no staying. — In despite of the devils and hell, have through the very midst of you; and heavens and honour be witness, that no want of resolution in me, but only my followers' base and ignominious reasons, makes me betake me to my heels.

Buck. What! is he fled? go some, and follow him;
And he, that brings his head unto the king,
Shall have a thousand crowns for his reward.

[Exeunt some of them.

Follow me, soldiers: we'll devise a mean
To reconcile you all unto the king.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—Kenilworth Castle.

Sound trumpets. Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, and Somerset, on the Terrace of the Castle.

K. Hen. Was ever king that joy'd an earthly throne,
And could command no more content than I?
No sooner was I crept out of my cradle
But I was made a king, at nine months old:
Was never subject long'd to be a king,
As I do long and wish to be a subject.

Enter Buckingham and Clifford.

Buck. Health, and glad tidings, to your majesty!
K. Hen. Why, Buckingham, is the traitor, Cade, surpris'd?

Or is he but retir'd to make him strong?

Enter, below, a number of Cade's Followers, with Halter about their Necks.

Cliff. He's fled, my lord, and all his powers do yield,
And humbly thus, with halters on their necks,
Expect your highness' doom, of life, or death

K. Hen. Then, heaven, set one thy everlasting gates
To entertain my vows of thanks and praise! —

Soldiers, this day have you redeem'd your lives,
And shou'd how well you love your prince and country
Continue still in this so good a mind,
And Henry, though he be infortune,
Assure yourselves, will never be unkind:
And so, with thanks, and pardon to you all,
I do dismiss you to your several countries.

All. God save the king! God save the king!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Please it your grace to be advertisi'd,
The duke of York is newly come from Ireland,
And with a plentiful, and united power
Of Gallowglassers, and stout Irish kerns,
Is marching hitherward in proud array;
And still proclaimed, as he comes along,
His arms are only to remove from thee
The duke of Somerset, whom he terms a traitor.

K. Hen. Thus stands my state; 'twixt Cade and York
distress'd,
Like to a ship, that, having scap'd a tempest,
Is straightway calm'd, and boarded with a pirate.

But now is Cade driven back, his men dispers'd,
And now is York in arms to second him. —
I pray thee, Buckingham, then go and meet him,
And ask him, what's the reason of these arms?
Tell him, I'll send duke Edmund to the tower: —
And, Somerset, we will commit thee thither,
Until his army be dismissed from him.

Som. My lord, I'll yield myself to prison willingly,
Or unto death to do my country good.

K. Hen. In any case, be not too rough in terms.
For he is fierce, and cannot brook hard language.

Buck. I will, my lord; and doubt not so to deal.
As all things shall redound unto your good.

K. Hen. Come, wife, let's in, and learn to govern better;
For yet may England curse my wretched reign.

[Exeunt.

SCENE X.—Kent. Iden's Garden.

Enter Cade.

Cade. Pie on ambition! fie on myself: that have a sword, and yet am ready to famish! These five days have I hid me in these woods, and durst not peep out, for all the country is laid for me; but now am I so hungry, that if I might have a lease of my life for a thousand years, I could stay no longer. Wherefore, o'er a brick-wall have I climbed, into this garden, to see if I can eat grass, or pick a sallet another while, which is not amiss to cool a man's stomach this hot weather.

And, I think, this word sallet was born to do me good: for, many a time, but for a sallet, my brain-pan had been eatt with a brown bill; and, many a time, when I have been dry and bravely marching, it hath served me instead of a quart-pot to drink in; and now the word sallet must serve me to feed on.

Enter Iden, with Servants.

Iden. Lord! who would 've turmoiled in the court
And may enjoy such quiet walks as these?

This small inheritance, my father left me,
Contenteth me, and 's worth a monarchy.
I seek not to wax great by others' waning,
Or gather wealth I care not with what envy;
Sufficeth that I have maintained my state,
And sends the poor well pleased from my gate.

Cade. Here's the lord of the soil come to seize me for a strait, for entering his fence-simple without leave.
A villain! thou wilt betray me, and get a thousand crowns of the king by carrying my head to him; but I'll make thee eat iron like an ostrich, and swallow my sword like a great pin, ere thou and I part.

Iden. Why, rude companion, whatsoe'er thou be,
I know thee not; why then should I betray thee?
Is't not enough, to break into my garden,
And like a thief to come to rob my grounds;
Climbing my walls in spite of me, the owner,
But thou wilt betray me with these saucy terms?

Cade. Brave thee? ay, by the best blood that ever was broached, and beard thee too. Look on me well:
I have eaten no meat these five days; yet, come thou and thy fine men, and if I do not leave you all as dead as a door nail, I pray God I may never eat grass more.

Iden. Nay, it shall never be said, while England stands,
That Alexander Iden, squire of Kent,
Took odds to combat a poor famish'd man.
Oppose thy steadfast-gazing eyes to mine;
See if thou canst outface me with thy looks.
Set limb to limb, and thou art far the lesser;
Thy hand is but a finger to my fist;
Thy leg a stick, compared with this truncheon.
My foot shall fight with all the strength thou hast;
And if mine arm be heaved in the air,
Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth.
As for words, whose greatness answers words,
Let this my sword report what speech forsears.

\[ACT V.\]

SCENE I.—The Same. The Fields between Dartford and Blackheath.

The King's Camp on one side: on the other, enter York attended, with Drum and Colours; his Irish Forces
at some distance.

York. From Ireland thus comes York, to claim his right,
And pluck the crown from feeble Henry's head:
King bells, aloud: burn, bonfires, clear and bright,
To entertain great England's lawful king.
Ah, sancta majestas! who would not buy thee dear?
Let them obey, that know not how to rule:
This hand was made to handle nought but gold:
I cannot give due action to my words,
Except a sword, or sceptre, balance it.
A sceptre shall it have, have I a soul,
On which I'll toss the flower-de-luce of France.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Whom have we here? Buckingham, to disturb me?
The king hath sent him, sure: I must dissemble.

Buck. York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee
well.

York. Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept thy greeting.
Art thou a messenger, or come of pleasure?

Buck. A messenger from Henry, our dread liege;
To know the reason of these arms in peace;
Or why, thou—being a subject as I am,—

Cade. By my valour, the most complete champion that ever I heard.—Steel, if thou turn the edge, or cut not out the burly-boned clown in chimes of beef ere thou sleep in thy sheath, I beseech Jove on my knees, thou mayest be turned to hobnails. \[They fight. Cade falls]\ O! I am slain. Famine, and no other, hath slain me: let ten thousand devils come against me, and give me but the ten meals I have lost, and I'd defy them all. Wither, garden; and be henceforth a burying-place to all that do dwell in this house, because the unconquered soul of Cade is fled.

Iden. Is't Cade that I have slain, that monstrous traitor?

Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed,
And hang thee o'er my tomb, when I am dead:
Ne'er shall this blood be wiped from thy point,
But thou shalt wear it as a herald's coat,
To emblaze the honour that thy master got.

Cade. Iden, farewell; and be proud of thy victory.
Tell Kent from me, she hath lost her best man, and exhort all the world to be cowards: for I, that never feared any, am vanquished by famine, not by valor.

Iden. How much thou wrong'st me, heaven be my judge.

Die, damned wretch, the curse of her that bare thee!
And as I thrust thy body with my sword,
So wish I, I might thrust thy soul to hell.
Hence will I drag thee headlong by the heels
Unto a dunghill, which shall be thy grave.
And there cut off thy most ungracious head;
Which I will bear in triumph to the king,
Leaving thy trunk for crowns to feed upon.

[Exit, dragging out the Body.

Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn,
Should'st raise so great a power without his leave,
Or dare to bring thy force so near the court.

York. Searce can I speak, my choler is so great

\[As he

O! I could hew up rocks, and fight with flint,
I am so angry at these abject terms;
And now, like Ajax Telamonius,
On sheep or oxen could I spend my fury.
I am far better born than is the king,
More like a king, more kingly in my thoughts;
But I must make fair weather yet a while,
Till Henry be more weak, and I more strong.—

Buckingham, I pray thee pardon me;
That I have given no answer all this while:
My mind was troubled with deep melancholy.
The cause why I have brought this army hither,
Is to remove proud Somerset from the king,
Seditious to his grace, and to the state.

Buck. That is too much presumption on thy part;
But if thy arms be to no other end,
The king hath yielded unto thy demand:

The duke of Somerset is in the Tower.

York. Upon thine honour, is he prisoner?

Buck. Upon mine honour, he is prisoner.

York. Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my powers.

Soldiers, I thank you all; disperse yourselves;
Meet me to-morrow in Saint George's field,
You shall have pay, and every thing you wish.
And let my sovereign, virtuous Henry,
Command my eldest son,—nay, all my sons,
As pledges of my fealty and love;
I'll send them all, as willing as I live:
Lands, goods, horse, armours, any thing I have
Is his to use, so Somerset may die.

_Buck._ York, I commend this kind submission:
We twain will go into his highness' tent.

_Enter King Henry attended._

_K. Hen._ Buckingham, doth York intend no harm to us.
That thus he marcheth with thee arm in arm?
_York._ In all submission and humility.
York doth present himself unto your highness.

_K. Hen._ Then what intend these forces thou dost bring?
_York._ To heave the traitor Somerset from hence;
And fight against that monstrous rebel, Cade,
Who since I heard to be discomfited.

_Enter Iden, with Cade's Head._

_Iden._ If one so rude, and of so mean condition,
May pass into the presence of a king,
Lo! I present your grace a traitor's head,
The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew.

_K. Hen._ The head of Cade?—Great God, how just art thou!—
O! let me view his visage being dead,
That living wrought me such exceeding trouble.
Tell me, my friend, art thou the man that slew him?
_Iden._ I was, an't like your majesty.

_K. Hen._ How art thou call'd, and what is thy degree?
_Iden._ Alexander Iden, that's my name;
A poor esquire of Kent, that loves his king.

_Buck._ So please it you, my lord, 't were not amiss,
He were created knight for his good service.

_K. Hen._ Iden, kneel down: [He kneels.] Rise up a knight.
We give thee for reward a thousand marks;
And will, that thou henceforth attend on us.
_Iden._ May I den live to merit such a bounty, [Rising:]
And never live but true unto his liege.

_K. Hen._ See, Buckingham! Somerset comes with the queen:
Go, bid her hide him quickly from the duke.

_Enter Queen Margaret and Somerset._

_Q. Mar._ For thousand Yorks he shall not hide his head,
But boldly stand, and front him to his face.

_York._ How now! is Somerset at liberty?

_Then._ York, unlock thy long-imprison'd thoughts,
And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart.
Shall I endure the sight of Somerset?—
False king, why hast thou broken faith with me,
Knowing how hardly I can brook abuse?
King did I call thee? no, thou art not king:
Not fit to govern and rule multitudes,
Which dar'st not, no, nor canst not rule a traitor.
That head of thine doth not become a crown;
Thy hand is made to grasp a palmer's staff,
And not to grace an awful princely sceptre.
That gold must round enwrap these brows of mine;
Whose smile and frown, like to Achilles' spear,
Is able with the change to kill and cure.
Here is a hand to hold a sceptre up,
And with the same to act controlling laws.
Give place: by heaven, thou shalt rule no more
O'er him whom heaven created for thy ruler.

_Som._ O monstrous traitor!—I arrest thee, York,
Of capital treason 'gainst the king and crown.
Obey, audacious traitor: kneel for grace.

_York._ Wouldst thou have me kneel? first let me ask of these,*
If they can brook I bow a knee to man?
Sirrah, call in my sons to be my bail:

_[Exit an Attendant._

_I know, ere they will have me go to ward.
They'll pawn their swords for my enfranchisement.

_Q. Mar._ Call hither Clifford; bid him come again,
To say, if that the bastard boys of York
Shall be the surety for their traitor father.
_York._ O blood-bespotted Neapolitan,
Outcast of Naples, England's bloody scourge,
The sons of York, thy better's in their birth,
Shall be their father's bail; and bane to those
That for my surety will refuse the boys.

_Enter Edward and Richard Plantagenet, with Forces, at one side; at the other, with Forces also, old Clifford and his Son._

_See where they come: I'll warrant they'll make it good._

_Q. Mar._ And here comes Clifford, to deny their bail.

_Cclf._ Health and all happiness to my lord the king!

_[Kneels._

_York._ I thank thee, Clifford: say, what news with thee?

_Nay, do not fright us with an angry look:
We are thy sovereign, Clifford: kneel again;
For thy mistaking so, we pardon thee.

_Cclf._ This is my king, York: I do not mistake;
But thou mistak'st me much, to think I do.—
To bedlam with him! is the man grown mad?

_K. Hen._ Ay, Clifford; a bedlam and ambitious humour
Makes him oppose himself against his king.

_Cclf._ He is a traitor: let him to the Tower,
And chop away that factions' pate of his.

_Q. Mar._ He is arrested, but will not obey;
His sons, he says, shall give their words for him.

_York._ Will you not, sons?

_Educ._ Ay, noble father, if our words will serve.

_Rich._ And if words will not, then our weapons shall

_Cclf._ Why, what a brood of traitors have we here!

_York._ Look in a glass, and call thy image so;
I am thy king, and thou a false-heart traitor.—

Call hither to the stake my two brave bears,
That with the very shaking of their chains
They may astonish these fell-looking curs:
Bid Salisbury, and Warwick, come to me.

_Drum._ Enter Warwick and Salisbury, with Forces

_Cclf._ Are these thy bears? we'll bait thy bears to death,
And mamele the bear-ward in their chains,
If thou dar'st bring them to the baiting-place.

_Rich._ Oft have I seen a hot o'erweaming cur
Run back and bite, because he was witheld;
Who, having suffer'd with the bear's fell paw,
Hath clapp'd his held between his legs, and cry'd:
And such a piece of service will you do,
If you oppose yourselves to match lord Warwick.

_Cclf._ Hence, hence, heap of wrathful indigested lump,
As crooked in thy manners as thy shape!

_York._ Nay, we shall hunt you thoroughly anon.
_Cclf._ Take heed, lest by your heat you burn yourselves.

_K. Hen._ Why, Warwick, hath thy knee forgot to bow?—

_Old Salisbury._—shame to thy silver hair,
York. The deadly-handed Clifford slew my steed;
But match to match I have encounter'd him,
And made a prey for carrion kites and crows
Even of the bony beast he lov'd so well.

Enter Clifford.

War. Of one or both of us the time is come.
York. Hold, Warwick! seek thee out some other chace,
For I myself must hunt this deer to death.

War. Then, nobly, York: 'tis for a crown thou
As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day,
It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd.

[Exit Warwick.

Clif. What seest thou in me, York? why dost thou pause?
York. With thy brave bearing should I be in love
But that thou art so fast mine enemy.
Clif. Nor should thy prowess want praise and esteem
But that 'tis shown ignobly, and in treason.
York. So let it help me now against thy sword,
As I in justice and true right express it.
Clif. My soul and body on the action both—in York. A dreadful lay!—address thee instantly
Clif. La fin couronne les œuvres.

[They fight, and Clifford falls and dies.
York. Thus war hath given thee peace, for thou art still.
Peace with his soul, heaven, if it be thy will! [Exit

Enter young Clifford.

Y. Clif. Shame and confusion! all is on the road:
Fear frames disorder, and disorder wounds
Where it should guard. O war! thou son of hell,
Whom angry heavens do make their minister,
Throw in the frozen bosoms of our part
Hot coals of vengeance!—Let no soldier fly:
He that is truly dedicate to war,
Hath no self-love; nor he, that loves himself,
Hath not essentially, but by circumstance,
The name of valour.—O! let the vile world end,
[Seeing his Father's body.
And the premised flames of the last day
Knit earth and heaven together!
Now let the general trumpet blow his blast,
Particularities and petty sounds
To cease!—Wast thou ordain'd, dear rather,
To lose thy youth in peace, and to achieve
The silver livery of advised age,
And, in thy reverence, and thy chair-days, thus
To die in ruffian battle?—Even at this sight,
My heart is tur'd to stone: and while 't is mine,
it shall be stony. York not our old men spare:
No more will I their babes: tears virginal
Shall be to me even as the dew to fire;
And beauty, that the tyrant oft reclaim'd,
Shall to my flaming wrath be oil and flux.
Henceforth I will not have to do with pity.
I am an infant of the house of York,
Into as many goblets will I cut it:
As wild Medea young Absyrtus d' a
In cruelty will I seek out my fame,
Come, thou new ruin of old Clifford's house.

[Taking up the Body
As did Æneas old Anchises bear,
So bear I thee upon my manly shoulders;
But then, Æneas bare a living load,
Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine.

[Exit

Enter Richard Plantagenet and Somerset. Fighting

Somerset is slain.

Rich. So, lie thou there;—
For, underneath an alehouse' paltry sign,
The Castle in Saint Albans, Somerset
Hath made the wizard famous in his death.
Sword, hold thy temper; heart, be wrathful still:
Priests pray for enemies, but princes kill.  [Exit.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter King Henry, Queen
MARGARET, and others, flying.

Q. Mar. Away, my lord! you are slow: for shame, away!
K. Hen. Can we outrun the heavens? good Margaret, stay.
Q. Mar. What are you made of? you'll nor fight, nor fly:

Now is it manhood, wisdom, and defence,
To give the enemy way; and to secure us
By what we can, which cannot more but fly.

[Alarum afar off.

If you be ta'en, we then should see the bottom
Of all our fortunes; but if we hapsly scape,
As well we may, if not through your neglect
We shall to London get; where you are lov'd,
And where this breach, now in our fortunes made,
May readily be stopp'd.

Enter young Clifford.

Y. Clif. But that my heart's on future mischief set,
I would speak blasphemy ere bid you fly;
But fly you must: uncurable discomfort
Reigns in the hearts of all our present friends.¹
Away, for your relief; and we will live
To see their day, and them our fortune give.
Away, my lord, away!  [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Fields near Saint Albans.

Alarum: Retreat. Flourish; then enter YORK, RICHARD PLANTAGENET, WARWICK, and Soldiers, with Drum and Colours.

York. Old Salisbury, who can report of him?

That winter lion, who in rage forgets
Aged contusions and all bruises of time,
And, like a gallant in the bloom of youth,
Repairs him with occasion? this happy day
Is not itself, nor have we won one foot,
If Salisbury be lost.

Three times to-day I holp him to his horse,
Three times besbrid him; thrice I led him off,
Persuaded him from any farther act:
But still, where danger was, still there I met him
And like rich hangings in a homely house,
So was his will in his old feeble body,
But, noble as he is, look where he comes.

Enter Salisbury.

Sal. Now, by my sword, well hast thou fought to day;

By the mass, so did we all.—I thank you, Richard.
God knows how long it is I have to live,
And it hath pleased him, that three times to-day
You have defended me from imminent death.—
Well, lords, we have not got that which we have
'T is not enough our foes are this time fled,
Being opposites of such repairing nature.

York. I know our safety is to follow them:
For, as I hear, the king is fled to London.
To call a present court of parliament:
Let us pursue him, ere the wirs go forth.—

What says lord Warwick? shall we after them?
War. After them? nay, before them, if we can.
Now, by my hand, lords, 't was a glorious day:
Saint Albans' battle won by famous York,
Shall be eterniz'd in all age to come.—

Sound, drums and trumpets!—and to London all:
And more such days as these to us befall.'

[Exeunt.

SCENE, during part of the Third Act, in France; during the rest of the Play in England.

ACT I.

War. I wonder how the king escap'd our hands.

York. While we pursued the horsemen of the north, He slyly stole away, and left his men:

Whereat the great lord of Northumberland, Whose warlike ears could never brook retreat, Cheerd up the drooping army; and himself, Lord Clifford, and Lord Stafford, all abreast, Charg'd our main battle's front, and, breaking in, Were by the swords of common soldiers slain.

Edw. Lord Stafford's father, duke of Buckingham, Is either slain, or wounded dangerously. I clef his beaver with a downright blow; That this is true, father, behold his blood.

Mont. And, brother, here's the earl of Wiltshire's blood.

To York, showing his.

Whom I encounter'd as the battles joined.

Rich. Speak thou for me, and tell them what I did.

[Throwing down the Duke of Somerset's Head.

York. Richard hath best deserv'd of all my sons.—
But, is thy grace dead, my lord of Somerset?

Norf. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt!

Rich. Thus do I hope to shake King Henry's head.

War. And so do I.—Victorious prince of York,

Before I see thee seated in that throne,

This is the palace of the fearful king,

And this the regal seat: possess it, York;

For this is thine, and not King Henry's heirs.

York. Assist me, then, sweet Warwick, and I will:

For hither we have broken in by force.

Norf. We'll all assist you: he, that dies, shall die.

York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk.—Stay by me, my lords:

And, soldiers, stay, and lodge by me this night.

War. And, when the king comes, offer him no violence,

Unless he seek to thrust you out by force. [They retire.

York. The queen this day here holds her parliament,

But little thinks we shall be of her council.

By words or blows here let us win our right.

Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay within this house.

War. The bloody parliament shall this be call'd,

Unless Plantagenet, duke of York, be king,

And hastful Henry depos'd, whose cowardice
Hath made us by-words to our enemies.
War. Poor Clifford! how I scorn his worthless threats.

York. Will you, we show our title to the crown? If not, our swords shall plead it in the field.

K. Hen. What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown? Thy father was, as thou art, duke of York; Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, earl of March. I am the son of Henry the fifth, Who made the Dauphin and the French to stoop, And seiz'd upon their towns and provinces. War. Talk not of France, sigh thou hast lost it all K. H. n. The lord protector lost it, and not I: When I was crown'd, I was but nine months old. Rich. You are old enough now, and yet, methinks you lose.

Father, tear the crown from the usurper's head. Exe. Sweet father, do so; set it on your head, Mont. Good brother, [To York,] as thou lov'st and honour'st arms,

Let's fight it out, and not stand cavilling thus. [fly. Rich. Sound drums and trumpets, and the king will York. Sons, peace!

K. Hen. Peace thou, and give king Henry leave to speak. War. Plantagenet shall speak first: hear him, lords; And be ye silent and attentive too, For he that interrupts him shall not live. K. Hen. Think'st thou, that I will leave my kingly throne, Wherin my grandire, and my father, sat? No: first shall war unpeople this my realm; Ay, and their colours—often borne in France

And now in England, to our heart's great sorrow,— Shall be my winding sheet.—Why faint you, lords? My title's good, and better far than his. War. Prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be king. K. Hen. Henry the fourth by conquest got the crown.

York. 'T was by rebellion against his king. K. Hen. I know not what to say: my title's weak.— [Aside.] Tell me, may not a king adopt an heir? York. What then? K. Hen. An if he may, then am I lawful king; For Richard, in the view of many lords, Resign'd the crown to Henry the fourth, Whose heir my father was, and I am his. York. He rose against him, being his sovereign, And made him to resign his crown perforce.

War. Suppose, my lords, he did it uncomman'd, Think you, 't were prejudicial to his crown? Exe. No: for he could not so resign his crown, But that the next heir should succeed and reign.

K. Hen. Art thou against us, duke of Exeter? Exe. His is the right, and therefore pardon me. York. Why whisper you, my lords, and answer not Exe. My conscience tells me he is lawful king. K. Hen. All will revolt from me, and turn to him. North. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou lay'st, Think not, that Henry shall be so depos'd.

War. Depos'd he shall be in despite of all.

North. Thou art deceiv'd: 't is not thy southern power. Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolck, nor of Kent, Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud, Can set the duke up in despite of me. Clif. King Henry, be thy title right or wrong, Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence.
May that ground gape, and swallow me alive,
Where I shall kneel to him that slew my father!

K. Hen. O Clifford, how thy words revive my heart!

York. Henry of Lancaster, resign my crown.

War. Do right unto this princely duke of York,
Or I will fill the house with armed men,
And, o'er the chair of state, where now he sits,
Write up his title with usurping blood.

[He stamps, and the Soldiers show themselves.]

K. Hen. My lord of Warwick, hear me but one word.

Let me for this my life-time reign as king.

York. Confirm the crown to me, and to mine heirs,
And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou livest.

K. Hen. I am content: Richard Plantagenet,
Enjoy the kingdom after my decease.

Cliff. What wrong is this unto the prince your son?

War. What good is this to England, and himself?

West. Base, base, and despairing Henry!

Cliff. How hast thou injur'd both thyself and us!

West. I cannot stay to hear these articles.

North. Nor I.

Cliff. Come, cousin, let us tell the queen these news.

West. Farewell, faint-hearted and degenerate king,
In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides.

North. Be thou a prey unto the house of York,
And die in bands for this unmanly deed!

Cliff. In dreadful war may'st thou be overcome,
Or live in peace, abandon'd and despis'd!

[Exeunt Northumberland, Clifford, and Westmoreland.]

War. Turn this way, Henry, and regard them not.

Exe. They seek revenge, and therefore will not yield.

K. Hen. Ah, Exeter!

War. Why should you sigh, my lord?

K. Hen. Not for myself, lord Warwick, but my son,
Whom I unnaturally shall disinherit.
But be it as it may, I here entreat
The crown to thee, and to thine heirs for ever; [To York.]
Conditionally, that here thou take an oath
To cease this civil war; and whilst I live,
To honour me as thy king and sovereign;
And neither by treason, nor hostility,
To seek to put me down and reign thyself.

York. This oath I willingly take, and will perform.

[Coming from the Throne.]

War. Long live king Henry!—Plantagenet, embrace him.

K. Hen. And long live thou, and these thy forward sons!

York. Now York and Lancaster are reconcil'd.

Exe. Accurs'd be he, that seeks to make them foes!

[Sunset. The Lords come forward.]

York. Farewell, my gracious lord: I'll follow to my castle.

War. And I shall keep London with my soldiers.

Norf. And I to Norfolk with my followers.

Mont. And I unto the sea, from whence I came.

[Exeunt York, and his Sons, Warwick, Norfolk, Montague, Soldiers, and Attendants.]

K. Hen. And I, with grief and sorrow, to the court.

[Enter Queen Margaret and the Prince of Wales.]

Exe. Here comes the queen, whose looks bewray her anger;
I'll steal away.

K. Hen. Exeter, so will I. [Going.]

Q. Mar. Nay, not from me: I will follow thee.

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle queen, and I will stay.

Q. Mar. Who can be patient in such extremities?

Ah, wretched man! would I had died a madman,
And never seen thee, never borne thee son,
Seeing thou hast prov'd so unnatural a father!
Hath he deserv'd to lose his birthright thus?

Hudst. Thou hast lov'd him half so well as I,
Or felt that pain which I did for him once,
Or nourish'd him, as I did with my blood.

Princes. Thou wouldst have left thy dearest heart-blood there
Rather than have made that savage duke thine heir,
And disinherit the only son.

Princes. Father, you cannot disinherit me.

If you be king, why should not I succeed?

K. Hen. Pardon me, Margaret;—pardon me, sweet son:
The Earl of Warwick, and the duke, enforce'd me.

Q. Mar. Enforced thee! art thou king, and wilt be fore'd?

I shame to hear thee speak. Ah, timorous wretch!
Thou hast undone thyself, thy son, and me.
And given unto the house of York such head,
As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance.

Warwick. I entail him and his heirs unto the crown,
What is it, but to make thy sepulchre,
And creep into it far before thy time?

Warwick is chancellor, and the lord of Calais;
Stern Faulconbridge commands the narrow seas,
The Duke is made protector of the realm;
And yet shall thou be safe? such safety finds
The trembling lamb, environed with wolves.

Had I been there, which am a silly woman,
The soldiers should have toss'd me on their pikes,
Before I would have granted to that act:
But thou prefer'st thy life before thine honour:
And seeing thou dost, I here divorce myself,
Both from thy table, Henry, and thy bed,
Until that act of parliament be repeal'd,
Whereby my son is disinherit'd.
The northern lords, that have forsworn thy colours,
Will follow mine, if once they see them spread;
And spread they shall be, to thy foul disgrace,
And utter ruin of the house of York.

Thus do I leave thee.—Come, son, let's away:
Our army is ready: come, we'll after them.

K. Hen. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak.

Q. Mar. Thou hast spoke too much already: get thee gone.

K. Hen. Gentle son Edward, thou wilt stay with me?

Q. Mar. Ay, to be murder'd by his enemies.

Prince. When I return with victory from the field,
I'll see your grace; till then, I'll follow her.

Q. Mar. Come, son; a way! we may not longer thus.

[Exeunt Queen Margaret, and the Prince.]

K. Hen. Poor queen! how love to me, and to her son,
Hath made her break out into terms of rage.
Revenge'd may she be on that hateful duke,
Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire,
Will cost my crown, and like an empty eagle
Tire on the flesh of me, and of my son!
The loss of those three lords tormenteth my heart:
I'll write unto them, and entreat them fair.—
Come, cousin; you shall be the messenger.

Exe. And I, I hope, shall reconcile them all. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in Sandal Castle, near Wakefield.

[Enter Edward, Richard, and Montague.]

Rich. Brother, though I be youngest, give me leave
To play the orator.

Mont. But I have reasons strong and forcible.

York. Why, how now, sons, and brother! at a strife!
What is your quarrel? how began it first?

Edw. No quarrel, but a slight contention.

York. About what?

Rich. About that which concerns your grace, and us;

The crown of England, father, which is yours.

Rich. Your right depends not on his life, or death.

Edw. Now you are hear, therefore enjoy it now:

By giving the house of Lancaster leave to breathe,
It will outrun you, father, in the end.

York. I took an oath that he should quietly reign.

Edw. But for a kingdom any oath may be broken:

I would break a thousand oaths to reign one year.

Rich. No: God forbid, your grace should be foresworn.

York. I shall be, if I claim by open war.

Rich. I'll prove the contrary, if you'll hear me speak.

York. Thou canst not, son: it is impossible.

Rich. An oath is of no moment, being not took

Before a true and lawful magistrate,

That hath authority over him that swears:

Henry had none, but did usurp the place;
Then seeing 't was he that made you to depose,
Your oath, my lord, is vain and frivolous.

Therefore, to arms! And, father, do but think,
How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown,
Within whose circuit is Elysium,
And all that poets reign of bliss and joy.

Why do we linger thus? I cannot rest,
Until the white rose, that I wear, be dyed
Even in the lukewarm blood of Henry's heart.

York. Richard, enough: I will be king, or die.

Brother, thou shalt to London presently,
And what on Warwick to this enterprise.—
Thou, Richard, shalt to the duke of Norfolk,
And tell him privily of our intent.—

You, Edward, shall unto my lord Cobham,
With whom the Kentishmen will willingly rise:
In them I trust; for they are soldiers,
Witty, courteous, liberal, full of spirit.—

While you are thus employ'd, what resteth more,
But that I seek occasion how to rise,
And yet the king not privy to my drift,
Nor any of the house of Lancaster?

[Enter a Messenger.]

But, stay.—What news? Why com'st thou in such post?

Mess. The queen, with all the northern earls and lords,
Intends here to besiege you in your castle.

York. She is hard by with twenty thousand men,
And therefore fortify your hold, my lord.

York. Ay, with my sword. What, think'st thou, that we fear them?—

Edward and Richard, you shall stay with me;
My brother Montague shall post to London.
Let noble Warwick, Cobham, and the rest,
Whom we have left protectors of the king,
With powerful policy strengthen themselves,
And trust not simple Henry, nor his oaths.

Mont. Brother, I go; I'll win them, fear it not:
And thus most humbly I do take my leave. [Exit.

Enter Sir John and Sir Hugh Mortimer.

York. Sir John, and sir Hugh Mortimer, mine uncles,
You are come to Sandal in a happy hour;—
The army of the queen mean to besiege us.

Sir John. She shall not need, we'll meet her in the field.

York. What, with five thousand men?

Rich. Ay, with five hundred, father, for a need.

A woman's general; what should we fear?

[Exit.]

Edu. I hear their drums: let's set our men in order
And issue forth, and bid them battle straight.
York. Five men to twenty!—though the odds be great.
I doubt not, uncle, of our victory.
Many a battle have I won in France,
When as the enemy hath been ten to one:
Why should I now have the like success?

[A ladder. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Plains near Sandal Castle.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter Rutland, and his Tutor.
Rut. Ah! whither shall I fly to escape their hands?
Ah, tutor! look, where bloody Clifford comes.

Enter Clifford and Soldiers.
Cliff. Chaplain, away: thy priesthood saves thy life.
As for the brat of this accursed duke,
Whose father slew my father, he shall die.

Tut. And I, my lord, will bear him company.
Cliff. Soldiers, away with him.

Tut. Ah, Clifford! murder not this innocent child,
Lest thou be hated both of God and man.

[Exit, forced off by Soldiers.]

Cliff. How now! is he dead already? Or, is it fear,
That makes him close his eyes?—I'll open them.

Rut. So looks the pent-up lion o'er the wretch
That trembles under his devouring paws:
And so he walks, insulting o'er his prey;
And so he comes to rend his limbs asunder.—
Ah, gentle Clifford! kill me with thy sword,
And not with such a cruel threatening look.
Sweet Clifford! hear me speak before I die:
I am too mean a subject for thy wrath;
Be thou reveng'd on men, and let me live.

Cliff. In vain thou speakest, poor boy: my father's blood
Hath stopp'd the passage where thy words should enter.

Rut. Then let my father's blood open it again:
He is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him.
Cliff. Had I thy brethren here, their lives, and thine,
Were not revenge sufficient for me.
No; if I dizz'd up thy forefathers' graves,
And hung their rotten coffins up in chains,
I could not shake mine ire, nor ease my heart.
The sight of any of the house of York
Is as a fury to torment my soul;
And till I root out their accursed line,
And leave not one alive, I live in hell.

Therefore—

Rut. O! let me pray before I take my death.—
To thee I pray: sweet Clifford, pity me!
Cliff. Such pity as my raper's point affords.
Rut. I never did thee harm: why wilt thou slay me?
Cliff. Thy father hath.

But was I ever born:
Thou hast one son, for his sake pity me,
Lest, in revenge thereof, with God is just,
He be as miserably slain as I.
Ah! let me live in prison all my days,
And when I give occasion of offence,
Then let me die, for now thou hast no cause.

Cliff. No cause?

Thy father slew my father: therefore, die.

[Enter. Stabs him.]

Rut. Dii faciant, laudis summa sit ista tua! [Dies.

Cliff. Plantagenet! I come, Plantagenet!
And this thy son's blood cleaving to my blade,
Shall rust upon my weapon, till thy blood
Congeald with this do make me wipe off both. [Exit.
SCENE IV. THE SAME.

ALTARUM. ENTER YORK.

York. The army of the queen hath got the field: My uncle both are slain in rescuing me; And all my followers to the eager foe Turn back, and fly like ships before the wind, Or lambs pursued by hunger-starved wolves. My sons—God knows, what hath bechanced them, But this I know,—they have demean'd themselves Like men born to renown by life or death. Three times did Richard make a lane to me, And thrice cried,—"Coward, father! fight it out?" And full as oft came Edward to my side, With purple fleansion, painted to the hilt In blood of those that had encounter'd him: And when the hardiest warriors did retire, Richard cried,—"Charge! and give no foot of ground!" And cried,—"A crown, or else a glorious tomb! A sceptre, or an earthly sepulchre!" With this, we charg'd again; but, out alas! We bodg'd again: as I have seen a swan With bootless labour swim against the tide, And spend her strength with over-matching waves. [A short Altarum within.

Ah, hark! the fatal followers do pursue, And I am faint, and cannot fly their fury; And, were I strong, I would not shun their fury. The sands are number'd that make up my life; Here must I stay, and here my life must end.

Enter Queen MARGARET, CLIFFORD, NORTHUMBERLAND, and Soldiers.

Come, bloody Clifford,—roughest Northumberland,— I dare your thunderous fury to more rage, I am your butt, and I abide your shot.

North. Yield to our mercy, proud Plantagenet.

Clift. Ay, to such mercy, as his ruthless arm With downright payment show'd unto my father. Now Phaeton hath tumbled from his car, And made an evening at the noon-tide prick.

York. My ashes, as the phoenix, may bring forth A bird that will revenge upon you all: And in that hope I throw mine eyes to heaven, Seeming what'er you can afflict us with. Why come you not?—what! multitudes, and fear? Clift. So cowards fight when they can fly no farther; So doves do peck the falcon's piercing talons; So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their lives, Breathe out invevives against the officers. York. Q. Clifford! but bethink thee once again, And in thy thought o'er-run my former time: And, if thou canst for blushing, view this face, And bite thy tongue, that slanders him with cowardice, Whose crown hath made thee faint and fly ere this.

Clift. I will not bandy with thee word for word, But buckele with thee blows, twice two for one.

Q. Mar. Hold, valiant Clifford! for a thousand causes I would prolong awhile the traitor's life.— Wrath makes him deaf: speak thou, Northumberland.

North. Hold, Clifford! do not honour him so much To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart: What value were it, when a cur doth grin, For one to thrust his hand between his teeth, When he might spurn him with his foot: away? It is war's prize to take all vantages. And ten to one is no impeach of valour.

Clift Ay, ay; so strives the woodcock with the gin.

North. So doth the coney struggle in the net.

York. So triumph thieves upon their conquer'd booty So true men yield, with robbers so o'er-match'd.

North. What would your grace have done unto him now?

Q. Mar. Brave warriors, Clifford and Northumberland. Come, make him stand upon this molehill here, That raught at mountains with outstretched arms, Yet parted but the shadow with his hand.— What! was it you, that would be England's king! Was't you that revell'd in our parliament, And made a preachment of your high descent? Where are your mess of sons to back you now, The wanton Edward, and the lusty George? And where's that valiant crook-back prodigy, Dicky your boy, that, with his grumbling voice, Was wont to cheer his dad in mutinies? Or, with the rest, where is your darling Rutland? Look, York: I stain'd this napkin with the blood That valiant Clifford with his rapier's point Made issue from the bosom of the boy; And, if thine eyes can water for his death, I give thee this to dry thy cheeks withal. [Throwing it. Alas, poor York! but that I hate thee deadly, I should lament thy miserable state.

I pr'ythee, grieve to make me merry, York: What, hath thy fiery heart so parch'd thine entrails, That not a tear can fall for Rutland's death? Why art thou patient, man? thou shouldst be mad; And I, to make thee mad, do mock thee thus. Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may sing and dance Thou wouldst be fied, I see, to make me sport: York cannot speak, unless he wear a crown.— A crown for York!—and, lords, bow low to him Hold you his hands. whilst I do set it on.—

Ay, marry, sir, now looks he like a king. Ay, this is he that took king Henry's chair: And this is he was his adopted heir.— But how is it, that great Plantagenet Is crown'd so soon, and broke his solemn oath? As I bethink me, you should not be king, Till our king Henry had shuck hands with death. And will you pale? your head in Henry's glory; And rob his temples of the diadem, Now in his life, against your holy oath? O! 'tis a fault too, too unpardonable.— Off with the crown; and, with the crown, his head: And whilst we breathe take time to do him dead.

Clift. That is my office for my father's sake.

Q. Mar. Nay, stay: let's hear the orisons he makes,

York. She-wolf of France, but worse than wolves of France;

Whose tongue more poisons than the adder's tooth, How ill-beseeing is it in thy sex. To triumph, like an Amazonian trull. Upon their woes whom fortune captivates? But that thy face is, visor-like, unchanging, Made impudent with use of evil deeds, I would essay, proud queen, to make thee blush: To tell thee whence thou can'st, of whom deriv'd, We were shame enough to shame thee, wert thou not shameless.

Thy father bears the type of King of Naples, Of both the Sicils, and Jerusalem, Yet not so wealthy as an English yeoman. Hath that poor monarch taught thee to insult?
It needs not, nor it boots thee not, proud queen; Unless the adage must be verified, That beggars mounted ran their horse to death. 'T is beauty that doth oft make women proud; But, God be known, thy share thereof is small. 'T is virtue that doth make them most ador'd; The contrary doth make thee wonder'd at. 'T is government that makes them seem divine; Thou art as opposite to every good, As the antipodes are unto us, Or as the south to the septentrion. 0, tiger's heart, wrapp'd in a woman's hide! How couldst thou drain the life-blood of the child, To bid the father wipe his eyes withal, And yet be seen to bear a woman's face? Women are soft, mild, pitiful, and flexible; Thou stern, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorseless. Bid'st thou me rage? why, now thou hast thy wish: Wouldnst have me weep? why, now thou hast thy will; For raging wind blows up incessant showers, And, when the rage allays, the rain begins. These tears are my sweet Rutland's obsequies, And every drop cries vengeance for his death, 'Gainst thee, fell Clifford, and thee, false French-woman. North. Beshrew me, but his passions move me so, That hardly can I check my eyes from tears. York. That face of his The hungry cannibals would not have touch'd d. Would not have stain'd the rose's lines with blood: But you are more inhuman, more inexorable, O! ten times more, than tigers of Hyrcania. See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears: This cloth thou dipp'dst in blood of my sweet boy, And I with tears do wash the blood away. Keep thou the napkin, and go boast of this; And if thou tellst the heavy story right, Upon my soul, the hearers will shed tears. Yea, even my foes will shed fast-falling tears, And say,—'Alas! it was a piteous deed?'— There, take the crown, and with the crown my curse, And in thy need such comfort come to thee, As now I reap at thy too cruel hand! Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the world: My soul to heaven, my body to your heads! North. Had he been slaughter-man to all my kin, I should not, for my life, but weep with him, To see how inly sorrow gries his soul. Q. Mar. What! weeping-ripe, my lord Northumberland? Think but upon the wrong he did us all, And that will quickly dry thy melting tears. Clif. Here's for my oath; here's for my father's death. [Stabbing him. Q. Mar. And here's to right our gentle-hearted king [Stabbing him York. Open thy gate of mercy, gracious God! My soul flies through these wounds to seek out thee. [Dies. Q. Mar. Off with his head, and set it on York gates; So York may overlook the town of York. [Flourish. Exeunt

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Plain near Mortimer's Cross in Herefordshire.

A March. Enter Edward and Richard, with their Power.

Edw. I wonder, how our princely father's escap'd; Or whether he be escap'd away, or no, From Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuit. Had he been ta'en, we should have heard the news; Had he been slain, we should have heard the news; Or had he escap'd, methinks, we should have heard The happy tidings of his good escape.— How fares my brother? why is he so sad? Rich. I cannot joy, until I be resolv'd Where our right valiant father is become. I saw him in the battle range about, And watch'd him how he sing'd Clifford forth. Methought, he boro him in the thickest troop, As doth a lion in a herd of neast; Or as a hare escap'd, and ran with dogs, Who having pinch'd a few, and made them cry, The rest stand all aloof, and bark at him. So far'd our father with his enemies; So fled his enemies my warlike father: Methinks, 'tis prize enough to be his son. See, how the morning ope her golden gates, And takes her farewell of the glorious sun: How well resembles it the prime of youth, Trim'm'd like a younger, prancing to his love! Edw. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns! Rich. Three glorious suns, each one a perfect,

Not separated with the racking clouds, But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky. See, see! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss, As if they vow'd some league inviolable: Now are they but one lamp, one light, one sun! In this the heavens figure some event.

Edw. 'T is wondrous strange; the like yet never heard of. I think, it cites us, brother, to the field, That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet, Each one already blazing by our needs, Should, notwithstanding, join our lights together, And over-shine the earth, as this the world. Whate'er it bodes, henceforward will I bear Upon my target three fair shining suns. Rich. Nay, bear three daughters: by your leave I speak it; You love the breeder better than the male. Enter a Messenger in haste.

But what art thou, whose heavy looks foretell Some dreadful story hanging on thy tongue? Mess. Ah! one that was a woful looker on, When as the noble duke of York was slain, Your princely father, and my loving lord. Edw. O! speak no more, for I have heard too much. Rich. Say, how he died, for I will hear it all. Mess. Environed he was with many foes; And stood against them, as the hope of Troy Against the Greeks, that would have enter'd. Troy But Hercules himself must yield to odds; And many strokes, though with a little axe,
SCENE 1.

KING HENRY VI.

489

Hew down, and fell the hardest-timber'd oak.
By many hands your father was subdu'd;
But only slaughter'd by the irful arm
Of unrelenting Clifford, and the queen,
Who crown'd the gracious duke in high despite:
Laugh'd in his face: and, when with grief he wept,
The ruthless queen gave him, to dry his cheeks,
A napkin steeped in the harmless blood
Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford slain:
And, after many scores, many foul taunts,
They took his head, and on the gates of York
They set the same; and there it doth remain,
The saddest spectacle that e'er I view'd.

Edw. Sweet duke of York! our prop to lean upon,
Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no stay.
O Clifford! base, base Clifford! thou last slain
The flower of Europe for his chivalry;
And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd him,
For hand to hand he would have vanquish'd thee.
Now, my soul's palace is become a prison:
Ah! would she break from hence, that this my body
Might in the ground be closed up in rest,
For never henceforth shall I joy again;
Never, O! never, shall I see more joy.

Rich. I cannot weep for all my body's moisture
Scarce serves to quench my furnace-burning heart;
Nor can my tongue unload my heart's great burden,
For selfsame wind, that I should speak withal,
Is kindling coals that fire all my breast,
And burn me up with flames that tears would quench.
To weep is to make less the depth of grief.

Tears, then, for babes; blows, and revenge, for me!—
Richard, I bear thy name; I'll venge thy death,
Or die renowned by attempting it.

Edw. His name that valiant duke hath left with thee;
His dukedom and his chair with me are left.

Rich. Nay, if thou be that princely eagle's bird,
Show thy descent by gazing 'gainst the sun:
For chair and dukedom, throne and kingdom say;
Either that is thine, or else thouwert not his.

March. Enter Warwick and Montague, with their Army.

War. How now, fair lords! What fare? what news abroad?

Rich. Great lord of Warwick, if we should recount
Our haleful news, and at each word's deliverance,
Stab poniards in our flesh till all were told.
The words would add more anguish than the wounds.
O, valiant lord! the duke of York is slain.

Edw. O, Warwick! Warwick! that Plantagenet,
Which held thee dearly as his soul's redemption,
Is by the stern lord Clifford done to death.

War. Ten days ago I drown'd these news in tears;
And now, to add more measure to your woes,
I come to tell you things sith then befallen.
After the bloody fray at Wakefield fought,
Where your brave father breath'd his latest gasp,
Tidings, as swiftly as the posts could run,
Were brought me of your loss, and his depart.
I, then in London, keeper of the king,
Musterd my soldiers, gather'd flocks of friends,
March'd towards Saint Albans to intercept the queen,
Bearing the king in my behalf along;
For by my scouts I was advertised.
That she was coming with a full intent
To touch our late decree in parliament,
Touching king Henry's oath, and your succession.

Short tale to make,—we at Saint Albans met;
Our battles join'd, and both sides fiercely fought,
But, whether 't was the coldness of the king,
Who look'd full gently on his warlike queen,
That robb'd my soldiers of their heated spleen,
Or whether 't was report of her success,
Or more than common fear of Clifford's risour,
Who thunders to his captives blood and death
I cannot judge; but, to conclude with truth,
Their weapons like to lightning came and went:
Our soldiers, like the night-owl's lazy flight,
Or like a lazy thrasher with a flail,
Fell gently down, as if they struck their friends.
I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause,
With promise of high pay, and great rewards,
But all in vain; they had no heart to fight,
And we in them no hope to win the day;
So that we fled: the king unto the queen.

Lord George your brother, Norfolk, and myself,
In haste, poste-haste, are come to join with you;
For in the marches here, we heard, you were,
Making another head to fight again.

Edw. Where is the duke of Norfolk, gentle Warwick?
And when came George from Burgundv to England?

War. Some six miles off the duke is with the soldiers.
And for your brother, he was lately sent
From your kind aunt, duchess of Burgundy,
With aid of soldiers to this needful war.

Rich. 'T was odds, belike, when valiant Warwick fled:
Oft have I heard his praises in pursuit,
But ne'er, till now, his scandal of retire.

War. Nor now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear;
For thou shalt know, this strong right hand of mine
Can pluck the diadem from faint Henry's head,
And wring the awful sceptre from his fist,
Were he as famous, and as bold in war,
As he is fam'd for mildness, peace, and prayer.

Rich. I know it well, lord Warwick; blame me not.
'T is love, I bear thy glories, makes me speak.
But in this troublous time what's to be done?
Shall we go throw away our coats of steel,
And wrap our bodies in black mourning gowns,
Numbering our Ave-Maries with our beads?
Or shall we on the helmets of our foes
Tell our devotion with revengeful arms?
If for the last, say—Ay, and to it, lords.

War. Why, therefore Warwick came to seek your soul,
And therefore comes my brother Montague.
Attend me, lords. The proud insulting queen,
With Clifford, and the haughty Northumberland,
And of their feather many more proud birds,
Have wrought the easy-melting king like wax.
He swore consent to your succession,
His oath enrolled in the parliament:
And now to London all the crew are gone,
To frustrate both his oath, and what beside
May make against the house of Lancaster:
Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong.
Now, if the help of Norfolk, and myself,
With all the friends that thou, brave earl of March,
Amongst the loving Welshmen canst procure.
Will but amount to five and twenty thousand,
Why, Vis! to London will we march again,
And once again bestride our foaming steeds,

---

1 Some mod. eds. insert the line:
And very well appointed, as I thought.

2 From the "True Tragedy."
And once again cry—Charge! upon our foes;
But never once again turn back, and fly.

Rich. Ay, now, methinks, I hear great Warwick speak.

Ne'er may he live to see a sunshine day,
That cries—Retire, if Warwick bid him stay.

Edw. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I lean;
And when thou failest, (as God forbid the hour!)
Must Edward fall, which peril heaven forefend!

War. No longer Earl of March, but Duke of York:
The next degree is, England's royal throne;
For king of England shalt thou be proclaimed
In every borough as we pass along;
And he that throws not up his cap for joy,
Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head.
King Edward,—vaunt Richard,—Montague,—
Stay we no longer dreaming of renown;
But sound the trumpets, and about our task.

Rich. Then, Clifford, were thy heart as hard as steel,
As thou hast shown it flinty by thy deeds,
I come to pierce it, or to give thee mine.

Edw. Then strike up, drums!—God, and Saint George, for us!

Enter a Messenger.

War. How now: what news?

Mess. The Duke of Norfolk sends you word by me,
The Queen is coming with a puissant host,
And craves your company for speedy counsel.

War. Why then, it sorts: brave warriors, let's away. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before York.

Flourish. Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, the Prince of Wales, Clifford, and Northumberland, with Drums and Trumpets.

Q. Mar. Welcome, my Lord, to this brave town of York.
Yonder's the head of that arch-enemy,
That sought to be encompass'd with your crown:
Doth not the object cheer your heart, my Lord?

K. Hen. Ay, as the rocks cheer them that fear their wreck:
To see this sight, it irks my very soul.
Withhold revenge, dear God! 'tis not my fault;
Not willingly have I infring'd my vow.

Cliff. My gracious liege, this too much lenity
And harmful pity, must be laid aside.
To whom do kings cast their gentle looks?
Not to the beast that would usurp their den.
Whose hand is that the forest hearth doth lick?
Not his that spoils her young before her face.
Who escapes the lurking serpent's mortal sting?
Not he that sets his foot upon her back.
The smallest worm will turn, being trodden on;
And doves will peck in safeguard of their brood.

Ambitious York did level at thy crown;
Thou smiling, while he kist his angry brows;
He, but a duke, would have his son a king,
And raise his issue like a loving sire;
Thou, being a king, bless'd with a goodly son,
Didst yield consent to disinherit him,
Which argued thee a most unloving father.

Unreasonable creatures feed their young;
And though man's face be fearful to their eyes,
Yet, in protection of their tender ones,
Who hath not seen them, even with those wings
Which sometime they have us'd in fearful flight,
Make war with him that climbed unto their nest.

Offering their own lives in their young's defence?
For shame, my liege! make them your precedent.

Were it not pity, that this godly boy
Should lose his birthright by his father's fault,
And long hereafter say unto his child,—
"What my great-grandfather and grandsire got,
My careless father fondly3 gave away;"
Ah! what a shame were this. Look on the boy;
And let him manly face, which promises
Successful fortune, steel thy melting heart
To hold thine own, and leave thine own with him.

K. Hen. Full well hath Clifford play'd the orator,
Inferreing arguments of mighty force.
But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear,
That things ill got had ever bad success?
And happy always was it for that son,
Whose father for his hoarding went to hell?
I'll leave my son my virtuous deeds behind,
And would my father had left me no more;
For all the rest is held at such a rate,
As brings a thousand-fold more care to keep,
Than in possession any jot of pleasure.—
Ah! cousin York! would thy best friends did know
How it doth grieve me that thy head is here!

Q. Mar. My lord, cheer up your spirits: our foes are nigh,
And this soft carriage2 makes your followers faint.
You promis'd knighthood to our forward son
Unsheath your sword, and dub him presently.—
Edward, kneel down.

K. Hen. Edward Plantagenet, arise a knight;
And learn this lesson,—Draw thy sword in right.

Prince. My gracious father, by your kingly leave,
I'll draw it as apparent to the crown,
And in that quarrel use it to the death.

Cliff. Why, that is spoken like a toward prince.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Royal commanders, be in readiness:
For, with a band of thirty thousand men,
Comes Warwick, backing the Duke of York;
And, in the towns, as they do march along,
Proclaims him king, and many fly to him.

Darrain your battle, for they are at hand.

Cliff. I would, your highness would depart the field
The Queen hath best success when you are absent.

Q. Mar. Ay, my good lord, and leave us to our fortune.

K. Hen. Why, that's my fortune too; therefore I'll stay.

North. Do it with resolution, then, to fight.

Prince. My royal father, cheer these noble lords,
And hearien those that fight in your defence.

Unsheath your sword, good father: ery, "Sain't Georgie!"

March. Enter Edward, George, Richard, Warwick, Norfolk, Montague, and Soldiers.

Edw. Now, perjur'd Henry, will thou kneel for grace
And set thy diadem upon my head,
Or hide the mortal fortune of the field?

Q. Mar. Go, rate thy minions, proud insulting boy
Becomes thee to be thus bold in terms,
Before thy sovereign, and thy lawful king?

Edw. I am his king, and he should bow his knee:
I was adopted heir by his consent;
Since when, his oath is broke; for, as I hear,
You, that are king, though he do wear the crown,
Have caus'd him, by now act of parliament,
To blot out me, and put his own son in.

SCENE III.

KING HENRY VI.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter Warwick.

War. Forspent with toil, as runners win a race,
I lay me down a little while to breathe;
For strokes receiv'd, and many blows repaid,
Have robb'd me my strong-knit sinews of their strength,
And, spite of spite, needs must I rest awhile.

Enter Edward, running.

Edw. Smile, gentle heaven, or strike, ungentle death;
For this world frowns, and Edward's sun is clouded.

War. How now, my lord! what hap? what hope of good?

Enter George.

Geo. Our hap is lost, our hope but sad despair:
Our ranks are broke, and ruin follows us.
What counsel give you? whither shall we fly?

Edw. Bootless is flight; they follow us with wings
And weak we are, and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter Richard.

Rich. Ah, Warwick! why hast thou withdrawn thyself?
Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk,
Borne'd with the steally point of Clifford's lance;
And, in the very pangs of death he cried,
Like to a dismal clangor heard from far,
"Warwick, revenge! brother, revenge my death!"
So, underneath the bellies of their steeds,
That stain'd their fetlocks in his smoking blood,
The noble gentleman gave up the ghost.

War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood.
I'll kill my horse, because I will not fly.
Why stand we like soft-hearted women here,
Wailing our losses, whilsts the foe doth rage,
And look upon, as if the tragedy
Were play'd in jest by counterfeit acting?
Here on my knee I bow to God above. [Kneeling]
I'll never pause again, never stand still,
Till either death hath clos'd these eyes of mine,
Or fortune given me measure of revenge.

Edw. O Warwick! I do beseech my knee with thine,
[Kneeling]
And in this vow do charm my soul to thine.
And, ere my knee rise from the earth's cold face,
I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee,
Thou sett'st up and pluck'st down of kings;
Beseeching thee,—if with thy will it stands,
That to my foes this body must be prey,—
Yet that thy brazen gates of heaven may ope.
And give sweet passage to my sinful soul.—[Rising,]
Now, lords, take leave until we meet again,
Where'er it be, in heaven, or in earth.

Rich. Brother, give me thy hand;—and, gentle
Warwick,
Let me embrace thee in my weary arms.
I, that did never weep, now melt with woe,
That winter should cut off our spring-time so.

War. Away, away! Once more, sweet lords, farewell.

Geo. Yet let us all together to our troops,
And give them leave to fly that will not stay,
And call them pillars that will stand to us;
And if we thrive promise them such rewards
As victors wore at the Olympic games.
This may plant courage in their quailing breasts;
For yet is hope of life, and victory.—

Forelow3 no longer; make we hence amain. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. Another Part of the Field.

Excursions. Enter Richard and Clifford.

Rich. Now, Clifford, I have singled thee alone.
Suppose, this arm is for the duke of York,
And this for Rutland; both bound to revenge,
Wert thou environ'd with a brazen wall.

Cliff. Now, Richard, I am with thee here alone.
This is the hand that stab'd thy father York.
And this the hand that slew thy brother Rutland;
And here's the heart that triumphs in their death,
And cheers these hands, that slew thy sire and brother,
To execute the like upon thyself:
And so, have at thee.

[They fight. Warwick enters; Clifford flies.

Rich. Nay, Warwick, single out some other chase;
For I myself will hunt this wolf to death. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter King Henry.

K. Hen. This battle fares like to the morning's war,
When dying clouds contend with growing light;
What time the shepherd, blowing of his sails,
Can neither call it perfect day nor night.
Now sways it this way, like a mighty sea
Fores'd by the tide to combat with the wind:
Now sways it that way, like the self-same sea
Fores'd to retire by fury of the wind:
Somedie, the foemen prevail; and then, the wind,
Now, one the better, then, another best;
Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast,
Yet neither conquer'd, nor conquer'd:
So is the equal poise of this fell war.
Here, on this molehill, will I sit me down.
To whom God will, there be the victory;
For Margaret my queen, and Clifford too,
Have chid me from the battle, swearing both,
They prosper best of all when I am thence.
Would I were dead! if God's good will were so;
For what is in this world but grief and woe?
O God! methinks, it were a happy life,
To be no better than a homely swain;
To sit upon a h ill, as I do now,
To carve out dials quaintly, point by point,
Thereby to see the minutes how they run:

How many make the hour full complete,
How many hours bring about the day,
How many days will finish up the year,
How many years a mortal man may live.
When this is known, then to divide the times.
So many hours must I tend my flock;
So many hours must I take my rest;
So many hours must I contemplate;
So many hours must I sport myself;
So many days my ewes have been with young;
So many weeks ere the poor fools will yeain;
So many months ere I shall shear the fleece;
So minutes, hours, days, months and years,
Pass'd over to the end they were created,
Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave.
Ah! what a life were this! how sweet! how lovely
Gives not the hawthorn bush a sweeter shade
To shepherds looking on their silly sheep,
Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy
To kings that fear their subjects' treachery?
O! yes it doth; a thousand fold it doth.
And to conclude,—the shepherd's homely curds,
His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle,
His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,
All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,
Is far beyond a prince's delicacies,
His hands sparkling in a golden cup,
His body couched in a curious bed,
When care, mistrust, and treason wait on him.

Alarum. Enter a Son that hath killed his Father, with the dead Body.

Son. Ill blows the wind that profits no body.
This man whom hand to hand I slew in fight,
May be possessed with some store of crown's;
And I, that haply take them from him now,
May yet ere night yield both my life and them
To some man else, as this dead man to me.—
Who's this?—O God! it is my father's face,
Whom in this conflict I unwares have kill'd.
O heavy times, begetting such events!
From London by the king was I press'd forth;
My father, being the earl of Warwick's man,
Came on the part of York, press'd by his master;
And I, who at his hands receiv'd my life,
Have by my hands of life bereaved him.—

Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did;
And pardon, father, for I knew not thee.—
My tears shall wipe away these bloody marks,
And no more words, till they have flow'd their fill.

K. Hen. O piteous spectacle! O bloody times!
Whiles lions war and battle for their dens,
Poor harmless lambs abide their cruelty.
Weep, wretched man, I'll aid thee; too for tear,
And let our hearts and eyes, like civil war,
Be blind with tears, and break o'ercharg'd with grief
Enter a Father, who has kill'd his Son, bearing the Body.

Fath. Thou that so stoutly hast resisted me,
Give me thy gold, if thou hast any gold,
For ! have bought it with an hundred blows.—
But let me see:—is this a foeman's face?
Ah! no, no, no! it is mine only son!—
Ah! boy! if any life be left in thee,
Throw up thine eye: see, see, what showers arise.
Blown with the windy tempest of my heart
Upon thy wounds, that kill mine eye and Heart!—
O, pity, God, this miserable age!—
What stratagems. how felt, how buthery,
Erroneous, mutinous, and unnatural,

1 Not in fo. 2 Delay. 3 Two similar lines are found in the Second part of Henry VI., Act iv., Sc. ii.
This deadly quarrel daily doth beget!—
O boy! thy father gave thee life too soon,
And hath bereft thee of thy life too late.

K. Hen. Woe above woe! grief more than common grief!
O, that my death would stay these ruthless deeds!—
O, pity! gentle heaven, pity!—
The red rose and the white arc on his face,
The fatal colours of our striving houses:
The one his purple blood right well resembles,
The other his pale checks, methinks, presenteth;
Wither one rose, and let the other flourish!
If you contend, a thousand lives must wither.

K. Hen. Take on with me, and never be satisfied?
Fadh. How will my wife, for slaughter of my son,
Shed seas of tears, and ne'er be satisfied?
K. Hen. How will the country, for these woful chances.
Misthink the king, and not be satisfied?
Son. Was ever son so rued a father's death?
Fadh. Was ever father so bemoan'd a son?
K. Hen. Was ever king so griev'd for subjects' woe?
Much is your sorrow: mine, ten times so much.
Son. I'll bear thee hence, where I may weep my fill.

Fadh. These arms of mine shall be thy winding-sheet:
My heart, sweet boy, shall be thy sepulture,
For from my heart thine image ne'er shall go.
My sighing breast shall be thy funeral bell:
And so obsequious wilt thou father be,
Es't for the loss of thee, having no more,
As Priaam was for all his valiant sons.
I'll bear thee hence; and let them light that will,
For I have murder'd where I should not kill.

K. Hen. Sad-hearted men, much overcome with care,
Here sits a king more woful than you are.

Fadh. Fly, father, fly! for all your friends are fled,
And Warwick rages like a changèd bull.

K. Hen. Nay, take me with thee, good sweet Exeter:
Not that I fear to stay, but love to go.

Whither the queen intends. Forward! away!

SCENE VI.—The Same.

A loud Alarum. Enter Clifford, wounded.

Clif. Here burns my candle out: ay, here it dies.
Which, while it lasted, gave King Henry light.
O, Lancaster! I fear thy overthrow,
More than my body's parting with my soul.
My love, and fear, glued many friends to thee;
And now I fall thy tough commixtures melt,
Impeaching Henry, strengthening mis-prond York.

The common people swarm like summer-flies:
And whither fly the gnats, but to the sun?
And who shives now but Henry's enemies?
O Palsam! hadst thou never given consent
That Phæton should check thy fiery steeds,
Thy burning car never had scorched the earth;
And, Henry, hadst thou sway'd as kings should do,
Or as thy father, and his father, did,
Giving no ground unto the house of York.
They never, then, had sprung like summer flies
I. and ten thousand in this luckless realm,
Had left no mourning widows for our death,
And thou this day hadst kept they chair in peace.
For what doth cherish weeds, but gentle air?
And what makes robbers bold but too much licence?
Bootless are plaints, and unrelentless are our wounds.
No wavy to fly, nor strength to hold out flight:
The foe is merciless, and will not pity:
For at their hands I have deserv'd no pity.
The air hath got into my deadly wounds,
And much effuse of blood doth make me faint.
Come, York, and Richard. Warwick, and the rest;
I stabb'd your fathers' bosoms, split my breast.

[He faints.

Alarum and Retreat. Enter Edward, George, Richard,
Montague, Warwick, and Soldiers.

Edw. Now breathe we, lords: good fortune bids us pause.
And smooth the frowns of war with peaceful looks.—
Some troops pursue the bloody-minded queen,
That led calm Henry, though he were a king,
As doth a sull, fill'd with a fretting gust,
Command an argosy to stem the waves.
But think you, lords, that Clifford did with them?
War. No, 'tis impossible he should escape;
For, though before his face I speak the words,
Your brother Richard mark'd him for the grave,
And wheresoe'er he is, he's surely dead.

Rich. Whose soul is that which takes her heavy leave?
A deadly groan, like life and death's departing:
See who it is.

Edw. And, now the battle's ended,
If friend, or foe, let him be gently used.

Rich. Revoke that doom of mercy, for 'tis Clifford
Who not contented that he lopp'd the branch
In heaving Rutland when his leaves put forth,
But set his murdering knife unto the root.
From whence that tender spray did sweetly spring;
I mean, our princely father, duke of York.
War. From off the gates of York fetch down the head.

Your father's head, which Clifford placed there,
Instead whereof, let this supply the room:
Measure for measure must be answered.

Edw. Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our house,
That nothing sung but death to us and ours:
Now death shall stop his dismal threatening sound,
And his ill-boding tongue no more shall speak.

[Soldiers bring the body forward.

War. I think his understanding is bereft —
Speak, Clifford, dost thou know who speaks to thee?
Dark cloudy death o'ershades his beams of life,
And he nor sees, nor hears us, what we say.
Rich. O, would he did! and so, perhaps, he doth:
'Tis but his policy to counterfeit,
Because he would avoid such bitter taunts
Which in the time of death he gave our father.
Geo. If so thou think'st, vex him with eager\ words.
Rich. Clifford! ask mercy, and obtain no grace.
[They pull him to and fro.]
Eud. Clifford! repent in bootless penitence.
War. Clifford! devise excuses for thy faults.
Geo. While we devise fell tortures for thy faults.
Rich. Thou didst love York, and I am son to York.
Eud. Thou pittedst Rutland; I will pity thee.
Geo. Where's captain Margaret to fence you now?
War. They mock thee; Clifford: swear as thou wost.
Rich. What! not an oath? nay then, the world goes hard,
When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath.—
I know by that, he's dead; and, by my soul,
If this right hand would buy two hours' life,
That I in all despite might raile at him, — [blood
This hand should chop it off; and with the issuing
Stiffe the villain, whose unstaunched thirst
York and young Rutland could not satisfy.
War. Ay, but he's dead. 'Off with the traitor's head,
And rear it in the place your father's stands.—

Enter two Keepers, with Cross-bows in their Hands.

1 Keep. Under this thick-grown brake we'll shroud ourselves;
For through this lawn anon the deer will come,
And in this covert will we make our stand,
Cutting the principal of all the deer.
2 Keep. I'll stay above the hill, so both may shoot.
1 Keep. That cannot be; the noise of thy cross-bow
Will scare the herd, and so my shoot is lost.
Here stand we both, and aim we at the best:
And, for the time shall not seem tedious,
[I'll tell thee what befell me on a day,
In this self-place, where now we mean to stand.
2 Keep. Here comes a man; let's stay till he be past.
Enter King Henry, disguised as a churchman, with a Prayer-book.

K. Hen. From Scotland am I stol'n, even of pure love,
To greet mine own land with my wishful sight.
No, Harry, Harry, 'tis no land of thine;
Thy place is fill'd, thy sceptre wrung from thee,
Thy balm wash'd off wherewith thou wast anoint'd:
No bending knee will call thee Caesar now,
No humble suitors press to speak for right,
No, not a man comes for redress of thee,
For how can I help them, and not myself?
1 Keep. Ay, here's a deer whose skin's a keeper's fee.
This is the quondam king: let's seize upon him.
K. Hen. Let me embrace these sour adversities;
For wise men say, it is the wisest course.
2 Keep. Why linger we? let us lay hands upon him.
1 Keep. Forbear a while; we'll hear a little more.
K. Hen. My queen and son are gone to France for aid;
And, as I hear, the great commanding Warwick
Is thither gone, to crave the French king's sister
To wife for Edward. If this news be true,
Poor queen and son, your labour is but lost;
For Warwick is a subtile orator,

And now to London with triumphant march.
There to be crowned England's royal king:
From whence shall Warwick ent the sea to France,
And ask the lady Bona for thy queen.
So shalt thou sinew both these hands together;
And, having France thy friend, thou shalt not dreading
The scatter'd foe that hopes to rise again;
For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt,
Yet look to have them bust, 't offending thine ears.
First, will I see the coronation,
And then to Brittany I'll cross the sea,
To effect this marriage, so it please my lord.
Eud. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, let it be
For in thy should ye do I build my seat,
And never will I undertake the thing,
Wherein thy counsel and consent is wanting—
Richard, I will create thee duke of Gloster;
And George, of Clarence:—Warwick, as ourself,
Shall do, and undo, as him pleaseth best.
Rich. Let me be duke of Clarence, George of Gloster
For Gloster's dukedom is too ominous.
War. Tut! that's a foolish observation:
Richard, be duke of Gloster. Now to London,
To see these honours in possession.

ACT III.
Will apprehend you as his enemy.

K. Hen. But did you never swear, and break an oath?
2 Keep. No, never such an oath; nor will not now.
K. Hen. Where did you dwell when I was king of England?
2 Keep. Here in this country, where we now remain.
K. Hen. I was anointed king at nine months old,
My father and my grandfather, were kings,
And you were sworn true subjects unto me;
And tell me, then, have you not broke your oaths?
1 Keep. No;
For we were subjects, but while you were king
K. Hen. Why, am I dead? do I not breathe a man?
Ah, simple men! you know not what you swear.
Look, as I blow this feather from my face,
And as the air blows it to me again,
Obeying with my will when I do blow,
And yielding to another when it blows,
Commanded always by the greater guet,
Such is the lightness of you common men.
But do not break your oaths; for of that sin
My mild entreaty shall not make you guilty.
Go where you will, the king shall be commanded,
And be you kings: command, and I'll obey.
1 Keep. We are true subjects to the king, king Edward.
K. Hen. So would you be again to Henry,
If he were sent to as king Edward is.
1 Keep. We charge you, in God's name, and in the king's,
To go with us unto the officers.
K. Hen. In God's name, lead: your king's name be obey'd:
And what God will, that let your king perform;
And what he will, I humbly yield unto. [Exit.

SCENE II.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Edward, in state, crowned; GLOSTER, CLARENCE, and Lady GREY.

K. Edw. Brother of Gloster, at Saint Albans' field
This lady's husband, sir John Grey, was slain,
His land then seiz'd on by the conqueror:
Her suit is now to repossess those lands,
Which we in justice cannot well deny,
Because in quarrel of the house of York
The worthy gentleman did lose his life.
Glo. Your highness shall do well, to grant her suit;
It were dishonour to deny it her.
K. Edw. It were no less; but yet I'll make a pause.
Glo. Yea; is it so? [Aside.
I see, the lady hath a thing to grant,
Before the king will grant her humble suit.
Clarr. He knows the game: how true he keeps the wind! [Aside.
K. Edw. Widow, we will consider of your suit,
And come some other time to know our mind.
L. Grey. Right gracious lord, I cannot brook delay:
May it please your highness to resolve me now,
And what your pleasure is shall satisfy me.
Glo. Ay, widow? then I'll warrant you all your lands,
An if what pleases him shall please you,
Fight closer, or, good faith, you'll catch a blow. [Aside.
Clarr. I fear her not, unless she chance to fall. [Aside.
Glo. God forbid that, for he'll take vantage. [Aside.
K. Edw. How many children hast thou, widow? tell me
Clarr. I think, he means to beg a child of her. [Aside.

Glo. Nay then, whelp me; he'll rather give her two.
L. Grey. Three, my most gracious lord.
Glo. You shall have four, if you'll be ruled by him.
[Aside.
K. Edw. 'T were pity, they should lose their father's lands.
L. Grey. Be pitiful, dread lord, and grant it then.
K. Edw. Lords, give us leave: I'll try this widow's suit.
Glo. Ay, good leave have you; for you will have leave
Till youth take leave, and leave you to the crutch.
[GLOSTER and CLARENCE stand back.
K. Edw. Now tell me, madam, do you love your children?
L. Grey. Ay, full as dearly as I love myself.
K. Edw. And would you not do much, to do them good?
L. Grey. To do them good I would sustain some harm.
K. Edw. Then, get your husband's lands to do them good.
L. Grey. Therefore I came unto your majesty.
K. Edw. I'll tell you how these lands are to be got.
L. Grey. So shall you bind me to your highness' service.
K. Edw. What service wilt thou do me, if I give them?
L. Grey. What you command, that rests in me to do.
K. Edw. But you will take exceptions to my boon.
L. Grey. No, gracious lord, except I cannot do it.
K. Edw. Ay, but thou canst do what I mean to ask
L. Grey. Why then, I will do what your grace commands.
Glo. He plies her hard; and much rain wears the marble. [Aside.
Clarr. As red as fire! nay then, her wax must melt.
[Aside.
L. Grey. Why stops my lord? shall I not hear my task?
K. Edw. An easy task: 'tis but to love a king.
L. Grey. That's some perform'd, because I am a subject.
K. Edw. Why then, thy husband's lands I freely give thee.
L. Grey. I take my leave with many thousand thanks.
Glo. The match is made: she seals it with a curtsey. [Aside.
K. Edw. But stay thee; 'tis the fruits of love I mean.
L. Grey. The fruits of love I mean, my loving liege.
K. Edw. Ay, but I fear me, in another sense.
What love, think'st thou, I sue so much to get?
L. Grey. My love till death; my humble thanks; my prayers;
That love which virtue begs, and virtue grants.
K. Edw. No, by my troth, I did not mean such love.
L. Grey. Why then, you mean not as I thought you did.
K. Edw. But now you partly may perceive my mind
L. Grey. My mind will never grant what I perceive
Your highness aims at, if I aim aright.
K. Edw. To tell thee plain, I aim to lie with thee.
L. Grey. To tell you plain, I had rather lie in prison.
K. Edw. Why then, thou shalt not have thy husband's lands.
L. Grey. Why then, mine honesty shall be my dower;
For by that loss I will not purchase them.
K. Edw. Therein thou wrong'st thy children mightily
I. Grey. Herein your highness wrongs both them and me.

But, mighty lord, this merry inclination
Accords not with the sadness\(^1\) of my suit;

Please you dismiss me, either with ay, or no.

K. Edw. Ay, if thou wilt say ay, to my request;
No, if thou dost say no, to my demand.

L. Grey. Then, no, my lord. My suit is at an end.

Glo. The widow likes him not, she knits her brows.

[Aside.

Clar. He is the bluntest woor in Christendom.

[Aside.

K. Edw. Her looks do argue her replete with modesty;
Her words do show her wit incomparable,
All her perfactions challenge sovereignty:
One way, or other, she is for a king;
And she shall be my love, or else my queen.

Say, that king Edward take thee for his queen?

L. Grey. 'Tis better said than done, my gracious lord:
I am a subject fit to jest withal,
But far unfit to be a sovereign.

K. Edw. Sweet widow, by my state I swear to thee,
I speak no more than what my soul intends;
And that, is to enjoy thee for my love.

L. Grey. And that is more than I will yield unto.

I know, I am too mean to be your queen,
And yet too good to be your concubine.

K. Edw. You cavil, widow: I did mean, my queen.

L. Grey. 'Twill grieve your grace, my sons should call you father.

K. Edw. No more, than when my daughters call thee mother.

Then art a widow, and thou hast some children;
And, by God's mother, I, being but a bachelor,
Have other Sones: why, 'tis a happy thing
To be the father unto many sons.

Answer no more, for thou shall be my queen.

Glo. The ghostly father now hath done his shift.

[Aside.

Clar. When he was made a shriver, 'twas for shift.

[Aside.

K. Edw. Brothers, you must what that we twain have

[Aside. [Gloster and Clarence come forward.]

Glo. The widow likes it not, for she looks very sad.

K. Edw. You'd think it strange if I should marry her.

Clar. To whom, my lord?

K. Edw. Why, Clarence, to myself?

Glo. That would be ten days' wonder, at the least.

Clar. That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.

Glo. By so much is the wonder in extremes.

K. Edw. Well, jest on, brothers: I can tell you both,

Her suit is granted for her husband's lands.

Enter a Nobleman.

No. My gracious lord, Henry your foe is taken,

And brought your prisoner to your palace gate.

K. Edw. See. that he be conveyed unto the Tower:

And go we, brothers, to the man that took him,

To question of his apprehension.

Widow, go you along.—Lords, use her honourably.

[Exeunt King Edward, Lady Grey, Clarence, and Lord.

Glo. Ay, Edward will use women honourably.

Would he were wasted, marrow, bones, and all,
That from his loins no hopeful branch may spring, To cross me from the golden time I look for! And yet, between my soul's desire, and me,
SCENE III.—France. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter Lewis the French King, and Lady Bona, attended; the King takes his State. Then, enter Queen Margaret, Prince Edward, and the Earl of Oxford.

K. Lew. Fair queen of England, worthy Margaret, Sit down with us: it ill beths thy state, And birth, that thou shouldst sit, while Lewis doth sit.

Q. Mar. No, mighty king of France; now Margaret Must strike her sail, and learn a while to serve, Where kings command. I was, I must confess, Great Albion's queen in former golden days; But now mischance hath trod my title down, And with dishonour laid me on the ground, Where I must take like seat unto my fortune, And to my humble seat conform myself.

K. Lew. Why, say, fair queen, whence springs this deep despair?

Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eyes with tears, And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares. K. Lew. What'er it be, be thou still like thyself, And sit thee by our side: yield not thy neck [Seats her by him.]

To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind Still ride in triumph over all mischance, Be plain, queen Margaret, and tell thy grief; It shall be eas'd, if France can yield relief.

Q. Mar. Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts, And give my tongue-tied sorrows leave to speak. Now, therefore, be it known to noble Lewis, That Henry, sole possessor of my love, Is of a king become a banish'd man, And forc'd to live in Scotland all forlorn, While proud ambitions Edward, duke of York, Usurps the regal title, and the seat Of England's true-anointed lawful king. This is the cause, that I, poor Margaret, With this my son, prince Edward, Henry's heir, Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid; And if thou fail us all our hope is done. Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help; Our people and our peers are both misled, Our treasure seiz'd, our soldiers put to flight, And, as thou seest, ourselves in heavy plight.

K. Lew. Renowned queen, with patience calm the storm, While we bethink us a means to break it off.

Q. Mar. The more we say, the stronger grows our foe.

K. Lew. The more I stay, the more I'll succour thee.

Q. Mar. O! but impatience waiteth on true sorrow: And see where comes the breeder of my sorrow. [Enter Warwick, attended.]

K. Lew. What's he, approacheth boldly to our presence?

Q. Mar. The earl of Warwick, Edward's greatest friend.

K. Lew. Welcome, brave Warwick. What brings thee to France?

Q. Mar. Ay, now begins a second storm to rise; For this is he that moves both wind and tide. [He descends. Queen Margaret rises.]

War. From worthy Edward, king of Albion, My lord and sovereign, and thy vowed friend, I come in kindness, and unsought love, First, to do greetings to thy royal person, And, then, to crave a league of amity; And, lastly, to confirm that amity With mutual knot, if thou vouchsafed to grant That virtuous lady Bona, thy fair sister, To England's king in lawful marriage.

Q. Mar. If that so far doth. Henry's hope is done War. And, gracious madam, [To Bona.] in our king's behalf, I am commanded, with your leave and favour, Humbly to kiss your hand, and with my tongue To tell the passion of my sovereign's heart; Where fame, late entering at his heedful ears, Hath place'd thy beauty's image, and thy virtue.

Q. Mar. King Lewis, and lady Bona, hear me speak Before you answer Warwick. His demand Springs not from Edward's well-meant honest love But from deceit, bred by necessity: For how can tyrants safely govern home? Unless abroad they purchase great alliance? To prove him tyrant this reason may suffice,— That Henry liveth still: but were he dead, Yet here prince Edward stands, king Henry's son. Look therefore, Lewis, that by this league and marriage Thou draw not on thee! danger and dishonour; For though usurpers sway the rule awhile, Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth wrongs.

War. Injurious Margaret!

Prince. And why not queen?

War. Because thy father Henry did usurp, And thou no more art prince than she is queen.

Orf. Then, Warwick disannuls great John of Gaunt Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain; And, after John of Gaunt, Henry the fourth, Whose wisdom was a mirror to the wisest; And after that wise prince, Henry the fifth, Who by his prowess conquered all France From these our Henry lineally descends.

War. Oxford, how lags it, in this smooth discourse. You told not, how Henry the sixth hath lost All that which Henry the fifth had gotten? Methinks, these peers of France should smile at that But for the rest,—you tell a pedigree Of three score and two years: a silly time To make prescription for a kingdom's worth.

Orf. Why, Warwick, canst thou speak against thy liege, Whom thou obeyed'st thirty and six years, And not bewray thy treason with a blush? War. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the right, Now buckler falsehood with a pedigree? For shame! leave Henry, and call Edward king.

Orf. Call him my king, by whose injurious doom, My elder brother, the lord Aubrey Vere, Was done to death? and more than so, my father, Even in the downfall of his mellow'd years, When nature brought him to the door of death? No, Warwick, no; while life upholds this arm, This arm upholds the house of Lancaster.

War. And I the house of York.

K. Lew. Queen Margaret, prince Edward, and Oxford, Vouchsafe at our request to stand aside, While I use farther conference with Warwick.

Q. Mar. Heaven grant, that Warwick's words be witch him not! [They stand apart.]

K. Lew. Now, Warwick, tell me, even upon thy own science, Is Edward your true king? for I were loath.
To link with him that were not lawful chosen.
War. Thereon I pawn my credit, and mine honour.
K. Lew. But is he gracious in the people’s eye?
War. The more, that Henry was unfortunate.
K. Lew. Then farther, all dissimbling set aside,
Tell me for truth the measure of his love
Unto our sister Bona.
War. Such it seems,
As may beseech a monarch like himself.
Myself have often heard him say, and swear,
That this his love was an eternal plant:
Whereof the root was fix’d in virtue’s ground,
The leaves and fruit maint’ned with beauty’s sun.
Exempt from envy, but not from disdain,
Unless the lady Bona quit his pain.
K. Lew. Now, sister, let us hear your firm resolve.
Bona. Your grant, or your denial, shall be mine.—
Yet I confess, [To War.] that often ere this day,
When I have heard your king’s desert recounted,
Mine ear hath tempted judgment to desire.
K. Lew. Then, Warwick, thus.—our sister shall be Edward’s;
And now forthwith shall articles be drawn
Touching the jointure that your king must make,
Which with her dowry shall be counterpois’d.—
Draw near, queen Margaret, and be a witness,
That Bona shall be wile to the English king.
Prince. To Edward, but not to the English king.
Q. Mar. Deceitful Warwick! it was thy device
By this alliance to make void my suit:
Before thy coming, Lewis was Henry’s friend.
K. Lew. And still is friend to him and Margaret:
But if your title to the crown be weak,
As may appear by Edward’s good success,
Then ’tis but reason, that I be releas’d
From giving aid which late I promised.
Yet shall you have all kindness at my hand.
That your estate requires, and mine can yield.
War. Henry now lives in Scotland, at his ease,
Where having nothing, nothing can he lose.
And as for you yourself, our quondam queen,
You have a father able to maintain you,
And better ’t were you troubled him than France.
Q. Mar. Peace, impudent and shameless Warwick!
Proud setter-up and puller-down of kings,
I will not hence, till with my talk and tears,
Both full of truth, I make king Lewis behold
Thy sly conveyance, ¹ and thy lord’s false love:
For both of you are birds of self-same feather.
K. Lew. Warwick, this is some post to us, or thee.
Enter the Post.
Post. My lord ambassador, these letters are for you,
Sent from your brother, marques Montague.—
These from our king unto your majesty.—
And, madam, these for you; from whom I know not.
[They all read their letters.
Orf. I like it well, that our fair queen and mistress
Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at his.
Prince. Nay, mark how Lewis stamps as he were nettled:
¹ hope all’s for the best.
K. Lew. Warwick, what are thy news? and yours,
fair queen?,
Q. Mar. Mine, such as fill my heart with unhoy’d
War. Mine, full of sorrow and heart’s discontent,
K. Lew. What! has your king married the lady Grey,
And now, to soothe your forcery and his,
Sends me a paper to persuade me patience?
¹ Airifier. ² Frighten. ³ This word is not in 1 e.
KING HENRY VI.

Enter Gloster, Clarence, Somerset, Montague.

Glo. Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think you
Of this new marriage with the lady Grey?
Hath not our brother made a worthy choice?

Clar. Alas! you know, 'tis far from hence to France:
How could he stay till Warwick made return?

Som. My lords, forbear this talk: here comes the king.

Flourish. Enter King Edward, attended: Lady Grey, as Queen; Pembroke, Stafford, and Hasting.

Glo. And his well-chosen bride.

Clar. I mind to tell him plainly what I think.

K. Edw. Now, brother of Clarence, how like you
our choice,
That you stand pensive, as half malcontent?

Clar. As well as Lewis of France, or the earl of Warwick;
Which are so weak of courage, and in judgment,
That they'll take no offence at our abuse.

K. Edw. Suppose they take offence without a cause,
They are but Lewis and Warwick: I am Edward;
Your king and Warwick's, and must have my will.
Glo. And you shall have your will, because our king;
Yet hasty marriage seldom proveth well.

K. Edw. Yea, brother Richard, if you offended too?
Glo. Not I.

No; God forbid, that I should wish them sever'd
Whom God hath join'd together: ay, and 'twere pity,
To sunder them that yoke so well together.

K. Edw. Setting your scorns and your dislike aside,
Tell me some reason why the lady Grey
Should not become my wife, and England's queen.—
And you too, Somerset, and Montague,
Speak freely what you think.

Clar. Then this is mine opinion—that king Lewis
Becomes your enemy, for mocking him
About the marriage of the lady Bona.

Glo. And Warwick, doing what you gave in charge, is now dishonoured by this new marriage.

K. Edw. What, if both Lewis and Warwick be appear'd
By such invention as I can devise?

Mont. Yet to have joint'd with France in such alliance,
Would more have strengthen'd this our commonwealth,
Gainst foreign storms than any home-bred marriage.

Hast. Why, knows not Montague, that of itself
England is safe, if true within itself?

Mont. But the safer, when 'tis back'd with France.

I long, till Edward fall by war's mischance.

For mocking marriage with a dame of France.

[Exit all but Warwick.

War. I came from Edward as ambassador,
But I return his sworn and mortal foe:
Matter of marriage was the charge he gave me,
But dreadful war shall answer his demand.

Hast. And how may such a man dare to be
Whom none else dare to make a stole' but me?
Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow.
I was the chief that rais'd him to the crown,
And I'll be chief to bring him down again:
Not that I pity Henry's misery,
But seek revenge on Edward's mockery.

Exit.
Mess. My sovereign liege, no letters, and few words; But such as I, without your special pardon, Dare not relate.

K. Edw. Go to, we pardon thee; therefore, in brief, Tell me their words as near as thou canst guess them. What answer makes king Lewis unto our letters?

Mess. At my depart these were his very words:— "Go tell false Edward, thy supposed king, That Lewis of France is sending over maskers, To revel it with him and his new bride."

K. Edw. Is Lewis so brave? belike, he thinks me Henry.

But what said lady Bona to my marriage?

Mess. These were her words, utter’d with mild disdain:— "Tell him, in hope he’ll prove a widower shortly, I’ll wear the willow garland for his sake."

K. Edw. I blame not her, she could say little less; She had the wrong. But what said Henry’s queen? For I have heard, that she was there in place.

Mess. "Tell him," quoth she, "my mourning weeds are done, And I am ready to put armour on."

K. Edw. Belike, she minds to play the Amazon.

But what said Warwick to those injuries?

Mess. He, more incensed against your majesty Than all the rest, discharg’d me with these words:— "Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong, And therefore I’ll uncrown him ere ’tis long."

K. Edw. Ha! disturst the traitor breathe out so proud words!

Well, I will arm me, being thus forewarn’d: They shall have wars, and pay for their presumption. But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret?

Mess. Ay, gracious sovereign: they are so link’d in friendship, That young prince Edward marries Warwick’s daughter.

Clar. Belike, the elder; Clarence will have the younger. [Aside.] Now, brother king, farewell, and sit you fast, For I will hence to Warwick’s other daughter; That, though I want a kingdom, yet in marriage I may not prove inferior to yourself. — You, that love me and Warwick, follow me. [Exit.]

Glo. Not I. My thoughts aim at a farther matter: I stay not for the love of Edward, but the crown. K. Edw. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick! Yet am I arm’d against the worst can happen, And haste is needful in this desperate case.— Pembroke and Stafford, you in our behalf Go levy men, and make prepare for war; They are already, or quickly will be landed: Myself in person will straight follow you. [Exit Pembroke and Stafford.]

But, ere I go, Hastings, and Montague, Resolve my doubt: you twain, of all the rest, Are near to Warwick by blood, and by alliance: Tell me if you love Warwick more than me? If it be so, then both depart to him; I rather wish you foes, than hollow friends; But, if you mind to hold your true obedience, Give me assurance with some friendly vow, That I may never have you in suspect. Mont. So God help Montague as he proves true! Hast. And Hastings as he favours Edward’s cause! K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us?

Glo. Ay, in despite of all that shall withstand you K. Edw. Why so; then, am I sure of victory.

Now, therefore, let us hence; and lose no hour, Till we meet Warwick with his foreign power. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Plain in Warwickshire.

Enter Warwick and Oxford with French and English Forces.

War. Trust me, my lord, all bitherto goes well: The common people by numbers swarm to us.

Enter Clarence and Somerset.

But, see, where Somerset and Clarence come! Speak suddenly, my lords; are we all friends? Clar. Fear not that, my lord.

War. Then, gentle Clarence, welcome unto Warwick And welcome, Somerset,—I hold it cowardice, To rest mistrustful where a noble heart Hath pawn’d an open hand in sign of love; Else might I think, that Clarence, Edward’s brother, Were but a feigned friend to our proceedings: But welcome, sweet Clarence; my daughter shall be thine.

And now what rests, but in night’s coverture, Thy brother caring endlessly encamp’d, His soldiers lurking in the towns about, And but attended by a simple guard, We may surprise and take him at our pleasure? Our scouts have found the adventure very easy: That as Ulysses, and stout Diomede, With slight and manhood stole to Rheaus’ tents, And brought from thence the Thracian fatal seeds; So we, well cover’d with the night’s black mantle, At unawares may beat down Edward’s guard, And seize himself; I say not slaughter him, For I intend but only to surprise him.— You, that will follow me to this attempt, Applaud the name of Henry with your leader. [They all cry, Henry! Why, then, let’s on our way in silent sort: For Warwick and his friends, God and Saint George! [Exit.

SCENE III.—Edward’s Camp near Warwick.

Enter certain Watchmen, to guard the King’s tent.

1 Watch. Come on, my masters, each man take his stand: The king by this is set him down to sleep.

2 Watch. What, shall we not to bed? 1 Watch. Why, no; for he hath made a solemn vow Never to lie and take his natural rest, Till Warwick or himself be quite suppress’d.

2 Watch. To-morrow then, belike, shall be the day, If Warwick be so near as men report.

3 Watch. But say, I pray, what nobleman is that, That with the king here resteth in his tent? 1 Watch. ’T is the lord Hastings, the king’s chiefest friend.

3 Watch. O! is it so? But why commands the king, That his chief followers lodge in towns about him, While he himself keeps in the cold field?

2 Watch. ’T is the more honour, because more dangerous.

3 Watch. Ay, but give me worship and quietness; I like it better than a dangerous honour. If Warwick knew in what estate he stands, ’T is to be doubted, he would waken him.

1 Watch. Unless our halberds did shut up his parasage.
KING HENRY VI.

SCENE V. — A Park near Middleham Castle in Yorkshire.

Enter Gloster, Hastings, Sir William Stanley, and others.

Glo. Now, my lord Hastings, and sir William Stanley, Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither, Into this chiefest thicket of the park. Thus stands the case. You know, our king, my brother, Is prisoner to the bishop here, at whose hands He hath good usage and great liberty, And often, but attended with weak guard, Comes hunting this way to deport himself. I have advertised him by secret means, That if about this hour he make this way, Under the colour of his usual game, He shall here find his friends, with horse and men, To set him free from his captivity.

Enter King Edward, and a Huntsman.

Hunt. This way, my lord, for this way lies the game. K. Edw. Nay, this way, man: see, where the huntsmen stand.— Now, brother of Gloster, Hastings, and the rest, Stand you thus close to steal the bishop's deer? Glo. Brother, the time and case requireth haste: Your horse stands ready at the park corner. K. Edw. But whither shall we then? Hast. To Lynn, my lord; and ship from thence to Flanders.

Glo. Well guess'd, believe me; for that was my meaning.

K. Edw. Huntsman, what say'st thou? wilt thou go along?

SCENE IV. —London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Queen Elizabeth and Rivers.

Riv. Madam, what makes you in this sudden change? Q. Eliz. Why, brother Rivers, are you yet to learn, What late misfortune is befallen king Edward?

Riv. What! loss of some pitch'd battle against Warwick?

Q. Eliz. No, but the loss of his own royal person.

Riv. Then, is my sovereign slain?

Q. Eliz. Ay, almost slain, for he is taken prisoner; Either betray'd by falsehood of his guard, Or by his foe surpris'd at unawares: And, as I further have to understand, Is new committed to the bishop of York, Fell Warwick's brother, and by that our foe.

Riv. These news, I must confess, are full of grief, Yet, gracious madam, bear it as you may: Warwick may lose, that now hath won the day.

Q. Eliz. Till then, fair hope must hinder life's decay;
And I the rather wean me from despair,
For love of Edward's offspring in my womb:
This is it that makes me bridle passion,
And bear with mildness my misfortune's cross:
Ay; ay, for this I draw in many a tear,
And stop the rising of blood-sucking sighs,
Lest with my sighs or tears I blast or drown
King Edward's fruit, true heir to th' English crown.

Riv. But, madam, where is Warwick then become? Q. Eliz. I am informed that he comes towards London,
To set the crown once more on Henry's head.

Glo. Now, my lord Hastings, and sir William Stanley, Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither, Into this chiefest thicket of the park. Thus stands the case. K. Edw. Huntsman, what say'st thou? wilt thou go along?
Hunt. Better do so, than tarry and be hang'd.
Glo. Come then; away! let's have no more ado.
K. Edw. Bishop, farewell: shield thee from Warwicke's frown,
And pray that I may repossess the crown. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—A Room in the Tower.

Enter King Henry, Clarence, Warwick, Somerset, young Henry of Richmond, Oxford, Montagu, Lieutenant of the Tower, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Master lieutenant, now that God and friends Have shaken Edward from the regal seat,
And turn'd my captive state to liberty,
My fear to hope, my sorrows unto joys.
At our enlargment what are thy due fees?

Lieu. Subjects may challenge nothing of their soveraigns;
But if an humble prayer may prevail,
I then crave pardon of your majesty.

K. Hen. For what, lieutenant? for well using me?
Nay, be thou sure, I'll well requite thy kindness,
For that it made my imprisonment a pleasure:
Ay, such a pleasure as incaged birds
Conceive, when, after many moody thoughts,
At last by notes of household harmony
They quite forget their loss of liberty.—
But, Warwick, after God, thou set'st me free,
And chieflie therefore I thank God, and thee;
He was the author, thou the instrument.
Therefore, that I may conquer fortune's spite,
By living low, where fortune cannot hurt me,
And that the people of this blessed land
May not be punish'd with my thwarting stars,
Warwicke, although my head still wear the crown,
I here resign my government to thee,
For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds.

War. Your grace hath still been fam'd for virtuous,
And now may seem as wise as virtuous,
By spying, and avoiding, fortune's malice;
For few men rightly temper with the stars:
Yet in this one thing let me blame your grace,
For choosing me when Clarence is in place.

Clar. No, Warwick, thou art worthy of the sway,
To whom the heavens in thy nativity
Adjudg'd an olive branch, and laurel crown,
As likely to be blest in peace, and war;
And, therefore, I yield thee my free consent.

War. And I choose Clarence only for protector.

K. Hen. Warwick, and Clarence, give me both your hands.

Now join your hands, and with your hands your hearts,
That no dissension hinder government;
I make you both protectors of this land,
While I myself will lead a private life,
And in devotion spend my latter days.

To sin's rebuke, and my Creator's praise.

War. What answers Clarence to his sovereign's will?

Clar. That he consents; if Warwick yield consent;
For on thy fortune I repose myself.

War. Why then, though loath yet must I be content.
We'll yoke together, like a double shadow
To Henry's body, and supply his place;
I mean, in bearing weight of government,
While he enjoys the honour, and his ease.
And, Clarence, now then, it is more than needful,
Forwith that Edward be pronounce'd a traitor,
And all his lands and goods confiscate.
For many men, that stumble at the threshold,
Are well foretold that danger lurks within.
K. Edw. Tush, man! abominations must not now
affright us:
By fair or foul means we must enter in,
For hither will our friends repair to us.
Hast. My liege, I’ll knock once more to summon them.
[Knocks.]
Enter, on the Walls, the Mayor of York, and his Brethren.
May. My lords, we were forewarned of your coming,
And shut the gates for safety of ourselves;
For now we owe allegiance unto Henry.
K. Edw. But, master mayor, if Henry be your king,
Yet Edward, at the least, is duke of York.
May. True, my good lord; I know you for no less.
K. Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but my dukedom.
As being well content with that alone.
[Exeunt for a while.
[Glo. But when the fox hath once got in his nose,
He’ll soon find means to make the body follow. [Aside.
Hast. Why, master mayor, why stand you in a doubt?
Open the gates: we are king Henry’s friends.
May. Ay, say you so? the gates shall then be open’d.
Glo. A wise stout captain he’s, and soon persauded.
Hast. The good old man would fain that all were well,
So ‘t were not long of him; but, being enter’d,
I doubt not, I, but we shall soon persuade
Both him and all his brethren unto reason.
Re-enter the Mayor, and Two Aldermen, below.
K. Edw. So, master mayor: these gates must not be shut,
But in the night, or in the time of war.
What! fear not, man; but yield me up the keys,
[ Takes his Keys.
For Edward will defend the town, and thee,
And all those friends that deign to follow me.
March. Enter Montgomery, and Forces.
Glo. Brother, this is sir John Montgomery,
Our trusty friend, unless I be deceiv’d.
K. Edw. Welcome, sir John; but why come you in arms?
Mont. To help king Edward in his time of storm,
As every loyal subject ought to do.
K. Edw. Thanks, good Montgomery; but we now forget
Our title to the crown, and only claim
Our dukedom, till God please to send the rest.
Mont. Then fare you well, for I will hence again:
I came to serve a king, and not a duke.
Drummer, strike up, and let us march away.
[A March begun.
’K. Edw. Nay, stay, sir John, a while; and we’ll debate
By what safe means the crown may be recover’d.
Mont. What talk you of disputing? in few words,
If you ‘ll not here proclaim yourself our king,
I’ll leave you to your fortune, and be gone.
To keep them back that come to succour you.
Why shall we fight, if you pretend no title?
Glo. Why, brother, wherefore stand you on nice points?
K. Edw. When we grow stronger, then we’ll make our claim:
Till then, it is wisdom to conceal our meaning.
Hast. Away with scrupulous wit, now arms must rule.
Glo. And fearless minds climb soonest unto crowns.
Brother, we will proclaim you out of hand:
The bruit thereof will bring you many friends.
K. Edw. Then be it as you will; for it is my right,
And Henry but usurps the diadem.
Mont. Ay, now my sovereign speaketh like himself
And now will I be Edward’s champion.
Hast. Sound, trumpet! Edward shall be here proclaim’d.—
Come, fellow-soldier, make thou proclamation.
[Give him a Paper. Flourish
Sold. [Reads.] “Edward the fourth, by the grace of God, king of England and France, and lord of Ire-
lan’d.”
Mont. And whose’er gainsays king Edward’s right,
By this I challenge him to single fight.
[Thrown down his Gauntlet.
All. Long live Edward the fourth!
K. Edw. Thanks, brave Montgomery, and thank-unto you all:
If fortune serve me, I’ll requite this kindness.
Now, for this night, let’s harbour here in York,
And when the morning sun shall raise his car
Above the border of this horizon,
We’ll forward towards Warwick, and his mates;
For, well I wot, that Henry is no soldier.—
Ali, foreward Clarence! how evil it beseems thee,
To flatter Henry, and forsake thy brother!
Yet, as we may, we’ll meet both thee and Warwick
Come on, brave soldiers: doubt not of the day:
And, that once gotten, doubt not of large pay.
[Exeunt.
SCENE VIII.—London. A Room in the Palace.
Flourish. Enter King Henry, Warwick, Clarence,
Montague, Exeter, and Oxford.
With hasty Germans, and blust Hollander,
Hath pass’d in safety through the narrow seas,
And with his troops doth march amain to London;
And many giddy people flock to him.
K. Hen. Let’s levy men, and beat him back again.
Clar. A little fire is quickly trodden out.
Which, being suffer’d, rivers cannot quench.
War. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted friends.
Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in war;
Those will I muster up:—and thou, son Clarence,
Shalt stir up in Suffolk, Norfolk, and in Kent.
The knights and gentlemen to come with thee:—
Thou, brother Montague, in Buckingham,
Northampton, and in Leicester, shalt find
Men well inclin’d to hear what thou command’st:—
And thou, brave Oxford, wond’rous well belov’d
In Oxfordshire shalt muster up thy friends.—
My sovereign, with the loving citizens.
Like to his island girt in with the ocean,
Or modest Dian circled with her nymphs,
Shall rest in London, till we come to him.
Fair lords, take leave, and stand not to reply.—
Farewell, my sovereign.
K. Hen. Farewell, my Hector, and my Troy’s true hope.
Clar. In sign of truth I kiss your highness’ hand.
K. Hen. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate.
Mont. Comfort, my lord:—and so I take my leave.
Oxf. And thus [Kissing Henry’s hand] I seal my truth, and bid adieu.
K. Hen. Sweet Oxford, and my loving Montague,
And all at once, once more a happy farewell.
War. Farewell, sweet lords: let’s meet at Coventry.

1 Not in f. e. 2 This word is not in f. e. 3 Some mod. eds. have needlessly transferred this speech to Oxford.
SCENE I.—Coventry.

Enter upon the walls, Warwick, the Mayor of Coventry, Two Messengers, and others.

War. Where is the post that came from valiant Oxford?

How far hence is thy lord, mine honest fellow?

1 Mess. By this at Dunsmore, marching hitherward.

War. How far off is our brother Montague?

Where is the post that came from Montague?

2 Mess. By this at Dunsmore, with a puissant troop.

Enter Sir John Somerville.

War. Say, Somerville, what says my loving son?

And, by thy guess, how-might Clarence now?

Som. At Southampton I did leave him with his forces,

And do expect him here some two hours hence.

[Drum heard.

War. Then Clarence is at hand. I hear his drum.

Som. It is not bis, my lord; here Southampton lies;

The drum your honour hears marcheth from Warwick.

War. Who should that be? belike, unlook'd-for friends.

Som. They are at hand, and you shall quickly know.

March. Flourish. Enter King Edward, Gloster, and Forces, [parle.

K. Edu. Go, trumpet, to the walls, and sound a

Glo. See, how the early Warwick mans the wall.

War. O, unbend spire! is sportful Edward come?

Where slept our scouts, or how are they seduced,

That we could hear no news of his repair? [gates?

K. Edu. Now, Warwick, wilt thou open the city.

Speak gentle words, and humbly bend thy knee,

Call Edward king, and at his hands beg mercy,

And he shall pardon thee those outrages.

War. Nay, rather, wilt thou draw thy forces hence,

Confess who set thee up and pluck'd thee down?

Call Warwick patron, and be penitent.

And thou shalt still remain—the duke of York.

Glo. I thought, at least, he would have said the king:

Or did he make the jest against his will?

War. Is not a dukedom, sir, a goodly gift?

Glo. Ay, by my faith, for a poor earl to give.

I'll do thee service for so good a gift.

War. 'T was I, that gave the kingdom to thy brother.

K. Edu. Why then, 'tis mine, if but by Warwick's gift.

War. Thou art no Atlas for a great a weight:

And, weaking, Warwick takes his gift again;

And Henry is my king, Warwick his subject.

K. Edu. But Warwick's king is Edward's prisoner:

And, gallant Warwick, do but answer this;

What is the body, when the head is off?

Glo. Alas! that Warwick had no more forecast,

But, whilst he thought to steal the single ten,

The king was silly finger'd from the deck!

You left poor Henry at the bishop's palace.

And, ten to one, you'll meet him in the Tower.

K. Edu. 'T is even so; yet you are Warwick still.

Glo. Come, Warwick, take the time; kneel down, kneel down.

Nay, when? strike now, or else the iron cools.

War. I had rather chop this hand off at a blow,

And with the other dicing it at thy face,

Than beer so low a sail to stake to thee.

K. Edu. Sail how thou canst, have wind and tide thy friend,

This hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair,

Shall, whilst thy head is warm, and new cut off,

Write in the dust this sentence with thy blood.

'Wind-changing Warwick now can change no more.'

Enter Oxford, with Drum and Colours.

War. O cheerful colours! see, where Oxford comes.

[Oxford and his Forces enter the City.

Glo. The gates are open, let us enter too.

K. Edu. So other foes may set upon our backs.

Stand we in good array; for they, no doubt,

Will issue out again, and bid us battle.

If not, the city being but of small defence,

We'll quickly raise the traitors in the same.

War. O! welcome Oxford, for we want thy help.

[Enter Montague, with Drum and Colours.

Mont. Montague, Montague, for Lancaster!

[he and his forces enter the City.

Glo. Thou and thy brother both shall buy this treason.

Even with the dearest blood your bodies bear.

K. Edu. The harder match'd, the greater victory.

My mind presageth happy gain, and conquest.

[Enter Somerset, with Drum and Colours.

Som. Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster!

[he and his forces enter the City.
Have been as piercing as the mid-day sun,
To search the secret treasons of the world;
The wrinkles in my brows, now fill'd with blood,
Were lik'd oft to kingly sepulchres;
For who liv'd king, but I could dig his grave?
And who diste smile when Warwick bent his brow?
Lo, now my glory smear'd in dust and blood!
My parks, my walks, my mansions that I had,
Even now forsake me: and, of all my lands,
Is nothing left me, but my body's length.
Why, what is pomp, rule, reign, but earth and dust?
And, live we how we can, yet die we must.

Enter Oxford and Somerset.

Som. Ah, Warwick! Warwick! Wert thou as we are not?
We might recover all our loss again.
The queen from France hath brought a puissant power;
Even now we heard the news. Ah, couldst thou fly?
War. Why, then I would not fly.—Ah, Montague!
If thou be there, sweet brother, take my hand,
And with thy lips keep in my soul awhile.
Thou lov'st me not; for, brother, if thou didst,
Thy tears would wash this cold congealed blood,
That gins my lips, and will not let me speak.
Come quickly, Montague, or I am dead.

Som. Ah, Warwick! Montague hath breath'd his last;
And to the latest gasp, cried out for Warwick,
And said—'Commend me to my valiant brother.'
And more he would have said; and more he spoke
Which sounded like a cannon in a vault,
That might not be distinguish'd; but, at last,
I well might hear, deliver'd with a groan,—
Oh, farewell Warwick!—
War. Sweet rest his soul!—Fly, lords, and save yourselves;
For Warwick bids you all farewell, to meet in heaven.

[Disc.]

Oxf. Away, away, to meet the queen's great power!
[Execut, bearing off Warwick's Body.

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Flourish. Enter King Edward in triumph; with Clarence, Gloster, and the rest.

K. Edu. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course,
And we are grace'd with wreaths of victory.
But in the midst of this bright shining day,
I spy a black, suspicious, threat'ning cloud,
That will encounter with our glorious sun,
Ere he attain his easy western bed:
I mean, my lords, those powers, that the queen
Hath rais'd in Gallia, have arrive'd our coast,
And, as we hear, march on to fight with us.

Clar. A little gale will soon disperse that cloud,
And blow it to the source from whence it came:
Thy very beams will dry those vapours up,
For every cloud engenders not a storm.

Glo. The queen is valu'd thirty thousand strong,
And Somerset, with Oxford, file to her:
If she have time to breathe, be well assure'd,
Her faction will be full as strong as ours.

K. Edu. We are advertised by our loving friends,
That they do hold their course toward Towsbury,
We, having now the best at Barnet field,
Will thither straight, for willingness ride way;
And, as we march, our strength will be augmented
In every county as we go along.—
Strike up the drum! cry—Courage! and away.

[Flourish. Execut]
SCENE IV.—Plains near Tewkesbury.

March. Enter Queen Margaret, Prince Edward, Somerset, Oxford, and Soldiers.

Q. Mar. Great lords, wise men ne'er sit and wai their loss.

But cheerly seek how to redress their harms.

What thoughtful the most be now blown over-board,
The cable broke, the holding anchor lost,
And half our sailors swallowed in the flood,
Yet lives our pilot still: 'is not meet that he Should leave the helm, and, like a fearful lad,
With tearful eyes add water to the sea,
And give more strength to that which hath too much;
Whilest in his mean the ship splits on the rock,
Which industry and courage might have saved?

Ah! what a shame! ah! what a fault were this.

Say, Warwick was our anchor; what of that?
And Montague our top-mast; what of him?
Our slaughter'd friends the tackles; what of these?
Why, is not Oxford here another anchor,
And Somerset another goodly mast?
The friends of France our shrouds and tackles?
And, though unskilful, why not Ned and I
For once allowed the skillful pilot's charge?

We will not from the helm to sit and weep,
But keep our course, though the rough wind say no,
From shelves and rocks that threaten us with wreack.

As good to chide the waves, as speak them fair.

And what is Edward but a ruthless sea?
What Clarence but a quicksand of deceit?
And Richard but a ragged fatal rock?
All these the enemies to our poor bark.

Say, you can swim; alas! 'tis but a while:
Tread on the sand; why, there you quickly sink:
Beside the rock; the tide will wash you off,
Or else you fanish; that's a threefold death.

This speak I, lords, to let you understand,
If case some one of you would fly from us,
That there's no hop'd-for mercy with the brothers,
More with ruthless waves, with sands, and rocks.

Why, courage, then! what cannot be avoided,
'T were childish weakness to lament, or fear.

Prince. Methinks, a woman of this valiant spirit
Should, if a coward heard her speak these words,
Infect his breast with magnanimity,
And make him, as tall, foil a man at arms.

I speak not this, as doubting any here:
For, did but I but suspect a fearful man,
He should have leave to go away belimes,
Lest in our need he might infect another,
And make him of like spirit to himself.

If any such be here, as God forbid!
Let him depart before we need his help.

Oxf. Women and children of so high a courage,
And warriors faint! why, 't were perpetual shame.—
O, brave young prince! thy famous grandfather
Doth live again in thee: long may'st thou live,
To bear his image, and renew his glories!

Som. And he, that will not fight for such a hope,
Go home to bed, and, like the owl by day,
If he arise, be mock'd and wonder'd at.

Q. Mar. Thanks, gentle Somerset:—sweet Oxford,
thanks.

Prince. And take his thanks, that yet hath nothing else.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, lords, for Edward is at hand,
Ready to fight: therefore, be resolute.

Not in 1.6.

Oxf. I thought no less: it is his policy
To haste thus fast, to find us unprovided.

Som. But he's deceiv'd: we are in readiness.

Q. Mar. This cheers my heart to see your forwardness
Oxf. Here pitch our battle: hence we will not budge
Flourish and March. Enter King Edward, Clarence, Gloster, and Forces.

K. Edw. Brave followers, yonder stands the thorny wood,

Which, by the heavens' assistance and your strength
Must by the roots be hewn up yet ere night
I need not add more fuel to your fire,
For, well I wit, ye blaze to burn them out.

Give signal to the fight, and to it, lords.

Q. Mar. Lords, knights, and gentlemen, what I should say,

My tears gainsay; for every word I speak,
Ye see, I drink the water of my eye.

Therefore, no more but this.—Henry, your sovereign,
Is prisoner to the foe; his state usurp'd,
His realm a slaughterhouse, his subjects slain,
His statutes cancel'd, and his treasure sween,
And yonder is the wolf that makes this spoil.

You fight in justice: then, in God's name, lords,
Be valiant, and give signal to the fight.

[Exeunt both Armies.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Same.

Alarums: Excursions: and afterwards a Retreat.

Then enter King Edward, Clarence, Gloster, and Forces; with Queen Margaret, Oxford, and Somerset. Prisoners.

K. Edw. Now, here a period of tumultuous broils.

Away with Oxford to Hamme's castle straight:

For Somerset, off with his guilty head.

Go, bear them hence: I will not hear them speak.

Oxf. For my part, I'll not trouble thee with words.

Som. Nor I: but stoop with patience to my fortune,

[Exeunt Oxford and Somerset, guarded.

Q. Mar. So part we sadly in this troublous world,
To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem.

K. Edw. Is proclamation made, that who finds Edward

Shall have a high reward, and he his life?

Glo. It is: and, lo! where youthful Edward comes.

K. Edw. Enter Soldiers, with Prince Edward.

G. Edw. Bring forth the gallant, let us hear him speak.

What! can so young a thorn begin to prick?

Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make,
For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects,
And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to?

Prince. Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York,
Suppose that I am now my father's mouth:
Resign thy chair, and where I stand kneel thou,
Whilst I propose the self-same words to thee,
Which, traitor, thou wouldst have me answer to.

Q. Mar. Ah, that thy father had been so resolved!

Glo. That you might still have worn the petticoat,
And ne'er have stol'n the breech from Lancaster.

Prince. Let Aesop tinkle in a winter's night;

Hus curricular riddles sort not with this place.

Glo. By heaven, brat, I'll plague you for that word.

Q. Mar. Ay, thou wast born to be a plague to men.

Glo. For God's sake, take away this captive soild.

Prince. Nay, take away this scolding crook-back, rather.

K. Edw. Peace! wiltful boy, or I will charm your tongue.
SCENE VI._London. A Room in the Tower.

KING HENRY is discovered reading. Enter GLOSTER and the Lieutenant.

Glo. Good day, my lord. What, at your book so hard?
K. Hen. Ay, my good lord: my lord, I should say rather:

'T is sin to flatter; good was little better:
Good Gloster, and good devil, were alike,
And both preposterous; therefore, not good lord.
Glo. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves: we must confer.

[Exit Lieutenant.]

K. Hen. So flies the reckless shepherd from the wolf
So first the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece,
And next his throat unto the butcher's knife.—
What scene of death hath Rescius now to act?
Glo. Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind:
The thief doth fear each bush an officer.
K. Hen. The bird, that hath been lined in a bush,
With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush;
And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird,
Have now the fatal object in my eye,
Where my poor young was lim'd, was caught, and kill'd d
Glo. Why, what a peevish fool was that of Crete,
That taught his son the office of a fowl?
And yet, for all his wings, the fool was drown'd.
K. Hen. I, Daddanes; my poor boy, Icarus,
Thy father, Mimes, that denied our course;
The sun, that sord'd the wings of my sweet boy,
Thy brother Edward: and thyself, the sea,
Whose envious gulf did swallow up his life.
Ah! kill me with thy weapon, not with words.
My breast can better brook thy dagger's point,
Than can my ears that tragic history.
But wherefore dost thou come? is 't for my life?
Glo. Think'st thou I am an executioner?
K. Hen. A persecutor, I am sure, thou art:
If murdering innocents be executing,
Why, then thou art an executioner.
Glo. Thy son I kill'd for his presumption.
K. Hen. Hadst thou been kill'd, when first thou didst presume,
Thou hadst not liv'd to kill a son of mine.
And thus I prophesy,—that many a thousand,
Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear;
And many an old man's sigh, and many a widow's;
And many an orphan's water-standing eye,—
Men for their sons', wives for their husbands',
Orphans for their parents' timeless death,
Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born.
The owl shriek'd at thy birth, an evil sign:
The night-crow cried, a boding luckless tune;
Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempest shook down trees
The raven rook'd her on the chimney's top,
And chattering pies in dismal disorders sung.
Thy mother feit more than a mother's pain,
And yet brought forth less than a mother's hope;
To wit,—an indigent deform'd lump,
Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree.
Teeth hadst thou in thy head, when thou wast born,
To signify, thou canst not bite the world:
Ano, if the rest be true which I have heard,
Thou canst—

Glo. I'll hear no more.—Die, prophet, in thy speech.

[Stabs him.]

K. Hen. Ay, and for much more slaughter after this.
O! God forgive my sins, and pardon thee.

[Dies]
Glo. What! will the aspiring blood of Lancaster
Sink in the ground? I thought it would have mounted.
See, how my sword weeps for the poor king's death!
O, may such purple tears be always shed!
From those that wish the downfall of our house!—
If any spark of life be yet remaining,
Down, down to hell; and say I sent thee thither,
[Stabs him again.]

I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear.
Indeed, 'tis true, that Henry told me of;
For I have often heard my mother say.
I came into the world with my legs forward.

I had no reason, think ye, to make haste.
And seek their ruin that usurp'd our right?
The midwife wonder'd; and the women cried,
"O, Jesus bless us! he is born with teeth!"
And so I was; which plainly signified
That I should snarl, and bite, and play the dog.
Then, since the heavens have sharpen'd my body so,
Let hell make crook'd my mind to answer it.
I have no brother, I am like no brother;
And this word love, which greybeards call divine,
Be resident in men like one another,
And not in me: I am myself alone.—

Clarence, beware: thou keep'st me from the light;
But I will sort a pitchy day for thee;
For I will buzz abroad such prophecies,
That Edward shall be fearful of his life;
And then, to purge his fear, I'll be thy death.

King Henry, and the prince his son, are gone:
Clarence, thy turn is next, and then the rest;
Counting myself but bad, till I be best.—
I'll throw thy body in another room,
And triumph, Henry in thy day of doom.

[Exit with the Body.

SCENE VII.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

King Edward is discovered sitting on his Throne.1
Queen Elizabeth; a Nurse with the Infant Prince,
Clarence, Hastings, and others.

K. Edw. Once more we sit in England's royal throne.
Re-purchas'd with the blood of enemies.
What valiant foe-men, like to autumn's corn,
Have we mow'd down, in tops of all their pride?
Three dukes of Somerset, threefold renown'd
For hardy and redoubt'd2 champions:

Two Cliffsords, as the father and the son;
And two Northumberlands; two braver men;
Ne'er spur'd their courser's at the trumpet's sound.
With them, the two brave bears, Warwick and Mowbray,
That in their chains fetter'd the kindly lion,
And made the forest tremble when they roar'd.
Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat,
And made our footstool of security.—

Enter Gloster behind.3
Come hither, Bess, and let me kiss my boy.—

[Aside.

For yet I am not look'd on in the world.
This shoulder was ordain'd so thick, to heave;
And heave it shall some weight, or break my back.—

Work thou the way, and that shall execute.

K. Edw. Clarence, and Gloster, love my lovely queen
And kiss your princely nephew, brothers both.

Clar. The duty that I owe unto your majesty,
I seal upon the lips of this sweet babe. [Kissing it.]

K. Edw. Thanks, noble Clarence; worthy brother,
thanks.

Glo. And, that I love the tree from whence thou sprang'st, [Kissing the infant.]
Witness the loving kiss I give the fruit.—

[Aside. To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his master,
And cried—all hail! when as he meant—all harm.

K. Edw. Now am I seated as my soul delights,
Having my country's peace, and brothers' loves.

Clar. What will your grace have done with Margare,
Reignier, her father, to the king of France
Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem.
And hither have they sent it for her ransom.

K. Edw. A way with her, and wait her hence to France—
And now what rests, but that we spend the time
With stately triumphs, mirthful comic shows,
Such as beft the pleasure of the court?
Sound, drums and trumpets!—farewell, sour annoy;
For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy.

[Exeunt.

SCENE, England.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

Enter Gloster.

Glo. Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this sun¹ of York;
And all the clouds that lower'd upon our house,
In the deep bosom of the ocean buried.
Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths;
Our bruised arms hung up for monuments;
Our stern alarums chang'd to merry meetings,
Our dreadful marches to delightful measures.
Grim-visag'd war hath smooth'd his wrinkled front;
And now, instead of mounting barb'd² steeds,
To fright the souls of fearful adversaries,
He capes nimbly in a lady's chamber,
To the lascivious pleasing of a lute.³

But I, that am not shap'd for sportive tricks,
Nor made to court an amorous looking-glass;
I, that am rudely stamp'd, and want love's majesty,
To strut before a wanton ambling nymph;
I, that am curst; I'd thus of fair proportion,
Cheated of feature by dissembling nature,
Deform'd, unfinish'd, sent before my time
Into this breathing world, scarce half made up,
And that so lamely and un-fashionably,
That dogs bark at me, as I halt by them;
Why I, in this weak piping time of peace,
Have no delight to pass away the time,
Unless to see my shadow in the sun,
And descant on mine own deformity:
And therefore, since I cannot prove a lover,
To entertain these fair well-spoken days,
I am determined to prove a villain,
And hate the idle pleasures of these days.
Plots have I laid, inductions dangerous,
By drunken prophesies, libels, and dreams,
To set my brother Clarence, and the king,
In deadly hate the one against the other:
And, if king Edward be as true and just,
As I am subtle, false, and treacherous,
This day should Clarence closely be mew'd up,
About a prophecy, which says—that G
Of Edward's heirs the murderer shall be.

Dive, thoughts, down to my soul: here Clarence comes

Enter Clarence, guarded, and Brakenbury.

Brother, good day. What means this armed guard,
That waits upon your grace?

Clar. His majesty,

Tendering my person's safety, hath appointed
This conduct to convey me to the Tower.

Glo. Upon what cause?

Clar. Because my name is George

Glo. Alack! my lord, that fault is none of yours:
He should, for that, commit your godfathers.

¹ The cognizance of Edward IV., consisted of three suns.

KING RICHARD III.
ACT I.

Glo. Well, your imprisonment shall not be long; I will deliver you, or else lie for you. [Embracing him.]

Clar. I must protest: farewell.

[Glo: Glo: Go, troth, the path that thou shalt never return, Simple, plain Clarence—do love thee so, That I will shortly send thy soul to heaven, If heaven will take the present at our hands. But who comes here? the new-delivered Hastings?

Enter HASTINGS.

Hast. Good time of day unto my gracious lord.

Glo. As much unto my good lord chamberlain.

Well are you welcome to this open air. How hath your lordship brook'd imprisonment?

Hast. With patience, noble lord, as prisoners must. But I shall live, my lord, to give them thanks, That were the cause of my imprisonment.

Glo. No doubt, no doubt; and so shall Clarence too, For they that were your enemies are his, And have prevail'd as much on him as you.

Hast. More pity, that the eagles should be mew'd, While kites and buzzards prey at liberty.

Glo. What news abroad?

Hast. No news so bad abroad, as this at home:— The king is sickly, weak, and melancholy, And his physicians fear him mightily.

Glo. Now, by Saint Paul!, that news is bad indeed! O! he hath kept an evil diet long, And over-much consum'd his royal person: 'Tis very grievous to be thought upon. Where is he? in his bed?

Hast. He is.

Glo. Go you before, and I will follow you.

[Exit HASTINGS.]

He cannot live, I hope; and must not die, Till George be pack'd with posthaste up to heaven I'll in, to urge his hatred more to Clarence, With lies well stow'd with weighty arguments; And, if I fail not in my deep intent, Clarence hath not another day to live: Which done, God take king Edward to his mercy, And leave the world for me to battle in, For then I'll marry Warwick's youngest daughter. What though I kill'd her husband, and her father? The readiest way to make the wench amends, Is to become her husband, and her father: The which will I; not all so much for love, As for another secret close intent, By marrying her which I must reach unto. But yet I run before my horse to market: Clarence still breathes; Edward still lives and reigns When they are gone, then must I count my gains.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Street.
Enter the Corpse of King HENRY the Sixth, borne in an open Coffin, Gentlemen, bearing Halberds, to guard it, and Lady ANNE as mourner.

Anne. Set down, set down your honourable load, If honour may be shrouded in a hearse, Whilst I a while obsequiously lament Th' untimely fall of virtuous Lancaster— Poor king-cold figure of a holy king! Pale ashes of the house of Lancaster! Thou bloodless remnant of that royal blood, Be it lawful that I invoke thy ghost, To hear the lamentations of poor Anne,
Scene II.  King Richard III.  511

Glo.  More wonderful, when angels are so angry.—
Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman,
Of these supposed evils to give me leave
By circumstance but to acquit myself.

Anne.  Vouchsafe, diffus'd infection of a man,
For these known evils but to give me leave
By circumstance to curse thy cursed self.

Glo. Fairer than tongue can name thee, let me have
Some patient leisure to excuse myself.

Anne.  Fouler than heart can think thee, thou canst make
No excuse current, but to hang thyself.

Glo.  By such despair I should accuse myself.
Anne.  And, by despairing, shalt thou stand excuse a
For doing worthy vengeance on thyself,
That didst unworthy slaughter upon others.

Glo.  Say, that I slew them not?

Anne.  Then they were not slain.
But dead they are, and, devilish slave, by thee.

Glo.  I did not kill your husband.
Anne.  Why, then he is alive
Glo.  Nay, he is dead; and slain by Edward's hand.

Anne.  In thy foul throat thou liest: queen Margaret saw
Thy murderous' falchion smoking in his blood;
The which thou once didst bend against her breast,
But that thy brothers beat aside the point.

Glo.  I was provoked by her slanderous tongue,
That laid their guilt upon my guiltless shoulders,

Anne.  Thou wast provoked by thy bloody mind,
That never dreamt on aught but butcheries.

Didst thou not kill this king?

Glo.  I grant ye.

Anne.  Dost grant me, hedge-hog? then, God grant me too,
Thou may'st be damned for that wicked deed!

O! he was gentle, mild, and virtuous.

Glo.  The fitter* for the King of heaven that hath him
Anne.  He is in heaven, where thou shalt never come.

Glo.  Let him thank me, that holp to send him thither,
For he was fitter for that place than earth.

Anne.  And thou unfit for any place but hell.

Glo.  Yes, one place else, if you will hear me name it.
Anne.  Some dungeon.

Glo.  Your bed-chamber.

Anne.  Ill rest beside the chamber where thou liest
Glo.  So will it, madam, till I lie with you.

Anne.  I hope so.

Glo.  I know so.—But, gentle lady Anne,—
To leave this keen encounter of our wits,
And fall something* into a slower method,
Is not the causer of the timeless deaths
Of these Plantagenets, Henry, and Edward,
As blameless as the executioner?

Anne.  Thou wast the cause, and most accur'd effect
Glo.  Your beauty was the cause of that effect;
Your beauty, that did haunt me in my sleep,
To undertake the death of all the world,
So I might live* one hour in your sweet bosom.

Anne.  If I thought that, I tell thee, homicide,
These nails should rend that beauty from my cheeks.

Glo.  These eyes could not endure that beauty wreck;
You should not blemish it, if I stood by:
As all the world is cheered by the sun,
So I by that; it is my day, my life.

Anne.  Black night o'ershade thy day, and death thy life!

KING RICHARD III.

ACT I.

Glo. Curse not thyself; fair creature; thou art both.
Anne. I would I were, to be reveng'd on thee.
Glo. It is a quarrel most unnatural,
To be reveng'd on him that loveth thee.
Anne. It is a quarrel just and reasonable,
To be reveng'd on him that kill'd my husband.
Glo. He that beares thee, lady, of thy husband,
Did it to help thee to a better husband.
Anne. His better doth not breathe upon the earth.
Glo. He lives that loves you better than he could.
Anne. Name him.
Glo. Plantagenet.
Anne. Why, that was he.
Glo. The self-same name, but one of better nature.
Anne. Where is he?
Glo. Here: [She spits at him.] Why
dost thou spit at me?
Anne. 'T were it mortal poison, for thy sake!
Glo. Never came poison from so sweet a place.
Anne. Never hung poison on a fouler toad.
Out of my sight! thou dost infect mine eyes.
Glo. Thine eyes, sweet lady, have infected me.
Anne. Would they were basilisks, to strike thee dead!
Glo. I would they were, that I might die at once,
For now they kill me with a living death.
Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn salt tears,
Sham'd their aspects with store of childish drops:
These eyes, which never shed remorseful tear;
No, when my father York, and Edward wept
To hear the piteous mean that Rutland made,
When black-fae'd Clifford shook his sword at him;
Nor when thy warlike father, like a child,
Told the sad story of my father's death,
And twice times made pause to sob and weep,
That all the standers-by had wet their checks,
Like trees bedash'd with rain; in that sad time
My manly eyes did seern an humble tear:
And what these sorrows could not thence exhale,
Thy beauty hath, and made them blind with weeping.
I never sued to friend, nor enemy;
My tongue could never learn sweet smoothing word;
But now thy beauty is propos'd my fee,
My proud heart stirs, and prompts my tongue to speak.
[She looks scornfully at him.
Teach not thy lip such scorn; for it was made
For kissing, lady, not for such contempt.
If thy revengeful heart cannot forgive,
Lo! here I lend thee this sharp-pointed sword;
Which if thou please to hide in this true breast,
And let the soul forth that adorest thee,
I lay it naked to the deadly stroke,
And humbly beg the death upon my knee.
[He lays his Breast open: she offers at it with his Sword.
Nay, do not pause; for I did kill king Henry:
But 'twas thy beauty that provoked me.
Nay, now despach; 'twas I that stabbed young Edward:
But 'twas thy heavenly face that set me on.
[She lets fall the Sword.
Take up the sword again, or take me up.
Anne. Arise, dissembler: though I wish thy death,
I will not be thy executioner.
Glo. Then bid me kill myself, and I will do it.
[Taking up the Sword.
Anne. I have already.
That was in thy rage:
Speak it again, and even with the word.
This hand, which for thy love did kill thy love,
Shall for thy love kill a far truer love:
To both their deaths shalt thou be necessary.
Anne. I would I knew thy heart.
Glo. 'Tis figur'd in my tongue.
Anne. I fear me, both are false.
Glo. Then, never man was true.
Anne. Well, well, put up your sword.
Glo. Say, then, my peace is made.
Anne. That shalt thou know hereafter.
Glo. But shall I live in hope? [She puts on his Sword.
Anne. All men, I hope, live so.
Glo. Vouchsafe to wear this ring.
Anne. To take, is not to give. [She puts on the Ring
Glo. Look, how my ring encompasseth thy finger,
Even so thy breast encloseth my poor heart;
Wear both of them, for both of them are thine.
And if thy poor devoted suppliant5 may
But beg one favour at thy gracious hand,
Thou dost confirm his happiness for ever.
Anne. What is it?
Glo. That it may please you leave these sad designs
To him that hath most10 cause to be a mourner,
And presently repair to Crosby-place,
Where (after I have solemnly inter'd,
At Chertsey monastery, this noble king,
And wet his grave with my repentant tears)
I will with all expedient duty see you:
For divers unknown reasons, I beseech you,
Grant me this boon.
Anne. With all my heart; and much it joyes me too,
To see you are become so penitent.—
Tressell, and Berkley, go along with me.
Glo. Bid me farewell.
Anne. 'T is more than you deserve.
But since you teach me how to flatter you,
Imagine I have said farewell already.
[Exeunt Lady Anne, Tressell, and Berkley.
Gent.12 Towards Chertsey, noble lord?
Glo. No, to White-Friars; there attend my coming [Exeunt the rest, with the Corse.

Was ever woman in this humour wold?
Was ever woman in this humour won?
I'll have her, but I will not keep her long.
What! I that kill'd her husband, and his father,
To take her in her heart's extreme hate?
With curses in her mouth, tears in her eyes,
The bleeding witness of my13 hatred by,
Having God, her conscience, and these bars against me,
And I no friends44 to back my suit with!14,
But the plain devil, and dissembling looks,
And yet to win her,—all the world to nothing! Ha!
Hath she foretold already that brave prince,
Edward, her lord, whom I, some three months since,
Stabb'd in my angry mood at Tewksbury?
A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman,—
Pained in the prodigality of nature,
Yeung, valiant, wise, and, no doubt, right royal,—
The spacious world cannot again afford:
And will she yet abuse44 her eyes on me,
That cropp'd the golden prime of this sweet prince,
And made her widow to a woful bed?
On me, whose all not equals Edward's moiety?
On me, that halt, and am mis-shapen thus?
My dukedom to a beggarly denier,
I do mistake my person all this while:

SCENE III. —The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Queen Elizabeth, Lord Rivers, and Lord Grey.

Riv. Have patience, madam: there’s no doubt, his majesty
Will soon recover his accustomed health.

Grey. In that you break it ill, it makes him worse:
Therefore, for God’s sake, entertain good comfort.
And cheer his grace with quick and merry words.

Q. Eliz. If he were dead, what would betide on me?
Grey. No other harm, but loss of such a lord.
Q. Eliz. The loss of such a lord includes all harms.

Grey. The heavens have blessed you with a goodly son.
To be your comforter when he is gone.

Q. Eliz. Ah! he is young; and his minority
Is put unto the trust of Richard Grey,
A man that loves me not, nor none of you.

Riv. Is it concluded, he shall be protector?
Q. Eliz. It is determin’d, not concluded yet;
But so it must be, if the king miscarry.

Enter Buckingham and Stanley.

Grey. Here come the lords of Buckingham and Stanley.

Buck. Good time of day unto your royal grace.

Stan. God make your majesty joyful as you have been!
Q. Eliz. The countess Richmond, good my lord of Stanley,
To your good prayer will scarcely say amen.
Yet Stanley, notwithstanding she’s your wife,
And loves not me, be you, good lord, assur’d,
I hate not you for her proud arrogance.

Stan. I do beseech you, either not believe
The even slanders of her false accusers;
Or, if she be accus’d on true report,
Bear with her weakness, which, I think, proceeds
From wayward sickness, and no grounded malice.

Q. Eliz. Saw you the king to-day, my lord of Stanley?
Stan. But now, the duke of Buckingham, and I.
Are come from visiting his majesty.

Q. Eliz. What likelihood of his amendment, lords?

Buck. Madam, good hope: his grace speaks cheerfully.

Q. Eliz. God grant him health! Did you confer with him?

Buck. Ay, madam: he desires to make atonement
Between the duke of Gloster and your brothers,
And between them and my lord chamberlain;
And sent to warn them to his royal presence: be:

Q. Eliz. Would all were well! — But that will never
I fear, our happiness is at the height.

Enter Gloster, stamping angrily, with Hastings, and Dorset.

Glo. They do me wrong, and I will not endure it.
Who are they, that complain unto the king,
That I, forsooth, am stern, and love them not?
By holy Paul, they love his grace but lightly,

That fill his ears with such dissentious rumours
Because I cannot flatter, and speak fair.
Smile in men’s faces, smooth, deceive, and cog,
Duck with French nods and apish courtesy,
I must be held a recreant enemy.
Cannot a plain man live, and think no harm,
But thus his simple truth must be abus’d
With silken, sly, insinuating Jacks?

Grey. To whom in all this presence speaks your grace?

Glo. To thee, that hast nor honesty, nor grace.
When have I injur’d thee? when done thee wrong?
Or thee?—or thee?—or any of thy faction?
A plague upon you all! His royal grace,
(Whom God preserve better than you would wish!) Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing-while,
But you must trouble him with lewd complaints.

Q. Eliz. Brother of Gloster, you mistake the matter.
The king, on his own royal disposition,
And not provok’d by any suitor else,
Aiming, belieke, at your inferior hatred,
That in your outward action shows itself.
Aim not against my children, brothers, and myself,
Makes him to send; that thereby he may gather
The ground of your ill-will, and so remove it.

Glo. I cannot tell; — the world is grown so bad,
That wrens make prey where eagles dare not perch
Since every Jack became a gentleman,
There’s many a gentle person made a Jack.

Q. Eliz. Come, come, we know your meaning, brother Gloster:
You envy my advancement, and my friends.
God grant, we never may have need of you!

Glo. Meantime, God grants that I have need of you
Our brother is imprison’d by your means;
Myself disgrac’d, and the nobility
Held in contempt; while many great promotions
Are daily given, to enoble those
That scarce, some two days since, were worth a noble

Q. Eliz. By him that raise’d me to this careful height
From that contented hap which I enjoy’d,
I never did incease his majesty
Against the duke of Clarence: but have been
An earnest advocate to plead for him.
My lord, you do me shameful injury,
Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects.

Glo. You may deny, that you were not the mean’st
Of my lord Hastings’ late imprisonment.

Riv. She may, my lord: —
Glo. She may, lord Rivers, — why, who knows not so?
She may do more, sir, than denying that:
She may help you to many fair preferments,
And then deny her aiding hand therein,
And lay those honours on your high desert.
What may she not? She may, — ay, marry, may she.

Riv. What, marry, may she?
Glo. What, marry, may she? marry with a king.
A bachelor, and a handsome stripling too.
I wis, her grandam had a worsrer match.

Q. Eliz. My lord of Gloster, I have too long borne
Your blunt upbraiding, and your bitter scoffs:
By heaven, I will acquaint his majesty,
Of those gross taunts that oft I have endur’d
I had rather be a country serving-maid,
Than a great queen. with this condition,
To be thus taunted, scorn’d, and bated at.

Small joy have I in being England’s queen.

Enter Queen Margaret, behind.

Q. Mar. And less'en'd be that small, God, I beseech him!

[Aside.] Thy honour, state, and seat, is due to me.

Glo. What! threat ye me with telling of the king?

Tell him, and spare not: look, what I have said,

I will avouch in presence of the king:

I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower.

'Tis time to speak; my pains are quite forgot.

Q. Mar. Out, devil! I do remember them too well:

[Aside.]

Thou kill'dst my husband Henry in the Tower,

And Edward, my poor son, at Tewksbury.

Glo. Ere you were queen, ay, or your husband king,

I was a pack-horse in his great affairs;

A weeder-out of his proud adversaries,

A liberal rewarder of his friends:

To royalize his blood, I spent mine own.

Q. Mar. Ay, and much better blood than his, or thine.

[Aside.]

Glo. In all which time, you, and your husband Grey,

Were factious for the house of Lancaster:

And, Rivers, so were you. — Was not your husband
In Margaret's battle at Saint Alban's slain?

Let me put in your minds, if you forget,

What you have been ere this, and what you are;

Withal, what I have been, and what I am.

Q. Mar. A mur'drous villain, and so still thou art.

[Aside.]

Glo. Poor Clarence did forsake his father Warwick,

Ay, and foreswore himself,—which Jesu pardon! —

Q. Mar. Which God revenge!

[Aside.]

Glo. To fight on Edward's party, for the crown;

And, for his meed, poor lord, he is mew'd up.

I would to God, my heart were sint like Edward's,

Or Edward's soft and pitiful, like mine:

I am too childish-foolish for this world.

Q. Mar. Hic thee to hell for shame, and leave this world,

Thou cæcadian! there thy kingdom is.

Riv. My lord of Gloster, in those busy days,

Which here ye urge to prove us enemies,

We follow'd then our lord, our sovereign king;

So should we, if you should be our king.

Glo. If I should be? I had rather be a yealdar.

Far be it from my heart the thought thereof!

Q. Eliz. As little joy, my lord, as you suppose

You should enjoy, were you this country's king,

As little joy you may suppose in me,

That I enjoy, being the queen thereof.

Q. Mar. A little joy enjoys the queen thereof; [Aside.

For I am she, and altogether joyless.

I can no longer hold me patient.—

Hear me, ye wrangling pirates, that fall out

In sharing that which you have pill'd from me!

Which of you trembles not, that looks on me?

If not, that, I being queen, you bow like subjects,

Yet that, by you depos'd, you quake like rebels?—

Ah! gentle villain, do not turn away.

[sigh]

Glo. Foul wrinkled witch, what mak'st thou in my

Q. Mar. But repetition of what thou hast marr'd;

That will I make, before I let thee go.

Glo. Wert thou not banished, on pain of death?

Q. Mar. I was; but do I find more pain in banishment,

Than death can yield me here by my abode.

A husband, and a son, thou ow'st to me,—

And thou, a kingdom,—all of you, allegiance

This sorrow that I have, by right is yours,

And all the pleasures you usurp are mine.

Glo. The curse my noble father laid on thee,

When thou didst crown his warlike brows with paper

And with thy scorns drew'st rivers from his eyes;

And then, to dry them, gave'st the duke a clout

Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty Rutland—

His curses, then from bitterness of soul

Doom'd against thee, are all fallen upon thee,

And God, not we, hath plagued thy bloody deed

Q. Eliz. So just is God, to right the innocent

Hast. O! 'twas the foulest deed to slay that babe,

And the most merciless, that era was heard of.

Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported

Dors. No man but prophesied revenge for it.

Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept to see it

Q. Mar. What! were you snarling all, before I came.

Ready to catch each other by the throat,

And turn you all your hatred now on me?

Did York's dread curse prevail so much with heaven

That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death,

Their kingdom's loss, my vilest banishment,

Should all but answer for that peevish brat?

Can curses pierce the clouds, and enter heaven?

— Why, then give way, dull clouds, to my quick curses! —

Though not by war, by surfeit die your king,

As ours by murder, to make him a king!

Edward, thy son, that now is prince of Wales.

For Edward, our son, that was prince of Wales

Die in his youth by like untimely violence!

Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen,

Outlive thy glory, like my wretched self!

Long may'st thou live, to wail thy children's death

And see another, as I see thee now,

Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stall'd in mine!

Long die thy happy days, before thy death;

And, after many lengthen'd hours of grief,

Die neither mother, wife, nor England's queen!

Rivers, and Dorset, you were standers by,

And so wast thou, lord Hastings, when my son

Was stab'd with bloody daggers: God, I pray him,

That none of you may live his natural age,

But by some unlook'd accident cut off!

Glo. Hast thou the charm, then hateful widdershag

Q. Mar. And leave out thee? stay, dog, for thou shalt hear me.

If heaven have any grievous plague in store,

Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,

O! let them keep it, till thy sins be ripe,

And then hurl down their indignation

On thee, the trouble of the poor world's peace!

The worm of conscience still be-gnaw thy soul!

Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou liv'st,

And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends!

No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine,

Unless it be while some tormenting dream

Affects thee with a hell of ugly devils!

Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, rooting hog!

Thou that wast seal'd in thy nativity

The stains of nature, and the scorn of hell!

Thou slander of thy heavy mother's womb!

Thou loathed issue of thy father's loins!

Thou rag of honour! thou detested—

Glo. Margaret.

Q. Mar. Richard!
SCENE III.

KING RICHARD III.

515

Glo. Ha?
Q. Mar. I call thee not.

Glo. I cry thee mercy then; for I did think.
That thou hadst call’d me all these bitter names.
Q. Mar. Why, so I did; but look’d for no reply.
O! let me make the period to my curse.
Glo. ’Tis done by me, and ends in—Margaret.
Q. Eliz. Thus have you breath’d your curse against yourself.
Q. Mar. Poor painted queen, vain flourish of my fortune; Why strew’st thou sugar on that bottle? spider,
Whose deadly web encraseth thee about?
Fool, fool! thou whet’st a knife to kill thyself.
The day will come, that thou shalt wish for me.
To help thee curse this pois’ned bunch-back’d toad.
Host. False-boasting woman, end thy frantic curse,
Lest to thy harm thou move our patience.
Q. Mar. Foul shame upon you; you have all mov’d mine.
Ric. Were you well serv’d; you would be taught your duty.
Q. Mar. To serve me well, you all should do me duty,
Teach me to be your queen, and you my subjects.
O! serve me well, and teach yourselves that duty.
Dor. Dispute not with her, she is lunatick.
Q. Mar. Peace, master marquess! you are malapert:
Your fire-new stamp of honour is scarce current.
O, that your young nobility could judge,
What ‘t were to lose it, and be miserable!
They that stand high have many blasts to shake them,
And if they fall they dash themselves to pieces.
Glo. Good counsel, marry—learn it, learn it, marquess.
Dor. It touches you, my lord, as much as me.
Glo. Ay, and much more; but I was born so high:
Our eyry buildeth in the cedar’s top,
And dallies with the wind, and scorrs the sun.
Q. Mar. And turns the sun to shade—alas! alas!—
Witness my son, now in the shade of death;
Whose bright out-shining beams thy cloudy wrath
Hath in eternal darkness folded up.
Your eyry buildeth in our eyry’s nest.—
O God! that seest it, do not suffer it:
As it was won with blood, lost be it so!
Buck. Peace, peace! for shame, if not for charity.
Q. Mar. Urge neither charity nor shame to me:
Uncharitably with me have you dealt,
And shamefully my hopes by you are butcher’d.
My charity is outrage, life my shame,
And in that shame still live my sorrow’s rage!
Buck. Have done, have done.
Q. Mar. O, princely Buckingham! I’ll kiss thy hand,
In sign of league and amity with thee:
Now, fair beafl thee, and thy noble house!
Thy garments are not spotted with our blood.
Nor them within the compass of my curse.
Buck. Nor no one here; for curses never pass
The lips of those that breathe them in the air.
Q. Mar. I will not think, but they ascend the sky,
And there awake God’s gentle-sleeping peace.
O Buckingham! take heed of yonder dog:
Look, when he fawns, he bites: and, when he bites,
His venom tooth will rankle to the death:
Have not to do with him, beware of him;
Sin, death, and hell, have set their marks on him,
And all their ministers attend on him.
Glo. What doth she say, my lord of Buckingham?
Buck. Nothing that I respect, my gracious lord.
Q. Mar. What! dost thou scorn me for my gentle counsel,
And soothe the devil that I warn thee from?
O! but remember this another day,
When he shall split thy very heart with sorrow,
And say, poor Margaret was a prophets.—
Live each of you the subjects to his hate,
And he to yours, and all of you to God’s!
[Exeunt
Host. My hair doth stand on end to hear her curses.
Riv. And so doth mine. I muse, why she’s at liberty.

Glo. I cannot blame her: by God’s holy mother
She hath had too much wrong, and I repent
My part thereof, that I have done to her!
Q. Eliz. I never did her any, to my knowledge.
Glo. Yet you have all the vantage of her wrong.
I was too hot to do somebody good,
That is too cold in thinking of it now.
Marry, as for Clarence, he is well repaid:
He is frank’d up to safety for his pains:—
God pardon them that are the cause thereof!
Riv. A virtuous and a Christian-like conclusion,
To pray for them that have done scath to us.
Glo. So do I ever, being well advis’d;
For had I curs’d now, I had curs’d myself.

Enter Catesby.

Cates. Madam, his majesty doth call for you.—
And for your grace, and you, my noble lords.
Q. Eliz. Catesby, I come.—Lords, will you go with me?
Riv. We wait upon your grace.

[Exeunt all but Gloster.

The secret mischiefs that I set abroach,
I lay unto the grievous charge of others,
Clarence, whom I, indeed, have cast in darkness,
I do beweep to many simple gulls;
Namely, to Stanley, Hastings, Buckingham;
And tell them, ’t is the queen and her allies,
That stir the king against the duke my brother.
Now, they believe it; and withal whet me
To be reveng’d on Rivers, Vaughan, Grey;
But then I sigh, and, with a piece of scripture.
Tell them, that God bids us do good for evil:
And thus I clothe my naked villainy
With old end old stoln thrt of holy writ,
And seem a saint when most I play the devil.

Enter two Murderers.

Glo. I do the wrong, and first begin to brawl.
The secret mischiefs that I set abroach,
I lay unto the grievous charge of others,
Clarence, whom I, indeed, have cast in darkness,
I do beweep to many simple gulls;
Namely, to Stanley, Hastings, Buckingham;
And tell them, ’t is the queen and her allies,
That stir the king against the duke my brother.
Now, they believe it; and withal whet me
To be reveng’d on Rivers, Vaughan, Grey;
But then I sigh, and, with a piece of scripture.

And thus I clothe my naked villainy
With old end old stoln thrt of holy writ,
And seem a saint when most I play the devil.

Enter two Murderers.

When you have done, repair to Crosby-place.
But, sirs, be sudden in the execution.
Withal obdurate: do not hear him plead;
For Clarence is well spoken, and, perhaps,
May move your hearts to pity, if you mark him.

1 Mard. Tut, tut! my lord; we will not stand u
prate:
Talkers are no good doers: be assur’d,
We go to use our hands, and not our tongues.
Glo. Your eyes drop mill-stones, when fools' eyes fall tears.
I like you, lad:—about your business? straight;
Go, go, despateh.
1 Murd. We will, my noble lord. [Exeunt.

Edw. CLARENCE and BRACKENBURY.

Brak. Why looks your grace so heavily to-day?
Clar. 0! I have pass’d a miserable night,
So full of fearful dreams, of ugly sights;* That, as I am a Christian faithful man, would not spend another such a night,
Though ’t were to buy a world of happy days. So full of dismal terror was the time.
Brak. What was your dream, my lord? I pray you, tell.

Clar. Methought, that I had broken from the Tower,
And was embark’d to cross to Burgundii;
And, in my company, my brother Gloster,
Who from my cabin tempted me to walk.
Upon the hatches: thence we look’d toward England,
And cight up a thousand heavy times,
During the wars of York and Lancaster,
That had befell’ us. As we pace’d along
Upon the giddy footing of the hatches,
Methought, that Gloster stumbled; and, in falling,*
Struck me (that thought to stay him) over-board,
Into the tumbling billows of the main.

O Lord! methought what pain it was to drown!
What dreadful noise of water in mine ears!
What sights of ugly* death within mine eyes!
Methought I saw a thousand fearful wrecks;
A thousand men that fishes gnaw’d upon;
Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,
Inestimable stones, unvalued jewels,
All scatter’d in the bottom of the sea;*
Some lay in dead man’s skulls; and in the holes
Where eyes did once inhabit, there were erect
(As ’twere in scorn of eyes) reflecting gems,
That wood the dismal bottom of the deep,
And mock’d the dead bones that lay scatter’d by.

Brak. Had you such leisure, in the time of death,
To gaze upon these secrets of the deep?
Clar. Methought I had, and often did I strive
To yield the ghost;* but still the furious flood
Stop’d in my soul, and would not let it forth;
To find the empty, vast, and wandering air;
But smoother’d it within my panting bulk,
Which almost burst to belch in the sea.
Brak. Awak’d you not in this sore agony?

Clar. No, no: my dream was lengthen’d after life.
O! then began the tempest to my soul!
I pass’d, methought, the melancholy flood,
With that sour* ferryman which poets write of,
Unto the kingdom of perpetual night.
The first that there did greet my stranger soul.
Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick,
Who cried* aloud.—*What seargour for perjury
Can this dark monarchy afford false Clarence?*
And so he vanish’d. Then, came wandering
By a shadow like an angel, with bright hair
Daub’d in blood; and he shriek’d out aloud,—
"Clarence is come,—false, fleeting, perjur’d Clarence,—
That stabb’d me in the field by Tewksbury,—
Seize on him, lads! torture him unto torment!"

With that, methought, a legion of foul fiends
Envir’d me, and howl’d in mine ears
Such hideous cries, that with the very noise,
I trembling walk’d, and, for a season after,
Could not believe but that I was in hell;
Such terrible impression made my dream.

Brak. No marvel, lord, though it affrighted you;
I am afraid, methinks, to hear you tell it.

Clar. Ah, keep, keep, keep! I have done these things:
That now give* evidence against my soul.
For Edward’s sake; and, see, how he requires me!—
O God! if my deep prayers cannot appease thee,
But thou wilt be aveng’d on my misdeeds,
Yet execute thy wrath on me alone:
O, spare my guiltless wife and my poor children!—
Keeper, I pr’ythee, sit by me awhile;
My soul is heavy, and I fain would sleep.

[Setting down.] 1 Murd. Ho! who’s here?
Brak. What wouldst thou, fellow? and how cam’st thou hither?
1 Murd. I would speak with Clarence; and I came hither on my legs.

Brak. What! so brief?
2 Murd. ’T is better, sir, than to be tedious.—
Let him see our commission, and talk no more.

[A Paper delivered to Brakenbury, who reads it:]
—Brak. I am, in this, commanded to deliver
The noble duke of Clarence to your hands.
I will not reason what is meant hereby,
Because I will be guiltless from the meaning:
There lies the duke asleep, and there the keys.
I’ll to the king, and signify to him,
That thus I have resign’d to you my charge.
1 Murd. You may, sir; ’tis a point of wisdom
Fare you well. [Exit.]

2 Murd. What, shall we stab him as he sleeps?
1 Murd. No; he’ll say, ’t was done cowardly, when he wakes.
2 Murd. Why, he shall never wake until the great judgment day.

1 Murd. Why, then he’ll say, we stabb’d him sleeping.
2 Murd. The urging of that word, judgment, hath bred a kind of remorse in me.
1 Murd. What! art thou afraid?
2 Murd. Not to kill him, having a warrant; but to be damn’d for killing him, from which no warrant can defend me.
1 Murd. I thought, thou hadst been resolute. 25
2 Murd. So I am; to let him live.
1 Murd. I’ll back to the duke of Gloster, and tell him so.
2 Murd. Nay, I pr’ythee, stay a little: I hope, this compassionate honour of mine will change; it was wont to hold me but while one tells twenty.

SCENE III.

KING RICHARD III.

1 Murd. How dost thou feel thyself now?
2 Murd. Faith, some certain drops of conscience are yet within me.
1 Murd. Remember our reward, when the deed’s done.
2 Murd. Sounds! he dies: I had forgot the reward.
1 Murd. Where’s thy conscience now?
2 Murd. O! in the duke of Gloster’s purse.
1 Murd. When he opens his purse to give us our reward, thy conscience flies out.
2 Murd. ‘Tis no matter; let it go: there’s few or none, will entertain it.
1 Murd. What, if it come to thee again?
2 Murd. I’ll not meddle with it; it is a dangerous thing: it makes a man a coward: a man cannot steal, but it accustoms him; but a man cannot swear, but it checks him; a man cannot lie with his neighbour’s wife, but it detects him: it is a blushing shame-faced spirit, that mutinies in a man’s bosom; it fills a man full of obstacles: it made me once restore a purse of gold, that by chance I found: it beggars any man that keeps it: it is turned out of all towns and cities for a dangerous thing; and every man that means to live, endeavours to trust to himself, and live without it.
1 Murd. Sounds! it is even now at my elbow, persuading me not to kill the duke.
2 Murd. Take the devil in thy mind, and believe him not: he would insinuate with thee, but to make thee sigh.
1 Murd. I am strong-fram’d; he cannot prevail with me.
2 Murd. Spoke like a tall man, that respects his reputation: Come, shall we fall to work?
1 Murd. Take him on the costard with the hilts of thy sword, and then throw him into the malmsey-butt in the next room.
2 Murd. O, excellent device! and make a sop of him.
1 Murd. Soft! he wakes.
2 Murd. Strike.
1 Murd. No; we’ll reason with him.
1 Murd. You shall have wine enough, my lord, anon.
Clar. In God’s name, what art thou?
1 Murd. A man, as you are.
Clar. But not, as I run, royal.
1 Murd. Nor you, as we are, loyal.
Clar. Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are humble.
1 Murd. My voice is now the king’s, my looks mine own.
Clar. How darkly, and how deadly dost thou speak.
Your eyes do menace me: why look you pale? Who sent you hither? Wherefore do you come?
Both Murd. To, to, to—
Clar. To murder me?
Both Murd. Ay, Ay.
Clar. You scarcely have the hearts to tell me so, And therefore cannot have the hearts to do it. Wherein, my friends, have I offended you?
1 Murd. Offended us you have not, but the king.
Clar. I shall be reconcil’d to him again.
2 Murd. Never, my lord: therefore, prepare to die.
Clar. Are you drawn forth among a world of men, To slay the innocent? What is my offence? Where is the evidence that doth accuse me? What lawful quest have given their verdict up Unto the frowning judge? or who pronounc’d The bitter sentence of poor Clarence’ death?
Before I be convict by course of law, To threaten me with death is most unlawful. I charge you, as you hope to have redemption By Christ’s dear blood shed for our grievous sins, That you depart, and lay no hands on me: The deed you undertake is damnable.
1 Murd. What we will do, we do upon command
2 Murd. And he, that hath commanded, is our king
Clar. Erroneous vassals! the great King of kings Hath in the table of his law commanded That thou shalt do no murder: will you then, Spurn at his edict, and fulfil a man’s? Take heed; for he holds vengeance in his hand To hurl upon their heads that break his law
2 Murd. And that same vengeance doth he hurl on thee.
For false forswearing, and for murder too.
Thou didst receive the sacrament, to fight
In quarrel of the house of Lancaster.
1 Murd. And, like a traitor to the name of God, Didst break that vow; and, with thy treacherous blade Unripp’dst the bowels of thy sovereign’s son.
2 Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend.
1 Murd. How canst thou urge God’s dreadful law to us,
When thou hast broke it in such dear degree?
Clar. Alas! for whose sake did I that ill deed?
For Edward, for my brother, for his sake:
He sends you not to murder me for this;
For in that sin he is as deep as I.
If God will be avenged for the deed.
O! know you yet, he doth it publicly.
Take not the quarrel from his powerful arm:
He needs no indirect or lawless course,
To cut off those that have offended him.
1 Murd. Who made thee, then, a bloody minister,
When gallant-springing, brave Plantagenet.
That princely novice, was struck dead by thee?
Clar. My brother’s love, the devil, and my rage.
1 Murd. Thy brother’s love, our duty, and thy faults;
Provoke us hither now to slaughter thee.
Clar. If you do love my brother, hate not me;
I am his brother, and I love him well.
If you are hir’d for meed, go back again.
And I will send you to my brother Gloster Who shall reward you better for my life.
Than Edward will for tidings of my death.
2 Murd. You are deceiv’d: your brother Gloster hates you.
Clar. O! no: he loves me, and he holds me dear.
Go you to him from me.

Both Murd. Ay, so we will.
Clar. Tell him, when that our princely father York Bless’d his three sons with his victorious arm, And charg’d us from his soul to love each other, He little thought of this divided friendship: Bid Gloster think on this, and he will weep.
1 Murd. Ay, mill-stones; as he less’n’d us to weep.
Clar. O! do not slander him, for he is kind.
1 Murd. Right; as snow in harvest.—Come, you deceive yourself;
’Tis he that sends us to destroy you here.
Clar. It cannot be; for he bewept my fortune, And hugg’d me in his arms, and swore, with oaths, That he would labour my delivery.
1 Murd. Why, so he doth, when he delivers you From this earth’s thrall to the joys of heaven
2 Murd. Make peace with God, for you must die, my lord.

Clar. Have you that holy feeling in your souls, To counsel me to make my peace with God, And are you yet to your own souls so blind, That you will war with God by murder ing me?—O! sirs, consider, they that set you on To do this deed, will hate you for the deed.

2 Murd. What shall we do?

Clar. Relent, and save your souls.

Which of you, if you were a prince's son, Being pent from liberty, as I am now, If two such murderers as yourselves came to you, Would not entreat for life? As you would beg Were you in my distress, so pity me.

1 Murd. Relent? no: it is cowardly, and womanish.

Clar. Not to relent, is beastly, savage, devilish.

My friend, I spy some pity in thy looks; O! if thine eye be not a flatterer,

Come thou on my side, and entreat for me.

A beguine prince what beggar pities not?

2 Murd. Look behind you, my lord.

1 Murd. Take that, and that: if all this will not do

[Stabs him.]

I'll drown you in the malmsey-butt within.

[Exit with the Body.]

2 Murd. A bloody deed, and desperately dispatch'd

How fain, like Pilate, would I wash my hands

Of this most grievous guilty murder done.

[Exeunt first Murderer.]

1 Murd. How now! what mean'st thou, that thou help'st me not?

By heaven, the duke shall know how slack you have been.

2 Murd. I would he knew, that I had sav'd his brother.

Take thou the fee, and tell him what I say,

For I repent me that the duke is slain.

[Exit.]

1 Murd. So do not I: go, coward, as thou art.

Well, I'll go hide the body in some hole,

Till that the duke give order for his burial:

And when I have my meed, I will away;

For this will out, and then I must not stay. [Exit.]

ACT II.

Enter King Edward, led in sick. Queen Elizabeth, Dorset, Rivers, Hastings, Buckingham, Grey, and others.

K. Edw. Why, so:—now have I done a good day's work.—

You peers, continue this united league:

I every day expect an embassage

From my Redeemer to redeem me hence;

And more at peace^ my soul shall part to heaven,

Since I have made my friends at peace on earth.

Rivers, and Hastings, take each other's hand;

Dissemble not your hatred, swear your love.

Riv. By heaven, my soul is purg'd from grudging hate;

And with my hand I seal my true heart's love.

Host. So thrive I, as I truly swear the like.

K. Edw. Take heed, you dally not before your king;

Lest he that is the supreme king of kings,

Confound your hidden falsehood, and award

Either of you to be the other's end.

Host. So prosper I, as I swear perfect love.

Riv. And I, as I love Hastings with my heart.

K. Edw. Madam, yourself are not exempt from this,

Nor you, son Dorset.—Buckingham, nor you:—

You have been factious one against the other:

Wife, love lord Hastings, let him kiss your hand;

And what you do, do it unfeignedly.

Q. Eliz. There, Hastings:—I never more remember

Our former hatred, so thrive I, and mine.

Dor. This interchange of love, I here protest,

Upon my part shall be inviolable.

Host. And so swear I.

K. Edw. Now, princely Buckingham, seal thou this league

With thy embracements to my wife's allies,

And make me happy in your unity.

Buck. Whenever Buckingham doth turn his hate

Upon your grace, [To the Queen.] but with all duteous love

Doth cherish you, and yours, God punish me

With hate in those where I expect most love.

When I have most need to employ a friend,

And most assured that he is a friend,

Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile,

Be he unto me. This do I beg of heaven,

When I am cold in love^ to you, or yours.

K. Edw. A pleasing cordial, princely Buckingham,

Is this thy vow unto my sickly heart.

There wanteth now our brother Gloster here,

To make the blessed period of this peace.

Buck. And, in good time, here comes the noble duke.

Enter Gloster.

Glo. Good-morrow to my sovereign king, and queen

And, princely peers, a happy time of day!—

K. Edw. Good, indeed, as we have spent the day.—

Gloster, we have done deeds of charity;

Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate,

Between these swelling wrong-incensed peers.

Glo. A blessed labour, my most sovereign lord—

Among this princely heap, if any here,

By false intelligence, or wrong surmise,

Hold me a foe;

If I unwittingly, or in my rage,

Have sought committed that is hardly borne

To any in this presence, I desire

To reconcile me to his friendly peace:

'Tis death to me, to be at enmity;

I hate it, and desire all good men's love.—

First, madam, I entreat true peace of you,

Which I will purchase with my duteous service:

Of you, my noble cousin Buckingham,

If ever any grudge were lodg'd between us;

Of you, and you, lord Rivers, and of Dorset,

That all without desert have frown'd on me;

Of you, lord Woodville, and lord Scales, of you:

SCENE II

KING RICHARD III.

Dukes, earls, lords, gentlemen; indeed, of all.
I do not know that Engishman alive,
With whom my soul is any jot at odds,
More than the infant that is born to-night.
I thank my God for my humility.

Q. Eliz. A holy day shall this be kept hereafter:—
I would to God, all strifes were well compounded.—
My sovereign lord, I do beseech your highness to take our brother Clarence to your grace.

Glo. Why, madam, have I offer’d love for this,
To be so flouted in this royal presence?
Who knows not, that the gentle duke is dead?

You do him injury to scorn his corse.

K. Ezz. Who knows not, he is dead! who knows he is?
Q. Eliz. All-seeing heaven, what a world is this!

Buck. Look I so pale, lord Dorset, as the rest?

Dor. Ay, my good lord; and man in the presence.
But his red colour hath forsak’d his cheeks.

K. Ezz. Is Clarence dead? the order was revers’d,

Glo. But he, poor man, by your first order died,
And that a wing’d Mercury did bear;
Some tardy cripple bare the countermand,
That came too lag to see him buried.
God grant, that some, less noble, and less loyal,
Nearer in bloody thoughts, and not in blood.
Desire not worse than wretched Clarence did,
And yet go current from suspicion.

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. A boon, my sovereign, for my service done!

Kneels.

K. Ezz. I pray thee, peace: my soul is full of sorrow.
Stan. I will not rise, unless your highness hear me.

K. Ezz. Then say at once, what is it thou requestest.

Stan. The forfeit, sovereign, of my servant’s life;
Whose slew to-day a rious gentleman,
Lately attendant on the duke of Norfolk.

K. Ezz. Have I a tongue to doom my brother’s death, And shall that tongue give pardon to a slave?
My brother kill’d no man, his fault was thought,
And yet his punishment was bitter death.
Who sue’d to me for him? who, in my wrath,
Kneel’d at my feet, and bade me be advis’d?
Who spoke of brotherhood? who spoke of love?
Who told me, how the poor soul did forsake
The mighty Warwick, and did fight for me?
Who told me, in the field at Tewksbury,
When Oxford had me down, he rescu’d me,
And said, “Dear brother, live, and be a king?”
Who told me, when we both lay in the field,
Frozen almost to death, how he did lay me ever in his garments; and did give himself,
All thin and naked, to the numb-cold night?
All this from my remembrance bruis’d wrath
Swallow’d pluck’d, and not a man of you
Had so much grace to put it in my mind.
But when your carters, or your waiting-vassals,
Have done a drunken slaughter, and defeas’d
The precious image of our dear Redeemer,
You straight are on your knees for pardon, pardon;
And I, unjustly too, must grant it you.
But for my brother not a man would speak,
Nor I, ungracious, speak unto myself.
For him, poor soul.—The proudest of you all

Have been beholding to him in his life,
Yet none of you would once beg for his life.—
O God! I fear, thy justice will take hold
On me, and you, and mine, and yours, for this.—
Come, Hastings, prithee help me to my closet.

Ah, poor Clarence!

[Exeunt King, Queen, Hastings, Rivers, Dorset and Grey.

SCENE II. — London.

Enter the Duchess of York, with a Son and Daughter of CLARENCE.

Son. Good grandam, tell us, is our father dead?

Duch. No, boy.

Daugh. Why do you weep so? and oft beat your breast:
And cry—“O Clarence, my unhappy son!”

Why do you look on us, and shake your head,
And call us—orphans, wretches, cast-aways,
If that our noble father were alive?

Duch. My pretty cousins, you mistake me both;
I do lament the sickness of the king,
As loath to lose him, not your father’s death.
It were lost sorrow to wait one that’s lost.

Son. Then you conclude, my grandam, he is dead.
The king mine uncle is to blame for it:
God will revenge it; whom I will importune
With earnest prayers all to that effect.

Daugh. And so will I.

Duch. Peace, children. peace! the king doth love you well.
Incapable and shallow innocents,
You cannot guess who caus’d your father’s death.

Son. Grandam, we can: for my good uncle Gloster
Told me, the king, provok’d to it by the queen,
Devil’s impeachments to imprison him:
And when my uncle told me so, he wept,
And pitied me, and kindly kiss’d my cheek;
Bade me rely on him, as on my father,
And he would love me dearly as a child.

Duch. Ah! that deceit should steal such gentle shape
And with a virtuous visor hide deep vice!

He is my son, ay, and therein my shame,
Yet from my dugs he drew not this deceit.

Son. Think you, my uncle did dissemble, grandam?

Duch. Ay, boy.

Son. I cannot think it. — Hark! what noise is this!

Enter Queen Elizabeth, distractedly; Rivers and Dorset, following her.

Q. Eliz. Ah! who shall hinder me to wail and weep,
To chide my fortune, and torment myself?
I’ll join with black despair against my soul,
And to myself become an enemy.

Duch. What means this scene of rude impertinence?
Q. Eliz. To make an act of tragic violence.

Edward, my lord, thy son, our king, is dead!—
Why grow the branches, when the root is gone?
Why wither not the leaves, that want their sap?
If you will live, lament; if die, be brief;
That our swift-winged souls may catch the king’s;

KING RICHARD III.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street.

Enter two Citizens, meeting.

1 Cit. Good morrow, neighbour: whither away so fast?
2 Cit. I promise you, I scarcely know myself. Hear you the news abroad?

1 Cit. Yes; that the king is dead.
2 Cit. Ill news, by 'r lady; seldom comes the better: I fear, I fear, 't will prove a giddy world.

Enter another Citizen.

3 Cit. Neighbours, God speed!
1 Cit. Give you good morrow, sir.
3 Cit. Doth the news hold of good King Edward's death?
2 Cit. Ay, sir, it is too true; God help, the while. 3 Cit. Then, masters, look to see a troublesome world.
1 Cit. No, no; by God's good grace, his son shall reign.
3 Cit. Wee to that land that's govern'd by a child.

Glo. Amen; [Aside.] and make me die a good old man—

That is the butt-end of a mother's blessing,
I marvel, that her grace did leave it out.

Buck. You cloudy princes, and heart-sorrowing peers,
That bear this heavy mutual load of woe,
Now cheer each other in each other's love:
Though we have spent our harvest of this king,
We are to reap the harvest of his son.

The broken rancour of your high-sworn hates,
But lately splinter'd, knit, and joint'd together,
Must gently be preserve'd, cherish'd, and kept:
Me seemeth good, that, with some little train,
Forthwith from Ludlow the young prince be sent Hither to London, to be crown'd our king.

Riv. Why with some little train, my lord of Buckingham?

Buck. Marry, my lord, lest, by a multitude,
The new-heal'd wound of malice should break out,
Which would be so much the more dangerous,
By how much the estate is green, and yet unguard'd.
Where every horse bears his commanding rein,
And may direct his course as please himself,
As well the fear of harm, as harm apparent,
In my opinion, ought to be prevented.

Glo. I hope the king made peace with all of us;
And the compact is firm and true in me.

Riv. And so in me; and so, I think, in all:
Yet, since it is but green, it should be put
To no apparent likelihood of breach,
Which, haply, by such company might be urg'd:
Therefore, I say with noble Buckingham,
That it is meet so few should fetch the prince.

Hast. And so say I.

Glo. Then be it so; and go we to determine
Who they shall be that straight shall post to Ludlow.
Madam,—and you my sister,—will you go
To give your censures in this business?

[Exeunt all but BUCKINGHAM and GLOSTER.

Buck. My lord, whoever journeys to the prince,
For God's sake, let not us two stay at home;
For by the way I'll sort occasion.
As index to the story we late talk'd of,
To part the queen's proud kindred from the prince.

Glo. My other self, my counsel's consistory,
My oracle, my prophet—My dear cousin,
I, as a child, will go by thy direction.

Towards Ludlow then, for we'll not stay behind.

[Exeunt."

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter the Archbishop of York, the young Duke of York, Queen Elizabeth, and the Duchess of York.

Arch. Last night, I heard, they lay at Stony-Stratford, and at Northampton they do rest to-night;
To-morrow or next day, they will be here.

Duch I sang with all my heart to see the prince:
I hope, he is much grown since last I saw him.

Q. Eliz. But I hear, no: they say, my son of York
Forthwith avouched in his growth.

York. Ay, mother; but I would not have it so.

Duch. Why, my young cousin? it is good to grow.

York. Grandam, one night, as we did sit at supper,
My uncle Rivers talked how I did grow
More than my brother.

Duch. More than my uncle Gloster.

Q. Eliz. Small herbs have grace, great weeds do grow space.
And since, methinks, I would not grow so fast.
Because sweet flowers are slow, and weeds make haste.

Duch. 'Good faith,' 'good faith,' the saying did not hold
In him that did object the same to thee:
He was the wretch'dst thing when he was young,
So long a growing, and so leisurely.

That, if his rule were true, he should be gracious.

Arch. And so, no doubt, he is, my gracious madam.

Duch. I hope, he is: but yet let mothers doubt.

York. Now, by my troth, if I had been remember'd,
I could have given my uncle's grace a flout,
To touch his growth nearer than he touch'd mine.

Duch. How, my young York? I pr'ythee, let me hear it.

York. Marry, they say, my uncle grew so fast.
That he could gnaw a crust at two hours old.
'T was full two years ere I could get a tooth.

Grandam, this would have been a biting jest.

Duch. I pr'ythee, pretty York, who told thee this?

York. Grandam, his nurse.

Duch. His nurse! why, she was dead ere thou wast born.

York. If 't were not she, I cannot tell who told me.

Q. Eliz. A parlous boy. Go to, you are too shrewd.

Arch. Good madam, be not angry with the child.

Q. Eliz. Pitchers have ears.

Enter a Messenger.

Arch. Here comes a messenger: what news with you?

Mess. Such news, my lord, as grieves me to report.

Q. Eliz. How doth the prince?

Mess. Well, madam, and in health.

Duch. What is thy news?

Mess. Lord Rivers and Lord Grey are sent to Pomfret,
And with them sir Thomas Vaughan, prisoners.

Duch. Who hath committed them?

Mess. The mighty dukes,
Gloster and Buckingham.

Arch. For what offence?

Mess. The sum of all I can I have discover'd:
Why, or for what, the nobles were committed,
Is all unknown to me, my gracious lady.

Q. Eliz. Ah me! I see the ruin of my house.
The tiger now hath seiz'd the gentle hind;
Insulting tyranny begins to jet.
Upon the innocent and awless throne:—
Welcome, destruction, blood, and massacre!
I see, as in a map, the end of all.

Duch. Accursed and unquiet wrangling days,
How many of you have mine eyes beheld?
My husband lost his life to get the crown;
Too often up and down my sons were stroll.
For me to joy, and weep, their gain, and loss:
And being seated, and domestic broils
Clean over-blown, themselves, the conquerors,
Make war upon themselves; brother to brother,
Blood to blood, self against self:—O! preposterous
And frantic outrage, and thy damned spleen;
Or let me die, to look on death no more.

Q. Eliz. Come, come, my boy, we will to sanctuary.

Duch. Farewell, Madam.

Q. Eliz. Stay, I will go with you.

Arch. My gracious lady, go. [To the Queen.

And thither bear your treasure and your goods.
For my part, I'll resign unto your grace
The seal I keep: and so betide to me,
As well I tender you, and all of yours.

Go; I'll conduct you to the sanctuary.
ACT III.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

The Trumpets sound. Enter the Prince of Wales, Gloster, Buckingham, Cardinal Bourchier, and others.

Buck. Welcome, sweet prince, to London, to your chamber.

Glo. Welcome, dear cousin, my thoughts’ sovereign:
The weary way hath made you melancholy.

Prince. No, uncle; but our crosses on the way Have made it tedious, wearisome, and heavy: I want more uncles here to welcome me.

Glo. Sweet prince, the untainted virtue of your years Hath not yet div’d into the world’s deceit: No more can you distinguish of a man, Than of his outward show; which, God he knows, Seldom, or never, jumpeth with the heart. Those uncles, which you want, were dangerous; Your grace attended to their sugar’d words, But look’d not on the poison of their hearts: God keep you from them, and from such false friends!

Prince. God keep me from false friends! but they were none.

Glo. My lord, the mayor of London comes to greet you.

Enter the Lord Mayor, and his Train.

May. God bless your grace with health and happy days!

Prince. I thank you, good my lord; and thank you all. — [Exit Mayor, &c. thought my mother, and my brother York. Would long ere this have met us on the way: Fie! what a slug is Hastings, that he comes not To tell us whether they will come or no. — Enter Hastings.

Buck. And in good time here comes the swelling lord.

Prince. Welcome, my lord. What, will our mother come?

Hast. On what occasion, God he knows, not I, The queen your mother, and your brother York, Have taken sanctuary: the tender prince Would fain have come with me to meet your grace, But by his mother was perforce withheld.

Buck. Fie! what an indirect and peevish course Is this of hers. — Lord cardinal, will your grace Persuade the queen to send the duke of York Unto his princely brother presently? If she deny, lord Hastings, go with him. And from her jealous arms pluck him perforce.

Card. My lord of Buckingham, if my weak oratory Can from his mother win the duke of York, Anon expect him here; but if she be obdurate To mild entreaties, God in heaven forbid We should infringe the holy privilege Of blessed sanctuary! not for all this land, Would I be guilty of so great a sin.

Buck. You are too strict and abstinent, my lord, Too ceremonious, and traditional: Weigh it but with the goodness of his age, You break not sanctuary in seizing him. The benefit thereof is always granted To those whose dealings have deserved the place, And those who have the wit to claim the place.

This prince hath neither claim’d it, nor deserv’d it; Therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have it: Then, taking him from thence, that is not there. You break no privilege nor charter there. Oft have I heard of sanctuary men, But sanctuary children, ne’er till now.

Card. My lord, you shall o’er-rule my mind for once — Come on, lord Hastings; will you go with me?

Hast. I go, my lord.

Prince. Good lords, make all the speedy haste you may. — [Exit Cardinal and Hastings.

Say, uncle Gloster, if our brother come, Where shall we sojourn till our coronation?

Glo. Where it seems best unto your royal self. If I may counsel you, some day, or two, Your highness shall repose you at the Tower Then, where you please, and shall be thought most fit: For your best health and recreation.

Prince. I do not like the Tower, of any place. — Did Julius Caesar build that place, my lord?

Buck. He did, my gracious lord, begin that place, Which, since, succeeding ages have re-edified.

Prince. Is it upon record, or else reported Successively from age to age, he built it?

Buck. It is upon record, my gracious lord.

Prince. But say, my lord, it were not register’d, Methinks, the truth should live from age to age, As ‘t were retail’d to all posterity, Even to the general all-ending day.

Glo. So wise so young, they say, do ne’er live long. — [Aside

Prince. What say you, uncle?

Glo. I say without characters fame lives long. Thus, like the formal Vice, Iniquity, I moralize two meanings in one word.

Prince. That Julius Caesar was a famous man With what his valour did enrich his wit, His wit set down to make his valour live: Death makes no conquest of his conqueror, For now he lives in fame, though not in life. — I’ll tell you what, my cousin Buckingham.

Buck. What, my gracious lord?

Prince. An if I live until I be a man, I’ll win our ancient right in France again, Or die a soldier, as I liv’d a king.

Glo. Short summers lightly have a forward spring. — [Aside

Enter York, Hastings, and the Cardinal.

Buck. Now, in good time here comes the duke of York.

Prince. Richard of York! how fares our noble brother?

York. Well, my dread’ lord; so must I call you now. — Prince. Ay, brother; to our grief, as it is yours. Too late he died that might have kept that title, Which by his death hath lost much majesty.

Glo. How fares our cousin, noble lord of York?

York. I thank you, gentle uncle. O! my lord, You said, that idle weeds are fast in growth: The prince my brother hath outgrown me far.

Glo. He hath, my lord, York.

And therefore is he idle? —

Glo. O! my fair cousin, I must not say so.

York. Then he is more beholding to you, than I.

SCENE II. KING RICHARD III. 522

Glo. He in my command me as my sovereign,
But you have power o'er me as a kinsman.
York. I pray you, uncle, give me this dagger.
Glo. My dagger, little cousin? with all my heart.
Prince. A beggar, brother?
York. Of my kind uncle, that I know will give;
And, being but a toy, which is no grief to give.
Glo. A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin.
York. A greater gift! O! that's the sword to it.
Glo. Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough.
York. O! then, I see, you'll part with light gifts:
In weightier things you'll say a beggar, nay.
Glo. It is too weighty for your grace to wear.
York. I weigh it lightly, were it heavier.
Glo. What! would you have my weapon, little lord?
York. I would, that I might thank you as you call me.
Glo. How?
York. Little.
Prince. My lord of York will still be cross in talk.—
Uncle, your grace knows how to bear with him.
York. You mean, to bear me, not to bear with me.—
Uncle, my brother inocks both you and me: Because that I am little, like an ape, He thinks that you should bear me on your shoulders. Back. With what a sharply pointed wit he reasons: To mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle, He pretty and aptly taunts himself. So cunning, and so young, is wonderful. Glo. My lord, wilt you please your grace to pass along? Myself, and my good cousin Buckingham, Will to your mother, to entreat of her To meet you at the Tower, and welcome you. York. What? will you go unto the Tower, my lord? Prince. My lord protector needs will have it so. York. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower. Glo. Why, what should you fear?

Back. Think you, my lord, this little prating York Was not incensed by his subtle mother To taunt and scorn you thus approbromously? Glo. No doubt, no doubt. O! 'tis a perilsboy. Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable: He's all the mother's from the top to toe. Back. Well, let them rest.—Come hither, Catesby. Thou art sworn as deeply to effect what we intend. As closely to conceal what we impart. Thou know'st our reasons urg'd upon the way:— What think'st thou? is it not an easy matter To make William lord Hastings of our mind, For the instaunl of this noble duke In the seat royal of this famous isle? Cate. He for his father's sake so loves the prince, That he will not be won to aught against him. Back. What think'st thou then of Stanley? will he not he?
Cate. He will do all in all as Hastings doth.
Back. Well, then, no more but this. Go, gentle Catesby, And, as it were far off, sound thou lord Hastings,

How he doth stand affected to our purpose; And summon him to-morrow to the Tower, To sit about the coronation. If thou dost find him tractable to us, Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons: If he be leaden, icy, cold, unwilling, Be thou so too, and so break off the talk, And give us notice of his inclination: For we to-morrow hold divided councils, Wherein thyself shalt highly be employ'd.
Glo. Command me to lord William: tell him, Catesby, His ancient knot of dangerous adversaries To-morrow are let blood at Pomfret-castle; And bid my lord, for joy of this good news, Give mistress Shore one gentle kiss the more.
Back. Good Catesby, go: effect this business soundly.
Cate. My good lords both, with all the heed I can. Glo. Shall we hear from you, Catesby, ere we sleep? Cate. You shall, my lord.
Glo. At Crosby-place, there shall you find us both. [Exit Catesby.

Back. Now, my lord, what shall we do, if we perceive Lord Hastings will not yield to our complets?
Glo. Chop off his head, man;—somewhat we will do:—
And, look, where I am king, claim thou of me The carildom of Hereford, and all the moveables Whereof the king, my brother, was possess'd.
Back. I'll claim that promise at your grace's hand.
Glo. And look to have it yielded with all kindness. Come, let us sup betimes, that afterwards We may digest our complets in some form. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before Lord Hastings' House.
Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord! my lord!—[Knocking at the door]
Hast. [Within]—Who knocks?
Mess. One from the lord Stanley.
Hast. [Within] What is it o'clock?
Mess. Upon the stroke of four.

Enter Hastings.

Hast. Cannot lord Stanley sleep these tedious nights?
Mess. So it appears by that I have to say. First, he commends him to your noble self. Hast. What then?
Mess. Then certifies your lordship, that this night He dreamt the boar had rased off his helm: Besides, he says, there are two councils kept; And that may be determin'd at the one, Which may make you and him to rue at th' other. Therefore, he sends to know your lordship's pleasure.— If you will presently take horse with him, And with all speed post with him toward the north, To shun the danger that his soul divines.

Hast. Go, fellow, go; return unto thy lord. Bid him not fear the separated council: His honour and myself are at the one, And at the other is my good friend Catesby; Whereby nothing can proceed that toucheth us, Whereof I shall not have intelligence. Tell him, his fears are shallow, without instance. And for his dreams—f I wonder he's so simple To trust the mockery of unquiet slumbers. To fly the boar, before the boar pursues, Were to incense the boar to follow us, And make pursuit, where he did mean no chase.

1 sharp provided: in t. e. 2 This and the previous line, are not in the quartos. 3 Private. 4 willingness: in quartos. 5 So it should seem in quartos; fond: in quart.
Go, bid thy master rise and come to me; And we will both together to the Tower, Where, he shall see, the bear will use us kindly.

Mess. I' ll go, my lord, and I'll tell him what you say. [Exit.

Enter Catesby.

Cate. Many good morrows to my noble lord!

Hast. Good morrow, Catesby: you are early stirring.

What news, what news, in this our tottering state?

Cate. It is a reeling world, indeed, my lord; And, I believe, will never stand upright.

Till Richard wear the garnal of the realm.

Hast. How? wear the garnal! dost thou mean the crown?

Cate. Ay, my good lord.

Hast. I' ll have this crown of mine cut from my shoulders, Before I' ll see the crown so foul misplac'd.

But canst thou guess that he doth aim at it?

Cate. Ay, on my life; and hopes to find you forward Upon his party for the gain thereof:

And thereupon he sends you this good news,— That this same very day your enemies,

The kindred of the queen, must die at Pomfret.

Hast. Indeed, I am no mounter for that news, Because they have been still my adversaries.

But, that I' ll give my voice on Richard's side, To bar my master's heirs in true descent, God knows, I will not do it, to the death.

Cate. God keep your lordship in that gracious mind.

Hast. But I shall laugh at this time a twelve-month hence, That they which brought me in my master's hate, I live to look upon their tragedy.

Well, Catesby, ere a fortnight make me elder, I' ll send some packing that yet think not on't.

Cate. 'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious lord, When men are unprepared, and look not for it.

Hast. O monstrous, monstrous! and so falls it out With Rivers, Vaughan, Grey; and so he will do With some men else, who think themselves as safe As thou, and I; who, as thou know'st, are dear To princely Richard, and to Buckingham.

Cate. The princes both make high account of you; For they account his head upon the bridge. [Aside.

Hast. I know they do, and I have well deserv'd it.

Enter Stanley.

Come on, come on, where is your bear-spear, man? Fear you the bear, and go so unprovided?

Stan. My lord, good morrow: — good morrow, Catesby,—

You may jest on; but, by the holy rood, I do not like these several councils, I.

Hast. My lord, I hold my life as dear as yours; And never, in my days, I do protest, Was it so precious to me as 'tis now.

Think you, but that I know our state secure, I would be so triumphant as I am?

Stan. The lords at Pomfret, when they rode from London, Were jeocund, and suppose'd their states were sure, And they, indeed, had no cause to mistrust: But yet, you see, how soon the day dier cast.

This sudden stab of rancour I misdoubt:

Pray God, I say, I prove a needless coward!

What, shall we go toward the Tower? the day is spent.

Hast. Come, come, have with you.— Wet you what, my lord? —

To-day, the lords you talk of are beheaded.

Stan. They for their truth might better wear their heads.

Than some that have accus'd them wear their hats.

But come, my lord, let's away.

Enter a Pursuivant.

Hast. Go on before; I'll talk with this good fellow [Exit Stanley and Catesby]

How now, sirrah! how goes the world with thee?

Purs. The better, that your lordship please to ask

Hast. I tell thee, man, 'tis better with me now, Than when thou met' st me last, where now we meet.

Then, was I going prisoner to the Tower, By the suggestion of the queen's allies;

But now, I tell thee, (keep it to thyself)

This day those enemies are put to death,

And I in better state than ere I was.

Purs. God hold it to your honour's good content.

Hast. Gramery, fellow. There, drink that for me [Throwing his Purse.

Purs. I thank your honour. [Exit Pursuivant.

Enter Buckingham.

Buck. What, talking with a priest, lord chamberlain? Your friends at Pomfret, they do need the priest:

Your honour hath no sparing work in hand.

Hast. 'Good faith, and when I met this holy man,

The men ye talk of came into my mind.

What, go ye toward the Tower?

Buck. I do, my lord: but long I cannot stay there: I shall return before your lordship thence.

Hast. Nay, like enough, for I stay dinner there.

Buck. And supper too, although thou know'st it not [Aside.

Come, will you go?

Hast. I'll wait upon your lordship. [Exit.

SCENE III.—Pomfret. Before the Castle. Enter Ratcliff, with a Guard, conducting Rivers, Grey, and Vaughan, to execution.

Riv. Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee this:—

To-day shalt thou behold a subject die

For truth, for duty, and for loyalty.

Grey. God bless the prince from all the pack of you!

A knot you are of damned blood-suckers.

Vaug. You live, that shall ery woe for this hereafter.

Rat. Despatch! the limit of your lives is out.

Riv. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O, thou bloody priest,

Fatal and ominous to noble peers!

Within the guilty closure of thy walls, Richard the Second here was hack'd to death.

And, for more slander to thy dismal seat,

We give to thee our guiltless blood to drink.

Grey. Now Margaret's curse is fallen upon our heads.

When she exclaim'd on Hastings, you, and me,

For standing by when Richard stabb'd her son.

Riv. Then curs'd she Richard, then curs'd she Buckingham,

Then curs'd she Hastings.—O, remember, God,

To hear her prayer for them, as now for us!
KING RICHARD III.

525

SCENE V.—London. A Room in the Tower.

Buckingham. Stanley, Hastings, the Bishop of Ely, Catesby. Lovel, and others, sitting at a Table: Officers of the Council attending.

Host. Now, noble peers, the cause why we are met is to determine of the coronation:

In God's name, speak, when is this royal day?

Buck. Are all things ready for the royal time?

Stan. They are: and want but nomination.

Ely. To-morrow, then, I judge? a happy day.

Buck. Who knows the lord protector's mind herein?

Who is most inward 1 with the noble duke?

Ely. Your grace, we think, should soonest know his mind.

Buck. We know each other's faces; for our hearts, He knows no more of mine. than I of yours;

Nor I of his, my lord, than you of mine.

Lord Hastings, you and I are near in love.

Host. I thank his grace, I know he loves me well;

But for his purpose in the coronation, I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd

His gracious pleasure any way therein:

But you, my honourable 1 lords, may name the time;

And in the duke's behalf I'll give my voice.

Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part.

Enter Gloster.

Ely. In happy time here comes the duke himself.

Glo. My noble lords and cousins, all, good morrow, I have been long a sleeper; but, I trust, My absence doth neglect no great design.

Which by my presence might have been concluded.

Buck. Had you not come upon your ear, my lord, William lord Hastings had pronounc'd your part, I mean, your voice, for crowning of the king.

Glo. Than my lord Hastings, no man might be bolder:

His lordship knows me well, and loves me well.

My lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborn, I saw good strawberries in your garden there; I do beseech you, send for some of them.

Ely. Marry, and will, my lord, with all my heart.

[Exit Ely.

Glo. Cousin of Buckingham. a word with you.

Catesby hath sound'd Hastings in our business, And finds the testy gentleman so hot, That he will lose his head, ere give consent, His master's child, as worshipfully he terms it, Shall lose the royalty of England's throne.

Buck. Withdraw yourself awhile: I'll go with you.

[Exit Gloster and Buckingham.

Stan. We have not yet set down this day of triumph.

To-morrow, in my judgment, is too sudden;

For I myself am not so well provided, As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Re-enter Bishop of Ely.

Ely. Where is my lord, the duke of Gloster?

I have sent for these strawberries.

Host. His grace looks cheerfully and smooth this morning:

There's some conceit or other likes him well,

When that he bids good morrow with such spirit.

I think, there's never a man in Christendom Can lesser hide his love, or hate, than he;

For by his face straight shall you know his heart.

Stan. What of his heart perceive you in his face?

By any livelihood 1 he show'd to-day?

Hast. Marry, that with no man here he is offender.

For we were he, he had shown it in his looks.

Re-enter Gloster and Buckingham.

Glo. I pray you all, tell me what they deserve,

That do conspire my death with devilish plots

Of damned witchcraft? and that have prevail'd

Upon my body with their hellish charms?

Hast. The tender love I bear your grace, my lord

Makes me most forward in this princely presence

To doom the offenders: whose'er they be,

I say, my lord, they have deserved death.

Glo. Then, be your eyes the witness of their evil—

Look how I am bewitch'd; behold mine arm

Is like a blasted sapling wither'd up:

And this is Edward's wife, that monstrous witch,

Consort'd with that harlot, strumpet Shore,

That by their witchcraft thus have marked me.

Hast. If they have done this deed, my noble lord—

Glo. If! thou protector of this damned strumpet

Talk'st thou to me of ifs?—Thou art a traitor.

Oft with his head!—now, by Saint Paul I swear.

I will not dine until I see the same—

Lovel, and Ratcliff, look that it be done:

The rest, that love me, rise, and follow me.

[Exit Council, with Gloster and Buckingham.

Host. Woe, woe, for England! not a whit for me:

For I, too fond, might have prevented this,

Stanley did dream the boar did rase his helm;

And I did scorn it, and disdained to fly:

Three times to-day my foot-cloth horse did stumble,

And started when he lock'd upon the Tower,

As loath to bear me to the slaughter-house.

O! now I need the priest that spake to me:

I now repent I told the pursuivant,

As too triumphing, low mine enemies,

To-day at Pomfret bloodily were butcher'd,

And I myself secure in grace and favour.

O, Margaret, Margaret! now thy heavy curse

Is lighted on poor Hastings' wretched head.

Rat. Come, come: despatch, the duke would be at dinner:

Make a short shift; he longs to see your head.

Hast. O, momentary grace of mortal men.

Which we more hunt for than the grace of God!

Who builds his hope in air of your good looks,

Lives like a drunken sailor on a mast;

Ready with every nod to tumble down

Into the fatal bowels of the deep.

Lov. Come, come, despatch: it is bootless to exclaim

Hast. O, bloody Richard!—miserable England!

I prophesy the fearful'st time to thee,

That ever wretched age hath look'd upon.

Come, lead me to the block; bear him my head.

They smile at me, who shortly shall be dead. [Exit.

SCENE V.—The Same. The Tower Walls.

Enter Gloster and Buckingham, in rusty armour, miserable ill-favoured, and in haste.

Glo. Come, cousin, cast thou quoit, and change thy colour,

Murther thy breath in middle of a word,
And then again begin, and stop again,
As if thouwert distraught, and mad with terror?

But I'll acquaint our duteous citizens
With all your just proceedings in this case.

But to that end we wish'd your lordship here
To avoid the censures of the earing world.

And to that end we wish'd your lordship here
To avoid the censures of the earing world.

But since you come too late of our intent.
Yet witness what you hear we did intend:
And so, my good lord mayor, we bid farewell.

[Exit Lord Mayor]

Glo. Go, after, after, cousin Buckingham.
The mayor towards Guildhall lies him in all post:
There, at your meetest vantage of the time,
Infer the hastardly of Edward's children:
Tell them, how Edward put to death a citizen,
Only for saying—he would make his son
Heir to the crown; meaning, indeed, his house,
Which by the sign thereof was termed so.
Moreover, urge his hateful luxury,
And bestial appetite in change of lust;
Which stretch'd unto their servants, daughters, wives
Even where his raging' eye, or savage heart,
Without control lust to make a prey.
Nay, for your need, thus far come near my person:
Tell them, when that my mother went, with child
Of that insatiate Edward, noble York,
My princely father, then had wars in France:
And by true computation of the time,
Found that the issue was not his begot;
Which well appeared in his lineaments,
Being nothing like the noble duke my father.
Yet touch this sparingly, as 't were far off;
Because, my lord, you know, my mother lives.

Buck. Doubt not, my lord, I'll play the orator
As if the golden fee, for which I plead,
Were for myself: and so, my lord, adieu.
Glo. If you thrive well, bring them to Baynard's castle,
Where you shall find me well accompanied,
With reverend fathers, and well-learned bishops.
Buck. I go: and, towards three or four o'clock,
Look for the news that the Guildhall affords.

[Exit Buckingham]

Glo. Go, Lovel, with all speed to doctor Shaw:
Go thou [To Car.] to friar Penker:—bid them both
Meet me within this hour at Baynard's castle.

[Exit Lovel and Catesby]

Now will I go, to take some privy order,
To draw the brats of Clarence out of sight;
And to give order, that no manner person
Have any time recourse unto the princes

SCENE VI.—A Street
Enter a Scrivener, with a writing.
Scriv. Here is the indictment of the good lord
Hastings;
Which in a set hand fairly is engross'd,
That it may be to-day read o'er in Paul's:
And mark how well the sequel hangs together
Eleven hours I have spent to write it over,
For yesternight by Catesby was it sent me.
The precedent was full as long a doing;
And yet within these five hours Hastings liv'd,
Untainted, unexamined, free, at liberty.
Here's a good world the while!—Who is so gross,
That cannot see this palpable device?
Yet who so bold, but says he sees it not?
Bad is the world; and all will come to nought.
When such ill dealing must be seen or thought.

Enter Gloucester at one Door, and Buckingham at another.

Glo. How now, how now! what say the citizens? Buck. Now by the holy mother of our Lord, The citizens are mum, say not a word.

Glo. Touch'd you the bastardy of Edward's children? Buck. I did; with his contract with Lady Lucy, And his contract by deputy in France. Th'insatiate greediness of his desires, And his enforcement of the city wives: His tyranny for trifles; his own bastardy, As being got, your father then in France; And dis-resemblance, being not like the duke.

Withal I did infer your lineaments, Being the right idea of your father, Both in your form and nobleness of mind: Laid open all your victories in Scotland. Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace, Your bounty, virtue, fair humility; Indeed, left nothing fitting for your purpose Untouch'd, or slightly handled in discourse: And, when my oratory drew toward end, I bade them that did love their country's good, Cry,—"God save Richard, England's royal king!"

Glo. And did they so?

Buck. No, so God help me, they spake not a word; But, like dumb statues, or breathing stones, Star'd each on other, and look'd deadly pale. Which when I saw, I reprehended them, And ask'd the mayor, what meant this wilful silence? His answer was, the people were not us'd To be spoke to, but by the recorder. Then he was urg'd to tell my tale again — "This saith the duke, thus hath the duke infer'd;" But nothing spoke in warrant from himself. When he had done, some followers of mine own, At lower end of the hall, hur'd up their caps, And some ten voices cried, "God save king Richard!" And thus I took the vantage of those few,—

"Thanks, gentle citizens, and friends," quoth I; "This general applause, and cheerful shout. Argues your wisdom, and your love to Richard;" And even here brake off, and came away.

Glo. What tongueless blocks were they! would they not speak?

Will not the mayor, then, and his brethren, come?

Buck. The mayor is here at hand. Intend some fear; Be not you spake with, but by mighty suit; And look you get a prayer-book in your hand, And stand between two churchmen, good my lord; For on that ground I'll make a holy descent; And be not easily won to our requests; Play the maid's part, still answer nay, and take it. Glo. I go; and if you plead as well for them, As I can say nay to thee for myself, No doubt we bring it to a happy issue.

Enter the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens.

Welcome, my lord: I dance attendance here; I think the duke will not be spoke withal.—

Enter from the Castle, Catesby.

Now, Catesby! what says your lord to my request?

Cate. He doth entreat your grace, my noble lord, To visit him to-morrow, or next day. He is within, with two right reverend fathers, Divinely bent to meditation; And in no worldly suits would he be mov'd, To draw him from his holy exercise.

Buck. Return, good Catesby, to the gracious duke Tell him, myself, the mayor, and aldermen, In deep designs, in matter of great moment, No less importing than our general good, Are come to have some conference with his grace. Cate. I'll signify so much unto him straight. [Exeunt

Buck. Ah, ha! my lord, this prince is not an Edward He is not biling on a lewd love-bed; But on his knees at meditation:

Not dallying with a brace of courtizans, But meditating with two deep divines; Not sleeping to engross his idle body, But praying to enrich his watchful soul. Happy were England, would this virtuous prince Take on his grace the sovereignty thereof; But sore I fear, we shall not win him to it.

May. Marry, God defend his grace should say us nay! Buck. I fear, he will. Here Catesby comes again —

Re-enter Catesby.

Now, Catesby, what says his grace?

Cate. He wonders to what end you have assembled Such troops of citizens to come to him: His grace not being warn'd thereof before, He fears, my lord, you mean no good to him. Buck. Sorry I am, my noble cousin should suspect me, that I mean no good to him: By heaven, we come to him in perfect love; And so once more return, and tell his grace.

When holy and devout religious men Are at their beads, 'tis much to draw them thence; So sweet is zealous contemplation.

Enter Gloucester, with a book, in a Gallery above, between two Bishops. CATESBY returns.

May. See, where his grace stands 'tween two clergy-men!

Buck. Two props of virtue for a Christian prince, To stay him from the fall of vanity; And, see, a book of prayer in his hand; True ornament to know a holy man.—

Famous Plantagenet, most gracious prince, Lend favourable ear to our requests, And pardon us the interruption Of thy devotion, and right-Christian zeal.

Glo. My lord, there needs no such apology; I do beseech your grace to pardon me, Who, earnest in the service of my God, Defer'd the visitation of my friends. But, leaving this, what is your grace's pleasure?

Buck. Even that, I hope, which pleaseth God above And all good men of this universe'd else. Glo. I do suspect, I have done some offence, That seems disgrac'd in the city's eye; And that you come to reprehend my ignorance.

Buck. You have, my lord: would it might pleaseth your grace, On our entreaties to amend your fault.

Glo. Else wherefore breathe I in a Christian land? Buck. Know then, it is your fault that you resign The supreme seat, the throne majestical, The scepter'd office of your ancestors,
Your state of fortune, and your due of birth, 1
The lineal glory of your royal house,
To the corruption of a blemish'd stock;
Whiles, in the mildness of your sleepy thoughts,
Which here we waken to our country's good,
This noble isle cloth want her proper limbs;
Her face deface'd with scars of infancy,
Her royal stock graft with ignoble plants,
And almost shoulder'd in the swallowing gulf
Of dark 2 forgetfulness, and deep 3 oblivion.
Which to resecure, we heartily solicit
Your gracious self to take on you the charge
Andingly government of this your land:
Not as protector, steward, substitute,
Or lowly factor for another's gain;
But as successively from blood to blood,
Your right of birth, your empery, your own.
For this, consorted with the citizens,
Your very worshipful and loving friends,
And by their vehement instigation,
In this just cause came I to move your grace.
Glo. I cannot tell, if to depart in silence,
Or bitterly to speak in your reproach.
Rest fettle my degrees or your condition:
If, not to answer, — you might haply think.
Tongue-tied ambition, not replying, yielded,
To bear the golden yoke of sovereignty,
Which fondly you would here impose on me:
If to reprove you for this suit of yours,
So season'd with your faithful love to me,
Then, on the other side, I check'd my friends.
Therefore, to speak, and to avoid the first,
And then, in speaking, not to incur the last,
Definitely thus I answer you. 4
Your love deserves my thanks, but my desert,
Unequal, shuns your high request.
First, if all obstacles were cut away,
And that my path were even to the crown,
As the 5 ripe revenue and due of 6 birth;
Yet so much is my poverty of spirit,
So mighty, and so many, my defects,
That I would rather hide me from my greatness,
Being a bawd to brook no mighty sea,
Than in my greatness covet to be hid,
And in the vapour of my glory smother'd.
But, God be thank'd, there is no need of me:
And much I need to help you, were there need:
The royal tree hath left us royal fruit,
Which, mellow'd by the stealing hours of time,
Will we come to see in need of majesty,
And make, no doubt, us happy by his reign.
On him I lay that you would lay on me,
The right and fortune of his happy stars:
Which God defend that I should wring from him.
Buck. My lord, this argues conscience in your grace,
But the respect thereof are nice and trivial,
All circumstances well considered.
You say, that Edward is your brother's son:
So say we too, but not by Edward's wife;
For first was he contract to lady Lucy;
Your mother lives a witness to his vow:
And afterward by substitute betroth'd
To Bona, sister to the king of France.
These both put off, a poor petitioner,
A care-craz'd mother to a many sons,
A beauty-waning and distress'd widow,
Even in the afternoon of her best days,

Made prize and purchase 7 of his wanton eye,
Seduce'd the pitch and height of his degree 8
To base declension and loath'd bigamy.
By her, in his unlawful bed, he got
This Edward, whom our mammers call the prince
More bitterly could I expostulate,
Save that, for reverence to some alive,
I give a sparing limit to my tongue.
Then, good my lord, take to your royal self
This prov'rd benefit of dignity;
If not to bless us and the land withal,
Yet to draw forth your noble ancestry
From the corruption of abusing times,
Unto a lineal true-derived course.

May. Do, good my lord; your citizens entreat you
Buck. Refuse not, mighty lord, this prov'rd love •
Cate. O! make them joyful; grant their lawful suit
Glo. Alas! why would you have this care on me?
I am unfit for state and majesty. 10
I do beseech you, take it not amiss;
I cannot, not I will not, yield to you.
Buck. If you refuse it, — as in love and zeal,
Loot to depose the child, your brother's son;
As well we know your tenderness of heart,
And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse,
Which we have noted in you to your kindred,
And equally, indeed, to all estates.
Yet know, whe'r you accept our suit or no,
Your brother's son shall never reign our king;
But we will plant some other in your throne,
To the disgrace and downfall of your house.
And, in this resolution, here we leave you.

Zounds, 11 citizens! we will entreat no more.

Glo. O! do not swear, my cousin Buckingham. 12

Cate. Call him again, sweet prince; accept their suit.
If you deny them, all the land will rue it.

Glo. Will you enforce me to a world of cares?
Call him again: I am not made of stone,
But penetrable to your kind entreaties, [Exit Catesby
Albeit against my conscience, and my soul.—

Re-enter Buckingham. 14

Cousin of Buckingham, and sage, grave men,
Since you now buckle fortune on my back,
To bear her burden, whe'r I will, or no,
I must have patience to endure the load:
But if black scandal, or foul-face reproach,
Attend the sequel of your imposition,
Your more enforcement shall acquittance me
From all the impure blots and stains thereof;
For God doth know, 15 and you may partly see,
How far I am from the desire of this.

May. God bless your grace! we see it, and will say it.

Glo. In saying so, you shall but say the truth.
Buck. Then I salute you with this royal title,—
Loud live king Richard, England's worthy king!

All. Amen.

Buck. To-morrow may it please you to be crown'd? 16
Glo. Even when you please, for you will have it so.
Buck. To-morrow, then, we will attend your grace:
And so, most joyfully, we take our leave.

Glo. Come, let us to our holy work 18 again.

[To the Bishops

Farewell, my cousin:—farewell gentle friends.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Before the Tower.

Enter, on one side, Queen Elizabeth, Duchess of York, and Marquess of Dorset: on the other, Anne, Duchess of Gloucester, leading Lady Margaret Plantagenet, Clarence’s young Daughter.

Duch. Who meets us here?—my niece Plantagenet.

Led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloucester!

Now, for my life, she’s wandering to the Tower,
In pure heart’s love, to greet the tender prince.—

Daughter, well met.

Anne. God give your graces both
A happy and a joyful time of day.

Q. Eliz. As much to you, good sister: whither away?

Anne. No farther than the Tower; and, as I guess,
Upon the like devotion as yourselves,
To gratulate the gentle princes there.

Q. Eliz. Kind sister, thanks: we’ll enter all together:

[Enter Brakenbury.]

And in good time here the lieutenant comes.—
Master lieutenant, pray you, by your leave.

How doth the prince, and my young son of York?

Brak. Right well, dear madam. By your patience, I may not suffer you to visit them.

The king hath strictly charg’d the contrary.

Q. Eliz. The king! who’s that?

Brak. I mean the lord protector.

Q. Eliz. The Lord protect me from that kingly title! Hath he set bounds between their love, and me?

I am their mother; who shall bar me from them?

Duch. I am their father’s mother; I will see them.

Anne. Their aunt I am in law, in love their mother: Then, bring me to their sights; ’tis I’ll hear thy blame, And take thy office from thee, on my peril.

Brak. No, madam, no; I may not leave it so: I am bound by oath, and therefore pardon me.

[Exit Brakenbury.]

Stan. Let me but meet you, ladies, one hour hence, And I’ll salute your grace of York as mother, And reverend looker-on of two fair queens.— Come, madam, you must straight to Westminster,

[To the Duchess of Gloucester.]

There to be crowned Richard’s royal queen.

Q. Eliz. Ah! cut my lace asunder, That my pent heart may have some scope to beat, Or else I swoon with this dead-killing news.

Anne. Despightful tidings! O, unpleasing news!

Dor. Be of good cheer:—mother, how fares your grace?

Q. Eliz. O Dorset! speak not to me, get thee gone! Death and destruction dog thee at thy heels: Thy mother’s name is ominous to her children. If thou wilt outright death, go cross the seas, And live with Richmond from the reach of hell. Go, hie thee, hie thee, from this slaughter-house, Lest thou increase the number of the dead, And make me die the thrall of Margaret’s curse,— Nor mother, wife, nor England’s counted queen.

Stan. Full of wise care is this your counsel, madam.— Take all the swift advantage of the hours:

You shall have letters from me to my son
In your behalf, to meet you on the way:—

Be not ta’en tardy by unwise delay.

Duch. O ill-dispensing wind of misery!—

O, my accursed womb, the bed of death! A cockatrice hast thou hatch’d to the world,

Whose unavoidable eye is murderous!

Stan. Come, madam, come: I in all haste was sent Anne. And I with all unwillingness will go.—

O! would to God, that the inclusive verge
Of golden metal, that must round my brow,
Were red-hot steel to sear me to the brain! Anointed let me be with deadly venom; And die, ere men can say—God save the queen.

Q. Eliz. Go, go, poor soul, I envy not thy glory, To feed my humour, wish thyself no harm. [now

Anne. No! why?—When he, that is my husband Came to me, as I follow’d Henry’s core: When scarce the blood was well wash’d from his hands,

Which issu’d from my other angel husband, And that dear saint which, then, I weeping follow’d: O! when, I say, I look’d on Richard’s face, This was my wish,—"Be thou,” quoth I, "accurs’d, For making me, so young, so old a widow! And, when thou wak’dst, let sorrow haunt thy bed; And be thy wife (if any be so mad)

More miserable by the life of thee,

Than thou hast made me by my dear lord’s death!"

Lo! ere I can repeat this curse again,
Within so small a time my woman’s heart Grossly grew captive to his honey words, And prov’d the subject of mine own soul’s curse: Which hitherto had held mine eyes from rest; For never yet one hour in his bed Did I enjoy the golden dew of sleep,

But with his timorous dreams was still awak’d. Besides, he hates me for my father Warwick; And will, no doubt, shortly be rid of me.

Q. Eliz. Poor heart, adieu, I pity thy complaining.

Anne. No more than with my soul I mourn for yours.

Dor. Farewell, thou woeeful welcome of glory.

Anne. Adieu, poor soul, that tak’st thy leave of it.

Duch. Go thou to Richmond, and good fortune guide thee!—

[To Dorset.]

Go thou to Richard, and good angels tend thee!—

[To Anne.

Go thou to sanctuary, and good thoughts possess thee!—

[To Queen Elizabeth.

I to my grave, where peace and rest lie with me!

Eighth odd years of sorrow have I seen, And each hour’s joy wicked with a week of teen.

Q. Eliz. Stay yet; look back, with me, unto the Tower.

Pity, ye ancient stones, those tender babes, Whom envy hath immur’d within your walls; Rough cradle for such little pretty ones! Rude ragged nurse, old sullen play-fellow For tender princes, use my babies well! So foolish sorrow bids your stones farewell. [Exit ann.
SCENE II.—A Room of State in the Palace.

Richard, crowned upon his Throne; Buckingham, Catesby, a Page, and others.

K. Rich. Stand all apart.—Cousin of Buckingham!
Buck. My gracious sovereign.
K. Rich. Give me thy hand. Thus high, by thy advice.

[Trumpets sound.] And thy assistance, is king Richard seated:

But shall we wear these glories for a day,
Or shall they last, and we rejoice in them?
Buck. Still live they, and for ever let them last!
K. Rich. Ah! Buckingham, now do I play the touch,
To try if thou be current gold, indeed.—
Young Edward lives.—Think now what I would speak.
Buck. Say on, my loving lord.
Buck. Why, so you are, my three-tenoned lord.
K. Rich. Ha! am I king? 'Tis so; but Edward lives.
Buck. True, noble prince.
K. Rich. O bitter consequence!
That Edward still should live,—true, noble prince.—
Cousin, thou was't not wont to be so dull:
Shall I be plain?—I wish the bastards dead;
And I would have it suddenly perform'd,
What say'st thou now? speak suddenly: be brief.
Buck. Your grace may do your pleasure.
K. Rich. Tut, tut! thou art all ice, thy kindless freezes.
Say, have I thy consent that they shall die?
Buck. Give me some little breath, some pause, dear lord,
Before I positively speak in this;
I will resolve you heretofore*.

Catesby. The king is angry: see, he gnaws* his lip.

[Aside.]
K. Rich. I will converse with iron-witted fools,
[Descends from his Throne.]

And unrespective boys: none are for me,
That look into me with considerate eyes.
High-reaching Buckingham grows circumspect.

Boy!—

Page. My lord.
K. Rich. Know'st thou not any, whom corrupting gold
Will tempt unto a close exploit of death?
Page. I know a discontented gentleman,
Whose humble means match not his haughty spirit:
Gold were as good as twenty orators,
And will, no doubt, tempt him to any thing.
K. Rich. What is his name?
Page. His name, my lord, is Tyrrel.

[Exit Page.]

The deep-revolving, witty Buckingham
No more shall be the neighbour to my counsellors.
Hath he so long held out with me until'd,
And stops he now for breath?—Well, be it so.—

Enter STANLEY.

How now, lord Stanley? what's the news with you?
Stan. Know, my loving lord,
The marquis Dorset, as I hear, is fled
To Richmond, in the parts where he abides.
K. Rich. Come hither, Catesby: rumour it abroad,
That Anne, my wife, is very grievous sick;
I will take order for her keeping close.

Inquire me out some mean poor gentle
Whom I will marry straight to Clarence's daughter—
The boy is foolish, and I fear not him,—
Look, how thou dream'st!—I say again, give out,
That Anne my queen is sick, and like to die:
About it; for it stands me much upon,
To stop all hopes whose growth may damage me—

[Exit CATESBY.]

I must be married to my brother's daughter,
Or else my kingdom stands on brittle glass.—
Murder her brothers, and then marry her?
Uncertain way of gain! But I am in
So far in blood, that sin will speak out sin.
Fear-falling pity dwells not in this eye.—

Re-enter Page, with TYRREL.

Is thy name Tyrrel?

Tyr. James Tyrrel, and your most obedient subject.
K. Rich. Art thou, indeed?

Tyr. Prove me, my gracious lord.
K. Rich. Dar'st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine?
Tyr. Please you; but I had rather kill two enemies.
K. Rich. Why, then thou hast it: two deep enemies,
Fees to my rest, and my sweet sleep's disturbing,
Are they that I would have thee deal upon.

Tyrrel. I mean those bastards in the Tower.

Tyr. Let me have open means to come to them,
And soon 'll rid you from the fear of them. [Kneeling.]
K. Rich. Thou sing'st sweet music. Hark, come hither, Tyrrel;

Go by this token.—Rise, and lend thine ear.

[Tyrrel rises, and Richard whispers *]

There is no more but so—say, it is done.
And I will love thee, and prefer thee for it.

Tyr. I will despacht it straight. [Exit.

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. My lord, I have consider'd in my mind
The late demand that you did sound me in.

K. Rich. Well, let that rest. Dorset is fled to Richmond.

Buck. I hear the news, my lord.

K. Rich. Stanley, he is your wife's son—well look unto it.

Buck. My lord, I claim the gift, my due by promise,
For which your honour and your faith are pawn'd;
Th' earldom of Hereford, and the moveables,
Which you have promised I shall possess.

K. Rich. Stanley, look to your wife: if she convey Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it.

Buck. What says your highness to my just request?

K. Rich. I do remember me,—Henry the sixth
Did prophecy that Richmond should be king,
When Richmond was a little peevish boy.

A king!—perhaps—

Buck. My lord—

K. Rich. How chance, the prophet could not at that time
Have told me, I being by, that I should kill him?

Buck. My lord, your promise for the earldom—

K. Rich. Richmond!—When last I was at Exeter
The mayor in courtesy shew'd me the castle,
And call'd it—Rouge-mont: at which name I started.

Because a bard of Ireland told me once,
I should not live long after I saw Richmond.

Buck. My lord,—

K. Rich. Ay; what's o'clock?

Buck. I am thus bold to put your grace in mind
Of what you promis'd me.

K. Rich. Well, but what's o'clock?
Buck. Upon the stroke of ten.
K. Rich. Well, let it strike.
Buck. Why, let it strike?
K. Rich. Because that, like a Jack, thou keepest the stroke
Betwixt thy begg'ring and my meditation.
I am not in the giving vein to-day.
Buck. Why then resolve me whether you will or no.
K. Rich. Thou troubl'est me: I am in the vein.
Exeunt King Richard angrily, and his Train.
Buck. And is it thus? repro's he my deep service
With such contempt? made I him king for this?
O! let me think on Hastings, and be gone
To Brecknock, while my fearful head is on.
[Exit.

SCENE III.—The Same.
Enter TYRREL.
TYR. The tyrannous and bloody act is done:
The most arch deed of piteous massacre,
That ever yet this land was guilty of.
Dighton and Forrest, whom I did suborn
To do this piece of ruthless butchery,
Albeit they were flesh'd villains, blooded dogs,
Melted with tenderness and mild compassion,
Went like two children in their death's sad story.
"O! thus," quoth Dighton, "lay the gentle babes."—
"Thus, thus," quoth Forrest, "girdling one another
Within their alabaster innocent arms:
Their lips were four red roses on a stalk,
And in their summer beauty kiss'd each other.
A book of prayers on their pillow lay;
Which once, quoth Forrest, "almost chang'd my But, O! the devil!"—there the villain stopp'd;
When Dighton thus told on,—"we smothered
The most replenished sweet work of nature,
That, from the prime creation, e'er she fram'd."
Hence both are gone: with conscience and remorse,
They could not speak; and so I left them both,
To bear this tidings to the bloody king.
Exeunt King Richard.
And here he comes.—All health, my sovereign lord!
K. Rich. Kind Tyrrel, am I happy in thy news?
TYR. If to have done the thing you gave in charge
Betog your happiness, be happy then,
For it is done.
K. Rich. But didst thou see them dead?
TYR. I did, my lord.
K. Rich. And buried, gentle Tyrrel?
TYR. The chaplain of the Tower hath buried them:
But where, to say the truth, I do not know.
K. Rich. Come to me, Tyrrel, soon, and after supper,
When thou shalt tell the process of their death.
Mean time but think how I may do thee good,
And be inheritor of thy desire.
Farewell, till then.
TYR. I humbly take my leave.
[Exit.

K. Rich. The son of Clarence have I sent up hence
His daughter meanly have I match'd in marriage:
The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom,
And Anne my wife hath bid this world good night.
Now, for I know the Bretagne Richard aims
At young Elizabeth, my brother's daughter,
And by that knot looks proudly on the crown,
To her go I, a jolly thriving wooer.
Enter CATESBY, in haste.
Cat. My lord!—

K. Rich. Good or bad news, that thou com'st in so bluntly?
CATE. Bad news, my lord: Morton is fled to Rich mond;
And Buckingham, back'd with the hardy Welshmen,
Is in the field, and still his power increaseth.
K. Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more near Than Buckingham and his rash-levied strength.
Come; I have learn'd, that fearful commenting
Is leaden servitor to dull delay;
Delay leads impotent and snail-pace'd beggary:
Then, fiery expedition be my wing,
Jove's Mercury, and herald for a king.—
Go, muster men: my counsel is my shield:
We must be brief, when traitors brave the field.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The same. Before the Palace.
Enter QUEEN MARGARET.
Q. MAR. So, now, prosperity begins to mellow,
And drop into the rotten mouth of death.
Here in these confines still have I lurk'd,
To watch the waning of mine enemies.
A dire induction am I witness to,
And will to France: hoping, the consequence
Will prove as bitter, black, and tragical.
Withdraw thee, wretched Margaret: who comes here?
Enter Queen Elizabeth and the Duchess of York.
Q. ELIZ. Ah, my poor princes! ah, my tender babes!
My unblown flowers, new-appearing sweets!
If yet your gentle souls fly in the air,
And be not fix'd in doom perpetual,
Hover about me with your airy wings,
And hear your mother's lamentation.
Q. MAR. Hover about her; say, that right for right
Hath dimm'd your infant morn to aged night.
[Aside.
Duch. So many miseries have craz'd my voice,
That my woe-wearied tongue is still and mute.
Edward Plantagenet! why art thou dead?
Q. MAR. Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet; [Aside.
Edward for Edward pays a dying debt.
Q. ELIZ. Wilt thou, O God! fly from such gentle lambs,
And throw them in the entrails of the wolf?
When didst thou sleep, when such a deed was done?
Q. MAR. When holy Harry died, and my sweet son.
[Aside.
Duch. Dead life, blind sight, poor mortal living ghost,
Woe's scene, world's shame, grave's due by life usurp'd
Brief abstract and record of tedious days.
Rest thy unrest on England's lawful earth,
[Sitting down
Unlawfully made drunk with innocent blood:
Q. ELIZ. Ah! that thou wouldst as soon afford a grave
As thou canst yield a melancholy seat;
Then would I hide my bones, not rest them here.
Ah! who hath any cause to mourn, but we?
[Aside.
Q. MAR. If ancient sorrow be most reverent,
[Coming forward.
Give mine the benefit of seniory;
And let my griefs frown on the upper hand,
If sorrow can admit society
Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine:—
I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him;
I had a husband, till a Richard kill'd him;

KING RICHARD III.

ACT IV.

Thou hadst an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him;
Thou hadst a Richard, till a Richard kill'd him.

Duch. I had a Richard too, and thou didst kill him:
I had a Rutland too; thou holp'st to kill him.

from forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept
A hell-born'd, that doth hunt us all to death:
That dog, that had his tooth before his eyes;
To worry lambs, and lap their gentle blood:
That foul defacer of God's handy-work,
That reigns in galled eyes of weeping souls,
That excellent grand tyrant of the earth;
Thy womb let loose, to chase us to our graves.—
O! upright, just, and true-disposing God,
How do I thank thee, that this carnal ear
Preys on the issue of his mother's body,
And makes her pew-fellow with others' mien!—

Duch. O, Harry's wife! triumph not in my woes,
God witness with me, I have wept for thine.

Q. Mar. Bear with me: I am hungry for revenge,
And now I cloy me with beholding it.
Thy Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward;
Thy other Edward dead, to quit my Edward;
Young York he is but boot, because both they Match not the high perfection of my loss.
Thy Clarence he is dead, that stabb'd my Edward;
And the beholders of this frantic play,
Th' adulterate Hastings, Rivers, Vaughan, Grey,
Un timely smother'd in their dusky graves.
Richard yet lives, hell's black intelligence,
Only resv'd their factor, to buy souls,
And send them thither; but at hand, at hand,
Enews his pieces and unpitied end:
Earth gapes, hell burns, flames roar, saints pray,
To have him suddenly convey'd from hence.—
Cancel his bond of life, dear God! I pray,
That I may live and say, the dog is dead.

Q. Eliz. O! thou didst prophesy; the time would come,
That I should wish for thee to help me curse
That bottle spider, that foul bunch-back'd toad.

Q. Mar. I call'd thee then, vain flourish of my fortune;
I call'd thee then, poor shadow, painted queen;
The presentation of but what I was,
The flattener index of a direful pageant,
One head'd o' high, to be hurst down below:
A mother only mock'd with two fair babes;
A dream of what thou wast; a garish flag,
To be the aim of every dangerous shot;
A sign of dignity, a breath, a bubble;
A queen in jest, only to fill the scene.
Where is thy husband now? where be thy brothers?
Where be thy two sons? wherein dost thou joy?
Who sucs, and kneels, and says—God save the queen?
Where be the bending peers that flatten'd thee?
Where be the thronging troops that follow'd thee?
Decline all this, and see what now thou art.
For happy wife, a most distressed widow;
For joyfull mother, one that wailes the name;
For one being sned to, one that humbly sues;
For queen, a very caittif crown'd with care:
For one that scorn'd at me, now scorn'd of me;
For one being fear'd of all, now fear'd for one;
For one commanding all, obayed of none.
Thus hath the course of justice whirl'd about,
And left thee but a very prey to time;
Having no more but thought of what thou wast
To torture thee the more, being what thou art.
Thou didst usurp my place, and dost thou not
Usurp the just proportion of my sorrow?
Now, thy proud neck bears half my burden'd yoke;
From which, even here, I slip my wearied head,
And leave the burden of it all on thee.
Farewell, York's wife, and queen of sad mischance:
These English woes shall make me smile in France.

Q. Eliz. O! thou well skill'd in curses, stay a while
And teach me how to curse mine enemies.

Q. Mar. Forbear to sleep the night, and fast the day
Compare dead happiness with living woe;
Think that thy babes were fairer than they were,
And he that slew them fouler than he is:
Bettering thy loss makes the bad-causer worse:
Revolution this will teach thee how to curse.

Q. Eliz. My words are dull; O! quicken them with thine.

Q. Mar. Thy woe's will make them sharp, and pierce like mine.

Duch. Why should calamity be full of words?

Q. Eliz. Windy attorneys to their client woes,
Airy succeeders of intestate joys,
Poor breathing orators of miseries!
Let them have scope: though what they do impart
Help nothing else, yet do they ease the heart.

Duch. If so, then be not tongue-ty'd: go with me,
And in the breath of bitter words let's smoother
My damned son, that thy two sweet sons smother'd.

[A Trumpet heard.

The trumpet sounds; be copious in exclamis.

Enter King RICHARD, and his Train, marching.
K. Rich. Who interprets me in my expedition?

Duch. O! she, that might have intercepted thee,
By strangling thee in her accursed womb,
From all the slaughters, wretch, that thou hast done.

Q. Eliz. Hid'st thou that forehead with a golden crown,
Where't should be branded, if that right were right,
For slaughter of the prince that ow'd that crown,
And the dire death of my poor sons and brothers?
Tell me, thou villain-slave, where are my children?

Duch. Thou toad, thou toad, where is thy brother Clarence.

And little Ned Plantagenet, his son?

Q. Eliz. Where is the gentle Rivers, Vaughan, Grey?

Duch. Where is kind Hastings?

K. Rich. A flourish, trumpets! strike alarum, drums!

Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale women
Rall on the Lord's anointed. Strike, I say!—

[Flourish. Alarums.

Either be patient, and entreat me fair,
Or with the clamorous report of war
Thus will I drown your exclamations.

Duch. Art thou my son?

K. Rich. Ay; I thank God, my father, and yourself
Duch. Then patiently hear! my impatience.

K. Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your condition,
That cannot brook the accent of reproof.

Duch. O! let me speak.

K. Rich. Do then; but I'll not hear.

Duch. I will be mild and gentle in my words.

K. Rich. And brief, good mother, for I am in haste
Duch. Art thou so hasty? I once* stay'd for thee,
God knows, in torment and in agony.

K. Rich. And came I not at last to comfort you?

---

Duck. No, by the holy rood, thou know'st it well;
Thou canst on earth to make the earth my hell.
A grievous burden was thy birth to me;
Tetchy and wayward was thine infancy:
Thy school-days, frightful, desperate, wild and furious;
Thy prime of manhood, daring, bold, and venturous:
Thy age confirm'd, proud, subtle, sly, and bloody,
More mild, but yet more harmful, kind in hatred:
What comfortable hour canst thou name,
That ever grace'd me with thy company?
K. Rich. Faith, none, but Humphrey Hour, that call'd thy grace
To breakfast once forth of my company.
If I be so disgraceful in your eye,
Let me march on, and not offend you, madam.—
Strike up the drum!
Duck. I pr'ythee, hear me speak.
Duck. Hear me a word;
For I shall never speak to thee again.
Duck. Either thou wilt die by God's just ordinance,
Ere from this war thou turn a conqueror;
Or I with grief and extreme age shall perish,
And never look upon thy face again.
Therefore, take with thee my most grievous curse;
Which in the day of battle tire thee more,
Than all the complete armour that thou wear'st.
My prayers on the adverse party fight;
And there the little souls of Edward's children
Whisper the spirits of thine enemies,
And promise them success and victory.
Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end;
Shame serves thy life, and doth thy death attend.[Exit.
Q. Eliz. Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to curse
Anodes in me: I say amen to her.
[Going.
K. Rich. Stay, madam; I must talk a word with you.
Q. Eliz. I have no more sons of the royal blood,
For thee to slaughter²; for my daughters, Richard,
They shall be praying nuns, not weeping queens;
And therefore level not to hit their lives.
K. Rich. You have a daughter call'd Elizabeth,
Virtuous and fair, royal and gracious.
Q. Eliz. And must she die for this? O! let her live,
And I'll corrupt her manners, stain her beauty;
Slander myself as false to Edward's bed;
Throw over her the veil of infamy:
So she may live unscarr'd of bleeding slaughter,
I will confess she was not Edward's daughter.
K. Rich. Wrong not her birth; she is a royal princess.
Q. Eliz. To save her life, I'll say she is not so.
K. Rich. Her life is safest only in her birth.
Q. Eliz. And only in that safety died her brothers.
K. Rich. Lo! at their birth good stars were opposite.
Q. Eliz. No, to their lives ill friends were contrary.
K. Rich. All unavoided is the doom of destiny.
Q. Eliz. True, when avoided grace makes destiny.
My babes were destin'd to a fairer death.
If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life,
K. Rich. You speak, as if that I had slain my cousins.
Q. Eliz. Cousin's, indeed; and by their uncle cozen'd
Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life,
Whose hands sweeter lanel'd their tender hearts,
Thy head, all indirectly, gave direction:
No doubt the murderous knife was dull and blunt,
I'll fill it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart,
To reveal in the entails of my lambs.
But that still use of grief makes wild grief tame,
My tongue should to thy ears not name my boys,
Till that my nails were anchor'd in thine eyes;
And I, in such a desperate bay of death,
Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling rent,
Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom.
K. Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enterprises,
And dangerous success of bloody wars,
As I intend more good to you and yours,
Than ever you or yours by me were harm'd!
Q. Eliz. What good is cover'd with the face of heaven.
To be discover'd that can do me good?
K. Rich. Th'l advancement of your children gentle lady.
Q. Eliz. Up to some scaffold, there to lose their heads
K. Rich. Unto the dignity and height of honour.
The high imperial type of this earth's glory.
Q. Eliz. Flatter my sorrow with report of it;
Tell me, what state, what dignity, what honour,
Canst thou demise to any child of mine?
K. Rich. Even all I have; ay, and myself and all
Will I withal endow a child of thine;
So in the Lethe of thy angry soul
Thou drown the sad remembrance of these wrongs,
Which thou supposest, I have done to thee.
Q. Eliz. Be brief, lest that the process of thy kindless
Last longer telling than thy kindless' date.
K. Rich. Then know, that from my soul I love thy daughter.
Q. Eliz. My daughter's mother thinks it with her soul
K. Rich. What do you think?
Q. Eliz. That thou dost love my daughter from thy soul.
So, from thy soul's love didst thou love her brothers;
And from my heart's love do I thank thee for it.
K. Rich. Be not so hasty to confound my meaning.
I mean, that with my soul I love thy daughter;
And do intend to make her queen of England.
Q. Eliz. Well, then, who dost thou mean shall be her king?
K. Rich. Even he that makes her queen: who else should be?
Q. Eliz. What! thou?
K. Rich. Even so: how think you of it?
Q. Eliz. How canst thou woo her?
K. Rich. That I would learn of you,
As one being best acquainted with her humour.
Q. Eliz. And wilt thou learn of me?
K. Rich. Madam, with all my heart.
Q. Eliz. Send to her by the man that slew her brothers,
A pair of bleeding hearts; thereon engrav'd
Edward and York; then, haply will she weep;
Therefore present to her,—as sometime Margaret
Did to thy father, steep'd in Rutland's blood,—
A handkerchief; which, say to her, did drain
The purple sap from her sweet brother's body,
And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withal.
If this inducement move her not to love,
Soul her a letter of thy noble deeds;²
Tell her thou mad'st away her uncle Clarence,
Her uncle Rivers; ay, and, for her sake,
Mad'st quick conveyance with her good aunt Anne
K. Rich. You mock me, madam: this is not the way
To win your daughter.
Q. Eliz. There is no other way,
Unless thou couldst put on some other shape,
And not be Richard that hast done all this.

K. Rich. Say, that I did all this for love of her.
Q. Eliz. Nay, then indeed, she cannot choose but hate thee.

Haring bought love with such a bloody spoil.
K. Rich. Look, what is done cannot be now amended.
Men shall call unadvisedly sometimes, Which after hours give leisure to repent:
If I did take the kingdom from your sons,
To make amends I'll give it to your daughter.
If I have kill'd the issue of your womb,
To quicken your increase, I will beget
Mine issue of your blood upon your daughter.
A grandam's name is little less in love,
Than is the doting title of a mother.
They are as children, but one step below,
Even of your mettle, of your very blood;
Of all one pain, save for a night of groans
Endur'd of her, for whom you bid like sorrow.
Your children were vexation to your youth;
But mine shall be a comfort to your age.
The loss you have is but a son, being king,
And by that loss your daughter is made queen:
I cannot make you what amends I would,
Therefore, accept such kindness as I can.
Dorset, your son, that with a fearful soul
Treads' discontented steps in foreign soil,
This fair alliance quickly shall call home
To high promotions and great dignity:
The king, that calls your beauteous daughter wife,
Familiarly shall call thy Dorset brother;
Again shall you be mother to a king,
And all the ruins of distressful times
Repair'd with double riches of content.
What! have we many goodly days to see:
The liquid drops of tears that you have shed,
Shall be again transform'd to orient pearl,
Advantaging their loan with interest
Of ten-times-double gain of happiness.
Go then, my mother: to thy daughter go:
Make bold her bashful years with your experience;
Prepare her cars to hear a wooer's tale;
Put in her tender heart th' aspiring flame
Of golden sob'reignty: acquaint the princess
With the sweet silent hours of marriage joys:
And when this arm of mine hath chas'd
The petty rebel, dull-brain'd Buckingham,
Bound with triumphant garlands will I come,
And lead thy daughter to a conqueror's bed;
To whom I will retail my conquest won,
And she shall be sole victress, Caesar's Caesar.
Q. Eliz. What were I best to say? her father's brother
Would be her lord? or shall I say, her uncle?
Or he that slew her brothers, and her uncles?
Under what title shall I woo for thee,
That God, the law, my honour, and her love,
Can make soin pleasing to her tender years?
K. Rich. Infer fair England's peace by this alliance.
Q. Eliz. Which she shall purchase with still lasting war.
K. Rich. Tell her, the king, that may command, entreats
Q. Eliz. That at her hands, which the king's King forbids.
K. Rich. Say, she shall be a high and mighty queen.
Q. Eliz. To wait the title, as her mother doth.
K. Rich. Say, I will love her everlastingly.
Q. Eliz. But how long shall that title, ever, last?
Scene IV.

KING RICHARD III.

It cannot be avoided, but by this; It will not be avoided, but by this. Therefore, dear mother, (I must call you so) Be the attorney of my love to her. Please what I will be, not what I have been; Not my deserts, but what I will deserve; Urge the necessity of state and times; And be not peevish, fond in great designs. Q. Eliz. Shall I be tempted of the devil thus? K. Rich. Ay, if the devil tempt thee to do good. Q. Eliz. Shall I forget myself, to be myself? K. Rich. Ay, if your self's remembrance wrong yourself. Q. Eliz. Yet thou didst kill my children. K. Rich. But in your daughter's womb I'll bury them: Where, in that nest of spicery, they will breed Selves of themselves, to your recomforture. Q. Eliz. Shall I go win my daughter to thy will? K. Rich. And be a happy mother by the deed. Q. Eliz. I go. Write to me Richard, very shortly, And you shall understand from me her mind. K. Rich. Bear her my true love's kiss, and so farewell. [Kissing her. Exit Q. ELIZABETH.

Relenting fool, and shallow, changing woman! — How now! what news?

Enter Ratcliff in haste; Catesby following.

Rat. Most mighty sovereign, on the western coast Rideth a puissant navy: to our shores Throng many doubtful hollow-hearted friends, Unarm'd, and unresolv'd to beat them back. 'Tis thought that Richmond is their admiral: And there they hull, expecting but the aid Of Buckingham to welcome them ashore. K. Rich. Some light-foot friend post to the duke of Norfolk: — Ratcliff, thyself; — or Catesby; where is he? Cate. Here, my good lord. K. Rich. Catesby, fly to the duke. Cate. I will, my lord, with all convenient haste. K. Rich. Ratcliff, come hither. Post to Salisbury: When thou com'st thither, — dull, unmindful villain, [To CATESBY. Why stay'st thou here, and go'st not to the duke? Cate. First, mighty liege, tell me your highness' pleasure, What from your grace I shall deliver to him. K. Rich. O! true, good Catesby. — Bid him levy straight The greatest strength and power he can make, And meet me suddenly at Salisbury. Cate. I go. [Exit. Rat. What, may it please you, shall I do at Salisbury? K. Rich. Why, what wouldst thou do there, before I go? Rat. Your highness told me, I should post before. [Enter STANLEY.

K. Rich. My mind is chang'd. — Stanley; what news with you? Stan. None good, my liege, to please you with the hearing; Nor none so bad, but well may be reported. K. Rich. Heyday, a riddle! neither good nor bad? What need'st thou run so many miles about. When thou may'st tell thy tale the nearest way? Once more, what news?

Stan. Richmond is on the seas. K. Rich. There let him sink, and be the seas on him. White-liver'd runagate! what doth he there? Stan. I know not, mighty sovereign, but by guess. K. Rich. Well, as you guess? Stan. Stir'd up by Dorset, Buckingham, and Morton He makes for England, here, to claim the crown. K. Rich. Is the chair empty? is the sword unsaw'd? Is the king dead? the empire unpossess'd? What heir of York is there alive, but we, And who is England's king, but great York's heir? Then, tell me, what makes he upon the seas? Stan. Unless for that, my liege, I cannot guess. K. Rich. Unless for that he comes to be your liege, You cannot guess wherefore the Welshman comes. Thou wilt revolt, and fly to him, I fear. Stan. No, my good lord; therefore, mistrust me not K. Rich. Where is thy power, then, to beat him back? Where be thy tenants, and thy followers? Are they not now upon the western shore, Safe-conducting the rebels from their ships? Stan. No, my good lord, my friends are in the north. K. Rich. Cold friends to me: What do they in the north, When they should serve their sovereign in the west? Stan. They have not been commanded, mighty king Pleadeth your majesty to give me leave, I'll muster up my friends, and meet your grace. Where, and what time, your majesty shall please. K. Rich. Ay, thou wouldst be gone to join with Richmond: But I'll not trust thee. Stan. Most mighty sovereign. You have no cause to hold my friendship doubtful. I never was, nor never will be false. K. Rich. Go, then, and muster men; but leave behind Your son, George Stanley. Look your heart be firm, Or else his head's assurance is but frail. Stan. So deal with him, as I prove true to you. [Exit STANLEY. Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My gracious sovereign, now in Devonshe, As I by friends am well advertised, Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughty prelate, Bishop of Exeter, his elder brother, With many more confederates, are in arms. Enter another Messenger.

2 Mess. In Kent, my liege, the Guildfords are in arms And every hour more competitors Flock to the rebels, and their power grows strong. Enter a third Messenger.

3 Mess. My lord, the army of great Buckingham— K. Rich. Out on ye, owls! nothing but songs of death? [He strikes him There, take thou that, till thou bring better news. 3 Mess. The news I have to tell thy majesty Kneeling. Is that by sudden floods and fall of waters, Buckingham's army is dispers'd and scatter'd; And he himself wander'd away alone, No man knows whither. K. Rich. I ever thee mercy There is my purse, to eure that blow of thine. Rising. Hath any well-advised friend proclaimed Reward to him that brings the traitor in? 3 Mess. Such proclamation hath been made, my lord
Enter a fourth Messenger.

4 Mess. Sir Thomas Lovel, and lord Marquess Dorset, 't is said, my liege, in Yorkshire are in arms; But this good comfort bring to your highness,— The Bretagne navy is dispers'd by tempest. Richmond, in Dorsetshire, sent out a boat Unto the shore, to ask those on the banks, If they were his assistants, yea, or no: Who answer'd him, they came from Buckingham Upon his party: he, mistrusting them, Hois'd sail, and made his course again for Bretagne.

K. Rich. March on, march on, since we are up in arms; If not to fight with foreign enemies, Yet to boat down these rebels here at home. Enter GATESBY.

Gates. My liege, the duke of Buckingham is taken; That is the best news: that the earl of Richmond Is with a mighty power landed at Milford, Is colder news, but yet they must be told. K. Rich. Away towards Salisbury! while we reason here, A royal battle might be won and lost.— Some one take order, Buckingham be brought To Salisbury; the rest march on with me. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Salisbury. An open Place.

Enter the Sheriff, and Guard, with BUCKINGHAM led to Execution.

Buck. Will not king Richard let me speak with him? Sher. No, my good lord; therefore be patient. Buck. Hastings, and Edward's children, Grey, and Rivers, Holy king Henry, and thy fair son Edward, Vaughan, and all that have miscarried By underhand corrupted foul injustice, If that your moody discontented souls Do through the clouds behold this present hour, Even for revenge mock my destruction!— This is All-Souls' day, fellow, is it not? Sher. It is.

Buck. Why, then All-Souls' day is my body's doomsday. This is the day, which, in king Edward's time, I wish'd might fall on me, when I was found. False to his children, or his wife's allies: This is the day, wherein I wish'd to fall By the false faith of him whom most I trusted: This, this All-Souls' day to my fearful soul Is the determin'd respite of my wrongs, That high All-Secr, which I dailied with, Hath turn'd my feign'd prayer on my head, And given in earnest what I begg'd in jest. Thus doth he forse the swords of wicked men To turn their own points in their masters' bosoms. Thus Margaret's curse falls heavy on my neck. —"When he," quoth she, "shall split thy heart with sorrow, Remember Margaret was a prophetess." — Come, lead me, officers, to the block of shame; Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the duce of blame. [Exeunt Buckingham and Officers.

Enter STANLEY and Sir CHRISTOPHER URSWICK

STAN. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this from me. — That, in the sty of the most bloody boar, My son George Stanley is frank'd up in hold: If I revolt, off goes young George's head: The fear of that holds off my present aid. So, get thee gone: command me to thy lord. Urs. Oh, that the queen hath heartily consented, He should espouse Elizabeth her daughter. But, tell me, where is principely Richmond now? Chris. At Pembroke, or at Harfurd-west, is Wales STAN. What men of name and mark? resort to him? Chris. Sir Walter Herbert, a renowned soldier; Sir Gilbert Talbot, sir William Stanley; Oxford, redoubted Pembroke, sir James Blunt, And Rice ap Thomas, with a valiant crew, And many other of great name and worth; And towards London do they bend their power, If by the way they be not fought withal... STAN. Well, lie thee to thy lord; I kiss his hand; My letter will resolve him of my mind. Farewell. [Giving Papers to Sir Christopher. Exeunt

SCENE II.—A Plain near Tamworth.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, RICHMOND, OXFORD, SIR JAMES BLUNT, SIR WALTER HERBERT, and others, with Forces, marching.

Richm. Fellows in arms, and my most loving friends, Bruis'd underneath the yoke of tyranny, Thus far into the bowels of the land Have we march'd on without impediment; And here receive we from our father Stanley. [Shewing a Paper

Lines of fair comfort and encouragement. The reckless, bloody, and usurping boar, That spoil'd your summer fields, and fruitful vines, Swills your warm blood like wash, and makes his trough In your embowell'd bosoms, this foul swine Is? how now? even in the centre of this isle, Near to the town of Leicester, as we learn: From Tamworth thither, is but one day's march. In God's name, cheerly on, courageous friends, To reap the harvest of perpetual peace By this one bloody trial of sharp war. Orf. Every man's conscience is a thousand men, To fight against this guilty homicide. Herb. I doubt not, but his friends will turn to us. Blunt. He hath no friends, but what are friends for Which in his dearest need will fly from him. [Fare Richm. All for our vantage: then, in God's name march True hope is swift, and flies with swallow's wings, Kings it makes gods, and meaner creatures kings. [Exeunt

K. Rich. Here pitch our tent, even here in Bosworth field.—
KING RICHARD III.

Scene III.

My lord of Surrey, why look you so sad?
Sur. My heart is ten times lighter than my looks.
K. Rich. My lord of Norfolk,—
Nor. Here, most gracious liege.
K. Rich. Norfolk, we must have knocks; in! must we not?
Nor. We must both give and take, my loving lord.
K. Rich. Up with my tent! here will I lie to-night;
Soldiers begin to set up the King's Tent.

But where to-morrow?—Well, all's one for that. —
Who hath described the number of the traitors?
Nor. Six or seven thousand is their utmost power.
K. Rich. Why, our battalia trebles that account:
Besides, the king's name is a tower of strength,
Which they upon the adverse faction want.
Up with the tent!—Come, noble gentlemen,
Let us survey the vantage of the ground. —
Call for some men of sound direction. —
Let's lack no discipline, make no delay,
For, lords, to-morrow is a busy day. [Exeunt.

Enter, on the other side of the Field,
Sir William Brandon, Oxford, and other Officers.
Some of the Soldiers pitch Richard's Tent.

Richm. The weary sun hath made a golden set,
And by the bright track of his fiery car,
Gives token of a godly day to-morrow.—
Sir William Brandon, you shall hear my standard.—
Give me some ink and paper in my tent:
I'll draw the form and model of our battle,
Limit each leader to his several charge,
And part in just proportion our small power.
My lord of Oxford,—you, Sir William Brandon,—
And you, sir Walter Herbert, stay with me.

The earl of Pembroke keeps his regiment:
Good captain Blunt, bear my good night to him,
And by the second hour in the morning
Desire the earl to see me in my tent. —
Yet one thing more, good captain, do for me: Where is lord Stanley quarter'd, do you know?
Blunt. Unless I have mist'en his colours much,
(Which, well I am assur'd, I have not done)
His regiment lies half a mile, at least,
South from the mighty power of the king.

Richm. If without peril it be possible,
Sweet Blunt, make some good means to speak with him,
And give him from me this most needful note.
Blunt. Upon my life, my lord, I'll undertake it:
And so, God give you quiet rest to-night.

Richm. Good night, good Captain Blunt. — Come,
gentlemen.
Let us consult upon to-morrow's business.
In to my tent, the dew is raw and cold.

[They withdraw into the Tent.

Enter, to his Tent, King Richard, Norfolk, Ratcliff, and Catesby.

K. Rich. What is 't o'clock.
Cate. It's supper time, my lord; it's nine o'clock.
K. Rich. I will not sup to-night.

Give me some ink and paper.—

What is my beaver easier than it was,
And all my armour laid into my tent?

Cate. It is, my liege: and all things are in readiness.

K. Rich. Good Norfolk, his thee to thy charge.

Use careful watch; choose trusty sentinels.

Nor. I go, my lord.

K. Rich. Stir with the lark to-morrow, gentle Norfolk.
Nor. I warrant you, my lord.

[Exit.

K. Rich. Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. Send out a pursuivant at arms
To Stanley's regiment: bid him bring his power
Before sun-rising, lest his son George fall
Into the blind cave of eternal night. —
Fill me a bowl of wine. — Give me a watch:
Saddle white Surrey for the field to-morrow. —
Look that my staves be sound, and not too heavy.

Ratcliff!—

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. Saw'st thou the melancholy lord Northumberland?

Rat. Thomas the earl of Surrey, and himself, Much about cock-shut time, from troop to troop Went through the army, cheering up the soldiers.

K. Rich. So: I am satisfied. Give me a bowl of wine:
I have not that alacrity of spirit,
Nor cheer of mind, that I was wont to naye. —

[Exeunt Lords, &c., with Stanley.

Enter Stanley.

Stan. Fortune and victory sit on thy helm!

Richm. All comfort that the dark night can afford,
Be to thy person, noble father-in-law!
Tell me, I pray, how fares our loving mother?

Stan. I, by attorney, bless thee from thy mother, Who prays continually for Richard's good: So much for that.—The silent hours steal on,
And flaky darkness breaks within the east.
In brief, for so the season bids us be,
Prepare thy battle early in the morning;
And put thy fortune to the arbitrement
Of bloody strokes, and mortal-staring war.

I, as I may, (that which I would I cannot)
With best advantage will deceive the time,
And aid thee in this doubtful shock of arms:
But on thy side I may not be too forward,
Lest, being seen, thy brother, tender George,
Be executed in his father's sight.

Farewell. The leisure and the fearful time
Cuts off the ceremonious vows of love,
And ample interchange of sweet discourse,
Which so long sunder'd friends should dwell upon,
God give us leisure for these rites of love!
Once more, adieu.—Be valiant, and speed well!

Richm. Good lords, conduct him to his regiment.
I'll strive, with troubled thoughts, to take a nap.

Least laden slumber pease me down to-morrow;
When I should mount with wings of victory,
Once more, good night, kind lords, and gentlemen.

[Exeunt Lords, &c., with Stanley.

O! Thou, whose captain I account myself, [Kneeling.]
Look on my forces with a gracious eye;
Put in their hands thy bruising irons of wrath,
That they may crush down with a heavy fall Th' usurping helmets of our adversaries!

Make us thy ministers of chastisement,
That we may praise thee in thy victory!
To thee I do commend my watchful soul,
To-morrow in the battle think on me,
And fall thy powerless arm. 4  Despair, and die.
   Thou, quiet soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep.
[To Richmond]

Dream of success and happy victory;
Thy adversary's wife doth pray for thee.

The Ghost of Buckingham rises.

Ghost. The first was I that help'd thee to the crown;

[To King Richard]

The last was I that felt thy tyranny.
O! in the battle think on Buckingham,
And die in terror of thy guiltiness.
Dream on, dream on, of bloody deeds and death:
Fainting, despair; despairing, yield thy breath.
   I died for hope ere I could lend thee aid;

[To Richmond]

But cheer thy heart, and be thou not dismay'd;
God, and good angels fight on Richmond's side;
And Richmond fall in height of all his pride.

K. Rich. Give me another horse!—bind up my wounds!—

Have mercy, Jesu!—Soft! I did but dream.
O, coward conscience, how dost thou afflict me!—

The lights burn blue.—It is now dead midnight,
Cold fearful drops stand on my trembling flesh.
What do I fear? myself? there's none else by:
Richard loves Richard; that is, I am I.
   Is there a murderer here? No:—yes; I am:
Then fly.—What, from myself? Great reason: why?
Lest I revenge. What! Myself upon myself?
Alack! I love myself. Wherefore? for any good,
That I myself have done unto myself?
O! no: alas! I rather hate myself,
For hateful deeds committed by myself.
I am a villain. Yet I lie; I am not.
Fool, of thyself speak well:—Fool, do not flatter,
My conscience hath a thousand several tongues,
And every tongue brings in a several tale;
And every tale condemns me for a villain.
Perjury, foul perjury, in the high'st degree;
Murther, stern murder, in the direst degree:
All several sins, all we'd in each degree,
Throng to the bar, crying all,—Guilty! guilty!
   I shall despair.—There is no creature loves me;
And if I die, no soul shall pity me:
Nay, wherefore should they? since that I myself
Find in myself no pity to myself.
Methought the souls of all that I had murder'd
Came to my tent; and every one did threaten
To-morrow's vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter Ratcliff.

Rat. My lord.—
K. Rich.* Who's there?—
Rat. Ratcliff, my lord; 'tis I. The early village cock
Hath twice done salutation to the morn:
Your friends are up, and buckle on their armour.
K. Rich. O Ratcliff! I have dream'd a fearful dream.—

What think'st thou? will our friends prove all true?—
Rat. No doubt, my lord.*
K. Rich. —O Ratcliff! I fear, I fear—
Rat. Nay, good my lord, be not afraid of shadows.
K. Rich. By the apostle Paul, shadows to-night
Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard,
Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers,
Armed in proof, and led by shallow Richmond.

It is not yet near day. Come, go with me:
Under our tents I'll play the eaves-dropper,
To hear if any mean to shrink from me.

[Exeunt King Richard and Ratcliff.

Enter Oxford and others.

Lords. Good morrow, Richmond.

Richm. Cry mercy, lords, [Waking.] and watchful gentlemen,
That you have taken a tardy sluggard here.
Lords. How have you slept, my lord?

Richm. The sweetest sleep, and fairest-boding dreams,
That ever enter'd in a drowsy head,
Have I since your departure had, my lords.
Methought their souls, whose bodies Richard murder'd,
Came to my tent, and cried—On! victory!
I promise you, my heart! is very jocund
In the remembrance of so fair a dream,
How far into the morning is it, lords?
Lords. Upon the stroke of four.

Richm. Why, then 'tis time to arm, and give direction—
[He advances to the Troops.

More than I have said. Loving countrymen,
The leisure and enforcement of the time
Forbids to dwell on: yet remember this,—
God and our good cause fight upon our side;
The prayers of holy saints, and wounded souls.
Like high-ree'd bulwarks stand before our faces.
Richard except, whose whom we fight against
Had rather have us win, than him they follow.
For what is he they follow? truly, gentlemen,
A bloody tyrant, and a homicide;
One rais'd in blood, and one in blood establish'd;
One that made means to come by what he hath.
And slaughter'd those that were the means to help him;
A base foul stone, made precious by the foil
Of England's chair, where he is falsely set:
One that hath ever been God's enemy.
Then, if you fight against God's enemy,
God will, in justice, ward you as his soldiers:
If you do swear to put a tyrant down.
You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slain;
If you do fight against your country's foes,
Your country's fate shall pay your pains the hire;
If you do fight in safeguard of your wives.
Your wives shall welcome home the conquerors;
If you do free your children from the sword,
Your children's children1 quit it in your age.
Then, in the name of God, and all these rights,
Advance your standards, draw your willing swords.
For me, the ransom of my bold attempt
Shall be this cold corpse on the earth's cold face;
But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt,
The least of you shall share his part thereof.
Sound, drums and trumpets, boldly, cheerfully;
God, and Saint George! Richmond, and victory!

Re-enter King Richard, Ratcliff, Attendants, and Forces.

K. Rich. What said Northumberland, as touching Richmond?

Rat. That he was never trained up in arms.
K. Rich. He said the truth: and what said Surrey then?

Rat. He smil'd and said, the better for our purpose.
K. Rich. He was 'tis the right; and so, indeed, it is.

Tell the clock there.—Give me a calendar.

Who saw the sun to-day?

Rat. Not I, my lord.

K. Rich. Then he disdains to shine: for, by the book,
He should have bra'y'd the east an hour ago:
A black day will it be to somebody.—

Ratcliff!—

Rat. My lord.

K. Rich. The sun will not be seen to-day:
The sky doth frown and lour upon our army.
I would, these dewy tears were from the ground.
Not shine to-day! Why, what is that to me?
More than to Richmond? for the self-same heaven,
That frowns on me, looks sadly upon him.

Enter Norfolk.

Nor. Arm, arm, my lord! the foe vaunts in the field.

K. Rich. Come, bustle, bustle.—Comparison my horse.—

Call up lord Stanley, bid him bring his power.
I will lead forth my soldiers to the plain,
And thus my battle shall be ordered.

My forward1 shall be drawn out in length,
Consisting equally of horse and foot:
Our archers shall be placed in the midst,
John duke of Norfolk, Thomas earl of Surrey,
Shall have the leading of the foot and horse.
They thus directed, we will follow them
In the main battle; whose puissance on either side
Shall be well winged with our chiefest horse.
This, and Saint George to boot!—What think'st thou, Norfolk?

Nor. A good direction, warlike sovereign.

This found I on my tent this morning.

K. Rich. "Jockey of Norfolk be not too bold,

[Revels.

For Dickon thy master is bought and sold.

A thing devised by the enemy.—

Go, gentlemen; every man to his charge.
Let not our babbling dreams affright our souls;
For conscience is a sword that cowards use,
Devise'd at first to keep the strong in awe:
Our strong arms be our conscience, swords on law
March on, join bravely, let us to 't pell-mell,
If not to heaven, then hand in hand to hell—
What shall I say more than I have inferred?—
Remember who you are to cope withal;—
A sort of vagabonds, rascals, and run-aways,
A scum of Bretagnes, and base lackey peasants,
Whom their o'er-cloyed country vomits forth
To desperate ventures and assur'd destruction.
You sleeping safe, they bring you to unrest;
You having lands, and bless'd with beauteous wives,
They would disfrain the one, distract the other.
And who doth lead them but a paltry fellow, Long kept in Bretagne at our mother's cost; A milk-sop, one that never in his life
Felt so much cold as over shoes in snow?
Let's whip these stragglers o'er the seas again;
Lash hence these over-weaning rags of France,
These faminis'd beggars, weary of their lives;
Who, but for dreaming on this fond exploit,
For want of means, poor rascals, had hang'd themselves
If we be conquer'd, let men conquer us.
And not these bastard Bretagnes; whom our fathers-
Have in their own land beaten, bobb'd, and thump'd,
And, on record, left them the heirs of shame.
Shall these enjoy our lands? lie with our wives?
Ravish our daughters?—Hark, I hear their drum.

Fight, gentlemen of England! fight, bold yeomen!

Draw, archers, draw your arrows to the head;

Spur your proud horses hard, and ride in blood:

Amaze the welkin with your broken staves.

Enter a Messenger.

What says lord Stanley? will he bring his power?

Mess. My lord, he doth deny to come.

K. Rich. Off with his son George’s head.

Nor. My lord, the enemy is pass’d the marsh:

After the battle let George Stanley die.

K. Rich. A thousand hearts are great within my bosom.

Advance our standards! set upon our foes!

Our ancient word of courage, fair Saint George,

Inspire us with the spleen of fiery dragons!

Upon them! Victory sits on our helmets!  [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Another part of the Field.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter Norfolk, and Forces; to him Catesby.

Cate. Rescue, my lord of Norfolk! rescue, rescue!

The king enacts more wonders than a man,

Daring an opposite to every danger.

His horse is slain, and all on foot he fights,

Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death.

Rescue, fair lord, or else the day is lost!

Alarum. Enter King Richard.

K. Rich. A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

Cate. Withdraw, my lord; I’ll help you to a horse.

K. Rich. Slave! I have set my life upon a cast,

And I will stand the hazard of the die.

I think there be six Richmonds in the field;

Five have I slain to-day, instead of him.—

A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!  [Exeunt.

Alarums. Enter King Richard and Richmond; and exclaim, fighting. Retreat and flourish. Then enter Richmond, Stanley bearing the Crown, with divers other Lords, and Forces.

Richm. God, and your arms, be prais’d, victorious friends,

The day is ours, the bloody dog is dead.

Stan. Courageous Richmond, well hast thou acquir thee.

Lo! here, this long-usurped royalty,

From the dead temples of this bloody wretch

Have I pluck’d off, to grace thy brows withal:

Wear it, enjoy it, and make much of it.

Richm. Great God of heaven, say, amen, to all! —

But, tell me, is young George Stanley living?

Stan. He is, my lord, and safe in Leicester town

Whither, if you please, we may withdraw us.

Richm. What men of name are slain on either side?

Stan. John duke of Norfolk, Walter lord Ferrers,

Sir Robert Brakenbury, and Sir William Brandon.

Richm. Inter their bodies as becomes their births.

Proclaim a pardon to the soldiers fled,

That in submission will return to us;

And then, as we have ‘en the sacrament,

We will unite the white rose and the red: —

Smile heaven upon this fair conjunction,

That long hath frown’d upon their calamity! —

What traitor hears me, and says not, amen?

England hath long been mad, and scar’d herself,

The brother blindly shed the brother’s blood,

The father rashly slaughter’d his own son;

The son, compell’d, been butcher to the sire;

All this divided York and Lancaster,

Divided in their dire division. 4

O! now, let Richmond and Elizabeth,

The true successors of each royal house,

By God’s fair ordinance conjoin together;

And let their heirs, (God, if thy will be so)

Enrich the time to come with smooth-faced peace,

With smiling plenty, and fair prosperous days!

Rebate 5 the edge of traitors, gracious Lord,

That would reduce these bloody days again,

And make poor England weep in streams of blood.

Let them not live to taste this land’s increase,

That would with treason wound this fair land’s peace;

Now civil wounds are stopp’d, peace lives again:

That she may long live here, God say, amen!

[Exeunt.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

KING HENRY THE EIGHTH.

CAPUCIUS, Ambassador from Charles V.
CRANNER, Archbishop of Canterbury.
DUKE OF NORFOLK. EARL OF SURREY.
DUKE OF SUFFOLK. DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM.
LORD CHAMBERLAIN. LORD CHANCELLOR.
GARDINER, Bishop of Winchester.
BISHOP OF LINCOLN. LORD ABERGAVENNY. LORD SANDS.
SIR HENRY GUILDFORD. SIR THOMAS LOVELL.
SIR ANTHONY DENNY. SIR NICHOLAS VAUX.
Secretaries to Wolsey.
CROMWELL, Servant to Wolsey.

Several Lords and Ladies in the Dumb Shows; Women attending upon the Queen; Spirits, which appear to her; Scribes, Officers, Guards, and other Attendants.

SCENE, chiefly in London and Westminster; once, at Kimbolton.

PROLOGUE.

I come no more to make you laugh: things now,
That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe,
Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow;
We now present. Those that can pity, here
May, if they think it well, let fall a tear;
The subject will deserve it: such, as give
Their money out of hope they may believe,
May here find truth too: those, that come to see
Only a show or two, and so agree
The play may pass, if they be still and willing,
I'll undertake, may see away their shining
Richly in two short hours. Only they,
That come to hear a merry, bawdy play,
A noise of targets, or to see a fellow
In a long motley coat, guarded\(^1\) with yellow,
Will be deceiv'd; for, gentle hearers, know,
To rank our chosen truth with such a show
As fool and fight is, beside forfeiting
Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring,
To make that only true we now intend.
Will we never an understanding friend.
Therefore, for goodness' sake, and as you are known,
The first and happiest hearers of the town.
Be sad as we would make ye; think, ye see
The very persons of our noble story,
As they were living; think, you see them great,
And follow'd with the general throng, and sweat
Of thousand friends; then, in a moment, see
How soon this mightiness meets misery:
And, if you can be merry then, I'll say,
A man may weep upon his wedding day.

ACT I.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk, at one door; at the other,
the Duke of Buckingham, and the Lord Abergavenny.

Buck. Good morrow, and well met. How have you done,
Since last we saw in France?

Nor. I thank your grace,
Healthful; and ever since a fresh admirer
Of what I saw there

Buck. An untimely age

Stay'd me a prisoner in my chamber, when
Those suns of glory, those two lights of men,
Met in the vale of Arden.

Nor. Twixt Guynes and Arde.
I was then present, saw them salute on horseback;
Beheld them, when they lighted, how they clung,
In their embracement, as they grew together;
Which had they, what fans of their eyes could have

Such a compounded one?

Buck. All the whole time
I was my chamber's prisoner.

Nor. Then you lost

\(^{1}\) Bordered.
The view of earthly glory; men might say,
Till this time, pomp was single; but now married.
To one above itself. Each following day
Became the next day's master, till the last.
Made former wonders it's: to-day the French
All cliquants, all gold, like heathen gods,
Shone down the English; and to-morrow they Made Britain, India: every man that stood Show'd like a mine. Their dwarfish pages were
As cherubins, all gift: the madams, too,
Not us'd to toil, did almost sweat to bear
The pride upon them, that their very labour
Was to them as a painting: now this mask
Was cried incomparable; and the ensuing night
Made it a fool, and beggar. The two kings,
Equal in lustre, were now best, now worst,
As presence did present them; him in eye,
Still him in praise; and, being present both,
'T was said, they saw but one: and no discerner
Durst wag his tongue in censure. When these suns
(For so they praise 'em) by their heralds challenge'd
The noble spirits to arms, they did perform
Beyond thought's compasse; that former fabulous story,
Being now seem possible enough, got credit,
That Bevies was believe'd.

Buck.
O! you go far.

Nor.
As I belong to worship, and affect
In honour honesty, the tractive of every thing
Would by a good discouerer lose some life,
Which action's self was tongue to. All was royal:
To the disposing of it nought rebell'd;
Order gave each thing view.

Buck.
The office did
Distinctly his full function. Who did guide,
I mean, who set the body and the limbs
Of this great sport together, as you guess?

Nor.
One, certes, that promises no element
In such a business.

Buck.
I pray you, who, my lord?

Nor.
All this was order'd by the good discretion
Of the right reverend cardinal of York.

Buck.
The devil speed him! no man's pie is freed
From his ambitious finger. What had he
To do in these fierce vanities? I wonder,
That such a keech can, with his very bulk,
Take up the rays of the beneficent sun,
And keep it from the earth.

Nor.
Surely, sir,
There's in him stuff that puts him to these ends;
For, being not prop'd by ancestry, whose grace
Charls successors their way, nor call'd upon
For high feats done to the crown; neither allied
To eminent assistants, but, 'spider-like,
Out of his self-drawing web, he's gives us note,
The force of his own merit makes his way;
A girt that heaven gives him, and which buys
A place next to the king.

Aber.
I cannot tell
What heaven hath given him: let some graver eye
Pierce into that; but I can see his pride
Peep through each part of him: whence has he that?
If not from hell, the devil is a naggard;
Or has given all before, and he begins
A new hell in himself.

Buck.
Why the devil,
Upon this French going-out, took he upon him,
(Without the privy o' the king) t' appoint
Who should attend on him? He makes up the file
Of all the gentry; for the most part such
Too, whom as great a charge as little honour
He meant to lay upon: and his own letter,
The honourable board of council out,
Must fetch him in the papers.

Aber.
I do know
Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have
By this so sicken'd their estates, that never
They shall abound as formerly.

Buck.
O! many
Have broke their backs, with laying manors on them
For this great journey. What did this vanity,
But minister the consummation of
A most poor issue?

Nor.
Grievingly I think,
The peace between the French and us not values
The cost that did conclude it.

Buck.
Every man,
After the hideous storm that follow'd, was
A thing inspir'd; and, not consulting, broke
Into a general prophecy,—that this tempest,
Dashing the garment of this peace, abode
The sudden breach on 't.

Nor.
Which is bud'd out;
For France hath flaw'd the league, and hath attach'd
Our merchants' goods at Bordeaux.

Aber.
Is it therefore
Th' ambassador is silenc'd?

Nor.
Marry, is't.

Aber.
A proper title of peace, and purchase'd
At a superfluous rate.

Buck.
Why, all this business
Our reverend cardinal carried.

Nor.
Like it your grace,
The state takes notice of the private difference
Betwixt you and the cardinal. I advise you,
(And take it from a heart that wishes towards you Honour and plenteous safety) that you read
The cardinal's malice and his poteny
Together: to consider farther, that
What his high hatred would effect wants not
A minister in his power. You know his nature,
That he's revengeful: and, I know, his sword
Hath a sharp edge: it's long, and 't may be said,
It reaches far; and where 't will not extend,
Thither he darts it. Bosom up my counsel;
You'll find it wholesome. Lo! where comes that rock.
That I advise your shunning.

Enter Cardinal Wolsey (the Purse borne before him) certain of the Guard, and two Secretaries with Papers. The Cardinal in his passage fixeth his eye on Buckingham, and Buckingham on him, both full of disdain.

Wol.
The duke of Buckingham's surveyor? ha!
Where's his examination?

1 Secr.
Here, so please you.

Wol.
Is he in person ready?

1 Secr.
Ay, please your grace.

Wol.
Well, we shall then know more; and Buckingham
Shall lessen this big look. [Exercise Wolsey, and Train
Buck. This butcher's ear is venom-mouth'd, and I
Have not the power to muzzle him; therefore, best
Not wake him in his slumber. A beggar's brood
Out-worths a noble's blood.

Nor.
What, are you chaf'd?

Aber.
Ask God for temperance; that's thy appliance only,
Which your disease requires.

1 Of Southampton, the hero of an old romance.
2 This sentence is assigned to Norfolk, in f. e.
3 A ball of fat, rolled up by butchers.
4 0: in folio. Steevens made the change.
5 To: in folio; which Knight retains.
6 minister communication: in f. e.
7 book: in f. e.
Buck. I read 'in's looks
Matter against me; and his eye revil'd
Me, as his abject object: at this instant
He bores me with some trick. He's gone t' the king:
'Il follow, and out-stare him
Nor.

Stay, my lord,
And let your reason with your choleric question
What 't is you go about. To climb steep hills,
Requires slow pace at first: anger is like
A full-hot horse, who being allow'd his way,
Self-nettle tires him. Not a man in England
Can advise me like you; be to yourself,
As you would to your friend.

Buck. I'll to the king;
And from a mouth of honour, quite cry down
This Ipswich fellow's insolence, or proclaim
There's difference in no persons.
Nor. Be advis'd;
Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot
That it do sing yourself: we may outrun
By violent swiftness which we run at,
And lose by over-running. Know you not,
The fire that mounts the liquor till 't run o'er,
In seeming to augment it wastes it? Be advis'd:
I say again, there is no English soul
More stronger to direct you than yourself,
If with the sap of reason you would quench,
Or but allay, the fire of passion.

Nor. Say not, trea'sonous.
Buck. To the king I'll say 't, and make my vouch
As strong
As shore of rock. Attend: this holy fox,
Or wolf, or both, (for he is equal ravenous,
As he is subtle, and as prone to mischief,
As able to perform 't, his mind and place
Infesting one another, yeas, reciprocally)
Only to show his pomp, as well in France
As here at home, suggests the king, our master,
To this last costly treaty, th' interview
That swallowed so much treasure, and like a glass
Did break i' the riming.

Nor. Faith. and so it did.
Buck. Pray, give me favour, sir. This cunning cardinal
The articles o' the combination drew;
As himself pleas'd; and they were ratified,
As he cried, "Thus let be," to as much end,
As give a crust i' the dead. But our count-cardinal
Has done this, and 't is well; for worthy Wolsey,
Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follows,
(Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy
To the old dam, treason) Charles the emperor,
Under pretence to see the queen, his aunt,
(For 't was, indeed, his colour, but he came
To whisper Wolsey) here makes visitation;
His fears were; that the interview betwixt
England and France might, through their amity,
Breed him some prejudice; for from this league,
Peep'd harms that menac'd him. He privily
Deals with our cardinal, and, as I trow,
Which I do well; for, I am sure, the emperor
Paid ere he promis'd, whereby his suit was granted,
Ere it was ask'd: but when the way was made,
And pav'd with gold, the emperor thus desir'd:
That he would please to alter the king's course,
And break the foresaid peace. Let the king know,
(As soon he shall by me) that thus the cardinal
Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases,
And for his own advantage.
Nor. I am sorry
To hear this of him; and could wish he were Something mistaken in 't.
Buck. No, no; not a syllable:
I do pronounce him in that very shape,
He shall appear in proof.

Enter Brandon; a Sergeant at Armes before him, and
Two or three of the Guard.
Bran. Your office, sergeant; execute it.
Serg. Sir, my lord the duke of Buckingham, and earl Of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton, I
Arrest thee of high treason, in the name
Of our most sovereign king.
Buck. Lo, you, my lord! The net has fall'n upon me: I shall perish
Under device and practice.
Bran. I am sorry
To see you ta'en from liberty, to look on
The business present. 'Tis his highness' pleasure,
You shall to the Tower.
Buck. It will help me nothing
To plead mine innocencce; for that die is on me,
Which makes my whit'st part black. The will of
Be done in this and all things.—I obey.—
O! my lord Abergavenny, fare you well.
Bran. Nay, he must bear you company.—The king
[To Abergavenny]
Is pleas'd you shall to the Tower, till you know
How he determines farther.

Aber. As the duke said,
The will of heaven be done, and the king's pleasure
By me obey'd.
Bran. Here is a warrant from
The king t' attach lord Montacute; and the bodies
Of the duke's confessor, John de la Car,
And Gilbert Peck, his chancellor,—
Buck. So, so;
These are the limbs o' the plot.—No more, I hope.
Bran. A monk o' the Chartreux.
Buck. O! Nicholas Hopkins?
Bran. He.

Buck. My surveyor is false: the o'er-great cardinal
Hath show'd him gold. My life is span'd already:
I am the shadow of poor Buckingham,
Whose figure even this instant cloud puts on,
By darkening my clear sun.—My lord, farewell.

ESCUTCHEON.

Buck. Enter King Henry, leaning on the Cardinal's shoulder; Wolsey, the Lords of the Council, Sir
Thomas Lovell, Officers, Secretary.

K. Hen. My life itself, and the best heart of it,
Thanks you for this great care. I stood i' the level
Of a full charg'd confederacy, and give thanks
To you that shok'd it.—Let be call'd before us
That gentleman of Buckingham's: in person
I'll hear him his confessions justify,
And point by point the treasons of his master
He shall again relate.

The King takes his State. The Lords of the Council occupy their several Places: the Cardinal places himself under the King's Feet on his right Side.

A Noise within, exclaiming Room for the Queen! Enter the Queen, ushered by the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk: she kneels. The King rises from his State, takes her up, kisses her, and places her by him.

Q. Kath. Nay, we must longer kneel: I am a suitor.

K. Hen. Arise, and take place by us.—Half your suit
Never name to us; you have half our power;
The other moiety, ere you ask, is given;
Repeat your will, and take it.

Q. Kath. Thank your majesty.

That you would love yourself, and in that love
Not unconsider'd leave your honour, nor
The dignity of your office, is the point
Of my petition.

K. Hen. Lady mine, proceed.

Q. Kath. I am solicited, not by a few,
And those of true condition, that your subjects
Are in great grievance. There have been commissions
Sent down among them, which hath flaw'd the heart
Of all their loyalties: wherein, although,
My good lord cardinal, theyvent reproaches
Most bitterly on you, as puffer-on
Of these exactions, yet the king our master,
Whose honour heaven shield from soil! even he escapes not Languish unmanfully; yea, such which breaks
The ties of royalty, and almost appears
In loud rebellion.

Nor. Not almost appears,
It doth appear; for upon these taxations,
The clothiers all, not able to maintain
The many to them longing, have put off
The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers, who,
Unfit for other life, compel'd by hunger
And lack of other means, in desperate manner
Daring ih' event to the teeth, are all in uproar,
And danger serves among them.

K. Hen. Taxation!

Wherein, and what taxation?—My lord cardinal,
You that are blamed for it alike with us,
Know you of this taxation?

Wol. Please you, sir,
I know but of a single part, in ought
Pertain's to the state; and front but in that file
Where others tell steps with me.

Q. Kath. No, my lord,
You know no more than others; but you frame
Things, that are known, belike, which are not wholesome.

To those which would not know them, and yet must Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions,
Whereof my sovereignty would have note, they are Most pestilent to the hearing; and, to bear them,
The bark is sacrifice to the load. They say,
They are devis'd by you, or else you suffer
Too hard an exclamation.

K. Hen. Still exaction!

The nature of it? In what kind, let's know,
Is this exaction?

Q. Kath. I am much too venturous
In tempting of your patience; but am bolden'd
Under your promised pardon. The subjects' grief
Comes through commissions, which compel from each
The sixth part of his substance, to be levied
Without delay; and the pretence for this
Is nam'd, your wars in France. This makes bold mouths:

Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts freeze
Alienage in them, their curses now,
Live where their prayers did; and it's come to pass,
Their tractable obedience is a slave
To each incensed will. I would, your highness
Would give it quick consideration, for
There is no primer business.4

K. Hen. By my life,
This is against our pleasure.

Wol. And for me,
I have no farther gone in this, than by
A single voice, and that not pass'd me but
By learned approbation of the judges. If I am
Traduc'd by ignorant tongues, which neither know
My faculties, nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing: let me say,
'T is but the fate of place, and the rough brake
That virtue must go through. We must not stem
Our necessary actions, in the fear
To cope malicious censurers; which ever,
As ravenous fishes, do a vessel follow
That is new trimm'd, but benefit no farther
Than vainly longing. What we oft do best,
By sick interpreters (once weak ones) is
Not ours, or not allow'd; what worst, as oft,
Hititing a grosser quality, is cried up
For our best act. If we shall stand still,
In fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd at,
We should take root here, where we sit, or sit
State statues only.

K. Hen. Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themselves from fear:
Things done without example, in their issue
Are to be fear'd. Have you a preceedent
Of this commission? I believe, not any.
We must not rend our subjects from our laws,
And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each?
A trebling contribution! Why, we take,
From every tree, lop, bark, and part o' the timber,
And, though we leave it with a root, thus hack'd,
The air will drink the sap. To every county
Where this is question'd send our letters, with Free pardon to each man that has denied
The force of this commission. Pray, look to't;
I put it to your care.

Wol. A word with you.  Two the Secretary
Let there be letters writ to every shire,
Of the king's grace and pardon. The grie'd common
Hardly conceive of me: let it be nois'd,
That through our intercession this revokement
And pardon comes. I shall anon advise you
Farrther in the proceeding. [Exit Secretary.

Enter Surveyor.

Q. Kath. I am sorry that the duke of Buckingham
Is one in your displeasure.

K. Hen. It grieves many:
The gentleman is learn'd, and a most rare speaker;
To nature none more bound; his training such,
That he may furnish and instruct great teachers,
And never seek for aid out of himself: yet see,
When these so noble benefits shall prove
Not well dispos'd, the mind growing, once corrupt,
They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly
Than ever they were fair. This man so complete,
Who was enroll'd amongst wonder, and when we,
Almost with ravish'd list'ning, could not find
His hour of speech a minute; he, my lady,
Hath into monstrous habits put the graces
That once were his, and is become as black
As if beseech'd in hell. Sit by us; you shall hear
(This was his gentleman in trust) of him
Things to strike honour sad.—Bid him recount
The fore-recited practices, whereof
We cannot feel too little, hear too much.
Wol. Stand forth; and with bold spirit relate what you,
Most like a careful subject, have collected
Out of the duke of Buckingham.

K. Hen. Speak freely.
Surv. First, it was usual with him, every day
It would infect his speech, that if the king
Should without issue die, he 'd carry it so
To make the sceptre his. These very words
I've heard him utter to his son-in-law,
Lord Aberg'ny, to whom by oath he menac'd
Revenge upon the cardinal.

Wol. Please your highness, note
This dangerous conception in this point.
Not friended by his wish, to your high person
His will is most malignant; and it stretches
Beyond you, to your friends.

Q. Kath. My learn'd lord cardinal,
Deliver all with charity.

K. Hen. Speak on.
How grounded he his title to the crown,
Upon our fail? To this point hast thou heard him
At any time speak aught?

Surv. He was brought to this
By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Hopkins.

K. Hen. What was that Hopkins?
Surv. Sir, a Chartreux friar,
His confessor; who fed him every minute
With words of sovereignty.

K. Hen. How know'st thou this?
Surv. Not long before your highness sped to France,
The duke being at the Rose, within the parish
Saint Lawrence Poulney, did of me demand
What was the speech among the Londoners
Concerning the French journey? I replied,
Men fear'd the French would prove perfidious,
To the king's danger. Presently the duke
Said, 't was the fear, indeed; and that he doubted,
'T would prove the verity of certain words
Spoke by a holy monk; "that oft," says he,
'Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit
John de la Car, my chaplain, a choice hour
To hear from him a matter of some moment:
Whom after, under the confessor's seal,
He solemnly had sworn, that what he spoke
My chaplain to no creature living, but
To me, should utter, with demure confidence
This pausingly ensued.—Neither the king, nor 's heir,
(Tell you the duke) shall prosper: bid him strive
To gain the love o' the commonalty: the duke
Shall govern England.

Q. Kath. If I know you well,
You were the duke's surveyor, and lost your office
On the complaint o' the tenants. Take good heed,
You charge not in your spleen a noble person,
And spoil your nobler soul: I say, take heed;
Yes, heartily beseech you.

K. Hen. Let him on.—
Go forward.
Surv. On my soul, I'll speak but truth.
I told my lord the duke, but the devil's illusions
The monk might be deceiv'd; and that it was dangerous
From this to ruminate on it so far, until
It forg'd him some design, which, being believ'd,
It was much like to do: He answered, "Tush!
It can do me no damage?" adding farther,
That had the king in his last sickness fail'd.
The cardinal's and sir Thomas Lovell's heads
Should have gone off.

K. Hen. Ha! what, so rank? Ah. ha!
There's mischief in this man.—Caust thou say farther?
Surv. I can, my liege.

K. Hen. Proceed.
Surv. Being at Greenwich.
After your highness had reprov'd the duke
About sir William Blomer,—

K. Hen. I remember,
Of such a time: being my sworn servant,
The duke retain'd him.—But on: what hence?
Surv. If, quo't he, "I for this had been committed,
As, to the Tower, I thought, I would have play'd
The part my father meant to act upon
'Th' usurper Richard; who, being at Salisbury,
Made snit to come in 's presence, which if granted,
As he made semblance of his duty, would
Have put his knife into him."

K. Hen. A giant traitor!
Wol. Now, madam, may his highness live in freedom
And this man out of prison?

K. Hen. There's something more would out of thee
What say'st?
Surv. After "the duke his father," with "the knife,"
He stretch'd him, and with one hand on his dagger,
Another spread on his breast, mounting his eyes.
He did discharge a horrible oath; whose tenor
Was,—were he evil us'd, he would out-go
His father, by as much as a performance
Does an irresolute purpose.

K. Hen. There's his period,
To shenthe his knife in us.—He is attach'd.
Call him to present trial; if he may Find mercy in the law, 't is his; if none.
Let him not seek 't of us. By day and night,
He is a daring traitor to the height.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain, and Lord Sands.

Cham. Is't possible, the spells of France should juggle
Men into such strange mysteries?

Sands. New customs,
Though they be never so ridiculous,
Nor, let 'em be unmanly, yet are follow'd.

Cham. As far as I see, all the good our English
Have got by the late voyage is but merely
A fit or two o' the face; but they are shrewd ones,
For when they hold 'em, you would swear directly,
Their very noses had been counsellors
To Pepin or Clotharius, they keep state so.

Sands. They have all new legs, and lame ones: on would take it,
That never saw 'em pace before, the spavin,
Or sprunghalt reign'd among them.

Cham. Death! my lord,
Their clothes are after such a pagan cut too,
That, sure, they've worn out Christendom.—How now?
What news, sir Thomas Lovell?

Enter Sir Thomas Lovell.

Low. Faith, my lord,
I hear of none, but the new proclamation
That's clapp'd upon the court-gate.

Cham. What is't for?
KING HENRY VIII.
ACT I.

Louv The reformation of our travell'd gallants,
That fill the court with quarrels, talk, and tailors.

Cham. I am glad 'tis there: now, I would pray our monsieurs
To think an English courtier may be wise,
And never see the Louvre.

Louv. They must either
(For so run the conditions) leave those remnants
Of fool, and feather, that they got in France,
With all their honourable points of ignorance
Pertaining therunto, as fights and fireworks;
Abusing better men than they can be,
Out of a foreign wisdom; renouncing clean
The faith they have in tennis, and tall stockings,
Short blister'd breeches, and those types of travel,
And understand again like honest men,
Or pack to their old playfellows; there, I take it
They may, cum privilegio, wear away
The lag end of their lewdness, and be lang'd at.

Sands. 'Tis time to give 'em physic, their diseases
Are grown so catching.

Cham. What a loss our ladies
Will have of these trim vanities.

Louv. Ay, marry,
There will be woe indeed, lords: the sly whoresons
Have got a speeding trick to lay down ladies;
A French song and a fiddle have no fellow.

Sands. The devil fiddle them! I am glad they're going,
For, sure, there's no converting of them: now,
An honest country lord, as I am, beaten
A long time out of play, may bring his plain-song,
And have an hour of hearing, and by'r-lady,
He'll current music too.

Cham. Well said, lord Sands:
Your colt's tooth is not cast yet.

Sands. No, my lord;
Nor shall not, while I have a stump.

Cham. Sir Thomas,
Whither were you a going?

Louv. To the cardinal's.

Your lordship is a guest too.

Cham. O! 'tis true:
This night he makes a supper, and a great one,
To many lords and ladies: there will be
The beauty of this kingdom, I'll assure you.

Louv. That charwoman bears a bounteous mind indeed;
A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us:
His dews fall everywhere.

Cham. No doubt, he's noble;
He had a black mouth that said other of him.

Sands. He may, my lord, he has wherewithal: in him,
Sparing would show a worse sin than ill doctrine,
Men of his sway should be most liberal;
They are sent for examples.

Cham. True, they are so;
But few now give so great ones. My barge stays;
Your lordship shall along.—Come, good sir Thomas,
We shall be late else; which I would not be.
For I was spoke to, with sir Henry Guildford,
This night to be comptrollers.

Sands. I am your lordship's. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Presence-Chamber in York-Place.

Hautboys. A small Table under a State for the Cardinal, a longer Table for the Guests; then enter Anne Bul-} len, and divers Lords, Ladies, and Gentlemen, as Guests, at one door; at another door, enter Sir Henry Guildford.

Guild. Ladies, a general welcome from his grace

Salutes ye all: this night he dedicates
To fair content, and you. None here, he hopes,
In all this noble bevy, has brought with her
One care abroad: he would have all as merry
As, first, good company; good wine, good welcome
Can make good people.—O, my lord! y' are tardy.

Enter Lord Chamberlain, Lord Sands, and Sir Thomas Lovell.

The very thought of this fair company
Clapp'd wings to me.

Cham. You are young, sir Harry Guildford.

Sands. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the cardinal
But half my lay-thoughts in him, some of these Should find a running banquet ere they rested,
I think, would better please 'em: by my life,
They are a sweet society of fair ones.

Louv. O! that your lordship were but now consoled
To one or two of those.

Sands. I would, I were;
They should find easy penance.

Louv. Faith, how easy?

Sands. As easy as a down-bed would afford it.

Cham. Sweet ladies, will it please you sit? Sir Harry,
Place you that side. I'll take the charge of this.
His grace is entering.—Nay, you must not freeze.

Two women plaid together makes cold weather:—
My lord Sands, you are one will keep 'em waking.
Pray, sit between these ladies.

Sands. By my faith,
And thank your lordship.—By your leave, sweet ladies:
[Sent himself between Anne Bullen and another Lady.
If I chance to talk a little wild, give me;
I had it from my father.

Anne. Was he mad, sir?

Sands. O! very mad, exceeding mad: in love too;
But he would bite none: just as I do now,
He would kiss you twenty with a breath. [Kisses her.

Cham. Well said, my lord.—
So, now you are fairly seated—Gentlemen,
The penance lies on you, if these fair ladies
Pass away frowning.

Sands. For my little cure,
Let me alone.

Hautboys. Enter Cardinal Wolsey, attended, and takes his State.

Wol. Y' are welcome, my fair guests: that noble lady,
Or gentleman, that is not freely merry,
Is not my friend. This, to confirm my welcome;
And to you all good health. [Drinks.

Sands. Your grace is noble;
Let me have such a bowl may hold my thanks,
And save me so much talking.

Wol. My lord Sands,
I am beholding to you: cheer your neighbours.—
Ladies, you are not merry—gentlemen,
Whose fault is this?

Sands. The red wine must first rise
In their fair cheeks, my lord; then, we shall have 'em
Talk us to silence.

Anne. You are a merry ganster,
My lord Sands.
Sands. Yes, if I make my play.
Here's to your ladyship; and pledge it, madam,
For 't is to such a thing.—

Anne. You cannot show me.
Sands. I told your grace how they would talk anon.
[Drum and Trumpets within; Chambers discharged.
Wol. What's that?

Cham. Look out there, some of you. [Exit a Servant.
KING HENRY VIII.

SCENE I. KING HENRY VIII.

Wol. What warlike voice, sir, and to what end is this?—Nay, ladies, fear not; all the laws of war 'r privileged.

Re-enter Servant.

Cham. How now! what is 't? Serv. A noble troop of strangers. For so they seem: they've left their barges, and landed; and his lordship is as great ambassadors from foreign princes.

Wol. Good lord chamberlain, go, and pray, receive them nobly, and conduct them into our presence, where this heaven of beauty shall shine at full upon them. Some attend him: [Exeunt Chamberlain attended. All arise, and Tables removed.

You have now a broken banquet; but we'll mend it. A good digestion to you all: and, once more, I shower a welcome on ye. Welcome all.

Hautboys. Enter the King, and others, as Maskers, habited like Shepherds, ushered by the Lord Chamberlain. They pass directly before the Cardinal, and gracefully salute him.

A noble company! what are their pleasures?

Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they pray'd me. To tell your grace:—That, having heard by fame of this so noble and so fair assembly, this night to meet here, they could do no less, out of the great respect they bear to beauty, but leave their flocks, and under your fair conduct, crave leave to view these ladies, and entertain an hour of revels with them.

Wol. Say, lord chamberlain, they have done my poor house grace; for which I pay them a thousand thanks, and pray them take their pleasures.

[Enter the King.

Wol. My lord!—

Cham. Your grace?

Wol. Pray tell them thus much from me. There should be one amongst them, by his person, more worthy this place than myself; to whom, if I but knew him, with my love and duty I would surrender it.

Cham. I will, my lord. [Cham. whispers the Maskers, and returns.

Wol. What say they?

Cham. Such a one, they all confess there is, indeed: which they would have your grace find out, and he will take it.

Wol. Let me see them. [Comes from his State. By your good leaves, gentlemen, here I'll make my royal choice.

K. Hen. You have found him, cardinal. [Unmasking. You hold a fair assembly: you do well, lord; you are a churchman, or, I'll tell you, cardinal, I should judge now unhappily.

Wol. I am glad, your grace is grown so pleasant.

K. Hen. My lord chamberlain, pray, be hither. What fair lady's that?

Cham. An I please your grace, sir Thomas Bulfin's daughter.

The viscount Rochford,—one of her highness' women. K. Hen. By heaven, she is a dainty one. Sweetheart I was unmanly to take you out, and not to kiss you. [Kisses her.] A health, gentleman. Let it go round.

Wol. Sir Thomas Lovell, is the banquet ready? I pray the chamber.

Louv. Yes, my lord.

Wol. Your grace.

I fear, with dancing is a little heated.

K. Hen. I fear, too much.

Wol. There's fresher air, my lord in the next chamber. K. Hen. Lead in your ladies, every one. Sweet must not yet forsake you. Let's be merry: [party.

Good my lord cardinal! I have half a dozen healths to drink to these fair ladies, and a measure To lead them once again; and then let's dream Who's best in favour. [Let the music knock it. [Exeunt, with Trumpets.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Street.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

1 Gent. Whither away so fast? 2 Gent. Ay, sir, to the hall, to hear what shall become Of the great Duke of Buckingham.

1 Gent. I'll save you that labour, sir. All's now done, but the ceremony of bringing back the prisoner.

2 Gent. Were you there? 1 Gent. Yes, indeed, was I. 2 Gent. Pray, speak what has happen'd. 1 Gent. You may guess quickly what. 2 Gent. Is he found guilty? 1 Gent. Yes, truly is he, and condemn'd upon it. 2 Gent. I am sorry for't. 1 Gent. So are a number more. 2 Gent. But, pray, how pass'd it?

1 Gent. I'll tell you in a little. The great duke came to the bar; where, to his accusations He pleaded still not guilty, and allege'd Many sharp reasons to defeat the law. The king's attorney, on the contrary, Urg'd on the examinations, proofs, confessions Of divers witnesses, which the duke desire'd To have brought, vindicate, to his face: At which appeared against him, his surveyor; Sir Gilbert Peck his chancellor; and John Car, Confessor to him; with that devil-monk, Hopkins, that made this mischief.

2 Gent. That was he, That led him with his prophecies? 1 Gent. The same. All these accuse'd him strongly; which he faint Would have flung from him, but, indeed, he could not And so his peers, upon this evidence, Have found him guilty of high treason. Much
He spoke, and learnedly, for life; but all
Was either pitied in, or forgotten.
2 Gent. After all this, how did he bear himself?
1 Gent. When he was brought again to the bar, to hear
His kneel rung out. his judgment, he was stirred
With such an agony, he sweat extremely,
And something spoke in choler, ill, and hasty:
But he fell to himself again, and sweetly
In all the rest show'd a most noble patience.
2 Gent. I do not think, he fears death.
1 Gent. Sure, he does not;
He was never so womanish: the cause
He may a little grieve at.
2 Gent. Certainly.
The cardinal is the end of this.
1 Gent. 'Tis likely
By all conjectures: first, Kildare's attainer,
Then deputy of Ireland; who remov'd,
Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste too,
Lest he should help his father.
2 Gent. That trick of state
Was a deep envious one.
1 Gent. At his return,
No doubt, he will requite it. This is noted,
And generally;—whoever the king favours,
The cardinal instantly will find employment,
And far enough from court too.
2 Gent. All the commons
Hate him perniciously, and, o' my conscience,
Wish him ten fathom deep: this duke as much
They love and dote on; call him, bounteous Buckingham,
The mirror of all courtesy—
1 Gent. Stay there, sir;
And see the noble ruin'd man you speak of.

Enter Buckingham from his Arraignment; Tipstaves before him: the Axe with the edge towards him; Halberds on each side: accompanied with Sir Thomas Lovell, Sir Nicholas Vaux, Sir William Sands, and common People.

2 Gent. Let's stand close, and behold him.
Buck. All good people,
You that thus far have come to pity me,
Hear what I say, and then go home and lose me.
I have this day receiv'd a traitor's judgment,
And by that name must die: yet, heaven bear witness,
And if I have a conscience let it sink me,
Even as the axe falls, if I be not faithful.
The law I bear no malice for my death,
It has done upon the premises but justice;
But those that sought it I could wish more Christians:
Be what they will, I heartily forgive them,
Yet let them look they glory not in mischief,
Nor build their evils on the graves of great men;
For then my guiltless blood must cry against them.
For farther life in this world I ne'er hope,
Nor will I sue, although the king have mercies
More than I dare make faults. You few that lov'd me,
And dare be bold to weep for Buckingham,
His noble friends and fellows, whom to leave
Is only bitter to him. only dying,
Go with me, like good angels, to my end;
And, as the long divorce of steel falls on me,
Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice,
And lift my soul to heaven. Lead on, o' God's name.

Lov. I do beseech your grace, for charity,
If ever any faith in your heart
Were hid against me, now to forgive me frankly.

Buck. Sir Thomas Lovell, I as free forgive you,
As I would be forgiven: I forgive all:
There cannot be those numberless offences
'Gainst me, that I cannot take peace with: no black envy
Shall make my grave. Commend me to his grace;
And, if he speak of Buckingham, pray, tell him,
You met him half in heaven. My vows and prayers
Yet are the king's; and, till my soul forsake.
Shall cry for blessings on him: may he live
Longer than I have time to tell his years.
Ever belov'd, and loving, may his rule be:
And when old time shall lead him to his end,
Goodness and he fill up one monument!

Lov. To the water side I must conduct your grace,
Then, give my charge up to Sir Nicholas Vaux,
Who undertakes you to your end.

Vaux. Prepare there!
The duke is coming: see, the barge be ready;
And fit it with such furniture, as suits
The greatness of his person.

Buck. Nay, sir Nicholas,
Let it alone: my state now will but mock me.
When I came hither I was lord high constable,
And duke of Buckingham; now, poor Edward Bohun
Yet I am richer than my base successors,
That never knew what truth meant. I now seal it;
And with that blood will one day make them groan for;
My noble father, Henry of Buckingham,
Who first rais'd head against usurping Richard,
Flying for succour to his servant Banister,
Being distress'd, was by that wretch betray'd,
And without trial fell: God's peace be with him!
Henry the seventh succeeding, truly pitying
My father's loss, like a most royal prince,
Restor'd me to my honours, and out of ruins
Made my name once more noble. Now, his son,
Henry the eighth. life, honour, name, and all
That made me happy, at one stroke has taken
For ever from the world. I had my trial,
And, must needs say, a noble one; which makes me
A little happier than my wretched father;
Yet thus far we are one in fortunes.—both
Fell by our servants, by those men we lov'd most:
A most unnatural and faithless service.
Heaven has an end in all; yet, you that hear me.
This from a dying man receive as certain:
Where you are liberal of your loves and counsels,
Be sure, you be not loose; for those you make friends
And give your hearts to, when they once perceive
The least rub in your fortunes, fall away
Like water from ye, never found again
But when! they mean to sink ye. All good people,
Pray for me. I must now forsake ye: the last hour
Of my long weary life is come upon me.
Farewell: and when you would say something that is sad,
Speak how I fell.—I have done, and God forgive me.

[Exeunt Buckingham, &c.]

1 Gent. O! this is full of pity. —Sir, it calls,
I fear, too many curses on their heads
That were the authors.
2 Gent. If the duke be guiltless,
'Tis full of woe: yet I can give you inkling
Of an ensuing evil, if it fall,
Greater than this.
1 Gent. Good angels keep it from us!

What may it be? You do not doubt my faith, sir
2 Gent. This secret is so weighty, 't will require
A strong faith to conceal it.

1 Gent. Let me have it:
I do not talk much.

2 Gent. I am confident:
You shall, sir. Did you not of late days hear
A buzzing of a separation
Between the king and Katharine?

1 Gent. Yes, but it held not;
For when the king once heard it, out of anger
He sent command to the lord mayor straight
To stop the rumour, and allay those tongues
That durst disperse it.

2 Gent. But that slander, sir,
Is found a truth now; for it grows again
Fresher than e'er it was, and held for certain
The king will venture at it. Either the cardinal,
Or some about him near, have out of malice
To the good queen possess'd him with a scrape,
That will undo her: to confirm this, too,
Cardinal Campeius is arriv'd, and lately,
As all think, for this business.

1 Gent. 'Tis the cardinal;
And merely to revenge him on the emperor,
For not bestowing on him, at his asking,
The archbishopric of Toledo, this is purport'd.

2 Gent. I think, you have hit the mark: but 'tis not cruel,
That she should feel the smart of this? The cardinal
Will have his will, and she must fail.

1 Gent. 'Tis woful,
We are too open here to argue this; —
Let's think in private more.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—An ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain, reading a letter.

Cham. "My lord,—The horses your lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I saw well chosen, ridden, and furnished. They were young, and handsome, and of the best breed in the north. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my lord cardinal's, by command and main power, took them from me;
with this reason.—his master would be served before a subject, if not before the king; which stopped our mouths, sir?"

I fear, he will, indeed. Well, let him have them:
He will have all, I think.

Enter the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk.

Nor. Well met, my lord chamberlain.

Cham. Good day to both your grace.

Suff. How is the king employ'd?

Cham. I left him private,
Fall of sad thoughts and troubles.

Nor. What's the cause?

Cham. It seems, the marriage with his brother's wife
Has crept too near his conscience.

Suff. No; his conscience
Has crept too near another lady.

Nor. 'T is so,
This is the cardinal's doing, the king-cardinal:
That blind priest, like the eldest son of fortune,
Turns what he list. The king will know him one day.

Suff. Pray God, he do: he'll never know himself else.

Nor. How holily he works in all his business,
And with what zeal; for, now he has crack'd the league
Between us and the emperor, the queen's great nephew,
He dives into the king's soul; and there scatters
Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience,
Fears, and desairs, and all these for his marriage:
And, out of all these, to restore the king,

He counsels a divorce; a loss of her,
That like a jewel has hung twenty years
About his neck, yet never lost her lustre;
Of her, that loves him with that excellence
That angels love good men with; even of her
That when the greatest stroke of fortune falls,
Will bless the king. And is not this course pious?

Cham. Heaven keep me from such counsel! 'Tis most true,
These news are every where; every tongue speaks them,
And every true heart weeps for it. All, that dare
Look into these affairs, see this main end,—
The French king's sister. Heaven will one day open
The king's eyes, that have so long slept upon
This bold bad man.

Suff. And free us from his slavery.

Nor. We had need pray,
And heartily, for our deliverance,
Or this imperious man will work us all
From princes into pages. All men's honours
Lie as one lump before him, to be fashion'd
Into what pitch he please.

Suff. For me, my lords,
I love him not, nor fear him; there's my creed.
As I am made without him, so I'll stand,
If the king please: his curses and his blessings
Tone me alike: they're breath I not believe in.
I know him, and I know him; so I leave him
To him that made him proud, the pope.

Nor. Let's in,
And with some other business put the king,
From these sad thoughts, that work too much upon
My lord, you'll hear us company? [him.—

Cham. Excuse me;
The king hath sent me other-where: besides,
You'll find a most unfit time to disturb him.

Health to your lordships.

Nor. Thanks, my good lord chamberlain.

[Exit Lord Chamberlain.

Curtain drawn: the King is discovered sitting, and reading pensively.

Suff. How sad he looks: sure, he is much afflicted.

K. Hen. Who is there? ha!

Nor. Pray God, he be not angry

K. Hen. Who's there, I say? How dare you thrust yourselves
Into my private meditations?

Who am I? ha!

Nor. A gracious king, that pardons all offences,
Malice ne'er meant: our breach of duty this way
Is business of estate, in which we come
To know your royal pleasure.

K. Hen. Ye are too bold.

Go to: I'll make ye know your times of business:
Is this an hour for temporal affairs? ha!—

Enter Wolsey and Campellius.

Who's there? my good lord cardinal?—O! my Wolsey
The quiet of my wounded conscience;
Thou art a cure fit for a king.—You're welcome.

To Campellius.

Most learned reverend sir, into our kingdom
Use us, and it.—My good lord, have great care
I be not found a talker.

To Wolsey:

Wol. Sir, you cannot.

I would, your grace would give us but an hour
Of private conference.

K. Hen. We are busy; go.

Nor. They have given a precedent of wisdom above all princes, in committing freely our sample to the voice of Christendom. Who can be angry now? what envy reach you? The Spaniard, tied by blood and favour to her, Must now confess, if they have any goodness, The trial just and noble. All the clerks, I mean the learned ones, in Christian kingdoms Have their free voices: Rome, the nurse of judgment, Invited by your noble self, hath sent One general tongue unto us, this good man, This just and learned priest, Cardinal Campeius; Whom once more I present unto your highness. K. Hen. And once more in mine arms I bid him welcome, And thank the holy conclave for their loves: They have sent me such a man I would have wish'd for. Cam. Your grace must needs deserve all strangers' loves, You are so noble. To your highness' hand [Kneeling and rising again.] I tender my commission; by whose virtue, [The court of Rome commanding] you, my lord Cardinal of York, are join'd with me, their servant, In the unpartial judging of this business. K. Hen. Two equal men. The queen shall be acquain'ted Forthwith for what you came. — Where's Gardiner? Wol. I know, your majesty has always lov'd her So dear in heart, not to deny her that A woman of less place might ask by law, Scholars, allow'd freely to argue for her. K. Hen. Ay, and the best, she shall have; and my favour To him that does best: God forbid else. Cardinal, Prythee, call Gardiner to me, my new secretary: I find him a fit fellow. [Exit Wolsey.]

Re-enter Wolsey, with Gardiner. Wol. Give me your hand: much joy and favour to you; You are the king's now.

Gard. But to be commanded For ever by your grace, whose hand has rais'd me. K. Hen. Come hither, Gardiner. [They walk and whisper.

Cam. My lord of York, was not one doctor Place a this man's place before him?

Wol. Yes, he was.

Cam. Was he not held a learned man?

Wol. Yes, surely.

Cam. Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread, then, of you or self, lord cardinal.

Wol. How! of me?

Cam. They will not stick to say, you envied him; And fearing he would rise, he was so virtuous, Kept him a foreign man still; which so griev'd him, That he ran mad, and died. Wol. Heaven's peace be with him! That's Christian care enough: for living murmurers There's places of rebuke. He was a fool, For he would needs be virtuous: that good fellow,
SCENE IV.

KING HENRY VIII.

I would not be a young count in your way,
For more than blushing comes to. If your back
Cannot vouchsafe this burden, 't is too weak
Ever to get a boy.

Anne. How you do talk!
I swear again, I would not be a queen
For all the world.

Old L. In faith, for little England
You'd venture an embalming? I myself
Would for Carnarvonshire, although there 'long'd
No more to the crown but that. Lo! who comes here?

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good morrow, ladies. What were 't worth to know
The secret of your conference?

Anne. My good lord,
Not your demand: it values not your asking.
Our mistresses' sorrows we were pitying.
Cham. It was a gentle business, and becoming
The action of good women: there is hope
All will be well.

Anne. Now, I pray God, amen!
Cham. You bear a gentle mind, and heavenly blessings
Follow such creatures. That you may, fair lady,
Perceive I speak sincerely, and high notes
Ta'en of your many virtues, the king's majesty
Commends his good opinion of you to, and Does purpose honour to you, no less flowing
Than marches of Pembroke; to which title
A thousand pound a year, annual support,
Out of his grace he adds.

Anne. I do not know,
What kind of my obedience I should tender:
More than my all is nothing; nor my prayers
Are not words duly hallow'd, nor my wishes
More worth than empty vanities: yet prayers, and wishes,
Are all I can return. Beseech your lordship,
Vouchsafe to speak my thanks, and my obedience,
As from a blushing handmaid, to his highness;
Whose health, and royalty, I pray for.

Cham. Lady, I shall not fail to improve the fair conceit.
The king hath of you.—I have perus'd her well: [Aside.
Beauty and honour in her are mingled.
That they have caught the king; and who knows yet,
But from this lady may proceed a gen
To lighten all this isle?—[To her.] I'll to the king,
And say, I spoke with you.

Anne. My honoured lord. [Exit Lord Chamberlain.

Old L. Why, this it is; see, see!
I have been begging sixteen years in court,
(Am yet a courier beggarly) nor could Come pat betwixt too early and too late
For any suit of pounds; and you, O fate!
A very fresh fish here, (hie, fie, fie upon
This compell'd fortune!) have your mouth fill'd up,
Before you open it.

Anne. This is strange to me.

Old L. How tastes it? is it bitter? forty pence, no.
There was a lady once: (t is an old story)
That would not be a queen, that would she not,
For all the mud in Egypt—have you heard it?
Anne. Come, you are pleasant.

Old L. With your theme I could
O'ermount the lark. The marchese of Pembroke!
A thousand pounds a year for pure respect;

No other obligation. By my life,
That promises more thousands: honour's train
Is lonzer than his foreskirt. By this time,
I know, your back will bear a duchess.—Say,
Are you no stronger than you were?

Anne. Good lady,
Make yourself mirth with your particular fancy,
And leave me out on't. Would I had no being,
If this elate² my blood a jot; it raints me.
To think what follows.
The queen is comfortless, and we forgetful
In our long absence. Pray, do not deliver
What here you've heard, to her.

Old L. What do you think me?

SCENE IV.—A Hall in Black-Friars

Trumpets. Sennet, and Cornets. Enter two Vergers, with short silver Wands; next them, two Scribes, in the habit of Doctors; after them, the Archbishop of Canterbury alone; after him, the Bishops of Lincoln, Ely, Rochester, and Saint Asaph; next them, with some small distance, follow a Gentleman bearing the Purse, with the Great Seal, and a Cardinal's Hat; then two Priests, bearing each a silver
Cross; then a Gentleman-Usker bare-handed, accompanied with a Sergeant at Arms, bearing a silver
Mace; then two Gentlemen, bearing two great silver
Pillars; after them, side by side, the two Cardinals
Wolsey and Campeius; two Noblemen with the Sword and Mace. The King takes place under the cloth of state; the two Cardinals sit under him as judges. The Queen takes place at some distance from the King. The Bishops place themselves on each side the court, in manner of a consistory: below them, the Scribes. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the stage.

Wol. Whilst our commission from Rome is read,
Let silence be commanded.

K. Hen. What's the need?
It hath already publicly been read,
And on all sides th' authority allow'd;
You may, then, spare that time.

Wol. Be't so.—Proceed.

Scribe. Say, Henry king of England, come into the court.

K. Hen. Here.

Scribe. Say, Katharine queen of England, come into the court.

[The Queen makes no answer, rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the King, and kneels at his feet; then speaks.]

Q. Kath. Sir, I desire you, do me right and justice
And to bestow your pity on me; for
I am a most poor woman, and a stranger,
Born out of your dominions; having here
No judge indifferent, nor no more assurance
Of equal friendship and proceeding. Alas! sir,
In what have I offended you? what cause
Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure,
That thus you should proceed to put me off.
Take and you good grace from me? Heaven witness
I have been to you a true and humble wife,
At all times to your will conformable;
Ever in fear to kindle your dislike,
Yes, subject to your censure: glad, or sorry,
As I saw it inclin'd. When was the hour

i ever contradicted your desire,
Or made it not mine too? or which of your friends
Have I not strove to love, although I know
He were mine enemy? what friend of mine,
That had to him deriv'd your anger, did I
Continue in my liking? nay, gave notice
He was from thence discharge'd. Sir, call to mind
That I have been your wife, in the obedience,
Upward of twenty years; and have been blesst
With many children by you: if in the course
And process of this time you can report,
And prove it too, against mine honour aught,
My bond to wedlock, or my love and duty,
Against your sacred person, in God's name,
Turn me away; and let the foul'st contempt
Shut door upon me, and so give me up
To the sharpest knife of justice. Please you, sir,
The king, your father, was reputed for
A prince most prudent, of an excellent
An unmatch'd wit and judgment: Ferdinand,
My father, king of Spain, was reckon'd one
The wisest prince, that there had reign'd by many
A year before: it is not to be question'd
That they had gather'd a wise counsel to them
Of every realm, that did debate this business,
Who deem'd our marriage lawful. Wherefore I humbly
Beseech you, sir, to spare me, till I may
Be by my friends in Spain advis'd, whose counsel
I will implore: if not, I, the name of God,
Your pleasure be fulfill'd!

Wol.
You have here, lady,
(And of your choice) these reverend fathers; men
Of singular integrity and learning,
Yea, the elect of the land, who are assembled
To plead your cause. It shall be therefore bootless,
That longer you defer the court, as well
For your own quiet, as to rectify
What is unsettled in the king.

Cam.
His grace
Hath spoken well, and justly: therefore, madam,
It's fit this royal session do proceed,
And that, without delay, their arguments
Be now produce'd and heard.

Q. Kath.
To you I speak.

Wol.
Your pleasure, madam?

Q. Kath.
Sir,
I am about to weep; but, thinking that
We are a queen, (or long have dream'd so) certain
The daughter of a king, my drops of tears
I'll turn to sparks of fire.

Wol.
Be patient yet.

Q. Kath. I will, when you are humble; nay, before,
Or God will punish me. I do believe, judge'd by potent circumstances, that
You are mine enemy, and make my challenge
You shall not be my judge; for it is you
Have blown this coal betwixt your lord and me,
Which God's due quench. Therefore, I say again,
I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul,
Refuse you for my judge; whom, yet once more,
I hold my most malicious foe, and think not
At all a friend to truth.

Wol.
I do profess,
You speak not like yourself: who ever yet
Have stood to charity, and display'd thi' effects
Of disposition gentle, and of wisdom
Overtopping woman's power. Madam, you do me wrong:
I have no spleen against you, nor injustice

For you, or any: how far I have proceed,
Or how far farther shall, is warranted
By a commission from the consistory,
Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You charge me,
That I have found this coal: I do deny it.
The king is present: if it be known to him,
That I gainsay my deed, how may he wound,
And worthily, my falsehood; yea, as much
As you have done my truth. If he know
That I am free of your report, he knows,
I am not of your wrong: therefore, in him
It lies to cure me; and the cure is, to Remove these thoughts from you: the which, before
His highness shall speak in, I do beseech
You, gracious madam, to unthink your speaking,
And to say so no more.

Q. Kath.
My lord, my lord,
I am a simple woman, much too weak
To oppose your cunning. Ye are meek and humble-mouth'd;
You sign your place and calling in full seeming,
With meekness and humility; but your heart
Is clam'd with arroganacy, spleen, and pride.
You have, by fortune and his highness' favours,
Gone slightly over low steps, and now are mounted
Where powers are your retainers; and your words,
Domestics to you, serve your will, as 'tis please
Yourself pronounce their office. I must tell you,
You tender more your person's honour, than
Your high profession spiritual; that again
I do refuse you for my judge, and here,
Before you all, appeal unto the pope,
To bring my whole cause before his holiness,
And to be judged by him.

[She curtsies to the king, and offers to depart]

Cam.
The queen is obstinate,
Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disblainful to be tried by 't: it is not well.
She's going away.

K. Hen.
Call her again.

Crier.
Katharine, queen of England, come into the court.

Gent. Us? Madam, you are call'd back.

Q. Kath.
What need ye you note it? pray you, keep your way;
When you are call'd, return. Now the Lord help!
They vex me past my patience. Pray you, pass on.
I will not tarry: no, nor ever more,
Upon this business, my appearance make
In any of their courts.

[Exeunt Queen, and her Attendants]

K. Hen.
Go thy ways, Kate: That man i' the world who shall report he has
A better wife, let him be wondrous trusted,
For speaking false in that. Thou art alone
(If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleness,
Thy meekness saint-like, wife-like government,
Obeying in commanding, and thy parts
Sovereign and pious else, could speak thee out)
The queen of earthly queens. She's nobly born;
And, like her true nobility, she has Carried herself towards me

Wol.
Most gracious sir, In humblest manner I require your highness,
That it shall please you to declare, in hearing
Of all these ears, (for where I am robb'd and bound,
There must I be unloos'd, although not there
At once, and fully satisfied) whether ever I Did broach this business to your highness, or

1 kind in f. e desire: in f. e. 2 In some mod. eds. this speech is given, without warrant, to Griffith.
SCENE I. — The Palace at Bridewell.

A Room in the Queen's Apartment.

The Queen, and her Women, as at work

Q. Kath. Take thy lute, wenches: my soul grows sad with troubles;

Sing, and disperse them, if thou canst. Leave working,

song,

Orpheus with his lute made trees,
And the mountain-tops, that freeze,
Brow themselves, when he did sing;
To his music, plants, and flowers,
Ever sprung; as sun, and showers,
There had made a lasting spring.

By this my issue's fail; and that gave to me
Many a groaning three. Thus, huzzing! in
The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer
Toward this remedy, wherein we are Now present here together; that's to say,
I meant to rectify my conscience,—which
I then did feel full sick, and yet not well,—
By all the reverence fathers of the land,
And doctors learned. First, I began in private
With you, my lord of Lincoln: you remember
How under my oppression I did seek,
When I first mov'd you.

Lin. Very well, my liege.
K. Hen. I have spoke long: be pleas'd yourself to say
How far you satisfied me.

Lin. So please your highness
The question did at first so stagger me,—
Bearing a state of mighty moment in 't,
And consequence of dread,—that I committed
The daring's counsel which I had to doubt,
And did entreat your highness to this course,
Which you are running here.

K. Hen. I then mov'd you,
My lord of Canterbury: and got your leave
To make this present summons.—Unsolicited
I left no reverend person in this court;
But by particular consent proceeded,
Under your hands and seals: therefore, go on,
For no dislike it the world against the person
Of the good queen, but the sharp thorny points
Of my alleged reasons drive this forward,
Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life,
And kingly dignity, we are contented
To wear our mortal state to come with her,
Katharine our queen, before the primest creature
That's paragon'd o' the world.

Cam. So please your highness,
The queen being absent, 't is a needful fitness
That we adjourn this court till farther day:
Meanwhile must be an earnest motion
Made to the queen, to call back her appeal
She intends unto his holiness.

K. Hen. I may perceive, [Aside.
These cardinals trifle with me: I abhor
This dilatory solace, and tricks of Rome.
My learn'd and well-beloved servant, Cranmer,
Pr'ythee, return! with thy approach. I know,
My comfort comes along. [Aloud.]—Break up the court:
I say, set on. [Exeunt, in manner as they entered.

ACT III.

Every thing that heard him play,
Even the billows of the seas,
Hung their heads, and then lay by.
In sweet music is such art.
Killing care and grief of heart
Fall asleep, or, hearing, die.

Enter a Gentleman.

Q. Kath. How now!
Gent. An't please your grace, the two great cardinals
Wait in the presence.

Q. Kath. Would they speak with me?
Gent. They will'd me say so, madam.

Q. Kath. Pray their grace
To come near. [Exit Gent.] What can be their business?
With me, a poor weak woman, fallen from favour?
I do not like their coming, now I think on't.
They should be good men, their affairs as righteous;
But all hoods make not monks.

Enter Wolsey and Campeius.

Wol. Peace to your highness,
Q. Kath. Your graces find me here part of a housewife;
would be all, against the worst may happen.
What are your pleasures with me, reverend lords?
Wol. May it please you, noble madam, to withdraw into your private chamber, we shall give you
The full cause of our coming.

Q. Kath. Speak it here.
There’s nothing I have done yet, o’ my conscience,
Deserves a corner: would all other women
Could speak this with as free a soul as I do!
My lords, I care not, (so much I am happy Above a number) if my actions
Were tried by every tongue, every eye saw them,
Eavy and base opinion set against them,
I know my life so even. If your business
Sack me out, and that way I am wise in,
but with it boldly: truth loves open dealing.

Wol. Tanta est erga te mentis integritas, regina sere-nissima.—

Q. Kath. O, good my lord, no Latin:
I am not such a truant since my coming,
As not to know the language I have liv’d in:
A strange tongue makes my cause more strange, suspicious:
Pray, speak in English. Here are some will thank you,
If you speak truth, for their poor mistress’ sake:
Believe me, she has had much wrong. Lord cardinal,
The willingst sin I ever yet committed
May be absolv’d in English.

Wol. Noble lady, I am sorry; my integrity should breed,
(And service to his majesty and you)
So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant.
We come not by the way of accusation,
To taint that honour ever good tongue blesses,
Nor to betray you any way to sorrow;
You have too much, good lady; but to know
How you stand minded in the weighty difference
Between the king and you, and to deliver
Like free and honest men, our just opinions,
And comforts to your cause.

Can. Most honour’d madam,
My lord of York,—out of his noble nature,
Zeal and obedience he still bore your grace,
Forgetting, like a good man, your late censure
Both of his truth and him, (which was too far)—
Offer, as I do, in a sign of peace,
His service and his counsel.

Q. Kath. To betray me. [Aside.
My lords, I thank you both for your good wills,
Ye speak like honest men; (pray God, ye prove so!) But how to make ye suddenly an answer,
In such a part of weight, so near mine honour,
(More near my life, I fear,) with my weak wit,
And to such men of gravity and learning,
In truth, I know not. I was set at work
Among my maids; full little, God knows, looking Either for such men, or such business.
For her sake that I have been, for I feel
The last fit of my greatness, good your graces,
Let me have time and counsel for my cause.
Alas! I am a woman, friendless, hopeless.

Wol. Madam, you wrong the king’s love with the fears:
Your hopes and friends are infinite.

Q. Kath. In England, But little for my profit; can you think, lords,
That any Englishman dare give me counsel? Or be a known friend, (against his highness’ pleasure,
(Though he be grown so desperate to be honest) And live a subject? Nay, forsooth, my friends,
They that must weigh out my afflictions,
They that my trust must grow to, live not here
They are, as all my other comforts, far hence,
In mine own country, lords.

Cam. I would, your grace
Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel.

Q. Kath. How, sir?
Cam. Put your main cause into the king’s protection;
He’s loving, and most gracious: ’twill be much
Both for your honour better, and your cause;
For if the trial of the law o’ertake you,
You’ll part away disgrac’d.

Wol. He tells you rightly.

Q. Kath. Ye tell me what ye wish for both,—my ruin.
Is this your Christian counsel? out upon ye!
Heaven is above all yet: there sits a Judge
That no king can corrupt.

Can. Your rage mistakes us.

Q. Kath. The more shame for ye! holy men! thought ye,
Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues;
But cardinal sins, and hollow hearts, I fear ye.
Mend them for shame, my lords. Is this your comfort?
The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady?
A woman lost among ye, laugh’d at, scorn’d?
I will not wish ye half my miseries,
I have more charity; but say, I warn’d ye:
Take heed, for heaven’s sake, take heed, lest at once
The burden of my sorrows fall upon ye.

Wol. Madam, this is a mere distinction;
You turn the good we offer into envy.

Q. Kath. Ye turn me into nothing. Woe upon ye,
And all such false professors! Would ye have me
(If ye have any justice, any pity,
If ye be any thing but churchmen’s habits)
Put my sick cause into his hands that hates me?
Alas! he has banish’d me his bedside already;
His love, too long ago: I am old, my lords,
And all the fellowship I hold now with him
Is only my obedience. What can happen
To me above this wretchedness? all your studies
Make me a curse like this.

Can. Your fears are worse.

Q. Kath. Have I liv’d thus long,—let me speak myself.
Since virtue finds no friends,—a wife, a true one?
A woman (I dare say without vain-glory)
Never yet branded with suspicion?
Have I with all my full affections
Still met the king? lov’d him next heaven? obey’d
him?
Been, out of fondness, superstitious to him?
Almost forgot my prayers to content him?
And am I thus rewarded? ’tis not well, lords.
Bring me a constant woman to her husband,
One that ne’er dream’d a joy beyond his pleasure,
And to that woman, when she has done most,
Yet will I add an honour,—a great patience.

Wol. Madam, you wander from the good we aim at
Q. Kath. My lord, I dare not make myself so guilty, To give up willingly that noble title. Your master wed me to: nothing but death Shall ever divorce my dignities.

Wal. Pray, hear me.

Q. Kath. Would I had never trod this English earth, Or felt the flatteries that grew upon it! Ye have angels’ faces, but heaven knows your hearts.

What will become of me now, wretched lady? Am I the most unhappy woman living.—

Alas! poor wenches, where are now your fortunes! To Her Women.

Shipwreck’d upon a kingdom, where no pity, No friends, no hope, no kindred weep for me, Almost no grave allow’d me.—Like the lily,

That once was mistress of the field and flourish’d,
I’ll hang my head, and perish.

Wal. If your grace
Could but be brought to know our ends are honest, You’d feel more comfort. Why should we, good lady, Upon what cause, wrong you? alas! our places, The way of our profession is against it:

We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow them:
For goodness sake, consider what you do;
How you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly
Grow from the king’s acquaintance, by this carriage.
The hearts of princes kiss obedience,
So much they love it; but to stubborn spirits,
They swell, and grow as terrible as storms,
I know, you have a gentle, noble temper,
A soul as even as a calm: pray, think us
Those we profess, peace-makers, friends, and servants.
Cam. Madam, you’ll find it so. You wrong your virtues
With these weak woman’s fears: a noble spirit, As yours was put into you, ever casts
Such doubts, as false coin, from it. The king loves you;
Beware, you lose it: not for us, if you please
To trust us in your business, we are ready
To use our utmost study in your service.

Q. Kath. Do what ye will, my lords: and, pray, forgive me.
If I have us’d myself unmanfully:
You know I am a woman, lacking wit
To make a seamy answer to such persons.
Pray do my service to his majesty:
He has my heart yet, and shall have my prayers.
While I shall have my life. Come, reverend fathers:
Bestow your counsels on me: she bow he:
That little thought, when she set touting here,
She should have bought her dignities so dear. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Ante-chamber to the King’s Apartment.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk, the Duke of Suffolk, the Earl of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. If you will now unite in your complaints, And force them with a constancy, the cardinal Cannot stand under them: if you omit
The offer of this time. I cannot promise,
But that you shall sustain more new disgraces,
With these you bear already.

Sur. I am joyful
To meet the least occasion, that may give me Remembrance of my father-in-law, the duke.
To be reveng’d on him.

Suf. Which of the peers
Have uncontrovertibly gone by him, or at least Strangely neglected? when did he regard
The stamp of nobleness in any person,

Out of himself?

Cham. My lords, you speak your pleasures
What he deserves of you and me. I know,
What we can do to him, though now the time Gives way to us) I much fear. If you cannot Bar his access to the king, never attempt
Any thing on him, for he hath a witchcraft
Over the king in’s tongue.

Nor. 0! fear him not,
His spell in that is out: the king hath found
Matter against him, that for ever mars
The honey of his language. No, he’s settled,
Not to come off, in his displeasure.

Sur. Sir, I should be glad to hear such news as this Once every hour.

Nor. Believe it, this is true.
In the divorce his contrary proceedings
Are all unfolded; wherein he appears,
As I could wish mine enemy.

Sur. How came
His practices to light?

Suf. Most strangely.

Nor. O! how? how?

Suf. The cardinal’s letter to the pope mis-carried,
And came to the eye of the king; wherein was read,
How that the cardinal did entertain that holiness
To stay the judgment of the divorce; for if
It did take place, “I do,” quoth he, “perceive,
My king is tangled in affection to
A creature of the queen’s, lady Anne Bullen.”

Sur. Has the king this?

Suf. Believe it.

Sur. Will this work?

Cham. The king in this perceives him, how he coasts,
And hedges, his own way. But in this point
All his tricks founder, and he brings his physic
After his patient’s death: the king already Hath married the fair lady.

Sur. Would he had!

Suf. May you be happy in your wish, my lord:
For, I profess, you have it.

Sur. Now may all joy!

Trace the conjunction!

Suf. My amen to’t.

Nor. All men’s.

Suf. There’s order given for her coronation.
Marry, this is yet but young, and may be left
To some ear uncounted.—But, my lords,
She is a gallant creature, and complete
In mind and feature: I persuade me, from her
Will fall some blessing to this land, which shall
In it be memoriz’d.

Sur. But, will the king
Digest this letter of the cardinal’s?

The lord forbid!

Nor. Marry, amen!

Suf. No, no:
There be more wasps than buzz about his nose.
Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinal Campeius
Is stolen away to Rome; hath ta’en no leave.
Has left the cause of the king unhandled, and
Is posted as the agent of our cardinal,
To second all his plot. I do assure you
The king cried, he! at this.

Cham. Now, God incense him
And let him cry ha! louder.

Nor. But, my lord.

When returns Cranmer?
KING HENRY VIII.

ACT III.

Suf. He is return'd in his opinions, which have satisfied the king for his divorce, together with all famous colleges. Almost in Christendom. Shortly, I believe, his second marriage shall be publish'd, and his coronation. Katharine no more shall he call'd queen, but princess dowager, and widow to prince Arthur.

Nor. This same Cranmer's
A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain in the king's business.

Suf. He has; and we shall see him for it an archbishop.

Nor. So I hear.

The cardinal

[They stand back.]

Enter Wolsey and Cromwell.

Nor. Observe, observe; he's moody.

Wol. The packet, Cromwell, gave it you the king?

Crom. To his own hand, in his bedchamber. Wol. Look'd he o' th' inside of the paper?

Crom. Presently.

He did unseal them, and the first he view'd, he did it with a serious mind; a heed was in his countenance: you he bade attend him here this morning.

Wol. Is he ready to come abroad?

Crom. I think, by this he is.

Wol. Leave me awhile. [Exit Cromwell.]

It shall be to the duchess of Alençon, the French king's sister; he shall marry her.—Anne Bullen? No: I'll no Anne Bullen for him: there's more in 't than fair visage.—Bullen! Now we'll no Bullens.—Speedily I wish to hear from Rome. —The marchioness of Pembroke!

Nor. He's discontented.

Suf. May be, he hears the king does what his anger to him. Suf. Sharp enough, Lord! for thy justice.

Wol. The late queen's gentlewoman, a knight's daughter, to be her mistress: mistress! the queen's queen! —This candle burns not clear; 't is must smit him; then, out it goes.—What though I knew her virtuous, and well deserving, yet I know her for a spleeny Lutheran: and not wholesome to our cause, that she should lie in' the bosom of our hard-ru'd king. Again, there is sprung up an heretic, an arch one, Cranmer; one Hath crawled into the favour of the king, and is his oracle. [Retires, musing.]

Nor. He is vex'd at something.

Suf. I would, 't were something that would fret the string.

The master-chord on his heart.

[Enter the King, reading a Schedule; and Lovell.]

Suf. The king, the king!

K. Hen. What piles of wealth hath he accumulated, to his own portion! and what expense by the hour seems to flow from him! How, 't is the name of thrift, does he raise this together? —Now, my lords: saw you the cardinal?

Nor. My lord, we have [Coming forward.]

Stood here observing him. Some strange commotion is in his brain: he bites his lip, and starts. Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground. Then lays his finger on his temple: straight, springs out into fast gait; then, stops again, strikes his breast hard: and anon he casts his eye against the moon. —In most strange postures we have seen him set himself.

K. Hen. There is a mutiny in his mind. This morning papers of state he sent me to peruse, as I requir'd; and, wot you, what I found there, on my conscience, put unwittingly? Forsooth an inventory, thus importing,—The several parcels of his plate, his treasure, rich stuffs, and ornaments of household: which I find at such proud rate, that it out-speaks possession of a subject.

Nor. It's heaven's will:

Some spirit put this paper in the packet, to bless your eye withal.

K. Hen. If we did think his contemplation were above the earth, and fix'd on spiritual object, he should still dwell in his musings; but, I am afraid, his thinkings are below the moon, not worth his serious considering.

[He takes his seat, and whispers Lovell, who goes to Wolsey.]

Wol. Heaven forgive me! [Amazedly]

Ever God bless your highness.

K. Hen. Good my lord, you are full of heavenly stuff, and bear the inventory of your best graces in your mind, the which you were now running o'er: you have scarce time to steal from spiritual labour a brief span, to keep your earthly audit. Sure, In that I deem you an ill husband, and am glad To have you therein my companion.

Wol. Sir, for holy offices I have a time; a time to think upon the part of business, which I bear in the state; and nature does require her times of preservation, which, performe, I her frail son, amongst my brethren mortal, must give my tendance to.

K. Hen. You have said well.

Wol. And ever may your highness yoke together, as I will lend you cause, my doing well with my well saying!

K. Hen. 'Tis well said again; and this is a kind of good deed to say well: and yet words are no deeds. My father lov'd you: he said he did, and with his deed did crown his word upon you: since I had my office, I have kept you next my heart; have not alone Employ'd you where high profits might come home, but par'd my present havings, to bestow my bounties upon you.

Wol. What should this mean? [Aside]

K. Hen. The Lord increase this business! [Aside]

Nor. Have I not made you the prime man of the state? I pray you, tell me, if what I now pronounce you have found true; and, if you may confess it, say withal, if you are bound to us, or no. What say you?

Wol. My sovereign, I confess, your royal grace, Shower'd on me daily, have been more than could my studied purposes require; which went beyond all man's endeavours: my endeavours have ever come too short of my desires, yet fill'd with my abilities. Mine own ends have been mine so, that evermore they pointed I'the good of your most sacred person, and
The profit of the state. For your great graces
Head'd upon me, poor under sewer, I
Can nothing render but allegate thanks;
My prayers to heaven for you; my loyalty,
Which ever has, and ever shall be growing;
Till death, that winter, kill it.

K. Hen. Fairly answer'd:
A loyal and obedient subject is Therein illustrated. The honour of it
Does pay the act of it; as I the contrary,
The founlness is the punishment. I presume,
That as my hand has open'd bounty to you,
My heart dropp'd I love, my person rain'd honour, more
On you than any, so your hand, and heart,
Your brain, and every function of your power,
Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty,
As't were in love's particular, be more
To me, your friend, than any.

Wol. I do profess,
That for your highness' good I ever labour'd
More than mine own: that am, have, and will be—(Though all the world should crack their duty to you,
And throw it from their soul: though perils did Abound, as thick as thought could make them, and Appear in forms more horrid) yet my duty,
As doth a rock against the chiding flood,
Should the approach of this wild river break,
And stand unshaken yours.

K. Hen. 'Tis nobly spoken.
Take notice, lords, he has a loyal breast,
For you have seen him open't. —Read over this:
[Giving him Papers, And, after this, and then to breakfast, with What appetite you have.
[Exit King, frowning upon Cardinal Wolsey: the Nobles throng after him, smiling, and whispering.

Wol. What should this mean?
What sudden anger's this? how have I reap'd it?
He parted frowning from me, as if ruin
Leap'd from his eyes: so looks the chafed lion
Upon the daring huntman that has gall'd him,
Ther,' makes him nothing. I must read this paper;
I fear, the story of his anger.—'Tis so:
[Opens the Paper and reads, trembling.]
This paper has undone me! —'Tis th'account
Of all that world of wealth I have drawn together
For mine own ends; indeed, to gain the popedom,
And fee my friends in Rome. O negligence!
Fit for a fool to fall by. —What cross devil
Made me put this main secret in the packet
I sent the king? Is there no way to cure this?
Now no device to beat this from his brains?
I know 'twill stir him strongly; yet I know
A way, if it take right, in spite of fortune
Will bring me off again. What's this?—'To the Pope?'
The letter, as I live, with all the business
I writ to his holiness. Nay then, farewell!
I have touch'd the highest point of all my greatness,
And from that ful: meridian of my glory,
I haste now to my setting: I shall fall
Like a bright exhalation in the evening,
And no man see me more.
[Sinks in a chair.
Re-enter the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk, the Earl of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlain.
Nor. Hear the king's pleasure, cardinal, who commands you
To render up the great seal presently

Into our hands, and to confine yourself
To Asher-house, my lord of Winchester,
Till you hear farther from his highness.

Wol. Stay: |Rising.'
Where's your commission, lords? words cannot carry Authority so weighty.

Suf. Who dare cross them,
Bearing the king's will from his mouth expressly?
Wol. Till I find more than will, or words, to do it.
(I mean your malice) know, officious lords,
I dare, and must deny it. Now, I feel
Of what coarse metal ye are moulded,—envy;
As if it fed ye: and how sleek and wanton
Ye appear in every thing may bring my ruin.
Follow your curious courses, men of malice;
You have Christian warrant for them, and, no doubt,
In time will find their fit rewards. That seal,
You ask with such a violence, the king.
(Mine, and your master) with his own hand gave me
Bade me enjoy it, with the place and honours,
During my life, and to confirm his goodness.
Tied it by letters patent. Now, who'll take it?
Sur. The king that gave it.
Wol. It must be himself, then.
Sur. Thou art a proud traitor, priest.
Wol. Proud lord, thou liest.
Within these forty hours Surrey durst better
Have burnt that tongue, than said so.

Sur. Thy ambition
Thou scarlet sin, robb'd this bewailing land
Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law:
The heads of all thy brother cardinals,
(With thee, and all thy thickest parts bound together)
Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of your policy
You sent me deputy for Ireland,
Far from his succour, from the king, from all
That might have mercy on the fault thou gav'st him
Whilst your great goodness, out of holy pity,
Absolv'd him with an axe.

Wol. This, and all else
This talking lord can lay upon my eredit,
Answer, is most false. The duke by law
Found his deserts: how innocent I was
From any private malice in his end,
His noble jury and foul cause can witness.
If I lov'd many words, lord, I should tell you,
You have as little honesty as honour,
That in the way of loyalty and truth.
Toward the king, my ever royal master,
Dare mate a sounder man than Surrey can be,
And all that love his follies.

Sur. By my soul,
Your long coat, priest, protects you: thou shouldst feel
My sword: the life-blood of thee else.—My lords,
Can ye endure to hear this arrogance?
And from this fellow? If we live thus tamely,
To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet,
Farewell nobility; let his grace go forward,
And dare us with his cap, like larks.

Wol. All goodness
Is poison to thy stomach.

Sur. Yes, that goodness
Of gleaning all the land's wealth into one,
Into your own hands, cardinal, by extortion;
The goodness of your intercepted packets,
You write to the pope, against the king; your goodness
Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious.
My lord of Norfolk.—as you are true noble
As you respect the common good, the state
Of our despid'd w[ill], our issues,
(Who, if he live, will scarce be gentlemen)
Produce the grand sum of his sins, the articles
Collected from his life—I'll startle you
Worse than the saering bell, when the brown wench
Lay kissing in your arms, lord cardinal.

Wol. How much, methinks, I could despise this man,
But, that I am bound in charity against it.

Nor. Those articles, my lord, are in the king's hand;
But, this much, they are foul ones.

Wol. So much farther,
And spotless, shall mine innocence arise,
When the king knows my truth.

Sur. This cannot save you.
I thank my memory, I yet remember
Some of those articles; and out they shall.
Now, if you can blush, and cry guilty, cardinal,
You'll show a little honesty.

Wol. Speak on, sir;
I dare your worst objections: if I blush,
it is to see a nobleman want manners.

Sur. I had rather want those, than my head. Have at you,—
First, that without the king's assent or knowledge,
You wrote to be a legate; & the which power
You mutinied the jurisdiction of all bishops.

Nor. Then, that in all you write to Rome, or else
To foreign princes, Ego et Rex nus
Was still inscrib'd: in which you brought the king
To be your servant.

Sur. Then, that without the knowledge
Either of king or counsel, when you went
Ambassador to the emperor, you made bold
To carry into Flanders the great seal.

Sur. Item, you sent a large commission
To Gregory de Cassalius, to conclude,
Without the king's will or the state's allowance,
A league between his highness and Ferrara.

Sur. That out of mere ambition you have cans'd
Your holy hat to be stamp'd on the king's coin.

Sur. Then, that you have sent innumerable substances,
(By what means got I leave to your own conscience)
To furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways
You have for dignities; to the mere' undoing
Of all the kingdom. Many more there are;
Which, since they are of you, and odious,
I will not taint my mouth with.

Cham. O my lord!
Press not a falling man too far; 'tis virtue,
His faults lie open to the laws; let them,
Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see him
So little of his great self.

Suf. Lord cardinal, the king's farther pleasure is,— Because all those things, you have done of late
By your power legatine within this kingdom,
Fall into the compass of a pretium,—
That therefore such a writ be sued against you;
To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenements,
Chattles, and whatsoever, and to be
Out of the king's protection.—This is my charge.

Nor. And so we'll leave you to your meditations,
How to live better. For your stubborn answer,
About the giving back the great seal to us,
The king shall know it, and, no doubt, shall thank you.
So, fare you well, my little good lord cardinal.

[Exeunt all but Wolsey.

Wol. So, farewell to the little good you bear me.
Farewell, a long farewell, to all my greatness!
This is the state of man: to-day he puts forth
The tender leaves of hopes, to-morrow blossoms,
And bears his blushing honours thick upon him:
The third day comes a frost, a killing frost:
And, when he heeds, good easy man, full sure;
His greatness is a ripening.—Nips his root.
And then he falls, as I do. I have ventured,
Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
This many summers in a sea of glory,
But far beyond my depth: my high blown pride
At length broke under me; and now has left me.
Weary and old with service, to the mercy
Of a rude stream, that must forever hide me.
Vain pomp and glory of this world. I hate ye;
I feel my heart new open'd. O! how wretched
Is that poor man, that hangs on princes' favours.
There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,
More pause and fears than wars or women have.
And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,
Never to hope again.—

Enter Cromwell, amaz'd.

Why, how now, Cromwell
Crom. I have no power to speak, sir.

Wol. What! amaz'd?
At my misfortunes? can thy spirit wonder,
A great man should decline? Nay, an you weep,
I am fallen indeed.

Crom. How does your grace?

Wol. Why, well
Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell.
I know myself now; and I feel within me
A peace above all earthly dignities,
A still and quiet conscience. The king has cur'd me,
I humbly thank his grace, and from those shoulders,
These ruin'd pillars. out of pity, taken
A load would sink a navy—too much honour.
O! 'tis a burden. Cromwell, 'tis a burden.
Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven.

Crom. I am glad your grace has made that right
Use of it.

Wol. I hope I have: I am able now, methinks
(Out of a fortitude of soul I feel)
To endure more miseries, and greater far.
Than my weak-hearted enemies dare offer.
What news abroad?

Crom. The heaviest, and the worst,
Is your displeasure with the king.

Wol. God bless him!
Crom. The next is, that sir Thomas More is chosen
Lord Chancellor in your place.

Wol. That's somewhat sudden
But he's a learned man. May he continue
Long in his highness' favour, and do justice
For truth's sake, and his conscience: that his bones,
When he has run his course and sleeps in blessings,
May have a tomb of orphans' tears went on 'em!
What more?

Crom. That Cranmer is returned with welcome,
Install'd lord Archbishop of Canterbury.

Wol. That's news indeed!

Crom. Last, that the lady Anne
Whom the king hath in secrecy long married,
This day was view'd in open, as his queen,
Going to chapel; and the voice is now
Only about her coronation.
Of me more must be heard of,—say, I taught thee
Say, Wolsey, that once trod the ways of glory
And sounded all the depths and shoals of honour.
Found thee a way, out of his wreck, to rise in;
A sure and safe one, though thy master miss'd it.
Mark but my fall, and that that ruin'd me.
Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition;
By that sin fell the angels; how can man, then,
The image of his Maker, hope to win by 't?

Thou art the man!—cherish those hearts that hate the Corruption wins not more than honesty.
Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
To silence envious tongues; be just, and fear not Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,
 Thy God's, and truth's; then, if thou fall'st, O Crom-
well!
Thou fall'st a blessed martyr.
Serve the king: and,—Pr'ythee, lead me in
There take an inventory of all I have,
To the last penny: 'tis the king's: my robe,
And my integrity to heaven, is all
I dare now call mine own. O Cromwell, Cromwell.
Had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal
I serv'd my king, he would not in mine age
Have lett me naked to mine enemies,
Crom. Good sir; have patience.

Wol. So I have. — Farew—
The hopes of court: my hopes in heaven do dwell.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Street in Westminster.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

1 Gent. You're well met once again.
2 Gent. So are you.

1 Gent. You come to take your stand here, and behold
The Lady Anne pass from her coronation?

2 Gent. "Tis all my business. At our last encounter,
The Duke of Buckingham came from his trial;
1 Gent. "Tis very true; but that time offer'd sorrow,
This, general joy.

2 Gent. "Tis well: the citizens,
I am sure, have shown at full their royal minds:
As, let'em have their rights, they are ever forward
In celebration of that day with shows,
Paintings, and sights of honour.

1 Gent. Never greater;
Nor, I'll assure you, better taken, sir.

2 Gent. May I be bold to ask what that contains,
That paper in your hand?

1 Gent. Yes; 'tis the list
Of those that claim their offices this day,
By custom of the coronation.
The Duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims
To be high steward: next, the Duke of Norfolk,
He to be Earl Marshal. You may read the rest.

2 Gent. I thank you, sir; had I not known those customs,
I should have beheld to your paper.

But, I beseech you, what's become of Katherine,
The princess dowager? how goes her business?

1 Gent. That I can tell you too. The Archbishop
Of Canterbury, accompanied with other

But, I beseech you, what's become of Katherine,
The princess dowager? how goes her business?

1 Gent. That I can tell you too. The Archbishop
Of Canterbury, accompanied with other

 Learned and reverend fathers of his order,
Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off
From Ampthill, where the princess lay: to which
She was often cited by them, but appear'd not:
And, to be short, for not appearance, and
The king's late seruile, by the main aspect
Of all these learned men she was divorced,
And the late marriage made of none effect:
Since which she was removed to Kimbolton.
Where she remains, now, sick.

2 Gent. Alas, good lady!—

The trumpets sound: stand close, the queen is coming.

[Trumpets.]

THE ORDER OF THE CORONATION.

A lively flourish of Trumpets.

1. Then, two Judges.
2. Lord Chancellor, with purse and mace before him.
3. Choristers singing.

[Music.

4. Mayor of London bearing the mace. Then, Garter in his coat of arms; and on his head he wore a gilt copper crown.

5. Marquess Dorset, bearing a sceptre of gold: on his head a demi-coronial of gold. With him the Earl of Surrey, bearing the rest of silver with the dove:
crowned with an earl's coronet. Collars of SS.

6. Duke of Suffolk, in his robe of estate, his coronet on his head, bearing a long white wand, as high-steward. With him, the Duke of Norfolk, with the rod of marshallship: a coronet on his head.
   Collars of SS.

7. A canopy borne by four of the Cinque-ports; under it, the Queen in her robe; in her hair, richly adorned with pearl, crowned. On each side her, the Bishops of London and Winchester.
8. The old Duchess of Norfolk, in a coronal of gold, worshipped, with flowers, bearing the Queen's train.
9. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain circles of gold without flowers.
2 Gent. A royal train, believe me.—These I know:
Who's that, that bears the sceptre?
1 Gent. Marquess Dorset:
And that the earl of Surrey, with the rod.
2 Gent. A bold brave gentleman. That should be
The duke of Suffolk.
1 Gent. 'Tis the same: high-steward.
2 Gent. And that my lord of Norfolk?
1 Gent. Yes.
2 Gent. Heaven bless thee! [Looking on the Queen.
Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on.—
Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel:
Our king has all the Indies in his arms,
And more, and richer, when he strains that lady,
I cannot blame his conscience.
1 Gent. They, that bear
The cloth of honour over her, are four barons
Of the cinque-ports.
2 Gent. Those men are happy; and so are all, are near her.
I take it, she that carries up the train
Is that old noble lady, duchess of Norfolk.
1 Gent. It is; and all the rest are countesses.
2 Gent. Their coronets say so. These are stars, indeed;
And sometimes falling ones.
1 Gent. [Exit Procession, with a great flourish of Trumpets.
[Enter a third Gentleman.
God save you, sir! Where have you been broiling?
3 Gent. Among the crowd 'tis the abbey where a finger
Could not be wedg'd in more: I am stifled
With the mere rankness of their joy.
2 Gent. You saw the ceremony?
3 Gent. That I did.
1 Gent. How was it?
2 Gent. Well worth the seeing.
3 Gent. Good sir, speak it to us.
3 Gent. As well as I am able. The rich stream,
Of lords and ladies, having brought the queen
To a prepar'd place in the choir, fell off
A distance from her; while her grace sat down
To rest a while, some half an hour or so,
In a rich chair of state, opposing freely
The beauty of her person to the people.
Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest woman
That ever lay by man: which when the people
Had the full view of, such a noise arose
As the shrunds make at sea in a stiffest tempest
As loud, and to as many times: hats, cloaks,
[Doublets, I think] flew up; and had their faces
Been loose, this day they had been lost. Such joy
I never saw before. Great-bellied women,
That had not half a week to go, like rams
In the old time of war, would shake the press,
And make them reel before them. No man living
Could say, 'This is my wife,' there; all were woven
So strangely in one piece.
2 Gent. But, what follow'd?
3 Gent. At length her grace arose, and with modest paces
Came to the altar; where she kneel'd, and saint like
Cast her fair eyes to heaven, and pray'd devoutly
Then rose again, and bowed her to the people:
When by the archbishop of Canterbury
She had all the royal makings of a queen;
As holy oil, Edward Confessor's crown,
The rod, and bird of peace, and all such emblems
Laid nobly on her: which perform'd, the choir,
With all the choicest music of the kingdom,
Together sung To Dewm. So she parted,
And with the same full state pale'd back again
To York-place, where the feast is held.
1 Gent. Sir,
You must no more call it York-place, that's past;
For, since the cardinal fell, that title's lost:
'Tis now the king's, and call'd—Whitehall.
3 Gent. I know it
But 'tis so lately alter'd, that the old name
Is fresh about me.
2 Gent. What two reverend bishops
Were those that went on each side of the queen?
3 Gent. Stokesley and Gardiner; the one of Winclester,
Newly preferr'd from the king's secretary;
The other, London.
2 Gent. He of Winchester
Is held no great good lover of the archbishop's,
The virtuous Cranmer.
3 Gent. All the land knows that,
However, yet there's no great breach, when it comes,
Cranmer will find a friend will not shrink from him.
2 Gent. Who may that be, I pray you?
3 Gent. Thomas Cromwell,
A man in much esteem with the king, and truly
A worthy friend.—The king has made him
Master of the jewel-house,
And one, already, of the privy-council.
2 Gent. He will deserve more.
3 Gent. Yes, without all doubt
Come, gentlemen, ye shall go my way, which
Is to the court, and there ye shall be my guests:
Something I can command. As I walk theither,
I'll tell ye more.
Both. You may command us, sir. [Exeunt

SCENE II.—Kimbolton.
[Enter Katharine, Dowager, sick; led between Grif fith and Patience.
Grif. How does your grace?
Kath. O, Griffith! sick to death.
My legs, like loaden branches, bow to the earth,
Willing to leave their burden. Reach a chair.—
[Sits down
So,—now, methinks, I feel a little ease.
Didst thou not tell me, Griffith, as thou led'st me,
That the great child of honour, cardinal Wolsey,
Was dead?
Grif. Yes, madam; but, I think, your grace,
Out of the pain you suffer'd, gave no ear to it.
Kath. Pr'ythee, good Griffith, tell me how he died?
If well, he stepp'd before me, happily,
For my example.
Grif. Well, the voice goes, madam.
For after the stout earl Northumberland
Arrested him at York, and brought him forward,
As a man sorely tainted, to his answer,
He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill,
He could not sit his mule.
Kath. Alas, poor man.
Grif. At last, with easy roads, he came to Leicester; Lodg'd in the abbey, where the reverend abbot, With all his convent, honourably receiv'd him; To whom he gave these words,—"O father abbot An old man, broken with the storms of state, Is come to lay his weary bones among ye: Give him a little earth for charity!"

So went to bed, where eagerly his sickness Pursu'd him still: and three nights after this, About the hour of eight, which himself Foretold should be his last, full of repentance, Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows, He gave his honours to the world again, His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.

Kath. So may he rest: his faults lie lightly on him: Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak him, And yet with charity,—He was a man Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking Himself with princes; one, that by suggestion Tied all the kingdom: simony was fair play; His own opinion was his law: 'tis the presence He would say untruths, and he ever double, Both in his words and meaning. He was never, But where he meant to run, pitiful: His promises were, as he then was, mighty; But his performance, as he is now, nothing. Of his own body he was ill, and gave The clergy ill example.

Grif. Noble madam, Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues We write in water. May it please your highness To hear me speak his good now?

Kath. Yes, good Griffith; I were malicious else.

Grif. This cardinal, Though from a humble stock, undoubtedly
Was fashion'd to much honour from his cradle. He was a scholar, and a ripe, and good one; Exceeding wise, fair spoken, and persuading: Lofty and sour to them that lov'd him not; But, to those men that sought him, sweet as summer: And though he were unsatisfied in getting, (Which was a sin) yet in bestowing, madam, He was most princely. Ever witness for him Those twins of learning, that he rais'd in you. Ipswich, and Oxford! one of which fell with him, Unwilling to outlive the good man² did it: The other, though unfinished, yet so famous, So excellent in art, and still so rising, That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue. His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him; For then, and not till then, he felt himself, And found the blessedness of being little: And, to add greater honours to his age Than man could give him, he died fearing God.

Kath. After my death I wish no other herald, No other speaker of my living actions, To keep mine honour from corruption, But such an honest chronicler as Griffith. Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me. With thy religious truth and modesty, Now in his ashes honour. Peace be with him!— Patience. be near me still; and set me lower: I have not long to trouble thee.—Good Griffith, Cause the musicians play me that sad note I sam'd my knell, whilst I sit meditating On that celestial harmony I go to.

For fear we wake her:—softly, gentle Patience.

The Vision. Enter, solemnly tripping one after another six Personages, clad in white robes, wearing on their heads garlands of bays, and golden wands on their faces; branches of bays, or palm, in their hands. They first converge unto her, then dance; and, at certain changes, the first two hold a spere garland over her head; at which, the other four make reverent curstses: then, the two that held the garland deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their changes, and holding the garland over her head. Which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order: at which, (as it were by inspiration) she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven. And so in their dancing they vanish, carrying the garland with them. The music continues.

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone,

Waking.

And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye?

Grif. Madam, we are here.

Kath. It is not you I call for Saw ye none enter, since I slept?

Grif. None, madam.

Kath. No! saw you not, even now, a blessed troop Invite me to a banquet; whose bright faces Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun? They promis'd me eternal happiness, And brought me garlands, Griffith, which I feel I am not worthy yet to wear: I shall, assuredly.

Grif. I am most joyful, madam, such good dreams Possess your fancy.

Kath. Bid the music leave, They are harsh and heavy to me.

[Music ceases. Pat. Do you note, How much her grace is alter'd on the sudden? How long her face is drawn? How pale she looks, And of an earthy coldness?² Mark her eyes! Grif. She is going, wench. Pray, pray.

Pat. Heaven comfort her! Enter a Messenger.

Mess. An't like your grace,—Kath. You are a saucy fellow

Deserve we no more reverence?

Grif. You are to blame, Knowing she will not lose her wonted greatness, To use so rude behaviour: go to; kneel.

Mess. I humbly do entreat your highness' pardon. [Kneeling]

My haste made me unmannerly. There is staying A gentleman, sent from the king to see you.

Kath. Admit him entrance, Griffith: but this fellow Let me ne'er see again.

[Exeunt Griffith and Messenger. Re-enter Griffith, with Capaclus. If my sight fail not, You should be lord ambassador from the emperor, My royal nephew; and your name Capaclus.

Cap. Madam, the same, your servant.

Kath. O my lord! The times, and titles, now are alter'd strangely With me, since first you knew me. But, I pray you What is your pleasure with me?

Cap. Noble lady, First, mine own service to your grace; the next, The king's request that I would visit you; Who grieves much for your weakness, and by me Sends you his princely commendations, And heartily entreats you take good comfort.
Kath. O! my good lord, that comfort comes too late: ’Tis like a pardon after execution.
That gentle phrase, given in time, had cur’d me;
But now I am past all comforts here, but prayers.
How does his highness?
Cap. Madam, in good health.
Kath. So may he ever do; and ever flourish,
When I shall dwell with worms, and my poor name
Banish’d the kingdom.—Patience, is that letter,
I can’t you write, yet sent away?
Pat. No, madam. [Giving it to Katharine.
Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver
This to my lord the king.
Cap. Most willing, madam.
Kath. In which I have commended to his goodness
The model of our chaste loves, his young daughter:—
The dews of heaven fall thick in blessings on her!
Beseeching him to give her virtuous breeding.
She is young, and of a noble modest nature,
I hope, she will deserve well: and a little
To love her for her mother’s sake, that lov’d him,
Heaven knows how dearly. My next poor petition
Is, that his noble grace would have some pity
Upon my wretched women, that so long,
Have follow’d both my fortunes faithfully:
Of which there is not one. I dare avow,
(And now I should not lie) but will deserve,
For virtue, and true beauty of the soul,
For honesty, and decent carriage,
A right good husband, let him be a noble;
And, sure, those men are happy that shall have them.
The last is, for my men:—they are the poorest,
But poverty could never draw them from me:—
That they may have their wages duly paid them,
And something over to remember me by:
If heaven had pleas’d to have given me longer life,
And able means, I had not part’d thus.
These are the whole contents:—and, good my lord,
By that you love the dearest in this world,
As you wish Christian peace to souls departed.
Stand these poor people’s friend, and urge the king
To do me this last right.
Cap. By heaven, I will,
Or let me lose the fashion of a man!
Kath. I thank you, honest lord. Remember me
In all humility unto his highness:
Say, his long trouble now is passing
Out of this world: tell him, in death I bless’d him,
For so I will.—Mine eyes grow dim.—Farewell,
My lord.—Griffith, farewell.—Nay, Patience,
You must not leave me yet: I must to bed;
Call in more women.—When I am dead, good wench,
Let me be us’d with honour: strow me over
With maiden flowers, that all the world may know
I was a chaste wife to my grave. Embalm me;
Then lay me forth: although unqueen’d, yet like
A queen, and daughter to a king, inter me.
I can no more. — [Execut, leading Katharine

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Gallery in the Palace.
Enter Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a Torch before him; met by Sir Thomas Lovell.
Gar. It’s one o’clock, boy, is’t not?
Boy. It hath struck.
Gar. These should be hours for necessities,
Not for delights; times to repair our nature
With comforting repose, and not for us
To waste these times.—Good hour of night, sir Thomas;
Whither so late?
Lov. Came you from the king, my lord?
Gar. I did, sir Thomas; and left him at primero
With the duke of Suffolk.
Lov. I must to him too,
Before he go to bed, I’ll take my leave.
Gar. Not yet, sir Thomas Lovell. What’s the matter?
It seems you are in haste: an if there be
No great offence belongs to ’t, give your friend
Some touch of your late business. Affairs that walk
(As, they say, spirits do) at midnight have
In them a wilder nature, than the business
That seeks despatch by day.
Lov. My lord, I love you,
And durst commend a secret to your ear
Much weightier than this work. The queen’s is In labour;
They say, in great extremity, and fear’d,
She’ll with the labour end.
Gar. The fruit she goes with
I pray for heartily; that it may find
Good time, and live: but for the stock, sir Thomas,
I wish it grubb’d up now.
Lov. Methinks, I could

1 is: in folio. Theobald made the change. 2 Summoned.
LEO. Many good nights, my lord. I rest your servant.

[Exeunt Gardiner and Page.

As Lovell is going out, enter the King, and the Duke of Suffolk.

K. Hen. Charles, I will play no more to-night: My mind's not on't; you are too hard for me.

SUF. Sir, I did never win of you before.

K. Hen. But little, Charles,
Nor shall not when my fancy's on my play.—
Now, Lovell, from the queen what is the news?

Lov. I could not personally deliver to her
What you commanded me, but by her woman
I sent your message; who return'd her thanks
In the greatest humbleness, and desir'd your highness
Most heartily to pray for her.

K. Hen. What say'st thou, ha! To pray for her? what! is she crying out?

Lov. So said her woman; and that her sufferance made
Almost each pang a death.

K. Hen. Alas, good lady! Let God safely quit her of her burden
With gentle travail, to the gladding of
Your highness with an heir!

K. Hen. 'Tis midnight, Charles: Pr'ythee, to bed; and in thy prayers remember
Th' estate of my poor queen. Leave me alone,
For I must think of that, which company
Would not be friendly to.

SUF. I wish your highness
A quiet night; and my good mistresses will Remember in my prayers.

K. Hen. Charles, good night.— [Exit Suffolk.]

Enter Sir Anthony Denney.

SIR ANTHONY DENNEY. Well, sir, what follows?

DEN. Sir, I have brought my lord the archbishop, As you commanded me.

K. Hen. Ha! Canterbury?

DEN. Ay, my good lord.

K. Hen. 'Tis true: where is he, Denney?

DEN. He attends your highness' pleasure.

Lov. This is about that which the bishop spake:
As I am happily come hither.

Re-enter Denney, with Cranmer.

K. Hen. Avoid the gallery. [Lovell seems to stay.]

Lov. Ha!—I have said.—Be gone.

What!—[Exeunt Lovell and Denney.

Cran. I am fearful.—Wherefore frowns he thus?

K. Hen. It is my duty [Kneeling.]

'T is his aspect of terror: all's not well.

K. Hen. How now, my lord! You do desire to know
Wherefore I sent for you.

Cran. It is my duty [Kneeling.]

'T attend your highness' pleasure.

K. Hen. Pray you, arise,
My good and gracious lord of Canterbury.

Come, you and I must walk a turn together;
I have news to tell you. Come, come, give me your hand,
Ah, my good lord, I grieve at what I speak,
And am right sorry to repeat what follows.
I have, and most unwillingly, of late
Heard many grievous, I do say, my lord,
Grievous complaints of you; which being consider'd
Have mov'd us and our council, that you shall
This morning come before us: where, I know,
You cannot with such freedom purge yourself,

But that, till farther trial in those charges
Which will require your answer, you must take
Your patience to you, and be well contented
To make your house our Tower: to a brother of us,
It fits me thus proceed, or else no witness
Would come against you.

Cran. I humbly thank your highness
And am right glad to catch this good occasion

[To Cranmer.]

Most thoroughly to be winnow'd, where my staff
And corn shall fly asunder; for, I know,
There's none stands under more calamitous tongues
Than I myself, poor man.

K. Hen. Stand up, good Canterbury
Thy truth, and thy integrity, is rooted
In us, thy friend. Give me thy hand, stand up.

[To Canterbury.]

Pr'ythee, let's walk. Now, by my holy dame,
What manner of man are you? My lord, I look'd
You would have given me your petition, that I should have ta'en some pains to bring together
Yourself and your accusers; and to have heard you,
Without insurance, farther.

Cran. Most dread liege,
The ground I stand on, is my truth, and honesty:
If they shall fail, I, with mine enemies,
Will triumph o'er my person, which I weigh not,
Being of those virtues vacant. I fear nothing
What can be said against me.

K. Hen. Know you not
How your state stands in the world, with the whole world?

Your enemies are many, and not small; their practices
Must bear the same proportion: and not ever
The justice and the truth of the question carries
The due of the verdict with it. At what ease
Might corrupt minds procure knaves, as corrupt,
To swear against you: such things have been done:
You are potently oppos'd, and with a malice
Of as great size. Wecu you of better luck,
I mean in perjur'd witness, than your Master,
Whose minister you are, whiles here he liv'd:
Upon this naughty earth? Go to, go to:
You take a precept of no leap of danger,
And woe your own destruction.

Cran. God, and your majesty,
Protect mine innocence, or I fall into
The trap is laid for me!

K. Hen. Be of good cheer;
They shall no more prevail, than we give way to,
Keep comfort to you; and this morning, see
You do appear before them. If they shall chance,
In charging you with matters, to commit you,
The best persuasions to the contrary
Fail not to use, and with what vehemency
The occasion shall instruct you: if entreaties
Will render you no remedy, this ring
Deliver them, and your appeal to us
There make before them.—Look, the good man weeps.
He's honest, on mine honour. God's blest mother!
I swear, he is true-hearted; and a soul
None better in my kingdom.—Get you gone,
And do as I have bid you. [Exit Cranmer.] He has Strangled his language in his tears.

Enter an old Lady, in haste.

GENT. [Within.] Come back: what mean you?

Lady. I'll not come back; the tidings that I bring
Will make my boldness manners.—Now, good angels

1 Not in f. e. 2 you: in f. e. 3 Not in f. e. 4 good: in f. e.
Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy person
Under their blessed wings!

K. Hen. Now, by thy looks I guess thy message. Is the queen deliver'd?
Say, ay; and of a boy.

Lady. Ay, ay, my liege; And of a lovely boy; the God of heaven
Both now and ever bless her!—'tis a girl,
Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen
Desires your visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger: 'tis as like you
As cherry is to cherry.

K. Hen. Re-enter LOVELL. Give her an hundred marks I'll to the queen.
[Exit King.

Lady. An hundred marks! By this light, I'll ha' more.
An ordinary groom is for such payment:
I will have more, or seold it out of him.
Said I for this the girl was like to him?
I will have more, or else unmay 't; and now,
While it is hot, I'll put it to the issue. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Lobby before the Council-Chamber.

Enter CRANMER; Servants, Door-keeper, &c. attending.

Cran. I hope I am not too late; and yet the gentle- man
That was sent to me from the council, pray'd me
To make great haste. All fast! what means this? Hoa!
Who waits there?—Sure, you know me?
D. Keep. Yes, my lord; But y'et I cannot help you.
Cran. Why?
D. Keep. Your grace must wait till you be call'd for.
[Enter Doctor BUTTS.

Cran. So.

Butts. This is a piece of malice. I am glad, [Aside I came this way so happily: the king
Shall understand it presently. [Exeunt BUTTS.

Cran. 'Tis Butts, The king's physician. As he past along,
How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me.
Pray heaven, he sound not my disgrace! For certain, This is of purpose laid by some that hate me,
(God turn their hearts! I never sought their malice) To quench mine honour: they would shame to make me
Wait else at door, a fellow-counsellor
Mong boys, grooms, and lackeys. But their pleasures Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.

Enter The King and Butts, at a window above.

Butts. I'll show your grace the strangest sight,—
K. Hen. What's that, Butts?

Butts. I think, your highness saw this many a day. K. Hen. Body o' me, where is it?

Butts. There, my lord:

The high promotion of his grace of Canterbury; Who holds his state at door, 'mongst pursuivants, Pages, and footboys.

K. Hen. Ha! 'Tis he, indeed. Is this the honour they do one another?
'Tis well, there's one above 'em yet. I had thought, They had parted so much honesty among 'em, (At least good manners) as not thus to suffer A man of his place, and so near our favour, To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures And at the door too, like a post with packets.

By holy Mary, Butts, there's knavery: Let 'em alone, and draw the curtain close; We shall hear more anon.—[Exeunt.

ACT V.

THE COUNCIL-CHAMBER.

Enter the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of SUFFOLK, Earl of SURREY, Lord Chamberlain, Gardiner, and CROMWELL. The Chancellor places himself at the upper end of the table on the left hand; a seat being left void above him, as for the Archbishop of CANTERBURY The rest seat themselves in order on each side. CRON- WELL at the lower end, as secretary.

Cham. Speak to the business, master secretary:
Why are we met in council?

Crom. Please your honours, The chief cause concerns his grace of Canterbury.
Gar. Has he had knowledge of it?

Nor. Yes.

D. Keep. Without, my noble lords?

Gar. Yes.

D. Keep. My lord archbishop; And has done half an hour, to know your pleasures.

Cham. Let him come in.

D. Keep. Your grace may enter now.

Cranmer approaches the Council-table: Cham. My good lord archbishop, I am very sorry To sit here at this present, and behold That chair stand empty; but we all are men, In our own natures frail, and culpable; Of our flesh; few are angels; out of which frailty, And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us, Have misleadem'd yourself, and not a little, Toward the king first, then his laws, in filling The whole realm, by your teaching, and your chaplains (For so we are inform'd) with new opinions, Divers, and dangerous; which are heresies, And, not reform'd, may prove pernicious.

Gar. Which reformation must be sudden too, My noble lords; for those that tame wild horses Pace them not in their hands to make them gentle, But stop their mouths with stubborn bits, and spur them,

'Till they obey the manage. If we suffer, Out of our easiness and childish pity To one man's honour, this contagious sickness, Farewell all physic: and what follows then? Commotions, uproars, with a general taint Of the whole state: as, of late days, our neighbours, The upper Germany, can dearly witness,
Yet freshly pitted in our memories.

Cran. My good lords, hitherto, in all the progress, Both of my life and office, I have laboured, And with no little study, that my teaching, And the strong course of my authority, Might go one way, and safely: and the end Was ever, to do well: nor is there living (I speak it with a single heart, my lords,) A man, that more detests, more strives against Both in his private conscience and his place, Defacers of the public peace, than I do. Pray heaven, the king may never find a heart With less allegiance in it! Men, that make Envy and crooked malice nourishment, Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lordships, That in this case of justice, my accusers, Be what they will, may stand forth face to face. And freely urge against me.

Suff. Nay, my lord. That cannot be: you are a counsellor,
KING HENRY VIII.

SCENE II.

And by that virtue no man dare accuse you.

Gar. My lord, because we have business of more moment, We will be short with you. 'T is his highness' pleasure, And our consent, for better trial of you, From hence you be committed to the Tower: Where, being but a private man again, You shall know many dare accuse you boldly, More than, I fear, you are provided for.

Cran. Ah! my good lord of Winchester, I thank you; You are always my good friend: if your will pass, I shall both find your lordship judge and juror, You are so merciful. I see your end; 'T is my undoing. Love and meekness, lord, Become a churchman better than ambition: Win straying souls with modesty again, Cast none away. That I shall clear myself, Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience, I make as little doubt, as you do conscience In doing daily wrongs. I could say more: But reverence to your calling makes me modest.

Gar. My lord, my lord, you are a sectary: That's the plain truth: your painted gloss discovers, To men that understand you, words and weakness.

Crom. My lord of Winchester, you are a little, By your good favour, too sharp: men so noble, However faulty, yet should find respect For what they have been: 't is a cruelty, To load a falling man.

Gar. Good master secretary I cry your honour mercy: you may, worst Of all this table, say so.

Crom. Why, my lord?

Gar. Do not I know you for a favourer Of this new sect? ye are not sound.

Crom. Not sound?

Gar. Not sound, I say.

Crom. Would you were half so honest; Man's prayers, then, would seek you, not their fears.

Gar. I shall remember this bold language.

Crom. Remember your bold life too.

Chan. This is too much:

Forbear, for shame, my lords.

Gar. I have done.

Crom. And I.

Chan. Then thus for you, my lord.—It stands agreed, I take it, by all voices, that forthwith You be convey'd to the Tower a prisoner: There to remain, till the king's farther pleasure Be known unto us. Are you all agreed, lords? All. We are.

Cran. Is there no other way of mercy, But I must needs to the Tower, my lords?

Gar. What other

Would you expect? You are strangely troublesome. Let some o' the guard be ready there.

Cran. Must I go like a traitor thither?

Enter Guard.

Gar. Receive him, and see him safe in the Tower.

Cran. Stay, good my lords; I have a little yet to say. Look there, my lords: By virtue of that ring I take my cause Out of the gripe of cruel men, and give it To a most noble judge, the king my master.

Chan. This is the king's ring.

Sur. 'T is no counterfeit.

K. Hen. You were ever good at sudden commendations,

Bishop of Winchester; but know, I come not To hear such flattering now, and in my presence: They are too thin and base to hide offences. To me you cannot reach. You play the spaniel, And think with wagging of your tongue to win me But, whatso'er thou tak'st me for, I'm sure, Thou hast a cruel nature, and a bloody,— Good man, [To CRANMER.] sit down. Now, let me see the proudest, [CRANMER sits.] He that dares most, but wag his finger at thee: By all that's holy, he had better starve, Than but once think this place becomes thee not.

Sur. May it please your grace,—

K. Hen. No, sir, it does not please me I had thought, I had had men of some understanding And wisdom of my council; but I find none. Was it discretion, lords, to let this man, This good man, (few of you deserve that title) This honest man, wait like a lousy footboy At chamber door? and one as great as you are? Why, what a shame was this! Did my commission Bid ye so far forget yourselves? I gave ye Power, as he was a counsellor to try him, Not as a grooms. There's some of ye, I see, More out of malice than integrity, Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean; Which ye shall never have the while I live.

Chan. Thus far My most dread sovereign, may it like your grace To let my tongue excuse all. What was purposed Concerning his imprisonment, was rather (If there be faith in men) meant for his trial, And fair purgation to the world, than malice, I'm sure, in me.

K. Hen. Well, well, my lords, respect him: Take him, and use him well; he's worthy of it. I will say thus much for him: if a prince May be beholding to a subject, I Am, for his love and service, so to him. Make me no more ado, but all embrace him:

[They embrace him: GARDNER last. Be friends, for shame, my lords — My lord of Canterbury.}
I have a suit which you must not deny me; That is, a fair young maid that yet wants baptism, You must be godfather, and answer for her.

Cran. The greatest monarch now alive may glory In such an honour; how may I deserve it, That am a poor and humble subject to you?

K. Hen. Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your spoons.1 You shall have two noble partners with you; The old duchess of Norfolk, and lady marquess Dorset: Will these please you? Once more, my lord of Winchester, I charge you, mbrace and love this man.

Gar. With a true heart, And brother's love, I do it. [Embrace again.] Cran. And let heaven Witness, how dear I hold this confirmation. K. Hen. Good man! those joyous tears show thy The common voice, I see, is verified [true heart. If thee, which says thus, 'Do my lord of Canterbury A shrewd turn, and he is your friend for ever.'—] Ceme, lords, we trifle time away; I long To have this young one made a Christian. As I have made ye one, lords, one remain; So I grow stronger. you more honour gain. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Palace Yard.

Noise and Tumult within. Enter Porter and his Mon.

Port. You'll leave your noise anon, ye rascals: do you take the court for Paris-garden? ye rude slaves, leave your gaping.

Within.] Good master porter, I belong to the larder. Port. Belong to the gallows, and be hanged. You rogue! Is this a place to roar in?—Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones: these are but switches to them.—[I] will scratch your heads: you must be seeing christenings? Do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals? [Tumult within.]

Mon. Pray, sir, be patient: 'tis as much impossible, Unless we sweep 'em from the door with cannons, To scatter 'em, 'tis to make 'em sleep. On May-day morning; which will never be. We may as well push against Paul's. as stir 'em.

Port. How got they in, and be hang'd?

Mon. Alas, I know not: how gets the tide in? As much as one sound cudgel of four foot. (You see the poor remainder) could distribute, I made no spare, sir.

Port. You did nothing, sir.

Mon. I am not Samson, nor sir Guy, nor Colbrand, To mow 'em down before me; but if I spared any, That had a head to hit, either young or old, He or she, cuckold or cuckold-maker, Let me n'er hope to see a queen* again; And that I would not for a crown,* God save her. [Within.] Do you hear, master Porter?

Port. I shall be with you presently, good master puppy.—Keep the door close, sirrah.

Mon. What would you have me do?

Port. What should you do, but knock 'em down by the dozes? Is this Moorfields to muster in? or have we some strange Indian with the great toll come to court, the women so besiege us? [Noise.] Bless me, what a cry of fornication is at door! On my Christian conscience, this one christening will beget a thousand: here will be father, godfather, and all together.

Mon. The spoons will be the bigger, sir. There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face, for, o' my conscience, twenty of the dog days now reign in his nose: all that stand about him are under the line; they need no other penance. That fire-drake2 did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharge'd against me: he stands there, like a mortar-piece, to blow us. There was a harb'dasher's wife of small wit near him, that railed upon me till her pink'd porringer* fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the state. I miss'd the meteor once, and hit that woman, who cried out, claps!3 when I might see from far some forty truncheoners draw to her succour, which were the hope of the Strand, where she was quartered. They fell on: I made good my place; at length they came to the broomstaff with me: I defam'd 'em still; when suddenly a file of boys behind 'em, loose shot, delivered such a shower of pebbles, that I was fain to draw mine honour in, and let 'em win the work. The devil was among 'em, I think surely. [Shouts.] Port. These are the youths that thunder at a play house, and fight for bitten apples: that no audience but the Tribulation4 of Tower-hill, or the limbs of Limehouse5, their dear brothers, are able to endure. have some of 'em in Limbo Patrum, and there they are like to dance these three days, besides the running banquet of two beadles, that is to come. [Tumult and Shouts.]

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Mercy o' me, what a multitude are here! They grow still, too; from all parts they are coming, As if we kept a fair! Where are these porters, These lazy knives?—Ye have made a fine hand, fellows:

There's a trim rabble let in. Are all these Your faithful friends o' the suburbs? We shall have Great store of room, no doubt, left for the ladies, When they pass back from the christening.

Port. An't please your honour We are but men; and what so many may do, Not being torn a pieces, we have done? An army cannot rule 'em.

Cham. As I live, If the king blame me for 't, I'll lay ye all By the heels, and suddenly, and on your heads Clap round fines for neglect. Y' are lazy knives: And here ye lie baiting of bombards,12 when [Trumpets.] Ye should do service. Hark! the trumpets sound; They're come already from the christening, Go, break among the press, and find a way out To let the troop pass fairly, or I'll find A Marshalsea shall hold ye play these two months. Port. Make way there for the princess.

Mon. You great fellow, [Tumult and confusion.] Stand close up, or I'll make your head ache. Port. You 't' the camblet, get up o' the rail; I'll peck you o'er the pole10 else. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Palace at Greenwich.

Enter Trumpets, sounding; then two Aldermen, Lord Mayor, Garter, Cranmer, Duke of Norfolk, with his Marshal's staff, Duke of Suffolk, two Noblemen bearing great standing bowls for the christening gifts, then, four Noblemen bearing a canopy, under which the Duchess of Norfolk, godmother, bearing the 1 A custom is here referred to, of sponsors presenting spoons to a child at baptism. child richly habited in a mantle, &c. Train borne by a Lady; then follows the Marchioness of Dorset, the other gotmother, and Ladies. The Troop pass once about the stage, and Garter speaks.

Cran. Heaven, From thy endless goodness, send prosperous life, Long, and ever happy, to the high and mighty Princess of England, Elizabeth!

Flourish. Enter King, and Train.

Cran. And to your royal grace, and the good queen.

[Kneeling.]

My noble partners, and myself, thus pray:—

All comfort, joy, in this most gracious lady,
Heaven ever laid up to make parents happy,
May hourly fall upon ye!

K Hen. Thank you, good lord archbishop.

What is her name?

Cran. Elizabeth.

K. Hen. Stand up, lord. [Cran. rises.]

With this kiss take my blessing: God protect thee!
Into whose hand I give thy life. [Kissing the child.

Cran.

K. Hen. My noble gossips, ye have been too prodigal.

I thank ye heartily: so shall this lady,
When she has so much English.

Cran. Let me speak, sir, For Heaven now bids me; and the words I utter Let none think flattery, for they'll find them truth.

This royal infant.—heaven still move about her!—

Though in her cradle, yet now promises
Upon this land a thousand thousand blessings,
Which time shall bring to ripeness. She shall be (But few now living can behold that goodness)
A pattern to all princes living with her,
And all that shall succeed: Sheba was never
More covetous of wisdom, and fair virtue,

Than this pure soul shall be: all princely graces,
That mould up such a mighty piece as this is,
With all the virtues that attend the good,
Shall still be doubled on her: truth shall nurse her;
Holy and heavenly thoughts still counsel her; she shall be lov'd, and fear'd; her own shall bless her.

Her foes shake like a field of beaten corn,
And hang their heads with sorrow: good grows with her.

in her days every man shall eat in safety
Under his own vine what he plants, and sing
The merry songs of peace to all his neighbours.
God shall be truly known; and those about her
From her shall read the perfect ways of honour,
And by those claim their greatness, not by blood
Nor shall this peace sleep with her: but as when
The bird of wonder dies, the maiden phantax,
Her ashes now create another heir,
As great in admiration as herself;—
So shall she leave her blessedness to one, [New]
(When heaven shall call her from this cloud of dark
Who, from the sacred ashes of her honour,
Shall star-like rise, as great in fame as she was,
And so stand fix'd. Peace, plenty, love, truth, terror,
That were the servants to this chosen infant,
Shall then be his, and like a vine grow to him:
Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine,
His honour and the greatness of his name
Shall be, and make new nations: he shall flourish,
And, like a mountain cedar, reach his branches
To all the plains about him. Our children's children
Shall see this, and bless heaven.

K. Hen. Thou speakest wonders. Cran. She shall be, to the happiness of England.

An aged princess; many days shall see her,
And yet no day without a deal to crown it.
Would I had known no more! but she must die:
She must; the saints must have her: yet a virgin,
A most unsnapped lily shall she pass
To the ground, and all the world shall mourn her.

K. Hen. O, lord archbishop!

Thou hast made me now a man: never, before
This happy child, did I get any thing.
This oracle of comfort has so pleased me,
That when I am in heaven I shall desire
To see what this child does, and praise my Maker.—
I thank ye all.—To you, my good lord mayor,
And you, good brethren. I am much beholding:
I have receiv'd much honour by your presence.
And ye shall find me thankful.—Lead the way, lords.—
Ye must all see the queen, and she must thank ye;
She will be sick else. This day, no man think
He has business at his house, for all shall stay:
This little one shall make it holiday. [Exit]

EPILOGUE.

This is ten to one, this play can never please
All that are here. Some come to take their case,
And sleep an act or two; but those, we fear,
We have frighted with our trumpets; so, 'tis clear,
They'll say, 'tis naught: others, to hear the city
Abuse'd extremely, and to cry.—"that's witty!"
Which we have not done neither: that, I fear,

All the expected good we're like to hear
For this play, at this time, is only in
The merciful construction of good women;
For such a one we should 'em. If they smile.
And say, 't will do, I know, within a while
All the best men are ours: for 't is ill hap,
If they hold, when their ladies bid 'em clap.

THE PROLOGUE

In Troy, there lies the scene. From isles of Greece,
The princes orgulous, their high blood chaf'd,
Have to the port of Athens sent their ships,
Fraught with the ministers and instruments
Of cruel war: sixty and nine, that were
Their crowneis regal, from th' Athenian bay
Put forth toward Phrygia; and their vow is made,
To ransack Troy, within whose strong immures
The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen,
With wanton Paris asleep; and that's the quarrel.
To Tenedes they come,
And the deep-drawing barks do there digorge
Their warlike fraughtage: now on Dardan plains
The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch
Their brave pavilions: Priam's six-gated city,
Dardan, and Tymbria, Ilias, Chetas, Trojan,

And Antenorides, with massy staples
And corresponsive and fulfilling bolts,
Sperr'd up the sons of Troy.
Now expectation, tickling skittish spirits
On one and other side, Trojan and Greek,
Sets all on hazard.—And lother am I come
A Prologue arm'd,—but not in confidence
Of author's pen, or actor's voice, but suited
In like conditions as our argument,—
To tell you, fair beholders, that our play
Leaps o'er the vaunt* and firstlings of those broils,
Beginning in the middle; starting thence away
To what may be digested in a play.
Like, or find fault; do as your pleasures are;
Now, good or bad, 'tis but the chance of war.

ACT I.

Enter Troilus armed, and Pandarus.

Tro. Call here my varlet*: I'll unarm again;
Why should I war without the walls of Troy,
That find such cruel battle here within?
Each Trojan, that is master of his heart,
Let him to the field; Troilus, alas! hath none.
Pan. Will this gear ne'er be mended?
Tro. The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength,
Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness valiant;

UTTERED

But I am weaker than a woman's tear,
Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance,
Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
And skill-less as unpractis'd infancy.
Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this; for my part,
I'll not meddle nor make no farther. He that will have a cake out of the wheat must tar the grinding.
Tro. Have I not tarried?
Pan. Ay, the grinding; but you must tarrey the bolting.
Tro. Have I not tarried?

---

* First printed in the folio.

 The words in parenthesis are not in the folio.

* Stir: in folio.

Theobald made the change to sperr, or tarrey.
Pan. Ay, the boiling; but you must marry the leavenging.

Tro. Still have I tarried.

Pan. Ay, to the leavenging: but here's yet, in the word hereafter, the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating the oven, and the baking: nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance burn your lips.

Tro. Patience herself, what goddess e'er she be, Doth lesser bleanch at suffrance than I do. At Priam's royal table do I sit; And when fair Cressid comes into my thoughts,— So, traitor!—when she comes!—When is she thence?

Pan. Well, she looked yesternight fairer than ever I saw her look, or any woman else.

Tro. I was about to tell thee,—when my heart, As wedged with a sigh, would rive in twain, Lest Hector or my father should perceive me, I have (as when the sun doth light a storm) Bury'd this sigh in wrinkle of a smile; But sorrow, that is couched in seeming gladness, Is like that nirth fate turns to sudden sadness.

Pan. An her hair were not somewhat darker than Helen's, (well, go to) there were no more comparison between the women,—but, for my part, she is my kinswoman: I would not, as they term it, praise her, —but I would somewhat had heard her talk yesterday, as I did: I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit, but—

Tro. O Pandarus! I tell thee, Pandarus,— When I do tell thee, there my hopes lie drown'd; Reply not in how many fathom's deep They lie indreche'd, I tell thee, I am mad In Cressid's love: thou answer'st, she is fair; Pour'st in the open ulcer of my heart Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her voice; Handiest in thy discourse, O! that her hand, In whose comparison all whites are ink; Writing their own reproach: to whose soft seizure The cygnet's down is harsh, and spirit of sense Hard as the palm of ploughman! This thou tell'st me, As true thou tell'st me, when I say,—I love her; But, saying thus, instead of oil and balm, Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given me The knife that made it.

Pan. I speak no more than truth.

Tro. Thou dost not speak so much.

Pan. 'Faith, I'll not meddle in't. Let her be as she is: if she be fair, 'tis the better for her; an she be not, she has the 'mends in her own hands.

Tro. Good Pandarus. How now, Pandarus! Pan. I have had my labour for my travail; ill-thought on of her, and ill-thought on of you: gone between and between, but small thanks for my labour.

Tro. What, art thou angry, Pandarus? what, with me? Pan. Because she's kin to me, therefore, she's not so fair as Helen: and she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday, as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not, an she were a black-a-moor; 'tis all one to me.

Tro. Say I, she is not fair?

Pan. I do not care whether you do or no. She's a fool to stay behind in her father's: let her to the Greeks; and so I'll tell her the next time I see her. For my part, I'll meddle nor make no more in't the matter.

Tro. Pandarus,—

Pan. Not I.

Tro. Sweet Pandarus,—

Pan. Pray you, speak no more to me: I will leave all as I found it, and there end. [Exit Pan. An Alarum.]

Tro. Peace, you ungracious clamours! peace, rude sounds!
Fools on both sides! Helen must needs be fair;
When with your blood you daily paint her thus.
I cannot fight upon this argument;
It is too starv'd a subject for my sword.

But Pandarus!—O gods, how do you plague me!
I cannot come to Cressid, but by Pandar;
And he's as tetchy to be woo'd to woo,
And she is stubborn-cluste against all suit.
Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love,
What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we?
Her bed is India; there she lies, a pearl.
Between our Ilmias, and where she resides,
Let it be call'd the wild and wandering flood;
Ourself the merchant, and this sailing Pandar,
Our doubtful hope, our convoy, and our bark.

Alarum. Enter Æneas.

Æne. How now, prince Troilus! wherefore not afield?

Tro. Because not there: this woman's answer sorts; 1
For womanish it is to be from thence.

What news, Æneas, from the field to-day?

Æne. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.

Tro. By whom, Æneas?

Æne. Troilus, by Menelaus.

Tro. Let Paris bleed: it is but a scar to scorn;
Paris is gor'd with Menelaus's horn. [Alarum.]

Æne. Hark, what good sport is out of town to-day!

Tro. Better at home, if I might, "were may."—

But to the sport abroad:—are you bound thither?

Æne. In all swift haste.

Tro. Come; we go, then, together. [Exeunt

SCENE II.—The Same. A Street.

Enter Cressida and Alexander.

Cres. Who were those went by?

Alex. Queen Heeuba, and Helen.

Cres. And whither go they?

Alex. Up to the eastern tower Whose height commands as subject all the vale, To see the battle. Hector, whose patience Is as a virtue fix'd, to-day was mov'd: He chid Andromache, and struck his armourer; And, like as there were husbandry in war, Before the sun rose he was harness'd light, And to the field goes he; where every flower Did, as a prophet, weep what it foresaw In Hector's wrath.

Cres. What was his cause of anger?

Alex. The noise goes, thus: there is among the Greeks A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector; They call him, Ajax.

Cres. Good; and what of him?

Alex. They say he is a very man per se,
And stands alone.

Cres. So do all men; unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.

Alex. This man, lady, hath robbed many beasts of their particular additions: he is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant; a man into whom nature hath so crowded humours, that his valour is crushed into folly, his folly sauced with discretion: there is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of, nor any man an attendant but he carries some stain of it. He is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair: he hath the joints of every thing; but every thing so out of joint, that he is a gouty Brionus, many hands and no use; or purblind

Argus, all eyes and no sight.
Cres. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry?
Alex. They say, he yesterday coped Hector in the battle, and struck him down; the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and sinking.

Enter Pandarus.
Cres. Who comes here?
Alex. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.
Cres. Hector's a gallant man.
Alex. As may be in the world, lady.
Pan. What's that? What's that?
Cres. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.
Pan. Good morrow, cousin Cressid. What do you talk of—Good morrow, Alexander. How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilium?
Cres. This morning, uncle.
Pan. What were you talking of, when I came?
Was Hector armed, and gone, ere you came to Ilium?
Helen was not up, was she?
Cres. Hector was gone; but Helen was not up.
Pan. E'en so: Hector was stirring early.
That were we talking of, and of his anger.
Pan. Was he angry?
Cres. So he says, here.
Pan. True, he was so; I know the cause too. He'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that; and there's Troilus will not come far behind him: let them take need of Troilus, I can tell them that too.
Cres. What, is he angry too?
Pan. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.
Cres. O, Jupiter! there's no comparison.
Pan. What, not between Troilus and Hector? Do you know a man if you see him?
Cres. Ay: if I ever saw him before, and knew him.
Pan. Well, I say, Troilus is Troilus.
Cres. Then you say as I say; for, I am sure, he is not Hector.
Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus, in some degrees.
Cres. 'Tis just to each of them; he is himself.
Pan. Himself? Alas, poor Troilus! I would, he were—
Cres. So he is.
Pan. —Condition. I had gone bare-foot to India.
Cres. He is not Hector.
Pan. Himself? no, he's not himself. Would 'a were himself! Well, the gods are above; time must friend, or end. Well, Troilus, well— I would, my heart were in her body!—No, Hector is not a better man than Troilus.
Cres. Excuse me.
Pan. He is elder.
Cres. Pardon me, pardon me.
Pan. Th' other's not come to 't; you shall tell me another tale, when th' other's come to 't. Hector shall not have his wit this year.
Cres. He shall not need it, if he have his own.
Pan. Nor his qualities.
Cres. No matter.
Pan. Nor his beauty.
Cres. 'T would not become him; his own's better.
Pan. You have no judgment, niece. Helen herself swore th' other day, that Troilus, for a brown favour,
(for so 't is, I must confess)—not brown neither—
Cres. No, but brown.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

husband?” “The forked one,” quoth he; “pluck’t out, and give it him.” But there was such laughing, and Helen so blushed, and Paris so chafed, and all the rest so laughed, that it passed.

Cres. Let it now set, for it has been a great while going by.

Pan. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday; think on’t.

Cres. So I do.

Pan. I’ll be sworn, it is true: he will weep you, an’t were a man born in April.

Cres. And I’ll spring up in his tears, an’t were a bottle against May.

Pan. Hark! they are coming from the field. Shall we stand up here, and see them, as they pass toward Ilion? good niece, do; sweet niece, Cressida.

Cres. At your pleasure.

Pan. Here, here; here’s an excellent place: here we may see most bravely. I’ll tell you them all by their names, as they pass by, but mark Troilus above the rest.

Cres. Speak not so loud.

ANAEAS passes over the Stage.

Pan. That’s Anaeas. Is not that a brave man? he’s one of the flowers of Troy, I can tell you: but mark Troilus; you shall see anon.

Cres. Who’s that?

ANTENOR passes over.

Pan. That’s Antenor: he has a shrewd wit, I can tell you; and he’s a man good enough: he’s one of the soundest judgment in Troy, whosoever, and a proper man of his person.—When comes Troilus?—I’ll show you Troilus anon: if he see me, you shall see him nod at me.

Cres. Will he give you the nod?

Pan. You shall see.

Cres. If he do, the rich shall have more.

HECTOR passes over.

Pan. That’s Hector: that, that, look you, that; there’s a fellow!—Go thy way, Hector.—There’s a brave man, niece.—O brave Hector!—Look how he looks; there’s a countenance. Is’t not a brave man?

Cres. O! a brave man.

Pan. Is’t not? It does a man’s heart good—Look you what hackles are on his helmet! look you yonder, do you see? look you there. There’s no jesting: there’s laying on, take’t off who will, as they say; there be hacks!

Cres. Be those with swords?

PARIS passes over.

Pan. Swords? any thing. he cares not; an the devil come to him, it’s all one: by god’s lid, it does one’s heart good.—Yonder comes Paris; yonder comes Paris: look ye yonder, niece: is’t not a gallant man too, is’t not?—Why, this is brave now.—Who said he came hurt home to-day? he’s not hurt: why, this will do Helen’s heart good now. Ha! would I could see Troilus now.—You shall see Troilus anon.

Cres. Who’s that?

HELENUS passes over.

Pan. That’s Helenus.—I marvel, where Troilus is.

That’s Helenus.—I think he went not forth to-day.—That’s Helenus.

Cres. Can Helenus fight, uncle?

Pan. Helenus? no;—yes, he’ll fight indifferent well.—I marvel, where Troilus is.—Hark! do you not hear the people cry, Troilus?—Helenus is a priest.

Cres. What speaking fellow comes yonder?

TROILUS passes over.

Pan. Where? yonder? that’s Deiphobus.—‘Tis Troilus! there’s a man, niece!—Hem!—Brave Troilus, the prince of chivalry!

Cres. Peace! for shame; peace!

Pan. Mark him; note him.—O brave Troilus!—look well upon him, niece: look you how his sword is bloodied, and his helm more hack’d than Hector’s: and how he looks, and how he goes!—O admirable youth! he ne’er saw three and twenty. Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way: had I a sister were a grace, or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris?—Paris is dirt to him; and, I warrant, Helen, to change, would give an eye’s worth to boot.

Soldiers pass over the Stage.

Cres. Here come more.

Pan. Asses, fools, dolts, chaff and bran, chaff and bran; porridge after meat. I could live and die if the eyes of Troilus. Ne’er look, ne’er look: the eagles are gone; crows and daws, crows and daws. I had rather be such a man as Troilus, than Agamemnon and all Greece.

Cres. There is among the Greeks Achilles, a better man than Troilus.

Pan. Achilles? a dryman, a porter, a very canel.

Cres. Well, well.

Pan. Well, well?—Why, have you any discretion? have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like*, the spice and salt that season a man?

Cres. Ay, a miniced man; and then to be baked with no date in the pye,—for then the man’s date’s out.

Pan. You are such a woman! one knows not at what ward you lie.

Cres. Upon my back, to defend my belly; upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; upon my mask, to defend my beauty; and upon you, to defend all these: and at all these wards I lie, at a thousand watches.

Pan. Say one of your watches.

Cres. Nay, I’ll watch you for that; and that’s one of the chiefest of them too: if I cannot ward what would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow, unless it swell past hiding, and then it’s past watching.

Pan. You are such another!

[Enter TROILUS’ Boy.

Boy. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you.

Pan. Where?

Boy. At your own house*; there he unarms him.

Pan. Good boy, tell him I come. [Exit Boy.

I doubt he be hurt.—Fare ye well, good niece.

Cres. Adieu, uncle.

Pan. I’ll be with you, niece, by and by.

Cres. To bring, uncle,—

Pan. Ay, a token from Troilus.

Cres. By the same token, you are a bawd.

[Exit PANDARUS

Words, vows, gifts, tears, and love’s full sacrifice, He offers in another’s enterprise;
But more in Troilus thousand fold I see, Than in the glass of Pandar’s praise may be.
Yet hold I off. Women are angels, woe’s;
Things won are done, joy’s soul lies in the doing;— That she belov’d knows nought, that knows not this,— Men prize the thing ungain’d more than it is:— That she was never yet, that ever knew Love got so sweet as when desire did sue.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

ACT I.

Therefore, this maxim out of love I teach,—
Achieved men still command;* ungain'd, beseech:
Then, though my heart's content firm love doth bear,
Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear. [Exit.

Senet. Enter Agamemnon, Nestor, Ulysses, Menelaus, and others.

Agam. Princes,
What grief hath set the jaundice on your cheeks?
The ample proposition, that hope makes
In all designs begun on earth below,
Fails in the promis'd largeness: checks and disasters
Grow in the veins of actions highest rear'd;
As knots, by the conflux of meeting sap,
Infest the sound pine, and divert his grain;
Tortive and errant from his course of growth.
Nor, princes, is it matter new to us;
That we come short of our suppose so far,
That after seven years' siege yet Troy walls stand;
Sith every action that hath gone before,
Whereof we have record, trial did draw
Bias and thwart, not answering the aim,
And that unbodied figure of the thought
That gave 't surprised shape. Why then, you princes,
Do you with checks abash'd behold our wrecks;* and call* them shames, which are, indeed, nought else
But the protractive trials of great Jove,
To find persitance constancy in men?
The fineness of which metal is not found
In fortune's love; for then, the bold and coward,
The wise and fool, the artist and unread,
The hard and soft, seem all afin'd and kin:
But, in the wind and tempest of her frown,
Distinction, with a broad* and powerful fan,
Puffing at all, winnows the light away;
And what hath mass, or matter, by itself
Lies rich in virtue, and unmingled.

Nest. With due observance of thy godlike seat,
Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply
Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance
Lies the true proof of men. The sea being smooth,
How many shallow bauble boats dare sail
Upon her patient breast, making their way
With those of nobler bulk:
But let the ruffian Boreas once enrage
The gentle Thea, and, anon, behold,
The strong-ribb'd bark through liquid mountains cut,
Bounding between the two moist elements,
Like Perseus' horse: where's then the saucy boat,
Whose weak untimber'd sides but even now
Co-rival'd greatness? either to harbour fled,
Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so
Both valour's show, and valour's worth, divide
In storms of fortune: for, in her ray and brightness,
The herd hath more annoyance by the brize,*
Than by the tiger; but when the splitting wind
Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks,
And flits fleed under shade, why then, the thing of courage,
As rous'd with rage, with rage doth sympathize,
And with an accent 'tis in self-same key,
Replies* to chiding fortune.

Ulyss. Agamemnon,
Thou great commander, nerve and bone of Greece,
Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit,
In whom the tempers and the minds of all
Should be shut up, hear what Ulysses speaks.
Besides the applause and approbation.
The which,—most mighty for thy place and sway.—

[To Agamemnon]

And thou most reverend for thy stretch'd-out life.—

[To Nestor]

I give to both your speeches, which were such,
As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece
Should hold up high in brass; and such again,
As Venerable Nestor, hatch'd* in silver,
Should with a boul of air (strong and the axletree
On which heaven rides) knot all the Grecian ships
To his experienced tongue,—yet let it please both.
Thou great,—and wise,—to hear Ulysses speak.

Agam.* Speak, prince of Ithaca; and be't of seas expect
That matter needless, of importless burden,
Divide thy lips, than we are confident,
When rank Thersites opes his mastiff jaws,
We shall hear music, wit, and oracle.

Ulyss. Troy, yet upon his basis, had been down,
And the great Hector's sword had lack'd a master.
But for these instances.
The specialty of rule hath been neglected:
And look, how many Grecian tents do stand
Hollow upon this plain, so many hollow factions.
When that the general is not like the hive,
To whom the foragers shall all repair,
What honey is expected? Degree being vizarded,
Th' unworacthest shows as fairly in the mask.
The heavens themselves, the planets, and this centre.
Observe degree, priority, and place,
Insisture, course, proportion, season, form,
Office, and custom, in all line of order:
And therefore is the glorious planet, Sol,
In noble eminence enthron'd and sphered
Amidst the other; whose med'cable eye
Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil,
And posts, like the commandment of a king,
Sans check, to good and bad. But when the planets,
In evil mixture, to disorder wander,
What plagues, and what portents! what mutiny!
What raging of the sea, shaking of earth,
Commotion in the winds, frights, changes, horrors,
Divert and erack, rend and deraecinate
The unity and married calm of states
Quite from their fixture! O! when degree is shak'd,
Which is the ladder to all high designs,
The enterprise is sick. How could communities,
Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods in cities,
Peaceful commerce from dividable shores,
The primogenitive and due of birth,
Prerogative of age, crowns, sceptres, laurels,
But by degree stand in authentic place?
Take but degree away, untune that string,
And, hark, what discord follows! each thing meets*
In mere oppugnacy: the bounded waters
Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores,
And make a sop of all this solid globe:
Strength should be lord of imbecility,
And the rude son should strike his father dead:
Force should be right; or, rather, right and wrong,
(Between whose endless jar justice resides)
Should lose their names, and so should justice too.

Then every thing includes itself in power,
Power into will, will into appetite;
And appetite, an universal wolf,
So doubly secound with will and power;

We have, great Agamemnon, here in Troy,
A prince call'd Hector, Priam is his father,
Who in this dull and long-continu'd truce
Is rusty grown: he bade me take a trumpet,
And to this purpose speak.—Kings, princes, lords,
If there be one among the fair'et of Greece,
That holds his honour higher than his ease;
That seeks his praise more than he fears his peril;
That knows his valour, and knows not his fear;
That loves his mistress more than in confession
With truant vows to her own lips he loves,
And dare avow her beauty and her worth
In other arms than hers,—to him this challenge.
Hector, in view of Trojans and of Greeks,
Shall make it good, or do his best to do it.
He hath a lady, wiser, fairer, truer,
Than ever Greek did couple in his arms;
And will to-morrow with his trumpet call,
Mid-way between your tents and walls of Troy,
To rouse a Greek that is true in love.
If any come, Hector shall honour him:
If none, he'll say in Troy, when he retireth,
The Grecian dames are sun-burnt, and not worth
The splinter of a lance. Even so much.

Agam. This shall be told our lovers, lord Æneas:
If none of them have soul in such a kind,
We left them all at home; but we are soldiers,
And may that soldier a more reccant prove,
That means not, hath not, or is not in love!
If then one is, or hath, or means to be,
That one meets Hector; if none else, I am he.

Nest. Tell him of Nestor, one that was a man
When Hector's grandsire suck'd: he is old now;
But if there be not in our Grecian host
One noble man that hath one spark of fire,
To answer for his love, tell him from me,
I'll hide my silver beard in a gold beaver,
And in my vantage put this wither'd brawn;
And, meeting him, will tell him, that my lady
Was fairer than his grandam, and as chaste
As may be in the world. His youth in flood,
'll prove this truth with my three drops of blood.
Æne. Now heavens forbid such scarcity of youth!

Ulyss. Amen.

Agam. Fair lord Æneas, let me touch your hand;
To our pavilion shall I lead you, sir.
Hector shall have word of this intent,
So shall each lord of Greece, from tent to tent;
Yourself shall feast with us before you go,
And find the welcome of a noble foe.

[Exeunt all but Ulysses and Nestor.]

Ulyss. Nester!

Nest. What says Ulysses?

Ulyss. I have a young conception in my brain;
Be you my time to bring it to some shape.

Nest. What is't?

Ulyss. This 'tis.

Blunt wedges rive hard knots: the seeded pride,
That hath to this maturity grown up
In rank Achilles, must or now be cropp'd,
Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like evil,

To overbulk us all.

Nest. Well, and how?

Ulyss. This challenge that the gallant Hector sends,
However it is spread in general name,
Relates in purpose only to Achilles.

Nest. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance,
Whose grossness little characters sum up:
And in the publication make no strain,
But that Achilles, were his brain as barren
As banks of Libya, (though, Apollo knows,
'Tis dry enough) will, with great speed of judgment,
Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose
Pointing on him.

Ulyss. And wake him to the answer, think you?

Nest. Why, 'tis most meet: whom may you else oppose,
That can from Hector bring his honour off.
If not Achilles? Though 'tis a sportful combat,
Yet in the trial much opinion dwells;
For here the Trojans taste our dearst repute
With their finest plate: and trust to me, Ulysses,
Our reputation shall be oddly poised
In this wild action; for the success,
Although particular, shall give a scantling
Of good or bad unto the general;
And in such indexes (although small pricks
To their subsequent volumes) there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large. It is supp'd,
He that meets Hector issues from our choice:
And choice, being mutual act of all our souls,
Makes merit her election, and doth boil,
As 'twere from forth us all, a man distill'd
Out of our virtues; who miscarrying,
What heart receives from hence the conquering part
To steel a strong opinion to themselves?
Which entertain'd, limbs are his instruments,
In no less working, than are swords and bows
Directive by the limbs.

Ulyss. Give pardon to my speech:—
Therefore 'tis meet Achilles meet not Hector.
Let us, like merchants, show our foulest wares,
And think, perchance, they'll sell; if not,
The lustre of the better shall exceed;
By showing the worst first. Do not consent,
That ever Hector and Achilles meet;
For both our honour and our shame, in this,
Are dogg'd with two strange followers.

Nest. I see them not with my old eyes: what are they?

Ulyss. What glory our Achilles shares from Hector,
Were he not proud, we all should share' with him:
But he already is too insolent;
And we were better parch in Afric sun,
Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes,
Should he 'scape Hector fair. If he were foil'd,
Why, then we did our main opinion crush
In taint of our best man. No; make a lottery,
And by device let bleekish Ajax draw
The sort to fight with Hector: among ourselves
Give him allowance for the better man,
For that will physic the great Myrmidon,
Who broils in loud applause; and make him fall
His crest, that prouder than blue Iris bends.
If the dull, brainless Ajax come safe off,
We'll dress him up in voices: if he fail,
Yet go we under our opinion still,
That we have better men. But, hit or miss,

SCENE I.—Another Part of the Grecian Camp.

Enter Ajax and Thersites.

Ajax. Thersites! Thou bitch-ville's son, canst thou not hear? Feel then. ['Strikes him.]

Thersites. The plague of Greece upon thee, thou mongrel beef-witted lord!

Ajax. Speak then, thou viney'dden leaven, speak: I will beat thee into handsomeness.

Thersites. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness: but, I think, thy horse will sooner con an oration, than thou learn a prayer without book. Thou canst strike, canst thou? a red murrain o' thy jade's tricks!

Ajax. Toads-stool, learn me the proclamation.

Thersites. Dost thou think I have no sense, thou strik'st me thus?

Ajax. The proclamation.—Thou art proclaimed a fool. I think.

Thersites. Do not, porcupine, do not: my fingers itch. I would, thou didst itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee; I would make thee the loathsomest scab in Greece. When thou art forth in thy impertinent soliloquies, thou strik'st as slow as another.

Ajax. I say, the proclamation,—Thou grumblous and raillery every hour on Achilles; and thou art as full of envy at his greatness, as Cerberus is at Proserpina's beauty, ay, that thou barest at him.

Thersites. Cuff!—He would pun' thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.

Ajax. You whoreson cur! ['Beating him.]

Thersites. Do, do.

Ajax. Thou stool for a witch!

Thersites. Ay, do, do; thou sodden-witted lord! thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows; an ass'ego* may tutor thee: thou scurvy valiant ass! thou art here but to thrash Trojans; and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a Barbarian slave. If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou!

Ajax. Thou dog!

Thersites. Thou scurvy lord!

Ajax. Thou cur! ['Beating him.]

Thersites. Mar's idiot! do, rudeness; do, camel; do, do.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus.

Achilles. Why, how now, Ajax! wherefore do you this?

To Agamemnon: go we to him straight.

Two ears shall tame each other: pride alone

Must tarret the mastiffs on, as 't were their bone.
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

ACT II.

ACHIL. There's for you, Patroclus.

THER. I will see you hanged, like clotpoles, ere I some any more to your tents: I will keep where there is wit stirring, and leave the faction of fools. [Exit.

POT. A good riddance.

ACHIL. Marry, this, sir, is proclaimed through all our host:

That Hector, by the fifth hour of the sun,
Will, with a trumpet, 'twixt his tents and Troy,
To-morrow morning call some knight to arms,
That hath a stomach; and such a one, that dare
Maintain—I know not what: 'tis trash. Farewell.

AJAX. Farewell. Who shall answer him?

ACHIL. I know not: it is put to lottery; otherwise,
He knew his man.

AJAX. O! meaning you. I will go learn more of it.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Troy. A Room in Priam’s Palace.

ENTER PRIAM, HECTOR, TROILUS, PARIS, and HELENUS.

PRIAM. After so many hours, lives, speeches spent,
Thus once again says Nestor from the Greeks:—

' tis Helen, and all damage else—
As honour, loss of time, temp'rance, expense,
Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consumed
In hot digestion of this coromant war,—
Shall be stricken off?—’tis Hector, what say you to’t?

HECT. Though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I,
As far as toucheth my particular,
Yet, dread Priam,
There is no lady of more softer bowels,
More spungy to suck in the sense of fear,
More ready to cry out—’Who knows what follows?’
Than Hector is. The wound of peace is surety,
Surety secure; but modest doubt is call’d
The beacon of the wise, the tent that searches
To the bottom of the worst. Let Helen go:
Since the first sword was drawn about this question,
Every tithe soul, ‘most many thousand dusies’,
Hath been as dear as Helen; I mean, of ours:
If we have lost so many tenths of ours,
To guard a thing not ours, nor worth to us,
Had it our name, the value of one ten,
What merit’s in that reason which denies
The yielding of her up?

TRO. Fie, fie! my brother
Weigh you the worth and honour of a king.
So great as our dread father, in a scale
Of common ounces? will you with counters sum
The past-proportion of his infinite?
And buckle in a waist most fathomless,
With spans and inches so diminutive
As tears and reasons? fie, for godly shame!

HEL. No marvel, though you bite so sharp at reasons.
You are so empty of them. Should not our father
Bear the great sway of his affairs with reasons,
Because your speech hath none, that tells him so?

TRO. You are for dreams and slumbers, brother priest:
You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your reasons:
You know, an enemy intends you harm,
You know, a sword employ’d is perilous,
And reason flies the object of all harm.
Who marvels, then, when Helenus beholds
A Grecian and his sword, if lie do set
The very wings of reason to his heels,
And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove,
Or like a star dis-or’bd?—Nay, if we talk of reason,
Let’s shut our gates, and sleep: manhood and honou
Should have bare hearts, would they but fast their thoughts
With this cramm’d reason: reason and respect
Make liver pale, and lusthooirendject.

HECT. Brother, she is n’t worth what she doth cost
The holding.

TRO. What is aught, but as it is valued?

HECT. But value dwells not in particular will;
It holds his estimate and dignity,
As well wherein ’tis precious of itself,
As in the prizer. ’Tis mad idolatry,
To make the service greater than the god;
And the will dotes, that is inclinable2
To what infectiously itself affects,
Without some image of th’ affected merit.

TRO. I take to-day a wife, and my election
Is led on in the conduct of my will;
My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,
Two traded pilots ‘twixt the dangerous shores
Of will and judgment. How may I avoid,
Although my will distaste what it electeth,
The wife I chose? there can be no evasion
To blench3 from this, and to stand firm by honour.
We turn not back the silks upon the merchant,
When we have sold them; nor the remainder viand
We do not throw in unrespective sieve.
Because we now are full. It was thought meet,
Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks;
Your breath of fumes, which once he beat his nose;
The seas and winds (old wranglers) took a true.
And did him service; he touch’d the ports desir’d;
And for an old aunt, whom the Greeks held captive,
He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and fresh ness
Wrinkles Apollo’s, and makes pale4 the morning.
Why keep we her? the Grecians keeps our aunt.
Is she worth keeping? why, she is a pearl,
Whose price hath launch’d above a thousand ships,
And turn’d crown’d kings to merchants.
If you’ll avouch ’t was wisdom Paris went,
As you must need, for you all cry’d—’Go, go;’
If you’ll confess, he brought home noble prize,
As you must needs, for you all clapp’d your hands,
And cry’d—’Inestimable!’ why do you now

The issue of your proper wisdoms rate,
And do a deed that fortune never did.
Beggar the estimation which you priz’d
Richer than sea and land? O, theft most base,
That we have stolen what we do fear to keep!
But, thieves, unworthy of a thing so stolen,
That in their country did them that disgrace,
We fear to warrant in our native place!

CAS. [Within.] Cry, Trojans, cry!

PRIAM. What noise? what shrill is this?

TRO. ’Tis our mad sister: I do know her voice.

CAS. [Within.] Cry, Trojans!

HECT. It is Cassandra.

Enter CASSANDRA, raving.

CAS. Cry, Trojans, cry! lend me ten thousand eyes
And I will fill them with prophetic tears.

HECT. Peace, sister, peace!

CAS. Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled old,
Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry,
Add to my clamours! let us pay betimes
A moiety of that mass of moan to come.
Cry, Trojans, cry! practise your eyes with tears
Trojans must not be, nor goodly Ilioon stand;
Our fire-brand brother, Paris, burn us all.

Of nature be corrupted through affection,
And that great minds, of partial indulgence;
To their benumbed wills, resist the same,
There is a law in each well-order'd nation.
To curb those raging appetites that are
Most disobedient and refractory,
If Helen, then, be Sparta's king,
As it is known she is, these moral laws
Of nature, and of nation, speak aloud
To have her back return'd: thus to persist
In doing wrong extremates not wrong,
But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion
Is this, in way of truth: yet, nevertheless,
My sprightly brethren, I propend to you
In resolution to keep Helen still;
For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependance
Upon our joint and several dignities.

Tro. Why, brother Hector,
We may not think the justness of each act
Such and no other than event doth form, it;
Nor once deject the courage of our minds.
Because Cassandra's mad: her brain-sick raptures
Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel.
Which hath our several honours all engag'd
To make it gracious. For my private part,
I am no more touch'd than all Priam's sons;
And Jove forbid, there should be done amongst us
Such things as might offend the weakest speckle
To fight for, and maintain.

Par. Else might the world convince of levity,
As well my undertakings, as your counsels;
But, I attest the gods, your full consent
Gave wings to my propension, and cut off
All fears attending on so dire a project:
For what, alas! can these my single arms?
What propugnation is in one man's valour,
To stand the push and eminence of those
This quarrel would exite? Yet, I protest,
Were I alone to poise the difficulties,
And had as ample power as I have will,
Paris should ne'er retract what he hath done,
Nor faint in the pursuit.

Pri. Paris, you speak
Like one besotted on your sweet delights:
You have the honey still, but these the gall.
So to be valiant is no praise at all.

Par. Sir, I propose not merely to myself
The pleasures such a beauty brings with it,
But I would have the soil of her fair rape
Wield'd off in honourable keeping her,
What treason were it to the ransack'd queen,
Disgrace to your great worths, and shame to me,
Now to deliver her possession up.
On terms of base compulsion? Can it be,
That so degenerate a strain as this,
Should once set footing in your generous bosoms?
There's not the meancist spirit on our party,
Without a heart to dare, or sword to draw,
When Helen is defended; nor none so noble,
Whose life were ill bestowed, or death unim'd,
Where Helen is the subject: then, I say,
Well may we fight for her, whom, we know well,
The world's large spaces cannot parallel.

Hect. Paris, and Troilus, you have both said well:
And on the cause and question now in hand
Have glog'd,—but superficially; not much
Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought
Unfit to hear moral philosophy.
The reasons you allege do more conducde
To the hot passion of distemper'd blood,
Than to make up a free determination
'Twixt right and wrong: for pleasure, and revenge,
Have ears more deat than adders to the voice
Of any true decision. Nature craves
All dues be render'd to their owners: now,
What nearer debt in all humanity
Than wife is to the husband? if this law

Of nature be corrupted through affection,
And that great minds, of partial indulgence
To their benumbed wills, resist the same,
There is a law in each well-order'd nation.
To curb those raging appetites that are
Most disobedient and refractory,
If Helen, then, be Sparta's king,
As it is known she is, these moral laws
Of nature, and of nation, speak aloud
To have her back return'd: thus to persist
In doing wrong extremates not wrong,
But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion
Is this, in way of truth: yet, nevertheless,
My sprightly brethren, I propend to you
In resolution to keep Helen still;
For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependance
Upon our joint and several dignities.

Tro. Why, there you touch'd the life of our design
Were it not glory that we more affected,
Than the performance of our heaving spleens,
I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood
Spent more in her defence. But, worthy Hector,
She is a theme of honour and renown;
A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds;
Whose present courage may beat down our foes.
And fame in time to come canonize us:
For, I presume, brave Hector would not lose
So rich advantage of a promis'd glory,
As smiles upon the forehead of this action,
For the wide world's revenue.

Hect. I am yours,
You valiant offspring of great Priamus.—
I have a roasting challenge sent amongst
The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks.
Will strike amazement to their drowsy spirits.
I was advertis'd, their great general slept,
Whilst emulation in the army crept:
This, I presume, will wake him.

[Exeunt]

Enter Thersites.

Thers. How now, Thersites! what! lost in the labyrinth of thy fury? Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus? he beats me, and I rail at him: O worthy satisfaction! would it were otherwise, that I could beat him, whilst he railed at me. 'Sfoot, I'll learn to conjure and raise devils, but I'll see some issue of my spirituous excursions. Then, there's Achilles,—a rare engineer. If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves.

Kneels.] O, thou great thunder-darter of Olympus! forget that thou art Jove the king of gods: and, Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy Caduceus, if ye take not that little, little, less-than-little wit from them that they have: which short-armed ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce, it will not in circumvention deliver a fly from a spider, without drawing their massy iron and cutting the web. After this, the vengeance on the whole camp! or, rather the Neapolitan bone-ache: for that, methinks, is the curse dependant on those that war for a pittance. [Rises.] I have said my prayers, and devil, envy, say Amen What, ho! my lord Achilles!

Enter Patroclus.

Ther. If I could have remembered a gilt counterfeit, then wouldst not have slipped out of my contempla.
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

ACT II.

Patr. What! art thou devout? wast thou in prayer?

Thers. Ay; the heavens hear me!

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Who's there?

Patr. Thersites, my lord.

Achil. Where, where?—Art thou come? Why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not served thyself in to my table so many meals? Come; what's Agamemnon?

Thers. Thy commander, Achilles. Then, tell me, Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patr. Thy lord, Thersites. Then, tell me, I pray thee, what's thyself?

Thers. Thy knower, Patroclus. Then tell me, Patroclus, what art thou?

Patr. Thou must tell, that knowest.

Achil. O! tell, tell.

Thers. I'll decline the whole question. Agamemnon commands Achilles; Achilles is my lord; I am Patroclus' knower; and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr. Art thou rascal?

Thers. Peace, fool! I have not done.

Achil. He is a privileged man.—Proceed, Thersites.

Thers. Agamemnon is a fool; Achilles is a fool; Thersites is a fool; and, as nofo said, Patroclus is a fool.

Achil. Derive this: come.

Thers. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool; and Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patr. Why am I a fool?

Thers. Make that demand of thy Creator.1—It suffices me, thou art. Look you, who comes here?

Enter Agamemnon, Ulysses, Nestor, Diomedes, and Ajax.

Achil. Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody.—Come in with me, Thersites.

[Exit.

Thers. Here is such patchery; such juggling, and such knavery! all the argument is a cuckold, and a whore; a good quarrel, to draw emulate factions, and bleed to death upon. Now, the dry serpico on the subject, and war and lechery confound all! [Exit.

Agam. Where is Achilles?

Patr. Within his tent; but ill-dispos'd, my lord.

Agam. Let it be known to him that we are here. We sent our messengers; and we lay by our appertaiments of visiting him:

Let him be told so, lest, perchance, he think
We dare not move the question of our place,
Or know not what we are.

Patr. I shall say so to him. [Exit.

Ulyss. We saw him at the opening of his tent:
He is not sick.

Ajax. Yes, lion-sick, sick of proud heart: you may call it melancholy, if you will favour the man; but, by my head, 'tis pride: but why? why? let him show us a cause.—A word, my lord.

Nest. What moves Ajax thus to hay at him?

Ulyss. Achilles hath inveigled his fool from him.

Nest. Who? Thersites?

Ulyss. He.

Nest. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument.

Ulyss. No, you see, he is his argument, that has his argument. Achilles.

Nest. All the better; their fraction is more our wish, than their faction: but it was a strong composition, a fool could disunite.

Ulyss. The amity that wisdom knits not, folly may easily unite. Here comes Patroclus.

Nest. No Achilles with him.

Re-enter Patroclus.

Ulyss. The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy: his legs are legs for necessity, not for flexure.

Patr. Achilles bids me say, he is much sorry, if any thing more than your sport and pleasure did move your greatness, and this noble state, To call upon him: he hopes, it is no other, But, for your health and your digestion sake, An after-dinner's breath.

Agam. Hear you. Patroclus. We are too well acquainted with these answers; But his evasion, wise'd thus swift with scorn, Cannot outfry our apprehensions. Much attribute he hath, and much the reason Why we ascribe it to him; yet all his virtues, Not virtuously on his own part beheld. Do in our eyes begin to lose their gloss; Yea, like fair fruit in an unwholesome dish, Are like to rot mutated. Go and tell him, We come to speak with him: and you shall not sin If you do say, we think him over-proud, And under-honest; in self-assumption greater, Than in the note of judgment; and worship that Here tend the savage strangeness he puts on, [himself Disguise the holy strength of their command, And underwrite in an observing kind His humorous predominance; yea, watch His petish lucus; his ebbs, his flows, as if The passage and whole carriage of this action Rode on his tide. Go, tell him this: and add, That, if he overhold his price so much, We'll none of him: but let him, like an engine Not portable, lie under this report— Bring action hither, this cannot go to war. A stirring dwarf we do allowance give Before a sleeping giant:—tell him so.

Patr. I shall; and bring his answer presently. [Exit

Agam. In second voice we'll not be satisfied, We come to speak with him.—Ulysses, enter you.

[Exit Ulysses.

Ajax. What is he more than another?

Agam. No more than what he thinks he is.

Ajax. Is he so much? Do you not think, he thinks himself a better man than I am?

Agam. No question.

Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought, and say he is?

Agam. No, noble Ajax; you are as strong, as valiant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable.

Ajax. Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what pride is.

Agam. Your mind is the clearer, Ajax, and your virtues the fairer. He that is proud, eats up himself; pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle; and whatever praises itself but in the deed, devours the deed in the praise.
Scene III.

Troilus and Cressida.

Agam. He will be the physician, that should be the patient.

Ajax. An all men were o' my mind,—

Ulyss. Wit would be out of fashion. [Aside.

Ajax. 'A should not bear it so,

Nest. 'A should eat swords first: shall, pride carry it'

Ajax. An 't would, you 'd carry half.

Ulyss. 'A would have ten shares. [Aside

Nest. I will knead him; I will make him supple.

Agam. He's not yet thorough warm; force him with praises.

Pour in, pour in; his ambition is dry. [Aside.

Nest. Our noble general, do not do so.

Ajax.  You must prepare to fight without Achilles.

Ulyss. Why, 't is this naming of him does him harm.

Here is a man—but 't is before his face;

I will be silent.

Nest. Wherefore should you so?

He is not emulous, as Achilles is.

Nest. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

Ajax. A whoreson dog, that shall palter thus with us!

Would, he were a Trojan!

Nest. What a vice

Were it in Ajax now—

Ulyss. If he were proud?

Dio. Or covetous of praise?

Ulyss. Ay, or surly borne?

Dio. Or strange, or self-afflicted?

Ulyss. Thank the heavens, lord, thou art of sweet composure:

Praise him that got thee, her that gave thee suck:

Fam'd be thy tutor, and thy parts of nature

Thrice-fam'd, beyond all erudition;

But he that disciplin'd thine arms to fight,

Let Mars divide eternity in twain,

And give him half; and for thy vigour,

Bull-bearing Milo his addition yield

To sinewy Ajax. I will not praise thy wisdom,

Which, like a bourn, a pale, a shore, confines

Thy spacious and dilated parts: here's Nestor,

Instructed by the antiquary times,

He must, he is, he cannot but be wise;

But pardon, father Nestor, were your days

As green as Ajax, and your brain so temper'd,

You should not have the eminence of him,

But be as Ajax.

Ajax. Shall I call you father?

Nest. Ay, my good son.

Dio. Be rude'd by him, lord Ajax

Ulyss. There is no tarrying here: the gart Achilles

Keeps thicket.—Please it our great general

To call together all his state of war:

Fresh kings are come to Troy; to-morrow,

We must with all our main of power stand fast:

And here's a lord,—come knights from east to west,

And cuff their flower, Ajax shall cope the best.

Agam. Go we to council: let Achilles sleep.

Light boats sail swift, though greater hulks draw deep.  [Exeunt.
ACT III.

SCENE I.—Troy. A Room in Priam's Palace.

Enter Pandarus and a Servant.

Pan. Friend you; pray you, a word. Do not you follow the young lord Paris?

Serv. Ay, sir, when he goes before me.

Pan. You depend upon him, I mean?

Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the lord.

Pan. You depend upon a noble gentleman: I must needs praise him.

Serv. The lord be praised!

Pan. You know me, do you not?

Serv. Faith, sir, superficially.

Pan. Friend, know me better. I am the lord Pandarus.

Serv. I hope, I shall know your honour better.

Pan. I do desire it.

Serv. You are in the state of grace. [Music within.

Pan. Grace! not so, friend; honour and lordship are my titles.—What music is this?

Serv. I do but partly know, sir; it is music in parts.

Pan. Know you the musicians?

Serv. Wholly, sir.

Pan. Who play they to?

Serv. To the hearers, sir.

Pan. At whose pleasure, friend?

Serv. At mine, sir; and theirs that love music.

Serv. Who shall I command, sir?

Pan. Friend, we understand not one another: I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning. At whose request do these men play?

Serv. That's to't, indeed, sir. Marry, sir, at the request of Paris, my lord, who is there in person; with him, the mortal Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love's invisible soul—

Pan. Who? my cousin Cressida?

Serv. No, sir; Helen: could you not find out that by her attributes?

Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the prince Troilus: I will make a complaisant assualt upon him, for my business seethes.

Serv. Sudden business: there's a stewed phrase; indeed.

Enter Paris and Helen, attended.

Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company! fair desires, in all fair measure, fairly guide them; especially to you, fair queen: fair thoughts be your fair pillow!

Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair words.

Pan. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen.—
Fair prince, here is good broken music.

Par. You have broke it, cousin; and, by my life, you shall make it whole again: you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance.—Nell, he is full of harmony.

Pan. Truly, lady, no.

Helen. O, sir!—

Pan. Rude, in sooth; in good sooth, very rude.

Par. Well said, my lord. Well, you say so in fits.

Pan. I have business to my lord, dear queen.—My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word?

Helen. Nay, this shall not hedge us out: we'll hear you sing, certainly.

Pan. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me
But, marry, thus, my lord—My dear lord, and most esteemed friend, your brother Troilus—

Helen. My lord Pandarus; honey-sweet lord,—

Pan. Go to, sweet queen, go to:—commends himsel, most affectionately to you.

Helen. You shall not box us out of our melody: if you do, our melancholy upon your head.

Pan. Sweet queen, sweet queen; that's a sweet queen,—'tis faith—

Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad is a sour offence.

Pan. Nay, that shall not serve your turn: that shall it not, in truth, la! Nay, I care not for such words:
no, no.—And, my lord, he desires you, that if the king
call for him at supper, you will make his excuse.

Helen. My lord Pandarus,—

Pan. What says my sweet queen,—my very very sweet queen?

Par. What exploit's in hand? where sups he to night?

Helen. Nay, but my lord,—

Pan. What says my sweet queen?—My cousin will tall out with you. You must not know where he sups.

Par. I'll lay my life, with my dispraise? Cressida.

Pan. No, no; no such matter, you are wide. Come, your dispraise is sick.

Par. Well, I'll make excuse. *

Pan. Ay, good my lord. Why should you say
Cressida? no, your poor dispraise's sick.

Par. I spy.

Pan. You spy! what do you spy?—Come, give me an instrument.—Now, sweet queen.

Helen. Why, this is kindly done.

Pan. My niece is horribly in love with a thing you have, sweet queen.

Helen. She shall have it, my lord, if it be not my lord Paris.

Pan. He! no, she'll none of him; they two are twain
Helen. Falling in, after falling out, may make them three.

Pan. Come, come, I'll hear no more of this. I'll sing you a song now.

Helen. Ay, ay, pr'ythee now. By my troth, sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead.

Pan. Ay, you may, you may.

Helen. Let thy song be love: this love will undo us
all. O, Cupid, Cupid, Cupid!—

Pan. Love? ay, that it shall! it faith.

Par. Ay, good now, love, love, nothing but love.

Pan. In good truth, it begins so:

Love, love, nothing but love, still more!—
For, oh! loves bow
Shoots back and doe:
That shaft confound,
Not that it wounds
But tickles still the sore.
These lovers cry—Oh! oh! they die!
Yet that which seems a wound to kill,
Doth turn oh! oh! to ha! ha! ha! ha!
So dying love lives still:
Oh! oh! a while, but ha! ha! ha!
Oh! oh! groans out for ha! ha! ha!—
Hey ho!

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Pan. What! blushing still? have you not done asking yet?

Cres. Well, uncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you.

Pan. I thank you for that: if my lord get a boy of you, you'll give him me. Be true to my lord; if he Finch, chide me for it.

Tro. You know now your hostages; your uncle's word, and my firm faith.

Pan. Nay, I'll give my word for her too. Our kindred, though they be long ere they are wooded, they are constant, being won: they are burs, I can tell you; they'll stick where they are thrown.

Cres. But how comes this to me now, and brings me heart.

Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day For many weary months.

Tro. Why was my Cressid, then, so hard to win?

Cres. Hard to seem won; but I was won, my lord, With the first glance that ever — Pardon me,— If I confess much, you will play the tyrant. I love you now; but not, till now, so much But I might master it. In faith, I lie: My thoughts were like unbridled children, grown Too headstrong for their mother: see, we fools! Why have I blabb'd? who shall be true to us, When we are so unsecret to ourselves?— But, though I lov'd you well, I woo'd you not; And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man, Or that we women had men's privilege Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue; For, in this rapture, I shall surely speak The thing I shall repent. See, see! your silence, Cunn'd in dummness, from my weaknes draws My very soul of counsel. Stop my mouth.

Tro. And shall, albeit sweet music issues hence.

[Stops kissing her.]

Pan. Pretty, i' faith.

Cres. My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me; 'T were not my purpose thus to beg a kiss, I am ashamed: — O heavens! what have I done? — For this time will I take my leave, my lord.

Tro. Your leave, sweet Cressid?

Pan. Leave! an you take leave till to-morrow morning.

Cres. Pray you, content you.

Tro. What offends you, lady?

Cres. Sir, mine own company.

Tro. You cannot shun Yourself.

Cres. Let me go and try. I have a kind self* that resides with you; But an unkind self, that itself will leave To be another's fool. I would be gone.— Where is my wit? I know not what I speak.

Tro. Well know they what they speak, that speak so wisely.

Cres. Perchance, my lord, I show more craft than love And fell so roundly to a large confusion, To angle for your thoughts: but you are wise, Or else you love not, for to be wise, and love. Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above.

Tro. O! that I thought it could be in a woman, (As, if it can, I will presume in you) To feed for eye her lamp and flame of love; To keep her constancy in plight and youth, Outliving beauty's outward, with a mind That doth renew swifter than blood decays: Or, that persuasion could but thus convince me, That my integrity and truth to you Might be arioint with the match and weight Of such a woman'd purity in love; How were I then uplifted! but, alas! I am as true as truth's simplicity; And simpler than the infancy of truth.

Cres. In that I'll war with you.

Tro. O, virtuous fight When right with right wars who shall be most right. True swains in love shall, in the world to come, Approve their truths by Troilus: when their rhymes, Full of protest, of oath, and bad compare, Want similes, truth tir'd with iteration,— As true as steel, as plantage to the moon, As sun to day, as turtle to her mate, As iron to adamant, as earth to the centre,— Yet, after all comparisons of truth, As truth's authentic author to be cited, As true as Troilus shall crown up the verse, And sanctify the numbers.

Cres. Prophet may you be! If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth, When time is old and hath forgot itself, When waterdrops have worn the stones of Troy, And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up, And mighty states characterless are grated To dusty nothing; yet let memory, From false to false among false maids in love, Uphold my falsehood. When they have said—as false As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth, As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf, Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son. Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood, As false as Cressid.

[To Troilus kisses her.]

Pan. Go to, a bargain made; seal it, seal it; I'll be the witness. —Here I hold your hand: here, my cousin's: if ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers-between be called to the world's end after my name, call them all—Pandars: let all constant men be Troiluses, all false women Cressids, and all brokers-between Pandars! say, amen.

Tro. Amen.

Cres. Amen.

Pan. Amen. Whereupon I will show you a chamber; which bed, because it shall not speak of your pretty encounters, press it to death: away! [Exit.* And Cupid grant all tongue-tied maidsens here, Bed, chamber, Pandar to provide this gear! [Exit.*

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp.

Enter Agamemnon, Ulysses, Diomedes, Nestor, Ajax, Menelaus, and Calchas.

Col. Now, princes, for the service I have done you, I'll advantage of the time prompts me, aloud
To call for recompense. Appeal 1 to your mind,
That, through the sight I bear in things above ,
I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession,
Incur'd a traitor's name; expos'd myself,
From certain and possess'd conveniences,
To doubtful fortunes; sequestering from me all
That time, acquaintance, custom, and condition,
Made tame and most familiar to my nature;
And here, to do you service, am become
As new into the world, strange, unacquainted :
I do beseech you, as in way of taste,
To give me now a little benefit,
Out of those many register'd in promise,
Which, you say, live to come in my behalf.

Col. You have a Trojan prisoner, call'd Antenor,
Yesterday took: Troy holds him very dear.
Oft have you, (often have you thanks therefore)
Desir'd my Cressid in right great exchange,
Whom Troy hath still denied: but this Antenor,
I know, is such a wrest 2 in their affairs,
That their negotiations all must slack,
Wanting his manage: and they will almost
Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam,
In change of him: let him be sent, great princes,
And he shall buy my daughter: and her presence
Shall quite strike off all service I have done
In most accepted pain.

Agam. Let Diomedes bear him,
And bring us Cressid hither: Calchas shall have
What he requests of us.—Good Diomed,
Furnish you fairly for this interchange:
Withal, bring word, if Hector will to-morrow
Be answer'd in his challenge. Ajax is ready.

Dio. This shall I undertake; and 'tis a burden
Which I am proud to bear.

[Exeunt Diomedes and Calchas.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus, before their Tent.

Ulyss. Achilles stands i' the entrance of his tent:
Please it our general to pass strangely by him,
As if he were forgot; and princes all,
Lay negligent and loose regard upon him.
I will come last: 't is like, he'll question me,
Why such unpleasive eyes are bent, why turn'd on him?
If so, I have discretion medicinal,
To use between your strangeness and his pride,
Which his own will shall have desire to drink.
It may do good: pride hath no other glass
To show itself, but pride; for supple knees
Feed arrogance, and are the proud man's fees.

Agam. We'll execute your purpose, and put on
A form of strangeness as we pass along:
So do each lord: and either greet him not,
Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him more
Than if not look'd on. I will lead the way.

Achil. What! comes the general to speak with me?
You know my mind: I'll fight no more 'gainst Troy.

Agam. What says Achilles? would he aught with us?

Nest. Would you, my lord, aught with the general?

Achil. No.

Nest. Nothing, my lord.

Achil. The better. [Exeunt Agamemnon and Nestor

Achil. Good day, good day.

Achil. What! does the cuckold scorn me?

Ajas. How now, Patroclus?

Achil. Good morrow, Ajax.

Ajax. Ha?

Achil. Good morrow.

Ajax. Ay, and good next day too. [Exit Ajax

Achil. What mean these fellows? Know they not Chilles?

Patr. They pass by strangely; they were us'd to bend,
To send their smiles before them to Achilles;
To come as humbly, as they us'd to creep
To holy altars.

Achil. What! am I poor of late?
'Tis certain, greatness, once fallen out with fortune,
Must fall out with men too: what the declin'd is,
He shall as soon read in the eyes of others,
As feel in his own fall: for men, like butterflies,
Show not their mealy wings but to the summer
And not a man, for being simply man,
Hath any honour; but honour for those honours
That are without him, as place, riches, favour,
Prizes of accident as oft as merit:
Which, when they fall, as being slippery standers,
The love that lean'd on them, as slippery too,
Doth one pluck down another, and together
Die in the fall. But 'tis not so with me:
Fortune and I are friends: I do enjoy
At ample point all that I did possess,
Save these men's looks: who do, methinks, find out
Something not worth in me such rich beholding
As they have often given. Here is Ulysses:
I'll interrupt his reading.—

How now, Ulysses!

Ulyss. Now, great Thetis' son!

Achil. What are you reading?

[Looking up from his book]

Achil. What are you reading?

Ulyss. A strange fellow here
Writes me, that man—how dearly ever parted?
How much in having, or without in.—
Cannot make boast to have that which he hath,
Nor feels not what he owes, but by reflection;
As when his virtues shining upon others
Heat them, and they retort that heat again
To the first giver.

Achil. This is not strange, Ulysses.

The beauty that is borne here, in the face,
The bearer knows not, but commends itself
To others' eyes: nor doth the eye itself,
That most pure spirit of sense, behold itself.
Not going from itself; but eye to eye oppos'd
Salutes each other with each other's form:
For speculation turns not to itself,
Till it hath travel'd, and is mirror'd there
Where it may see itself. This is not strange at all

Ulyss. I do not strain at the position,
It is familiar, but at the author's drift;
Who in his circumstance expressly proves,
That no man is the lord of any thing,
Though in and of him there be much consisting,
Till he communicate his parts to others:
Nor doth he of himself know them for aught
Till he behold them form'd in the applause
Where they are extended; which, like an arch, reverberates
The voice again; or like a gate of steel,

[Appeas in f. s. 2 To Jove: in f. e. A tuner of musical instruments.—Douce. Not in f. e. * Endowed. * This and the next lines are not in the folio. 7 married: in f. e.
Fronting the sun, receiveth and renders back
His figure and his heat. I was much wrapt in this;
And apprehended here immediately
The unknown Ajax.
Heavens, what a man is there! a very horse;
That has he knows not what. Nature! what things there are,
Most abject in regard, and dear in use:
What things, again, most dear in the esteem,
And poor in worth. Now, shall we see to-morrow,
An act that very chance doth throw upon him.
Ajax renowned. O heavens! what some men do,
While some men leave to do.
How some men creep in skittish fortune's hall,
While others play the idiots in her eyes!
How one man eats into another's pride,
While pride is feasting in his wantonness!
To see these Grecian lords!—why, even already
They clap the hubber Ajax on the shoulder,
As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast,
And great Troy shriving!
Achil. I do believe it; for they pass'd by me,
As mincers do by beggars, neither gave to me,
Good word, nor look. What! are my deeds forgot?
Ulyss. Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his back,
Wherein he puts aims for oblivion:
A great-sized monster of ingratiations;
Those scraps are good deeds past; which are devour'd
As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
As done. Perseverance, dear my lord,
Keeps honour bright: to have done, is to hang
Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mail
In monumental mockery. Take the instant way;
For honour travels in a strait so narrow,
Where one but goes abreast: keep then, the path
For emulation hath a thousand sons,
That one by one pursue; if you give way,
Or edge aside from the direct fortight,
Like to an enter'd tide, they all rush by,
And leave you windmost;
Or, like a gallant horse fallen in first rank,
Lie there for pavement to the abject rear,
O'er-run and trampled on. Then, what they do in present,
Though less than yours in past, must o'er top yours;
For time is like a fashionable bost,
That slightly shakes his parting guest by the hand,
And with his arms out-stretch'd, as he would fly,
Grasp in the corner: welcome ever smiles,
And farewell goes out sighing. Let not virtue seek Remuneration for the thing it was; for beauty, wit,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time.
One touch of nature makes the whole world kin,—
That all, with one consent, praise new-born gawds,
Though they are made and moulded of things past,
And give to dust, that is a little gilt,
More land than gilt o'er-dusted.
The present eye praises the present object:
Then, marvel not, thou great and complete man,
That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax,
Since things in motion quicklier catch the eye,
Than what not stirs. The cry went once on thee,
And still it might, and yet it may again,
If thou wou'dst, not entomb thyself alive,
And ease thy reputation in thy cot;
Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields of late,
Made emulous musions 'mongst the gods themselves,
And drave great Mars to faction.

Achil. Of this my priv'cy;
Of this my private;
I have strong reasons.
Ulyss. But 'gainst your privacy
The reasons are more potent and heroical.
'T is known, Achilles, that you are in love
With one of Paim's daughters.
Achil. Ha! known?
Ulyss. Is that a wonder?
The providence that 's in a watchful state
Knows almost every grain of Plutus' gold,
Finds bottom in th' uncomprehensive deeps,
Keeps pace' with thought, and almost, like the gods,
Does thoughts unveil in their dumb crudities.
There is a mystery (with whom relation Durst never meddle) in the soul of state,
Which hath an operation more divine
Than breath, or pen, can give expressure to.
All the commerce that you have had with Troy,
As perfectly is ours, as yours, my lord;
And better would it Achilles much
To throw down Hector, than Polyxena:
But it must grieve young Pyrrhus, now at home,
When fame shall in our islands sound her trump,
And all the Greekish girls shall tripping sing—
Great Hector's sister did Achilles win,
But our great Ajax bravely beat down him;)
Farewell, my lord; I as your lover speak:
The fool slides o'er the ice that you should break

Patr. To this effect, Achilles, have I mov'd you?
A woman impudent and mannish grown
Is not more loath'd, than an effeminate man
In time of action. I stand condemn'd for this:
They think, my little stomach to the war,
And you great love to me, restrains you thus.
Swift, raise yourself; and the weak wanton Cupid
Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,
And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane,
Be shook to air!
Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Hector?
Patr. Ay; and, perhaps, receive much honour by him.
Achil. I see, my reputation is at stake;
My fame is shrewdly ger'd.
Patr. O! then beware:
Those wounds heal ill that men do give themselves.
Omission to do what is necessary
Seals a commission to a blank of danger;
And danger, like an ague, subtly taints,
Even then, when we sit idly in the sun.
Achil. Go call Thersites hither, sweet Patroclus.
I'll send the fool to Ajax, and desire him
'T invite the Trojan lords, after the combat,
To see us here unarmed. I have a woman's longing,
An appetite that I am sick withal,
To see great Hector in his weeds of peace;
To talk with him, and to behold his visage,
Ever to my full of view.—A labour sav'd!

Enter Thersites.

Ther. A wonder!
Achil. What?
Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field asking for himself.
Achil. How so?
Ther. He must fight singly to-morrow with Hector
And is so prophetically proud of a heroic outgilding that he raves in saying nothing.
Achil. How can that be?
SCENE I. Troy. A Street.

Enter, at one side, Aeneas, and Servant, with a Torch; at the other, Paris, Deiphobus, Antenor, Diomedes, and others, with Torches.

Par. See, ho! who is that there?

Di. It is the lord Aeneas.

Aene. Is the prince there in person?

Par. I so good occasion to lie long.

Aeneas, nothing but heavenly business
Should rob my bed-mate of my company.

Di. That's my mind too. — Good morrow, lord Aeneas.

Par. A valiant Greek, Aeneas, take his hand,
Witness the process of your speech, wherein
You told how Diomed, a whole week by days,
Did haunt you in the field.

Aene. Health to you, valiant sir,
During all question of the gentle truce:
But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance,
As heart can think, or courage execute.

Di. The one and other Diomed embraces.

Aene. Our bloods are now in calm, and so long health;
But when contention and occasion meet,
By Jove, I'll play the hunter for thy life,
With all my fierce pursuit, and policy.

Aene. And thou shalt hunt a lion, that will fly
With his face backward. — In humane gentleness,
Welcome to Troy: now, by Achilles' life,
Welcome, indeed. By Venus' hand I swear,
No man alive can love, in such a sort.
The thing he means to kill, more excellently.

A'CT IV.

Diocles. We sympathize. — Jove, let Aeneas live,
If to my sword his fate be not the glory,
A thousand complete courses of the sun!
But, in mine emulous honour, let him die
With every joint a wound, and that to-morrow!

Ene. We know each other well.

Diocles. We do; and long to know each other worse.

Par. This is the most despicable gentle greeting,
The noblest hateful love, that e'er I heard of. —
What business, lord, so early?

Aene. I was sent for to the king; but why, I know not.

Par. His purpose meets you. 'Tis to bring this
To Calchas' house, and there to render him, [Greek
For the enfreed Antenor, the fair Cressida.
Let's have your company; or, if you please,
Haste there before us. I constantly do think,
(Or, rather, call my thought a certain knowledge)
My brother Troilus lodges there to-night:
Rouse him, and give him note of our approach,
With the whole quality wherefore: I fear,
We shall be much unwelcome.

Aene. That I assure you:
Troilus had rather Troy were borne to Greece,
Than Cressid born of Troy.

Par. There is no help;

The bitter disposition of the time
Will have it so. On, lord; we'll follow you.

Aene. Good morrow, all.

Par. And tell me, noble Diomed: 'faith, tell me true
Even in the soul of sound, good-fellowship,
Who, in your thoughts, merits fair Helen best;
Myself, or Menelaus?
Do. Both alike:
He merits well to have her, that doth seek her
Not making any scruple of her solitude,
With such a hell of pain, and world of charge;
And you as well to keep her, that defend her
Not palating the taste of her dishonour,
With such a costly loss of wealth and friends.
He, like a poling cuckold, would drink up
The lees and dregs of a flat tamed piece;
You, like a lecher, out of whorish eyes
Are pleased to brood out your inheritors;
Both merits poiss’d, each weighs no less nor more;
But he as he, each heavier for a whore.
Par. You are too bitter to your countrywoman.
Do. She’s bitter to her country. Hear me, Paris:—
For every false drop in her bawdy veins
A Greek’s life hath sunk; for every scruple
Of her contaminated carrion weight,
A Trojan hath been slain. Since she could speak,
She hath not given so many good words breath,
As for her Greeks and Trojans suffer’d death.
Par. Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do,
Dispance the thing that you desire to buy;
But we in silence hold this virtue well.—
We’ll not commend what we intend not sell.
Here lies our way. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Court before the House of Pandarus.

Enter Trojan and Cressida.
Tro. Dear, trouble not yourself: the morn is cold.
Cres. Then, sweet my lord, I’ll call mine uncle down;
He shall unbolt the gates.
Tro. Trouble him not;
To bed, to bed: sleep kill these pretty eyes,
And give as soft attachment to thy senses,
As infants’ empty of all thought!
Cres. Good morrow, then.
Tro. Pr’ythee now, to bed.
Cres. Are you awear of me?
Tro. O Cressida! but that the busy day,
Waked by the lark, hath rous’d the rambler crows,
And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer,
I would not from thee.
Cres. Night hath been too brief.
Tro. Beshrew the witch! with venomous wights she stays,
As tedious as hell; but flies the graces of love,
With wings more momentary-swift than thought.
You will catch cold, and curse me.
Cres. Pr’ythee, tarry.
You men will never tarry,
O foolish Cressida!—I might have still held off, nd, then, you would have tarried. Hark! there’s one up.
Pan. [Within.] What! are all the doors open here?
Tro. It is your uncle.

Enter Pandarus.
Cres. A pestilence on him! now will he be mocking:
I shall have such a life.—
Pan. How now, how now! how go maidenheads?—
Here, you maid! where’s my cousin Cressida?
Cres. God help yourself, you naughty mocking uncle!
You bring me to do.—and then you dote too.
Pan. To do what? to do what?—let her say what:—
what have I brought you to do?
Cres. Come, come: beshrew your heart! you’ll ne’er be good,
Nor suffer others.

thy father, and be gone from Troilus: 't will be his feast; 't will be his bane; he cannot hear it.

Cres. O, you immortal gods!—I will not go.
Pan. Thou must.

Cres. I will not, uncle: I have forgot my father;
I know no touch of consanguinity;
No kin, no love, no blood, no soul so near me,
As the sweet Troilus.—O, you gods divine,
Make Cressid's name the very crown of falsehood,
If ever she leave Troilus! Time, force, and death,
Do to this body what extremes you can,
But the strong base and building of my life
Is as the very centre of the earth.

Drawing all things to it.—I'll go in, and weep.—

Pan. Do, do.

Cres. Tear my bright hair, and scratch my praised cheeks;
Crack my clear voice with sobs, and break my heart.
With sounding Troilus. I will not go from Troy.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Before Pandarus' House.
Enter Paris, Troilus, Æneas, Deiphobus, Antenor, and Diomedes.

Par. It is great morning, and the hour prefix'd
Of her delivery to this valiant Greek
Comes fast upon.—Good my brother Troilus,
Tell you the lady what she is to do,
And haste her to the purpose.

Tro. Walk into her house,
I'll bring her to the Grecian presently;
And to his hand when I deliver her,
Think it an altar, and thy brother Troilus
A priest, there offering to it his own heart.

Par. I know what 'tis to love;
And would, as I shall pity, I could help!—
Please you, walk in, my lords.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Room in Pandarus'
House.
Enter Pandarus and Cressida.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.

Cres. Why tell you me of moderation?
The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste,
And vehement in a sense as strong
As that which causeth it: how can I moderate it?
If I could temperize with my affection,
Or brew it to a weak and colder palate,
The like allayment could I give my grief:
My love admits no qualifying dross,
No more my grief, in such a precious loss.

Enter Troilus.

Pan. Here, here, here he comes.—A sweet duck!

Pan. What a pair of spectacles is here! Let me embrace too. O heart,—as the goodly saying is,— O heart, O heart, O heavy heart!

Whither sli g st thou without breaking?
where he answers again,

Because thou canst not ease thy smart,
By silence nor by speaking

There was never a truer rhyme. Let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a verse:
we see it, we see it.—How now, lamb's!

Tro. Cressid, I love thee in so strained a purity,
That the bless'd gods—are angry with my fancy,
More bright in zeal than the devotion which Cold lips blow to their deities,—take thee from these.

Cres. Have the gods envy?

Pan. Ay, ay, ay, ay: 'tis too plain a case.

Cres. And is it true, that I must go from Troy?

Tro. A hateful truth.

Cres. What! and from Troilus too?

Tro. From Troy, and Troilus.

Cres. Is it possible?

Tro. And suddenly; where injury of chance
Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly by
All time of pause, rudely beguiles our lips
Of all rejudgement, forcibly prevents
Our lock'd embrasures, strangulates our dear vows
Even in the birth of our own labouring breath.
We two, that with so many thousand sighs
Did buy each other, must poorly sell ourselves
With the rude brevity and discharge of one.
Injurious time, now, with a robber's haste,
Crams his rich thievry up, he knows not how
As many farewells as he stars in heaven.

With distinct breath and consign'd kisses to them,
He fumbles up into one loose adieu:—
And scants us with a single fanfash'd kiss,
Distasting with the salt of broken tears.

Pan. [Within.] My lord! is the lady ready?

Tro. Hark! you are call'd: some say, the Genius is Cres. Come! to him that instantly must die.—
Bid them have patience; she shall come anon.

Pan. Where are my tears? rain, to lay this wind or my heart will be blown up by the root!

[Exit Pand.

Cres. I must then to the Grecians?

Tro. No remedy.

Cres. A woeful Cressid 'mongst the merry Greeks!
When shall we see again?

Tro. Hear me, my love. Be thou but true of heart—
Cres. I true? how now! what wicked deem is this?

Tro. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly,
For it is parting from us.

I speak not, "be thou true," as fearing thee;
For I will throw my glove to death himself,
That there's no maculation in thy heart;
But, "be thou true," say I, to fashion in My sequent protestation. Be thou true,
And I will see thee.

Cres. O! you shall be expos'd, my lord, to dangers
As infinite as imminent: but I'll be true.

Tro. And I'll go friend with danger. Wear the sleeve.

Cres. And you this glove. When shall I see you?
Tro. I will corrupt the Grecian sentinels,
To give thee nightly visitation.

But yet, be true.

Cres. O heavens!—be true, again?

Tro. Hear why I speak it, love,
The Grecian youths are full of quality;
Their loving well compos'd with gift of nature,
Flowing and swelling o'er with arts and exercise;
How novelties may move, and parts with person,
Alas! a kind of goodly jealousy
(Which, I beseech you, call a virtuous sin)

Makes me afraid.

Cres. O heavens! you love me not.

Tro. Die I a villain, then!

In this I do not call your faith in question,
So mainly as my merit: I cannot sing,
Nor feel the high lavish', nor sweeten talk.
Nor play at subtle games;—fair virtues all,
To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant.

But I can tell, that in each grace of these:

1 And no less: in folio. The word is found in Fuller and Latimer. 2 cres: in folio. 3 friendship: in f. e. 4 strange: in folio.
There lurks a still and dumb-discourseful devil,
That tempers most cunningly. But be not tempted.
Cres. Do you think, I will?
Tro. No;
But something may be done, that we will not:
And sometimes we are devils to ourselves,
When we will tempt the frailty of our powers,
Presuming on their chafeful1 potency.

Æsc. [Within.] Nay, good my lord,—
Tro. Come, kiss; and let us part.
Par. [Within.] Brother Troilus!
Tro. Good brother, come you hither;
And bring Æneas, and the Grecian, with you.
Cres. My lord, will you be true?
Tro. Who, I? alas, it is my vice, my fault:
While others fish with craft for great opinion,
I with great truth catch more simplicity:
Whilst some with cunning gild their copper crowns,
With truth and plainness I do wear mine bare.
Fear not my truth: the moral of my wit
Is plain, and true,—there's all the reach of it.

Enter Æneas, Paris, Antenor, Diomed, and Diomedes.

Welcome, sir Diomed. Here is the lady,
Which for Antenor we deliver you:
At the port, lord, I'll give her to thy hand,
And by the way possess thee what she is.
Entreat her fair; and, by my soul, fair Greek,
If e'er thou stand at mercy of my sword,
Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe,
As Prian is in Hell.

Dio. Fair lady Cressid,
So please you, save the thanks this prince expects:
The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek,
Pleads your fair usage; and to Diomed
You shall be mistress, and command him wholly.

Tro. Grecian, thou dost not use me courteously,
To shame the zeal of my petition to thee,
In praising her. I tell thee, lord of Greece,
She is as far high-soaring e'er thy praises,
As thou unworthy to be call'd her servant.
I charge thee, use her well, even for my charge;
For, by the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost not,
Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard,
I'll out thy throat.

Dio. O! be not mov'd, prince Troilus.
Let me be privil'd by my place, and message,
To be a speaker free: when I am hence,
I'll answer to thy last; and know you, lord,
I'll nothing do on charge. To her own worth
She shall be priz'd; but that you say,—be't so,
I'll speak it in my spirit and honour.—no.

Tro. Come to the port.—I'll tell thee. Diomed,
This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy head.—
Lady, give me your hand; and, as we walk,
"O our own selves bend we our needful task.
[Exeunt Tro., Cres. and Diom. Trumpet sounded.
Par. Hark! Hector's trumpet.

Æne. How have we spent this morning!
The prince must think me tardy and remiss,
That swore to ride before him to the field.
him.
Par. 'Tis Troilus' fault. Come, come, to field with
Dr. Let us make ready straight.
Æne. Yea, with a bridgroom's fresh alacrity,
Let us address to tend on Hector's heels.
The glory of our Troy doth this day lie
On his fair worth, and single chivalry.

[Exeunt.

Enter Ajax, armed; Agamemnon, Achilles, Patroclus, Menelaus, Ulysses, Nestor, and others.

Agam. Here art thou in appointment fresh and fair
Anticipating time. With startling courage
Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy,
Thou dreadful Ajax; that the appalled air
May pierce the head of the great combattant,
And hate him hither.
Ajax. Thou, trumpet, there's my purse
Now crack thy lungs, and split thy brazen pipe.
Blow, villain, till thy spreded bias cheek
Out-swell the cull of puff'd Aquilon.
Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout blood;
Thou blow'st for Hector.

[Trumpet sounds
Ulyss. No trumpet answers.
Agam. Is not yond Diomed with Calchas' daughter?
Ulyss. 'T is he, I kcan the manner of his gait;
He rises on the toe: that spirit of his
In aspiration lifts him from the earth.

Enter Diomed, with Cressida.

Agam. Is this the lady Cressid?
Dio. Even she.
Agam. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet lady.
[ kissing her.
Nest. Our general doth salute you with a kiss.
Ulyss. Yet is the kindness but particular;
'T were better she were kiss'd in general.
Nest. And very courtely counsel: I'll begin.—
[ kissing her.

So much for Nestor.

Achil. I'll take that winter from your lips, fair lady.
Achilles bids you welcome.

Men. I had good argument for kissing once.
Patr. But that's no argument for kissing now.
[ Putting him back.

For thus peep'd Paris in his hardheart.
And parted thus you and your argument.8 [Kissing her
Ulyss. O! deadly gall, and theme of all our scorns
For which we lose our heads, to gild his horns.

Patr. The first was Menelaus' kiss;—this, mine:
Patroclus kisses you.
[ kissing her again.10
Men. O! this is trim.
Men. I'll have my kiss, sir.—Lady, by your leave.

[Exeunt.

Cres. In kissing do you render or receive?
Patr. Both take and give.
Cres. I'll make my match to live.
The kiss you take is better than you give;
Therefore no kiss.

Men. I'll give you boot; I'll give you three for one.

Cres. You're an odd man: give even, or give none.
Men. An odd man, lady? every man is odd.

Cres. No, Paris is not; for, you know, 'tis true,
That you are odd, and he is even with you.

Men. You fillip me o' the head.

Cres. No, I'll be sworn Ulyss. It were no match, your nail against his horn—
May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you?
Cres. You may.

Ulyss. I do desire it.

Cres. Why, beg then.

Ulyss. Why then, for Venus' sake, give me a kiss,
When Helen is a maid again, and his.
Cres. I am your debtor; claim it when 'tis due.

Ulyss. Never's my day, and then a kiss of you.
Dio. Lady, a word:—I'll bring you to your father.

Nest. A woman of quick sense.

Ulyss. Fie, fie upon her! There's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip, Nay, her foot speaks; her wanton spirits look out At every joint and motive of her body. O! these encounterers, so glib of tongue. That give occasion¹ welcome ere it comes, And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts To every tickling² reader, set them down For slutish spoils of opportunity,

And daughters of the game. All. The 'Trojans' trumpet. Agam. Yonder comes the troop. Enter Hector, armed; Æneas, Troilus, and other Trojans, with Attendants. Æne. Hail, all you state of Greece! What shall be done To him that victory commands? Or do you purpose, A victor shall be known? will you, the knights Shall to the edge of all extremity Pursue each other: or shall be divided By any voice or order of the field? Hector made ask: Agam. Which way would Hector have it? Æne. He cares not: he'll obey conditions. Achil. 'T is done like Hector; but securely done, A little prudily, and great deal misprizing The knight oppos'd. Æne. If not Achilles, sir, What is your name? Achil. If not Achilles, nothing. Æne. Therefore Achilles; but, whate'er, know this: In the extremity of great and little, Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector; The one almost as infinite as all, The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well, And that which looks like pride is courtesy. This Ajax is half-made of Hector's blood: In love whereof half Hector stays at home; Half heart, half hand, half Hector comes to seek This blended knight, half Trojan, and half Greek. Achil. A maiden battle, then?—O! I perceive you. Re-enter Diomed. Agam. Here is sir Diomed.—Go, gentle knight, Stand by our Ajax: as you and lord Æneas Consent upon the order of their fight, So he it: either to the utterance; Or else a breach: the combatants being kin, Half stints their strife before their strokes begin.

[Ajax and Hector enter the lists. Ulyss. They are oppos'd already.

Agam. What Trojan is that same that looks so heavy? Ulyss. The youngest son of Priam, a true knight; Not yet mature, yet matchless; firm of word, Speaking in deeds, and deadless in his tongue; Not soon provok'd, nor being provok'd soon calmd: His heart and hand both open, and both free: For what he has, he gives, what thinks, he shows; Yet gives he not till judgment guide his bounty, Nor dignifies an impure* thought with breath. Manly as Hector, but more dangerous; For Hector, in his blaze of wrath, subscribes To tender objects; but he, in heat of action, is more vindicative than jealous love. They call him Troilus; and on him erect A second hope, as fairly built as Hector. Thus says Æneas; one that knows the youth, Even to his inches, and with private leisure

Did in great Ilion thus translate him to me.

[Alarum. Hector and Ajax fight.

Agam. They are in action.

Nest. Now, Ajax, hold thine own. Tvo. Hector; thou sleep'st

Hect. Why then, will I no more.—Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son. A cousin-german to great Priam's seed; The obligation of our blood forbids A gory emulation 'twixt us twain. Were thy communion Greek and Trojan so. That thou couldst say—"This hand is Grecian all. And this is Trojan; the sinews of this leg All Greek and, this all Troy; my mother's blood Runs on the dexter cheek, and this sinister. Bondaising in my father's"? by Jove multipotent, Thou shouldn't hear from me a Greekish member Wherein my sword had not impressure made Of our rank feud. But the just gods gainsay, That any drop thou borrow'dst from thy mother. My sacred aunt, should by my mortal sword Be drain'd. Let me embrace thee, Ajax.— By him that thunder's, thou hast lusty arms. Hector would have them fall upon him thus: Cousin, all honour to thee! [They embrace.

Ajax. I thank thee, Hector. Thou art too gentle, and too free a man. I came to kill thee, cousin, and bear hence A great addition earned in thy death.

Hect. Not Neoptolemus so mirable On whose bright crest Fame with her loud'st Oyez Cries, 'This is he!'' could promise to himself A thought of added honour torn from Hector. Æne. There is expectation here from both the sides, What farther you will do.

Hect. We'll answer it; The issue is embracement.—Ajax, farewell. Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success, As said I have the chance, I would desire My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.

Dio. 'T is Agamemnon's wish: and great Achilles Doth long to see unarmed the valiant Hector. Hect. Æneas, call my brother Troilus to me: And signify this loving interview To the expecters of our Trojan part: Desire them home.—Give me thy hand, my cousin: I will go eat with thee, and see your knights.

Ajax. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us here. Hect. The worthiest of them tell me, name by name. But for Achilles, mine own searching eyes Shall find him by his large and portly size. Agam. Worthy of arms! as welcome as to one That would be rid of such an enemy. But that's no welcome; understand more clear. What's past, and what's to come, is strew'd with husks And formless ruin of oblivion; But in this extant moment, faith and troth, Strain'd purely from all hollow bias-drawling, Bids thee, with most divine integrity, From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome. Hect. I thank thee, most imperious Agamemnon. Agam. My well-fam'd lord of Troy, no less to you. [To Troilus.
Men. Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting:
You brace of warlike brothers, welcome hither.
Hect. Whom must we answer?
Axem. The noble Menelaus.
Hect. O! you, my lord? by Mars his gauntlet, thanks.
Mock not, that I affect th' untraded oath:
Your quondam wife swears still by Venus' glove;
She's well, but bade me not commend her to you.
Men. Name her not now, sir; she's a deadly theme.
Hect. O! pardon; I offend.
Nest. I have, thou gallant Trojan, seen thee oft,
Labouring for destiny, make cruel way
Through ranks of Grecian youth: and I have seen thee,
As hot as Persians, spur thy Phrygian steed,
Despairing many aottle and subduents,
When thou hast hung thy advanced sword i' th' air,
Not letting it decline on the declin'd;
That I have said unto my standers-by,
"Lo! Jupiter is yonder, dealing life,"
And I have seen thee peace, and take thy breath,
When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'd thee in,
Like an Olympian wrestling: this have I seen;
But this thy countenance, still lock'd in steel,
I never saw till now. I knew thy grandsire,
And once fought with him: he was a soldier good;
But, by great Mars the captain of us all,
Never like thee. Let an old man embrace thee;
And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents.
Axem. 'Tis the old Nestor.
Hect. Let me embrace thee, good old chronicle,
That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with time.
Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee.
Nest. I would my arms could match thee in contention,
As they contend with thee in courtesy.
Hect. I would they could.
Nest. Ha! by this white beard, I'd fight with thee to-morrow.
Well, welcome, welcome! I have seen the time.
Ulys. I wonder now how yonder city stands,
When we have here her base and pillar by us,
Hect. I know your favour, lord Ulysses, well.
Ah, sir! there's many a Greek and Trojan dead,
Since first I saw yourself and Diomed
In Ilion, on your Grecian embassy.
Ulys. Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue.
My prophecy is but half his journey yet:
For yonder walls, that partly front your town,
Yond' towers, whose wonton tops do buss the clouds,
Must kiss their own feet.
Hect. I must not believe you.
There they stand yet; and modestly I think,
The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
A drop of Grecian blood: the end crowns all;
And that old common arbitrator, Time.
Will one day end it.
Ulys. So to him we leave it.
Most gentle, and most valiant Hector, welcome.
After the general, I beseech you next
To feast with me, and see me at my tent.
Achil. I shall forestall thee, lord Ulysses, then.—
Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee:
I have with exact view perus'd thee, Hector,
And quoted joint by joint.
Hect. Is this Achilles?
Achil. I am Achilles.
Hect. Stand fair, I pray thee: let me look on thee
And toast thee wearning: in folio. * Noted the: in folio. 4 A stib is an awill. 5 Petty. 6 you: in folio.

Achil. Behold thy fill.
Hect. Nay, I have done already.
Achil. Thou art too brief: I will the second time.
As I would buy thee, view thee limb by limb.
Hect. O! like a book of sport thou 'tread me o'er;
But there's more in me than thou understand'st.
Why dost thou so oppress me with thine eye?
Achil. Tell me, you heavens, in which part of thy body
Shall I destroy him, whether there, the a, or there?
That I may give the local wound a name,
And make distinct the very breach, whereout
Hector's great spirit flew. Answer me, heavens!
Hect. It would discredit the bless'd gods, proud man,
To answer such a question. Stand again;
Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly,
As to predominate in ample conjecture,
Where thou wilt hit me dead?
Achil. I tell thee, yea.
Hect. Wert thou an oracle to tell me so,
I'd not believe thee. Henceforth guard thee well,
For I'll not kill thee there, nor there, nor there;
But, by the forge that stithed Mars his helm,
I'll kill thee everywhere, yea, o'er and o'er.—
You wisest Greeks, pardon me this brag.
His insolence draws folly from my lips:
But I'll endeavour deeds to match these words,
Or may I never—
Ajax. Do not chafe thee, cousin:—
And you, Achilles, let these threats alone,
Till accident, or purpose, bring you to't;
You may have every day enough of Hector,
If you have stomach. The general state, I fear,
Can scarce entreat you to be odd with him.
Hect. I pray you, let us see you in the field:
We have had petting wars, since you refuse'd
The Grecians' cause.
Achil. Dost thou entreat me, Hector?
To-morrow, do I meet thee, fell as death;
To-night, all friends.
Hect. Thy hand upon that match.
Agam. First, all you peers of Greece, go to my tent,
There in the cool of night we'll adjudge,
As Hector's leisure and your bounties shall Concur together, severally entreat him.—
Beat loud the tabourines, let the trumpets blow,
That this great soldier may his welcome know.
[Except all but TROILUS and ULYSSES]
Tro. My lord Ulysses, tell me, I beseech you,
In what place of the field doth Calchas keep?
Ulys. At Menelaus' tent, most princely Troilus:
There Diomed doth feast with him to-night;
Who neither looks upon the heaven, nor earth,
But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view
On the fair Cressida.
Tro. Shall I, sweet lord, be bound to you so much,
After we part from Agamemnon's tent,
To bring me thither?
Ulys. You shall command me, sir.
As gentle tell me, of what honour was
This Cressida in Troy? Had she no lover there?
That wails her absence?
Tro. O, sir! so such as boasting show their scars
A mock is due. Will you walk on, my lord?
She was belov'd; she lov'd; she is, and doth:
But still sweet love is food for fortune's tooth [Except]
ACT V.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus.

Achil. I'll heat his blood with Grecian wine to-night, Which with my semicait I'll cool to-morrow. Patroclus, let us feast him to the height.

Pair. Here comes Thersites.

Enter Thersites.

Achil. From whence, fragment? Ther. Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy. Pair. Who keeps the tent now? Ther. The surgeon's box: or the patient's wound. Pair. Well said, adversity! and what need these tricks? Ther. Pr'ythee be silent, boy; I profit not by thy talk: thou art thought to be Achilles' male varlet.

Pair. Male varlet, thou rogue! what's that.

Ther. Why, his masculine whore. Now the rotten diseases of the south, the guts-griping, raptures, cartharks, loads o' gravel i' the back, lethargies, cold pailsies, raw eyes, dirt-rotten livers, wheezing lungs, bladders full of unposthumous, septic, lime-kils i' the palm, incurable bone-ache, and the rivelled fee-simple of the tetter, take and take again such preposterous discolourers!

Pair. Why, thou damnable box of envy, thou, what meanest thou to curse thus?

Ther. Do I curse thee?

Pair. Why no, you ruinous but, you whoreson indistinguishable cur, no.

Ther. No? why art thou then exasperate, thou idle immanent skellion of slave' silk, thou green saracen tag for a sore eye, thou tassel of a prodigal's purse, thou? Ah! how the poor world is pestered with such water-flies, diminutives of nature!

Pair. Out, gall!

Ther. Finch egg!

Achil. My! this Patroclus, I am thwarted quite From my great purpose in to-morrow's battle. Here is a letter from queen Hecuba;

A token from her daughter, my fair love;
Both taxing me, and gaging me to keep
An oath that I have sworn. I will not break it:
Fall Greeks, fall fame, honour, or go, or stay,
My major vow lies here; this I'll obey.—
Come, come, Thersites, help to trim my tent;
This night in banqueting must all be spent.—
Away, Patroclus. [Exit Achilles and Patroclus.

Ther. With too much blood, and too little brain, these two may run mad: but if with too much brain, and too little blood, they do, I'll be a cummer of madmen. Here's Agamemnon,—an honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails; but he has not so much brain as ear-wax: and the godly transformation of Jupiter there, his brother, the bull,—the primitive statue, and oblique memorial of eneckolds, a thifty shoeing-horn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg,—to what form, but that he is, should wit larded with malice, and malice forced with wit, turn him to? To an ass, were nothing: he is both ass and ox: to an ox were nothing: he is both ox and ass. To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a fitchew, a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a her-
Tro. Yea, so familiar!
Ulyss. She will sing any man at first sight.
Ther. And any man may find her key; 1 if he can take her elf, 2 she's noted.
 Dio. Will you remember?
 Dio. Nay, but do then; and let your mind be coupled with your words.
Tro. What should she remember?
Ulyss. List.
Cres. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more to folly.
Ther. Requerry?
 Dio. Nay, then,—
Cres. I'll tell you what—
 Dio. Pho! pho! come tell, a pin; you are forsworn—
Cres. In faith, I cannot. What would you have me do?
Ther. A juggling trick,—to be secretly open.
 Dio. What did you swear you would bestow on me?
Cres. I pr'ythee, do not hold me to mine oath;
Bid me do any thing but that, sweet Greek.
 Dio. Good night.
Tro. Hold, patience! 3
Ulyss. How now, Trojan?
Cres. Diomed!—
 Dio. No, no; good night: I'll be your fool no more.
Tro. Behold, I pray you!
Ulyss. Nay, my good lord, go off:
You know to great distraction; come, my lord.
Tro. I pr'ythee, stay.
Ulyss. You have not patience; come,
Tro. I pray you, stay. By hell, and all hell's terminits,
I will not speak a word.
 Dio. And so, good night.
Cres. Nay, but you part in anger.
Tro. Doth that grieve thee?
 Dio. I will be patient.
Cres. Guardian!—why, Greek!
 Dio. Pho, pho! adieu; you palter.
Cres. In faith, I do not: come hither once again.
Ulyss. You shake, my lord, at something: will you go?
You will break out.
Ulyss. She strikes his cheek!
Come, come.
Tro. Nay, stay: by Jove, I will not speak a word.
There is between my will and all offences
A guard of patience.—Stay a little while.
Ther. How the devil luxury, with his fat rump and potatoe finger, tickles these together! Fry, lechery, fry!
 Dio. But will you then?
Cres. In faith, I will, lord? never trust me else.
Ulyss. Give me some token for the surety of it.
Cres. I'll fetch you one. [Exit.
Ulyss. You have sworn patience.
 Tro. Fear me not, sweet lord;
I will not be myself, nor have cognition
Of what I feel: I am all patience.
Re-enter Cresida.
Ther. Now the pledge! now, now, now!
SCENE III.
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

An esperance so obstinately strong,
That doth invert th' attrest of eyes and ears;
As if those organs had deceptive functions,
Created only to calumniate.

Was Cressid here?

Ulyss.  I cannot conjure, Trojan.
Tro. She was not, sure.

Ulyss. Most sure, she was.
Tro. Why, my negation hath no taste of madness.
Ulyss. Nor mine, my lord; Cressid was here but now.
Tro. Let it not be believed for womanhood!
Think no more: do not give advantage
To stubborn critics—opt, without a theme.
For depravation—to square the general sex
By Cressid's rule: rather think this not Cressid.

Ulyss. What hath she done, prince, that can soil our mothers?

Tro. Nothing at all, unless that this were she.
Ther. Will he swagger himself out on his own eyes?

Tro. This she? no; this is Diomed's Cressida.
If beauty have a soul, this is not she:
If souls guide vows, if vows be sanctimon'y,
If sanctimon'y be the gods' delight,
If there be rule in unity itself,
This is not she. O madness of discourse,
That cause sets up with and against itself!
Bi-fold authority! where reason can revolt
Without perdition, and loss assume all reason
Without revolt: this is, and is not, Cressid.
Within my soul there doth conduce a fight
Of this strange nature, that a thing inseparable
Divides more widely than the sky and earth;
And yet the spacious breadth of this division
Admits no office for a point, as subtle
As Arscine's broken woof, to enter.

Instance? O instance! strong as Pluto's gates,
Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven:
Instance? O instance! strong as heaven itself;
The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd, and loos'd;
And with another knot, five-finger-tied,
The fractions of her faith, orts of her love,
The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasy relics
Of her o'er-eaten faith, are given to Diomed.

Ulyss. May worthy, Troilus be half attach'd
With that which here his passion doth express?

Tro. Ay, Greek; and that shall be divulged well
In characters as red as Mars his heart
Inflamm'd with Venus: never did young man fancy
With so eternal and so fix'd a soul.
Hark, Greek:—as much as I do Cressid love,
So much by weight hate I her Diomed.
That sleeve is mine, that he'll bear on his helm:
Were it a casque composed by Vulcan's skill,
My sword should bite it. Not the dreadful spout,
Which shipsmen do the hurricane call,
Constrin'd in mass by the almighty sun,
Shall dizzy with more emolour Neptune's ear
In his descent, than shall my pointed sword

Falling on Diomed.

Ther. He'll tickle it for his concupis.

Tro. O Cressid! O false Cressid! false, false, false!
Let all untruths stand by thy stained name,
And they'll seem glorious.

Ulyss. Think!

Your passion draws ears hither.

Enter Æneas.

Æne. I have been seeking you this hour, my lord.

Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy:
Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you home.

Tro. Have with you, prince.—My courteous lord, adieu.

Farewell, revolted fair!—and, Diomed,
Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head!

Ulyss. I'll bring you to the gates.

Tro. Accept distracted thanks.

[Exeunt TROILUS, ÆNEAS, AND ULYSSES.

Ther. [Coming forward.] Would, I could meet that rogue Diomed. I would crouch like a raven; I would hold, I would bode. Patroclus will give me anything for the intelligence of this where: the parrot will do more for an almond, than he for a commodious drab.
Lechery, lechery; still, wars and lechery: nothing else holds fashion. A burning devil take them!

[Exit.

Enter Hector and Andromache.

And. When was my lord so much ungently temper'd,
To stop his ears against admonishment?
Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day.

Hect. You train me to offend you; get you in:
By all! the everlasting gods, I'll go.
And. My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to-day.

Hect. No more, I say.

Enter Cassandra.

Cas. Where is my brother Hector.

And. Here, sister: arm'd, and bloody in intent.
Consort with me in loud and dear petition:
Pursue me him on knees; for I have dream'd
Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night
Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaughter.

Cas. O! it is true.

Hect. Ho! bid my trumpet sound.

Cas. No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet brother
Hect. Begone, I say: the gods have heard me swear
Cas. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish vows:
They are polluted offerings, more abhor'd
Than spotted livers in the sacrifice.

And. O! be persuaded: do not count it holy
To hurt by being just: it is as lawful
For us to give much count to violent thefts,
And rob in the behalf of charity.
Cas. It is the purpose that makes strong the vow;
But vows to every purpose must not hold.
Unarm, sweet Hector.

Hect. Hold you still, I say;
Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate:
Life every man holds dear; but the dear man
Holds honour far more precious than life.—

Enter Troilus.

How now, young man! mean'st thou to fight to-day?

And. Cassandra, call my father to persuade.

Hect. No, faith, young Troilus; doff thy harness youth;
I am to-day in the vein of chivalry.
Let grow thy sinews till thy knots be strong,
And tempt not yet the brushes of the war.
Unarm thee; go; and doubt thou not, brave boy,
I'll stand to-day for thee, and me, and Troy.

Tro. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you,
Which better fits a lion than a man.

Hect. What vice is that, good Troilus? chide me for it

Tro. When many times the captive Grecians fall,
Even in the fan and wind of your fair sword,

2 thyself: in folio.
3 bound: in folio.
4 gone: in folio.
6 Folio: a. The folio: "For we would count give man to as violent thefts." The line has been variously arranged by modern editors.
7 one of the best.
You bid them rise, and live.

Hec. O! 'tis fair play.

Tro. Fool's play, by heaven, Hector.

Hec. How now! how now?

Tro. For the love of all the gods, let's leave the hermit pity with our mothers, and when we have our armour buckled on, the venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords; spur them to ruthless work, rein them from ruth.

Hec. Fie, savage, fie!

Tro. Hector, then 'tis wars.

Hec. Troilus, I would not have you fight to-day.

Tro. Who should withhold me?

Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars.

Beckoning with fiery truncheons my retire;

Not Priamus and Hecuba on knees, their eyes o'ergalled with recourse of tears;

Nor thou, my brother, with your true sword drawn, oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my way.

But by my ruin.

Re-enter Cassandra with Priam.

Cas. Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold him fast:

He is thy crutch; now, if thou lose thy stay, thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee, fall all together.

Pri. Come, Hector, come; go back.

Thy wife hath dream'd, thy mother hath had visions, Cassandra doth foresee; and I myself am like a prophet suddenly enrap't, to tell thee that this day is ominous:

Therefore, come back.

Hec. Aeneas is a field;

And I do stand engag'd to many Greeks, even in the faith of valour, to appear this morning to them.

Pri. Ay, but thou shalt not go.

Hec. I must not break my faith.

You know me dutiful: therefore, dear sir,

Let me not shame respect, but give me leave

To take that course by your consent and voice,

Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam.

Cas. O Priam! yield not to him.

And.

Do not, dear father.

Hec. Andromache, I am offended with you:

Upon the love you bear me, get you in.

[Exit Andromache.

Tro. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl

Makes all these bodements.

Cas. O farewell, dear Hector!

Look, how thou diest! look, how thine eye turns pale!

Look, how thy wounds do bleed at many vents!

Hark, how Troy roars! how Hecuba cries out!

How poor Andromache shirks her dolorous path!

Behold, distraction, frenzy, and amazement,

Like witless antics, one another meet,

And all cry—Hector! Hector's dead! O Hector!

Tro. Away!—Away!—

Cas. Farewell. Yet, soft!—Hector, I take my leave:

Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive.

Hec. You are amaz'd, my liege, at her exclam.

Go in, and cheer the town: we'll forth, and fight;

Do deeds worth praise, and tell you them at night.

Pri. Farewell; the gods with safety stand about thee!

[Exit severally Priam and Hector. Actumns.

Tro. They are at it; hark!—Proud Diomed, believe,

I come to lose mine arm, or win my sleeve.

[Going

Pan. Why, but hear you?

Tro. Hence, brother lackey! ignomy and shame,

Pursue thy life, and live at ease with thy name.

As they occur again near the close of the play, they are omitted in this place, by most med. ed. th' other. * Not in f. e. sleeve: [2]

SCENE VIII.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

SCENE V.—The Same.

Enter Diomedes and a Servant.

Dio. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus' horse; Present the fair steed to my lady Cressid. Fellow, commend my service to her beauty: Tell her, I have chastis'd the amorous Trojan, And am her knight by proof.

Serv. I go, my lord. [Exit Servant.

Again. Renew, renew! The fierce Polydamus Hath beat down Menor: bastard Margarelon Hath Doreus prisoner, And stands colossus-wise, waving his beam, Upon the pash'd corpses of the kings Epistrophus and Cedius: Polixenes is slain; Amphimachus, and Theos, deadly hurt; Patroclus ta'en, or slain; and Palamedes Sore hurt and bruised: the dreadful Sagittary Appals our numbers. Haste we, Diomed, To reinforcement, or we perish all.

Enter Nestor.

Nest. Go, bear Patroclus' body to Achilles, And bid his snail-pac'd Ajax arm for shame.— There is a thousand Hectors in the field: Now, here he fights on Galate's horse, And there lacks work; anon, he's there afoot, And there they fly, or die, like sealed sculls! Before the belching whale: then, is he yonder, And there the stravied Greeks, ripe for his edge, Fall down before him, like the mower's swath. Here, there, and every where, he leaves, and takes; Dexterity so obeying appetite, That what he will, he does: and does so much, That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter Ulysses.

Ulysses. O, courage, courage, princes! great Achilles Is arm'd, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance, Patroclus' wounds have rous'd his drowsy blood, Together with his mangle Myrmidons. That noiseless, handleless, hack'd and chipp'd, come to him. Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend, And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd, and at it, Roaring for Troilus; who hath done to-day Mad and fantastic execution, Engaging and redeeming of himself, With such a careless force, and forceless care, As if that luck, in very spite of cunning, Bade him win all.

Enter Ajax.

Nest. So, so, we draw together.

Enter Achilles.

Achilles. Where is this Hector? Come, come, thou boy-quereller, shew thy face; Know what it is to meet Achilles angry. Hector! where's Hector? I will none but Hector. [Exit.

SCENE VI.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter Ajax.

Ajax. Troilus! thou coward Troilus, show thy head! [Exit Diomedes.

Dio. I would correct him.

Ajax. Were I the general, thou should'st have my office,
SCENE IX.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter Hector.

Hect. Most putrified core, so fair without,
Tny goodly armour thus hath cost thy life.
Now is my day’s work done; I’ll take good breath:
Hest, sword; thou hast thy fill of blood and death!

[Putting off his Helmet, and lays down his Sword

Enter Achilles and Myrmidons.

Achil. Look, Hector, how the sun begins to set:
How ugly night comes breathing at his heels:
Even with the vail* and darkening of the sun,
To close the day up, Hector’s life is done.

Hect. I am unarmed; forego this vantage, Greek.

Achil. Strike, fellows, strike! this is the man I seek.

So, lion, fall thou next!* now, Troy, sink down:
Here lies thy heart, thy sinews, and thy bone.—
On, Myrmidons; and cry you all amain,
Achilles hath the mighty Hector slain.

Hark! a retire* upon our Grecian part.

Mur. The Trojan trumpets sound the like, my lord.

Achil. The dragon wing of night o’erspares the earth,
And, stickler* like, the armies separates.
My half-sup’d sword, that frankly would have fed,
Pica’d with this dainty bit, thus goes to bed.—

Sheathes his Sword.

Come, tie his body to my horse’s tail;—
Along the field I will the Trojan trail.

[Exit.

SCENE X.—The Same.

Enter Agamemnon, Ajax, Menelaus, Nestor, Dido-medes, and others, marching. Shouts within.

Agam. Hark! hark! what shout is that?

Nest. Peace, drums!

[Voices within]

Achilles! Hector’s slain! Achilles!

Dio. The bruit is, Hector’s slain, and by Achilles.

Ajax. If it be so, yet bragless let it be:
Great Hector was a man as good as he.

Agam. March patiently along.—Let one be sent
To pray Achilles see us at our tent.—
If in his death the gods have us befriended,
Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars are ended.

SCENE XI.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter Æneas and Trojan Forces.

Æne. Stand, ho! yet are we masters of the field.

Never go home: here starve we out the night.

[Exit Troilus.

Troc. Hector is slain.

All. Hector?—The gods forbid!

Troc. He’s dead; and at the murderer’s horse’s tail,
In beastly sort dragged through the shameful field.—

Frown on, ye heavens, effect your rage with speed:—
Sit, gods, upon your thrones, and smile at Troy!—
I say, at once let your brief plagues be mercy,
And linger not our sure destructions on!—

Æne. My lord, you do discomfort all the host.

Tro. You understand me not, that tell me so.
I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death;
But dare all immiince, that gods and men
Address their dangers in. Hector is gone!
Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba?

Let him, that will a screech-owl aye be call’d,
Go in to Troy, and say there—Hector’s dead:
There is a word will Priam turn to stone,
Make wells and Nikes of the maidens and wives.
Cold* statues of the youth: and, in a word,
Searc Troy out of itself. But, march, away:
Hector is dead; there is no more to say.

Stay yet.—You vile abominable tents,
Thus proudly pigt’ upon our Phrygian plains,
Let Titian rise as early as he dare,
I’ll through and through you!—And, thou great-size’d coward,
No space of earth shall suffer our two hates:—
I’ll haunt thee like a wicked conscience still,
That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzy’s thoughts.—
Strike a free march to Troy!—with comfort go:
Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe.

[Exit Æneas and Trojan forces.

As Troy is going out, enter, from the other side,

Pandarus.

Pan. But hear you, hear you!—

Troc. Hence, brothel-lackey!* ignomy and shame
Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name!—

Æne. A goodly medicine for mine aching bones:—
[Left alone, let him say this by way of Epilogue.*]

O world! world! world! thus is the poor agent despised.
O, traitors and bawds, how earnestly are you set a work, and how ill required! why should our endeavour be so loved,* and the performance so loathed? what verse for it? what instance for it?—Let me see.—

"Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing,
Till he hath lost his honey, and his sting;
And being once subdued in armed tail,
Sweet honey a sweet note together fail."—

Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloths—

As many as be here of Pandar’s Hall,
Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar’s fall;
Or, if you cannot weep, yet give some groans,
Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.
Brethren, and sisters, of the hold-door trade,
Some two months hence my will shall here be made
It should be now, but that my fear is this,—
Some galled goose of Winchester* would hiss.
Till then I’ll sweat, and seek about for easies;
And at that time bequeath you my diseases.

CORIOLANUS.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

CAIUS MARCIUS CORIOLANUS, a noble Roman.
TITUS LARTIUS, \\ Generals against the Volscians.
TULLUS AUFIDUS, General of the Volscians.

SCENE, partly in Rome; and partly in the Territories of the Volscians and Antitans.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter a Company of mutinous Citizens, with Staves, Clubs, and other Weapons.

1 Cit. Before we proceed any farther, hear me speak.
All. Speak.

1 Cit. You are all resolved rather to die, than to famish?
All. Resolved, resolved.

1 Cit. First you know, Caius Marcius is chief enemy to the people.
All. We know t': we know t'.

1 Cit. Let us kill him, and we'll have corn at our own price. Is 't a verdict?
All. No more talking on't; let it be done. Away, away!

2 Cit. One word, good citizens—

1 Cit. We are accounted poor citizens; the patricians good. What authority surfeits on, would relieve us: if they would yield us but the superfluity, while it was wholesome, we might guess they relieved us humanely; but they think, we are too dear: the leaness that afflicts us, the abjectness of our misery, is as an inventory to particularize their abundance; our sufferance is a gain to them.—Let us revenge this with our pikes, ere we become rakes: for the gods know, I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge.

2 Cit. Would you proceed especially against Caius Marcius?
All. Against him first: he's a very dog to the commonalty.

2 Cit. Consider you what services he has done for his country?

1 Cit. Very well; and could be content to give him good report for, but that he pays himself with being proud.

2 Cit. Nay, but speak not maliciously.

1 Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done famously, he did it to that end: though soft-conscienc'd men can be content to say it was for his country, he did it to please his mother, and partly to be proud; which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue.

1 object: in f. e 2 All. : in folio.
2 Cit. Care for us?—True, indeed!—They never cared for us yet. Suffer us to famish, and their storehouses crammed with grain; make edicts for usury, to support usurers; repeal daily any wholesome statute established against the rich, and provide more piercing statutes daily to chain up and restrain the poor. If the wars eat us not up, they will; and there's all the love they bear us.

Men. Either you must confess yourselves wondrous malicious, or be accused of folly. I shall tell you A pretty tale: it may be, you have heard it; But, since it serves my purpose, I will venture To scale't a little more.

2 Cit. Well, I'll hear it, sir: yet you must not think To fob off our disgraces with a tale;
But, an't please you, deliver.

Men. There was a time, when all the body's members
Rebell'd against the belly; thus accus'd it:— That only like a Gulf it did remain I't the midst o' the body, idle and inactive, Still envoys meeting the viand, never hearing Like labour with the rest; where't other instruments Did see, and hear, devise, instruct, walk, feel, And, mutually partake, did minister Unto the appetite, and affection common Of the whole body. The belly answered.—

2 Cit. Well, sir, what answer made the belly?

Men. Sir, I shall tell you.—With a kind of smile, Which ne'er came from the lungs, but even thus, (For, look you, I may make the belly smile, As well as speak) it tauntingly replied To the discontented members, the mutinous parts That envied his receipt; even so most fitly As you malign our senators, for that They are not such as you.

2 Cit. The kingly crowned head, the vigilant eye, The counsellor heart, the arm our soldier. Our steed the leg, the tongue our trumpeter, With other muniments and petty helps In this our fabric, if that they—

Men. What then?

2 Cit. Fore me, this fellow speaks!—what then? what then?

Men. Who is the sink o' the body.—

2 Cit. Should by the cormorant belly be restrain'd.

Men. Well, what then?

2 Cit. The former agents, if they did complain, What could the belly answer?

Men. I will tell you, If you'll bestow a small (of what you have little) Patience a while, you'll hear the belly's answer.

2 Cit. Y' are long about it.

Men. Note me this, good friend; our most grave belly was deliberate, Not rash like his accusers, and thus answer'd:— "True is it, my incorporeal friends," quoth he, "That I receive the general food at first, Which you do live upon; and fit it is, Because I am the store-house, and the shop Of the whole body: but if you do remember, I send it through the rivers of your blood, Even to the court, the heart, the senate, brain; And through the ranks and offices of man: The strongest nerves, and small inferior veins, From me receive that natural competency Whereby they live. And though that all at once, You, my good friends," this says the belly, mark me.—

2 Cit. Ay, sir; well, well.

Men. "Though all at once cannot See what I do deliver out to each, Yet I can make my audit up, that all From me do back receive the flour of all, And leave me but the bran." What say you to't?

2 Cit. It was an answer. How apply you this?

Men. The senators of Rome are this good belly, And you the mutinous members: for examine Their counsels, and their cares; digest things right; Touching the weakness of the common, you shall find, No public benefit which you receive, But it proceeds, or comes, from them to you, And no way from yourselves.—What do you think, You, the great toe of this assembly?—

2 Cit. I the great toe? Why the great toe?

Men. For that being one of the lowest, basest, poorest, Of this most wise rebellion, thou go'st foremost: Thou rascal, that art worst in blood to run, Lead'st first to win some vantage.— But make you ready your stiff bats and clubs, Rome and her rats are at the point of battle; The one side must have bane. — Hail, noble Marcus!

Enter Caius Marsius.

Mar. Thanks.—What's the matter, you dissentsious rogues, That rubbing the poor itch of your opinion, Make yourselves scabs?

2 Cit. We have ever your good word.

Mar. He that will give good words to ye, will flatter Beneath aborning.—What would you have, you curs, That like nor peace, nor war? the one affrights you, The other makes you proud. He that trusts to you, Where he should find you lions, finds you hares; Where foxes, geese: you are nourer, no; Than is the coal of fire upon the ice, Or hailstone in the sun. Your virtue is To make him worthy, whose offence suddens him, And curse that justice did it. Who deserves greatness, Deserves your hate: and your affections are A sick man's appetite, who desires most that Which would increase his evil. He that depends Upon your favours swins with fins of lead. And hews down oaks with rushes. Hang ye! Trust ye? With every minute you do change your mind, And call him noble, that was now your hate, Him vile, that was your garland. What's the matter, That in these several places of the city You cry against the noble senate, who, Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else Would feel on one another?—What's their seeking?

Men. For corn at their own rates; whereof, they say The city is well stord.

Mar. Hang 'em! They say?

They'll sit by the fire, and presume to know What's done i' the Capitol; who's like to rise, Who thrives, and who declines; sides factions, and y'e out Conjectural marriages; making parties strong, And feeling such as stand not in their liking Below their cobbled shoes. They say, there's grain enough? Would the nobility lay aside their rath, And let me use my sword, I'd make a quarry With thousands of these quarter'd slaves, as high As I could pick' my lance.

Men. Nay, these are all most thoroughly persuaded; For though abundantly they lack distortion, Yet are they passing cowardly. But, I beseech you,
Coriolanus

Aufidius, pray, he that the Sen.
They are dissolved. Hang 'em! They said, they were un-hungry; sigh'd forth proverbs,—
That hunger broke stone walls; that dogs must eat; That meat was made for mouths; that the gods sent not Corn for the rich men only. With these shreds They vented their complaining; which being answer'd, and a petition granted them, a strange one,
(To break the heart of generosity.
And make bold power look pale) they threw their caps As they would hang them on the horns of the moon, Shouting their exultation.

Men. What is granted them?

Mar. Five tribunes, to defend their vulgar wisdom, Of their own choice: one's Junius Brutus, Sicinius Velutus, and I know not—Sicath!
The rabble should have first unroof'd the city,
Ere so prevail'd with me: it will in time
Win upon power, and throw forth greater themes For insurrection's arguing.

Men. This is strange.

Mar. Go; get you home, you fragments!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Where's Caius Marius?

Mar. Here. What is the matter?
Mess. The news is, sir, the Volscians are in arms.

Mar. I am glad on 't; then, we shall have means to vent
Our musty superfluity. See, our best elders.

Enter Cominius, Titus Lartius, and other Senators; Junius Brutus, and Sicinius Velutus.

1 Sen. Marius, 'tis true that you have lately told us; The Volscians are in arms.

Mar. They have a leader,
Tullus Aufidius, that will put you to it. I sin in envying his nobility,
And, were I any thing but what I am,
Would wish me only he.

Com. You have fought together.

Mar. Were half to half the world by th'ears, and he Upon my party, 'tis revol't, to make
Only my wars with him: he is a lion
That I am proud to hunt.

1 Sen. Then, worthy Marius,
Attend upon Cominius to these wars.

Com. It is your former promise.

Mar. Sir, it is;
And I am constant.—Titus Lartius, thou
Shalt see me once more strike at Tullus' face.
What! art thou stiff? stand'st'st out?

Tlt. No, Caius Marius; I'll lean upon one crutch, and fight with the other,
Ere stay behind this business.

Men. O, true bred!

1 Sen. Your company to the Capitol; where, I know,
Our greatest friends attend us.

Tlt. Lead you on:

Follow, Cominius; we must follow you,
Right worthy your priority.

Com. Noble Marius!

1 Sen. Hence! To your homes! be gone.

[To the Citizens.

Mar. Nay, let them follow.

The Volscians have much corn: take these rats thither, To gnaw their garners.—Worshipful mutineers,
Your valour puts well forth: pray, follow.

Sir. Was ever man so proud as this Marius?

Bru. He has no equal.

Sir. When we were chosen tribunes for the people,—

Bru. Mark'd you his lip, and eyes?

Sir. Nay, but his taunts

Bru. Being mov'd, he will not spare to gird the gods

Sir. Bemock the modest moon.

Bru. The present wars devour him: he is grown
Too proud to be so valiant.

Sir. Such a nature,
Tickled with good success, disdains the shadow
Which he treads on at noon. But I do wonder,
His insolence can brook to be commanded
Under Cominius.

Bru. Fame, at the which he aims,
In whom already he is well gain'd, cannot Better be held, nor more attain'd, than by
A place below the first; for what miscarries
Shall be the general's fault, though he perform
To the utmost of a man; and giddy censure
Will then cry out of Marius, "O, if he Had borne the business?"

Sir. Besides, if things go well.

Opinion, that so sticks on Marius, shall
Of his demerits rob Cominius.

Bru. Come:
Half all Cominius' honours are to Marius,
Though Marius earn'd them not; and all his faults
To Marius shall be honours, though, indeed,
In aught he merit not.

Sir. Let's hence, and hear
How the despatch is made; and in what fashion,
More than his singularity, he goes
Upon his present action.

Bru. Let's along. [Exeunt]

Scene II. Corioli. The Senate-House.

Enter Tullus Aufidius, and Senators.

1 Sen. So, your opinion is, Aufidius,
That they of Rome are enter'd in our counsels,
And know how we proceed.

Auf. Is it not yours?

What ever have been thought on in this state,
That could be brought to bodily act ere Rome
Had circumvention? 'Tis not four days gone,
Since I heard these; these are the words: I think,
I have the letter here; yes, here it is:—

[Reads

"They have press'd a power, but it is not known
Whether for cast, or east. The dearth is great;
The people mutinous; and it is rumour'd,
Cominius, Marius your old enemy,
(Who is of Rome worse hated than of you)
And Titus Lartius, a most valiant Roman,
These three lead on this preparation
Whither 't is bent: most likely, 't is for you,
Consider of it.""

1 Sen. Our army's in the field.

We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready
To answer us.

Auf. Nor did you think it folly,
To keep your great pretences veil'd, till when
They needs must show themselves; which in the hatch,
It seem'd, appear'd to Rome. By the discovery,
We shall be shorten'd in our aim; which was
To take in many towns, ere, almost, Rome
Should know we were afoot.

2 Sen. Noble Aufidius.

Take your commission; lie you to your bands. [Giving u
Let us alone to guard Corioli:
If they set down before's, for the remove Bring up your army; but, I think, you'll find They've not prepared for us.

_Auf._ O! doubt not that;
I speak from certainties. Nay, more:
Some parcels of their power are forth already,
And only hitherward. I leave your honours.
If we and Caius Marcius chance to meet,
'Tis sworn between us, we shall ever strike
Till one can do no more.

_All._ The gods assist you!
_Auf._ And keep your honours safe!
_Vol._ Farewell. 2 Sen. Farewell. _[Exit._

_Enter Volumnia, and Virgilia._ They sit down on two low Stools, and see.

_Vol._ I pray you, daughter, sing; or express yourself in a more comfortable sort. If my son were my husband, I should freer rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour, than in the embraces of his bed, where he would show most love. When yet he was but tender-bodied, and the only son of my womb; when youth with comeliness plucked all gaze his way; when, for a day or two’s entreaties, a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding; 1—considering how honour would become such a person; that it was no better than picture-like to hang by the wall, if renown made it not stir,—was pleased to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him; from whence he returned, his brows bound with oak. I tell thee, daughter, I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child, than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man.

_Vir._ But had he died in the business, madam? how then?

_Vol._ Then, his good report should have been my son: I therein would have found issue. Hear me profess sincerely:—had I a dozen sons,—each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine and my good Marcius,—I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country, than one voluptuously surfeit out of action.

_Enter a Gentlewoman._

_Gent._ Madam, the lady Valerina is come to visit you.

_Vir._ Beseech you, give me leave to retire myself.

_Vol._ Indeed, you shall not.

_Methinks, I hear hither your husband’s drum,
See him pluck Aurelius down by the hair;
As children from a bear the Volscus shunning him:
Methinks, I see him stamp thus, and call thus,— “Come on, ye cowards! you were got in fear,
Though others were born in Rome.” His bloody brow
With his mail’d hand then wiping, forth he goes,
Like to a harvest-man, that’s task’d to mow
Or all, or lose his hire.

_Vir._ His bloody brow? O Jupiter! no blood.

_Vol._ Away, you fool! it more becomes a man,
Than girt his trophy: the breasts of Heeuba,
When she did suckle Hector, look’d not lovelier
Than Hector’s forehead, when it spit forth blood
At Grecian swords contending. —Tell Valeria,
We are fit to bid her welcome._ [Exit Gent._

_Vir._ Heavens-bless my lord from fell Aurelius!

Vol._ He’ll beat Aurelius’ head below his knee,
And tread upon his neck.

_Re-enter Gentlewoman, with Valeria and her Usher._

Vol._ My ladies both, good day to you.

_Vir._ Sweet madam.

_Vir._ I am glad to see your ladyship.

Vol._ How do you both? you are manifest housekeepers. What are you sewing here? A fine spot, in good faith.—How does your little son?

_Vir._ I thank your ladyship; well, good madam.

Vol._ He had rather see swords, and hear a drum,
And look upon his school-master.

Vol._ O’ my word, the father’s son: I’ll swear, ’t is a very pretty boy. O’ my troth, I looked upon him o’ Wednesday half an hour together: he has such a confirmed countenance. I saw him run after a gilded butterfly; and when he caught it, he let it go again; and after it again; and over and over he comes, and up again; catched it again: or whether his fall enraged him, or how ’t was, he did so set his teeth, and tear it! 0! I warrant, how he mummacked it!

Vol._ One of his father’s moulds.

_Vol._ Indeed la, ’t is a noble child.

_Vir._ A crack, madam.

_Vol._ Come, lay aside your stitchery; I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon.

_Vir._ No, good madam; I will not out of doors.

_Vol._ Not out of doors?

_Vir._ She shall, she shall.

_Vir._ Indeed, no, by your patience: I will not over the threshold, till my lord return from the wars.

_Vol._ Fie! you confine yourself most unreasonably. Come; you must go visit the good lady that lies in.

_Vir._ I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers; but I cannot go thither.

_Vol._ Why, I pray you?

_Vir._ ’T is not to save labour, nor that I want love.

_Vol._ You would be another Penelope; yet, they say, all the yarn she spun in Ulysses’ absence did but fill ithaca full of notion. Come; I would, your Cambrie were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pity. Come, you shall go with us.

_Vir._ No, good madam, pardon me; indeed, I will not forth.

_Vol._ In truth, la, go with me; and I’ll tell you excellent news of your husband.

_Vir._ O! good madam, there can be none yet.

_Vir._ Verily, I do not jest with you, there came news from him last night.

_Vir._ Indeed, madam?

_Vol._ In earnest, it’s true: I heard a senator speak it. Thus it is:—The Volscus have an army forth, against whom Cominius the general is gone; with one part of our Roman power; your lord, and Titus Labritus, are set down before their city Corioli; they nothing doubt prevailing, and to make it brief wars. This is true on mine honour; and so, I pray, go with us.

_Vir._ Give me excuse, good madam; I will obey you in every thing hereafter.

_Vol._ Let her alone, lady: as she is now, she will but disease our better mirth.

_Vol._ In truth, I think, she would.—Fare you well then.—Come, good sweet lady.—Pr’ythee, Virginia turn thy solemnness out o’ door, and go along with us.

_Vir._ No, at a word, madam: indeed, I must no
I wish you much mirth.

_Vol._ Well then, farewell._ [Exit._
Scene IV.—Before Corioli.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, Marcius, Titus Lartius, Officers, and Soldiers.

Mar. Yonder comes news:—a wager, they have met.

Lart. My horse to yours, no.

Mar. ’Tis done. Agreed.

Enter a Messenger.

Mar. Say, has our general met the enemy?

Mess. They lie in view, but have not spoke as yet.

Lart. So, the good horse is mine.

Mar. I’ll buy him of you.

Lart. No, I’ll not sell, nor give him: lend you him I will,

For half a hundred years.—Summon the town.

Mar. How far off lie these armies?

Mess. Within this mile and half. Mar. Then shall we hear the slamour, and they ours.

Now, Mars, I pr’ythee, make us quick in work,

That we with smoking swords may march from hence,

To help our fielded friends!—Come, blow thy blast.

A Parley sounded. Enter, on the Walls, two Senators, and others.

Tullus Aufidius, is he within your walls?

1 Sen. No, nor a man that fears you less than he,
That’s lesser than a little. Hark, our drums

Are bringing forth our youth: we’ll break our walls,
Rather than they shall pound us up. Our gates,
Which yet seem shut, we have but pinn’d with rushes;
They’ll open of themselves. Hark you, far off;

[Alarum after off.

There is Aufidius: list, what work he makes

Amongst your cloven army.

Mar. O! they are at it.

Lart. Their noise be our instruction. Ladders, ho!

The Volsces enter, and pass over the Stage.

Mar. They fear us not, but issue forth their city.

Now put your shields before your hearts, and fight

With hearts more proof than shields. Advance, brave Titus.

They do disdain us much beyond our thoughts,
Which makes me sweat with wrath.—Come on, my He that retires, I’ll take him for a Volsce, [follows:

And he shall feel mine edge.

Alarum, and extant Romans and Volsces, fighting. The Romans are beaten back to their Trenches. Re-enter Marcius enraged.

Mar. All the contagion of the south light on you,
You shameless of Rome! Unheard-of boils and plagues
Plaster you o’er, that you may be abio’d
Farther than seen, and one infect another
Against the wind a mile! You souls of geese,
That bear the shapes of men, how have you run
From slaves that apes would beat! Pluto and hell!
All hurt behind; backs red, and faces pale
With fright and ruined fear! Mend, and charge home,
Or, by the fires of heaven, I’ll leave the foe,
And make my wars on you. Look to’t: come on,
If you stand fast, we’ll beat them to their wives,
As they us to their trenches follow.

Another Alarum. The Volsces and Romans re-enter, and the Fight is renewed. The Volsces retire into Coriolis, and Marcius follows them to the Gates.

So, now the gates are open:—now prove good seconds.
’Tis for the followers fortune widens them,
Not for the fliers: mark me, and do the like.

---

1 Sol. Fool-hardiness! not I.
2 Sol. Nor:
3 Sol. See, they have shut him in. [Alarum continues

All. To the port! I warrant him

Enter Titus Lartius.

Lart. What is become of Marcius?

All. Slain, sir, doubtless.

1 Sol. Following the fliers at the very heels,
With them he enters; who, upon the sudden,
Clapp’d to their gates: he is himself alone,
To answer all the city.

Lart. O noble fellow!

Who sensibly outdares his senseless sword,
And, when it bows, stands up. Thou art left, Marcius
A carbuncle entire, as big as thou art,
Were not so rich a jewel. Thou wast a soldier
Even to Cato’s wish, not fierce and terrible
Only in strokes: but, with thy grim looks, and
The thunder-like percussion of thy sounds,
Thou mad’st thine enemies shake, as if the world
Were feverous, and did tremble.

The Gates open. Re-enter Marcius, bleeding, assaulted by the Enemy.

1 Sol. Look, sir! Let’s fetch him off, or make remain alike.

They fight, and all enter the City.

Scene V.—Within the Town. A Street.

Enter certain Romans, with Spoils.

1 Rom. This will I carry to Rome.
2 Rom. And I this.
3 Rom. A murrain on’t! I took this for silver.

[Alarum continues still after off.

Enter Marcius, and Titus Lartius, with a Trumpet.

Mar. See here these movers, that do prizze their hours
At a crack’d dramlin! Cushions, leaden spoons,
Iron of a dot, doublets that hangmen would
Bury with those that wore them, these base slaves,
Ere yet the fight be done, pack up.—Down with them!—
And hark, what noise the general makes.—To him!
There is the man of my soul’s hate, Aufidius,
Piercing our Romans: then, valiant Titus, take Convenient numbers to make good the city,
Whilst I, with those that have the spirit, will haste
To help Cominius.

Lart. Worthy sir, thou bleed’st;
Thy exercise hath been too violent
For a second course of fight.

Mar. Sir, praise me not:
My work hath yet not warm’d me. Fare you well.
The blood I drop is rather physical Than dangerous to me. To Aufidius thus
I will appear, and fight.

Lart. Now the fair goddess, Fortune,
Fall deep in love with thee; and her great charms
Misguide thy opposers’ swords! Bold gentleman,
Proceed, be thy page!

Mar. Thy friend no less
Than those she placeth highest. So, farewell.

Lart. Thou worthiest Marcius!—[Exit Marcius.
Go, sound thy trumpet in the market-place;
Call thither all the officers of the town,
Where they shall know our mind. Away! [Exeunt

Scene VI.—Near the Camp of Cominius.

Enter Cominius and Forces, as in retreat.

Com. Breathe you, my friends. Well fought: we are come off
Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands,
Nor cowardly in retire: believe me, sirs,
We shall be charg’d again. Whiles we have struck,
By interims and conveying gusts we have heard
The charges of our friends:—ye, Roman gods,
Lead their successes as we wish our own,
That both our powers, with smiling fronts encountering
May give you thankful sacrifice [——.

Enter a Messenger.

Thy news?

Mess. The citizens of Corioli have issued,
And given to Lartius and to Marcus battle:
I saw our party to their trenches driven,
And then I came away.

Com. Though thou speak’st truth, Methinks, thou speakest not well. How long is’t since?
Mess. Above an hour, my lord.

Com. ’Tis not a mile; briefly we heard their drums:
How couldst thou in a mile confound an hour,
And bring thy news so late?

Mess. Spies of the Volscians
Held me in chase, that I was forc’d to wheel.
Three or four miles about; else had I, sir,
Half an hour since brought my report.

Enter Marcus.

Com. Who’s yonder, That does appear as he were flay’d? O gods! He has the stamp of Marcus, and I have Before-time seen him thus.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. The shepherd knows not thunder from a tabor,
More than I know the sound of Marcus’ tongue
From every meancr man.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. Ay, if you come not in the blood of others,
But mantled in your own.

Mar. O! let me clip you
In arms as sound, as when I woo’d; in heart
As merry, as when our nuptial day was done,
And tapers burn’d to bedward.

Com. Flower of warriors,
How is’t with Titus Lartius?

Mar. As with a man busied about decrees:
Condemning some to death, and some to exile;
Ransoming him, or pitying, threatening the other;
Holding Corioli, in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash,
To let him slip to will.

Com. Where is that slave,
Which told me they had beat you to your trenches?
Where is he?—Call him hither.

Mar. Let him alone,
He did inform the truth: but for our gentlemen,
The common file, (A plague!—Tribunes for them?)
The mouse ne’er shun’d the cat, as they did dudge
From rascals worse than they.

Com. But how prevail’d you?

Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think it.
Where is the enemy? Are you lords o’ the field?
If not, why cease you till you are so?

Com. Marcus, we have at disadvantage fought,
And did retire to win our purposes.

Mar. How lies their battle? Know you on which side
They have plac’d their men of trust?

Com. As I guess, Marcus,
Those bands i’ the wayward are the Antiates,
Of their best trust: o’er them Aufidius,
Their very heart of hope,

Mar. I do beseech you,

By all the battles wherein we have fought,
By the blood we have shed together, by the vows
We have made to endure friends, that you directly
Set me against Aufidius, and his Antiates;
And that you not delay the present, but,
Filling the air with swords advanced and darts,
We prove this very hour.

Com. Though I could wish
You were conducted to a gentle bath.
And balms applied to you, yet dare I never Deny your asking. Take your choice of those
That best can aid your action

Mar. Those are they
That most are willing.—If any such be here,
(As it was sin to doubt) that love this painting
Wherein you see me smear’d: if any fear
Lesser his person than an ill report;
If any think brave death outwights bad life,
And that his country’s dearer than himself;
Let him, alone, or so many so minded,
Wave thus, to express his disposition,
And follow Marcus.

[They all shout, and wave their Swords; take him up in their arms, and cast up their Cops
O me, alone! Make you a sword of me?
If these shows be not outward, which of you
But is four Volscians? None of you, but is Able to bear against the great Aufidius
A shield as hard as his. A certain number,
Though thanks to all, must I select from all: the rest
Shall bear the business in some other fight,
As cause will be obey’d. Please you, March before;
And I shall quickly draw out my command;
Which men are best inclin’d.

Com. March on, my fellows:
Make good this ostentation, and you shall Divide in all with us.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—The Gates of Corioli.

Titus Lartius, having set a Guard upon Corioli, going with Drum and Trumpet toward Cominius and Caius Marcus, enters with a Lieutenant, a party of Soldiers, and a Scout.

Lart. So; let the posts be guarded: keep your duties,
As I have set them down. If I do send, despatch
Those centuries to our aid; the rest will serve
For a short holding: if we lose the field,
We cannot keep the town.

Lieu. Fear not our care, sir.

Lart. Hence, and shut your gates upon us.—
Our guider, come; to the Roman camp conduct us.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—A Field of Battle between the Roman and the Volscian Camps.

Awarum. Enter Marcus and Aufidius.

Mar. I’ll fight with none but thee; for I do hate thee
Worse than a promise-breaker.

Auf. We hate alike:
Not Afric owns a serpent I abhor
More than thy fame P envy. Fix thy foot.
Mar. Let the first butcher die the other’s slave,
And the gods doom him after!

Auf. If I fly, Marcus,
Halloo me like a hare.

Mar. Within these three hours, Tullius,
Alone I fought in your Corioli walls,
And made what work I pleas’d. ’T is not my blood
Wherein thou soest me mask’d: for thy revenge,
SCENE IX.—The Roman Camp.

Alarum. A Retreat sounded. Flourish. Enter at one side, COMINIUS, and Romans; at the other side, MARCIUS, with his Arm in a Starf, and other Romans.

Com. If I should tell thee o'er this thy day's work, Thou 'lt not believe thy deeds; but I'll report it, Where senators shall mingle tears with smiles, Where great patricians shall attend, and shrug, I' the end, admire; where ladies shall be fretted, And, gladly quak'd, hear more: where the dull Tribunes, That with the fusty plebeians hate thine honours, Shall say, against their hearts,—

"We thank the gods our Rome hath such a soldier!"—

Yet canst thou to a morSEL of this feast, Having fully dined before.

Enter Titus Lartius with his Power, from the pursuit.

Lart. O general, here is the steed, we the caparison:

Hadst thou beheld—

Mar. Pray now, no more: my mother,

Who has a charter to extol her blood.

When she does praise me, grieves me. I have done,

As you have done; that's what I can; induce'd

As you have been; what for my country:

He that has but effect'd his good will

Hath ovet'a'n mine act.

Com. You shall not be

The grave of your deserving; Rome must know

The value of her own: it were a concealment

Worse than a theft, no less than a traducement,

To hide your doings; and to silence that,

What's to the spire and top of praises vouched,

Would seem but modest. Therefore, I beseech you,

In sign of what you are, not to reward

What you have done, before our army hear me.

Mar. I have some wounds upon me, and they smart

To hear themselves remember'd.

Com. Should they not, Well might they faster 'gainst ingratitude,

And tent themselves with death. Of all the horses,

(Whereof we have ta'en good, and good store) of all

The treasure, in this field achiev'd and city,

We render you the tenth; to be ta'en forth,

Before the common distribution,

At your only choice.

Mar. I thank you, general; But cannot make my heart consent to take

A bribe to pay my sword: I do refuse it;

And stand upon my common part with those

That have beheld the doing.

[Long flourish. They all cry, MARCIUS! MARCIUS! cast up their caps and lances: COMINIUS and LARTIUS stand here.

Mar. May these same instruments, which you profane,

Never sound more: when drums and trumpets shall I the field prove flatterers, let courts and cities be

Made all of false-fac'd soothing:

When steel grows soft as the parasite's silk,

Let it be made a coverture for the wars.

No more, I say. For that I have not wash'd

My nose that bled, or foil'd some debile wretch,

Which without note here's many else have done,

You shou'd me forth

In exclamations hyperbolical;

As if I loved my little should be dieted

In praises sauc'd with lies.

Com. Too modest are you:

More cruel to your good report, than grateful

To us that give you truly. By your patience,

It 'gainst yourself you be incens'd, we'll put you

(Like one that means his proper harm) in manacles

Then reason safely with you.—Therefore, be it known

As to us, to all the world, that Caius Marcius

Wears this war's garland: in token of the which

My noble steed, known to the camp, I give him,

With all his trim belonging: and, from this time,

For what he did before Corioli, call him,

With all th' applause and clamour of the host,

Caius Marcius Coriolanus,

Bear the addition nobly ever!

[Flourish. Trumpets sound, and Drums all. Caius Marcius Coriolanus!"

Cor. I will go wash:

And when my face is fair, you shall perceive

Whether I blush, or no: howbeit, I thank you.—

I mean to stride your steed: and, at all times,

To undercress your good addition

To the fairness of my power.

Com. So, to our tent;

Where, ere we do repose us, we will write

To Rome of our success.—You, Titus Lartius,

Must to Coriolus back: send us to Rome

The best, with whom we may articulate,

For their own good, and ours.

Lart. I shall, my lord.

Cor. The gods begin to mock me. I, that now

Refus'd most princely gifts, am bound to beg

Of my lord general.

Com. Take it: it is yours.—What is't?

Cor. I sometime lay, here in Corioli,

At a poor man's house: he us'd me kindly:

He cried to me; I saw him prisoner;

But then Aufidius was within my view,

And wrath o'erwhelm'd my pity: I request you

To give my poor host freedom.

Com. O, well-begg'd! Were he the butcher of my son, he should Be free as is the wind. Deliver him, Titus.

Lart. Marcius, his name?

Cor. By Jupiter, forgot:—

I am weary; yea, my memory is tir'd.—

Have we no wine here?

Com. Go we to our tent.

The blood upon your visage dries; 'tis time

It should be look'd to. Come. [Exeunt.

SCENE X.—The Camp of the Volscs.

A Flourish. Cornets. Enter Tullus Aufidius, bloody, with two or three Soldiers.

Auf. The town is ta'en.

Sol. 'T will be deliver'd back on good condition.

Auf. Condition!—

I would I were a Roman; for I cannot,

Being a Volsc, be that I am.—Condition! What good condition can a treaty find

I the part that is at mercy?—Five times, Marcius,

I have fought with thee; so often hast thou beat me

And wouldst do so, I think, should we encounter
As often as we eat.—By the elements, if e'er again I meet him beard to beard, He is mine, or I am his. Mine emulation Hath not that honour in 't, it had; for where I thought to crush him in an equal force, True sword to sword, I 'll potch' at him some way, or wrath, or craft, may get him.

1 Sold. He's the devil.

Auf. Bolder, though not so subtle. My valour's poison'd.

With only suffering stain by him; for him 'T shall fly out of itself; nor sleep, nor sanctuary, Being naked, sick; nor fame, nor Capitol, The prayers of priests, nor times of sacrifice,

Embrages all of fury, shall lift up Their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst My hate to Marcus. Where I find him, were it At home, upon my brother's guard, even there, Against the hospitable canon, would I Wash my fierce hand in's heart.—Go you to the city Learn, how 't is held; and what they are, that must be hostages for Rome.

1 Sold. Will not you go?

Auf. I am attended at the cypress grove. I pray you, (T is south the city walls,) bring me word thither How the world goes, that to the pace of it I may spur on my journey.

1 Sold. I shall, sir. [Exeunt.}

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Public Place.
Enter Menenius, Sicinius, and Brutus.

Men. The augurer tells me, we shall have news tonight.

Bru. Good, or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Marcus.

Sic. Nature teaches beasts to know their friends.

Men. Pray you, whom does the wolf love?

Sic. The lamb.

Men. Ay, to devour him; as the hungry plebeians would the noble Marcus.

Bru. He's a lamb, indeed, that bears like a bear.

Men. He's a bear, indeed, that lives like a lamb. You two are old men: tell me one thing that I shall ask you.

Both Trib. Well, sir.

Men. In what enormity is Marcus poor in, that you two have not in abundance?

Bru. He's poor in no one fault, but stor'd with all.

Sic. Especially in pride.

Bru. And topping all others in boasting.

Men. This is strange now. Do you two know how you are censured here in the city, I mean of us the right-hand file? Do you?

Both Trib. Why, how are we censured?

Men. Because you talk of pride now,—Will you not be angry?

Both Trib. Well, well, sir; well.

Men. Why, 'tis no great matter; for a very little thief of occasion will rob you of a great deal of patience: give your dispositions the reins, and be angry at your pleasures; at the least, if you take it as a pleasure to you, in being so. You blame Marcus for being proud?

Bru. We do it not alone, sir.

Men. I know, you can do very little alone; for your helps are many, or else your actions would grow wondrous single: your abilities are too infant-like for doing much alone. You talk of pride: O! that you could turn your eyes toward the napes of your necks, and make but an interior survey of your good selves! O, that you could!

Bru. What then, sir?

Men. Why, then you should discover a brace of unmeriting, proud, violent, testy magistrates, (alias, fools) as any in Rome.

Sic. Menenius, you are known well enough, too.

Men. I am known to be a humorous patrician, and one that loves a cup of hot wine, without a drop of 1 Thrust at with a pointed instrument. 2 Embarrages. 3 with not: in f. e. 4 first: in f. e. 5 Blind. 6 rejoin: in f. e. 7 bleed: in f. e.

Within Corioli’s gates: where he hath been.
With fame; a name to Caius Marcius; these
In honour follows, Coriolanus:
Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus! [Flourish.
All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!
Cor. No more of this; it does offend my heart:
Pray now, no more.
Com.
Look, sir, your mother.—
Cor. O!
Vol. You have, I know, petition’d all the gods
For my prosperity.
[Knell Vol.
Nay, my good soldier, up;—
My gentle Marcius, worthy Caius, and
By doel-achieving honour newly nam’d,
What is it? Coriolanus, must I call thee?
But O! thy wife—
Cor. My gracious silence, hail! [Rising.’
Wouldst thou have laug’d, had I come offic’d home,
That weep’d to see me triumph? Ah! my dear,
Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear,
And mothers that lack sons.
Men.
Now, the gods crown thee!
Cor. And live you yet?—O my sweet lady, parden
[To Valeria.
Vol. I know not where to turn:—O! welcome home,
And welcome, general—and you are welcome all.
Men. A hundred thousand welcomes: I could weep
And I could laugh; I am light, and heavy. Welcome!
A curse begin at very root an’ heart,
That is not glad to see thee!—You are three,
That Rome should date on; yet, by the faith of men,
We have some old crab-trees here at home, that will not
Be graft’d to your relish. Yet welcome, warriors!
We call a nettle, but a nettle; and
The faults of fools, but folly.
Com.
Ever right.
Cor. Menenius, ever, ever.
Her. Give way there, and go on!
Cor.
Your hand,—and yours.
[To His Wife and Mother.
Ere in our own house I do shade my head,
The good patricians must be visited;
From whom I have receiv’d, not only greetings,
But with them charge of honours.
Vol. I have lived
To see inherited my very wishes,
And the buildings of my fancy:
Only there’s one thing wanting, which I doubt not,
But our Rome will cast upon thee.
Cor. Know, good mother,
I shall rather be their servant in my way,
Than sway with them in theirs.
Com.
On, to the Capitol!
[Flourish. Cornets., Exeunt in state, as before.
The Tribunes remain.
Brut. All tongues speak of him, and the blear’d sights
Are spectacled to see him: your prattling nurse
Into a rapture *lets her baby cry
While she cheers *him: the kitchen milkkin’ pins
Her richest lookram *bent her reechy *neck,
Clambering the walls to eye him: stools, bulks, windows,
Are smother’d up, leads fill’d, and ridges hord
With variable complexxions, all agreeing
In earnestness to see him: said-shown flamens
Do press among the popular throns, and puff
To win a vulgar station: our veil’d dames
Commit the war of white and damask, in
Their nicely-gauled cheeks, to the wanton spoil

SCENE II.—The Same. The Capitol.

Enter Two Officers, to lay Cushions.

1 Off. Come, come; they are almost here. How many stand for consulships?

2 Off. Three, they say; but 'tis thought of every one Cornioianus will carry it.

1 Off. That's a brave fellow; but he's thought of vengeance proud, and loves not the common people.

2 Off. 'Tis faith, there have been many great men that have flattered the people, who never loved them: and there be many that they have loved, they know not wherefore: so that, if they love they know not why, they hate upon no better a ground. Therefore, for Cornioianus neither to care whether they love or hate him manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition: and out of his noble careless, lets them plainly see 't.

1 Off. If he did not care whether he had their love or no, he would indifferently twixt them neither good, nor harm; but he seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him, and leaves nothing undone that may fully discover his opposition. Now, to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the people is as bad as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their love.

2 Off. He hath deserved worthily of his country; and his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those, who, having been supple and courteous to the people, bonneted, without any farther deal to have them at all into their estimation and report: but he hath so planted his honours in their eyes, and his actions in their hearts, that for their tongues to be silent, and not confess so much, were a kind of ingrateful injury, to report otherwise were a malice, that, giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard it.

1 Off. No more of him: he is a worthy man. Make way, they are coming.

A Scen. Enter, with Liports before them, Cominius the Consul, Menenius, Cornioianus, many other Senators, Sicinius and Brutus. The Senators take their places; the Tribunes take theirs also by themselves.

Men. Having determined of the Volscers, and to send for Titus Lartius, it remains, as the main point of this our after-meeting, to gratify his noble service that hath thus stood for his country. Therefore, please you most reverend and grave elders, to desire the present consul, and last general in our well-found successes, to report a little of that worthy work performed by Caius Marcus Cornioianus; whom we meet here, both to thank, and to remember with honours like himself.

1 Sen. Speak, good Cominius.

Leve nothing out for length, and make us think, rather our state's defective for requital, than we to stretch it out.—Masters of the people, we do request your kindest ears; and, after, your loving motion toward the common body, to yield what passes here.

Sic. We are convened upon a pleasing treatise; and have hearts inclined to honour and advance the theme of our assembly.

bru. Which the rather we shall be previ to do, if he remember a kinder value of the people, than COEIO LANUS.

I would you rather had been silent. Please you
To hear Cominius speak?

Bru. Most willingly;
But yet my caution was more pertinent,
Than the rebuke you give it.

Men. He loves your people;
But tie him not to be their bed-fellow.—
Worthy Cominius, speak.—Nay, keep your place.

[Coriolanus rises, and offers to go away.

1 Sen. Sit, Coriolanus: never shame to hear
What you have nobly done.

Cor. Your honour’s pardon:
I had rather have my wounds to heal again,
Than hear say how I got them.

Bru. Sir, I hope,
My words dis-bench’d you not.

Cor. No, sir: yet oft,
When blows have made me stay, I died from words.
You sooth’d not, therefore hurt not. But, your people,
I love them as they weigh.

Men. Pray now, sit down.

Cor. I had rather have one scratch my head i’ the sun,
When the alarum were struck, than idly sit
To hear nothings monster’d.

Men. Masters of the people,
Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter,
(That’s thousand to one good one) when you now see,
He had rather venture all his limbs for honour,
Than one on’s ears to hear it.—Proceed, Cominius.

Com. I shall lack voice: the deeds of Coriolanus
Should not be utter’d feebly.—It is held,
That valour is the chiefest virtue, and
Most dignifies the haver: if it be,
The man I speak of cannot in the world
Be singly counterpois’d. At sixteen years,
When Tarquin made a head for Rome, he fought
Beyond the mark of others: our then dictator,
Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight,
When with his Amazonian chin he drove
The bristled lips before him. He bestrode
An o’er-pressed Roman, and j’ the consul’s view
Slew three opposers: Tarquin’s self he met,
And struck him on his knee. In that day’s feats,
When he might act the woman in the scene,
He prov’d best man i’ the field; and for his meed
Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupil age
Man-enter’d thus, he waxed like a sea;
And in the brunt of seventeen battles since,
He lurch’d all swords of the garland. For this last
Before and in Corioli, let me say,
I cannot speak him home: he stopp’d the fliers,
And by his rare example made the coward
Turn terror into sport. As weeds before
A vessel under sail, so men obey’d,
And fell below his stem: his sword, death’s stamp,
Where it did mark, it took: from face to foot
He was a thing of blood, whose every motion
Was tuned with crying. Alone he enter’d
The mortal gate of the city, which he painted
With Thun’s distress, aimless came off,
And with a sudden re-inforcement struck
Corioli like a planet. Now all’s his;
When by and by the din of war ‘gan pierce
His ready sense: then, straight his doubled spirit
Re-quieten’d what in flesh was fatigate,
And to the battle came he; where he did
Run o’er the lives of men, as if they ‘T were a perpetual spoil; and till we call’d
Both field and city ours, he never stood
To ease his breast with panting.

Men. Worthy man!

1 Sen. He cannot but with measure fit the honours
Which we devise him.

Com. Our spoils he kick’d at;
And look’d upon things precious, as they were
The common muck of the world: he covets less
Than misery itself would give, rewards
His deeds with doing them, and is content
To spend the time to end it.

Men. He’s right noble:
Let him be called for.

1 Sen. Call Coriolanus.

Off. He doth appear.

Re-enter CORIO LANUS.

Men. The senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas’d
To make thee consul.

Cor. I do owe them still
My life, and services.

Men. It then remains,
That you do speak to the people.

Cor. I do beseech you,
Let me o’erleap that custom; for I cannot
Put on the gown, stand naked, and entreat them.
For my wounds’ sake, to give their suffrage: please you,
That I may pass this doing.

Sic. Sir, the people
Must have their voices; neither will they bate
One jot of ceremony.

Men. Put them not to’t,
Pray you, go sit you to the custom, and Take to you, as your predecessors have,
Your honour with your form.

Cor. It is a part
That I shall blush in acting, and might well
Be taken from the people.

Bru. Mark you that? [To Sicinius.

Cor. To brag unto them,—thus I did, and thus;
Show them th’ unaching scars which I should hide,
As if I had receiv’d them for the hire
Of their breath only.—

Men. Do not stand upon’t.—We recommend to you, tribunes of the people,
Our purpose:—to them, and to our noble consul,
Wish we all joy and honour.

Sen. To Coriolanus come all joy and honour!

[Flourish. Exeunt Senators.

Bru. You see how he intends to use the people.

Sic. May they perceive its intent! He will require them,
As if he did contemn what he requested
Should be in them to give.

Bru. Come; we’ll inform them
Of our proceedings here: on the market-place,
I know they do attend us.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. The Forum.

Enter several Citizens.

1 Cit. Once, if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him

2 Cit. We may, sir, if we will.

3 Cit. We have power in ourselves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do: for if he show us his wounds, and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds, and speak for them; so, if he tells us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monstrous, and for the multitude to be ingrateful were to make a

1 Gained by an easy victory. 2 timed: in f. e. 3 Not in f e monster of the multitude; of the which we, being members, should bring ourselves to be monstrous members.

1 Cit. And to make us no better thought of, a little help will serve: for once, when we stood up about the corn, he himself stuck not to call us the many-headed multitude.

2 Cit. We have been called so of many; not that our heads are some brown, some black, some auburn, some bald, but that our wits are so diversely coloured: and truly, I think, if all our wits were to burst out of one skull, they would fly east, west, north, south; and their consent of one direct way should be at once to all he points o' the compass.

2 Cit. Think you so? Which way, do you judge, my wit would fly?

3 Cit. Nay, your wit will not so soon out another man's will: 'tis strongly wedged up in a block-head; but if it were at liberty, 't would, sure, southward.

2 Cit. Why that way?

3 Cit. To lose itself in a fog; where, being three parts melted away with rotten dews, the fourth would return, for conscience sake, to help to get thee a wife.

2 Cit. You are never without your tricks:—you may, you may.

3 Cit. Are you all resolved to give your voices? But that's no matter; the greater part carries it. I say, if he would incline to the people, there was never a worthier man.

Enter Coriolanus and Menenius.

Here he comes, and in the gown of humility: mark his behaviour. We are not to stay altogether, but to come by him, where he stands, by ones, by twos, and by threes. He's to make his requests by particulars; wherein every one of us has a single honour, in giving him our own voices with our own tongues: therefore, follow me, and I'll direct you how you shall go by him.

All. Content, content. [Exeunt.

Men. O sir! you are not right: have you not known The worthiest men have done 't?

Cor. What must I say?—

I pray, sir.—Plague upon 't! I cannot bring My tongue to such a pace. —Look, sir,—my wounds;— I got them in my country's service, when Some certain of your brethren roarr'd, and ran From the noise of our own drums.

Men. O me, the gods! You must not speak of that: you must desire them To think upon you.

Cor. Think upon me? Hang 'em! I would they would forget me, like the virtues Which our divines lose by 'em.

Men. You'll mar all:

I'll leave you. Pray you, speak to them, I pray you, In wholesome manner. [Exit.

Enter two Citizens.

Cor. Bid them wash their faces,
And keep their teeth clean. —So, here comes a brace. —
You know the cause, sir, of my standing here.

1 Cit. We do, sir: tell us what hath brought you to 't.

Cor. Mine own desert.

2 Cit. Your own desert?

Cor. Ay, not

Mine own desert.

1 Cit. How! got your own desire?

Cor. No, sir: 'twas never my desire yet,
To trouble the poor with begging.

1 Cit. You must think, if we give you any thing, we hope to gain by you.

Cor. Well then, I pray, your price o' the consulship?

[Exeunt Citizens.

Cor. Kindly?

1 Cit. The price is, to ask it kindly.

Cor. Sir, I pray, let me ha' t: I have wounds to show you,
Which shall be yours in private.—Your good voice, sir;
What say you?

2 Cit. You shall ha' t, worthy sir.

Cor. A match, sir.—

There is in all two worthy voices beggars.

I have your alms; adieu.

1 Cit. But this is something odd.

2 Cit. An 't were to give again,—but 't is no matter. [Exeunt the two Citizens.

Enter two other Citizens.

Cor. Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voices that I may be consul, I have here the customary gown.

3 Cit. You have deserved nobly of your country,
And you have not deserved nobly.

Cor. Your enigma?

3 Cit. You have been a scourge to her enemies, you have been a rod to her friends: you have not, indeed, loved the common people.

Cor. You should account me the more virtuous, that I have not been common in my love. I will not, sir, flatter my sworn brothers, the people, to earn a dearer estimation of them: 'tis a condition they account gentle; and since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have my hat than my heart, I will practise the insinuating nod, and be off to them most counterfeitley: that is, sir, I will counterfeit the bewitchment of some popular man, and give it bountifully to the desirers. Therefore, beseech you, I may be consul.

4 Cit. We hope to find you our friend, and therefore give you our voices heartily.

3 Cit. You have received many wounds for your country.

Cor. I will not stale your knowledge with showing them. I will make much of your voices, and so trouble you no farther.

Both Cit. The gods give you joy, sir, heartily. [Exeunt.

Cor. Most sweet voices!—

Better it is to die, better to starve,
Than crave the hire which first we do deserve.

Why in this woolless' toge should I stand here,
To beg of Hob and Dick, that do appear,
Their needless vouches? Custom calls me to 't:—

What custom wills, in all things should we 't,
The dust on antique time would lie unswept,
And mountainous error be too highly heap'd
For truth to o'er-peer. —Rather than fool it so,
Let the high office and the honour go
To one that would do thus.—I am half through.
The one part suffer'd, the other will I do.

Enter three other Citizens.

Here come more voices.—

Your voices: for your voices I have fought;
Watch'd for your voices; for your voices bear
Of wounds two dozen odd; battles thrice six
I have seen, and heard of: for your voices,
Have done many things, some less, some more.

Your voices; for indeed, I would be consul.

5 Cit. He has done nobly, and cannot go without any honest man's voice.

6 Cit. Therefore, let him be consul. The gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people.

All. Amen, amen. [Exeunt Citizens.

God save thee, noble consul! — Worthy voices!
Scene III.

Coriolanus.

Re-enter Menenius, with Brutus, and Sicinius.

Men. You have stood your limitation; and the tribunes
Endue you with the people's voice: remains
That, in't official marks invested, you
Anon do meet the senate.

Cor. Is this done?

Sic. The custom of request you have discharg'd:
The people to admit you: and are summon'd
To meet anon upon your approbation.

Cor. Where? at the senate-house?

Sic. There, Coriolanus.

Cor. May I change these garments?

Sic. You may, sir.

Cor. That I'll straight do; and, knowing myself again,
Repair to the senate-house.

Men. I'll keep you company.—Will you along?

Brut. We stay here for the people.

Sic. Fare you well.—[Exit Coriol. and Menenius.

He has it now; and by his looks, methinks,
'Tis warm at 's heart.

Brut. With a proud heart he wore
His humble weeds. Will you dismiss the people?

Re-enter Citizens.

Sic. How now, my masters! have you chose this man?

1 Cit. He has our voices, sir.

Brut. We pray the gods he may deserve your loves.

2 Cit. Amen, sir. To my poor unworthy notice, He mock'd us when he begg'd our voices.

3 Cit. Certainly, he flout'd us down-right.

1 Cit. No, 'tis his kind of speech: he did not mock us.

2 Cit. Not one amongst us, save yourself, but says, He us'd us scornfully: he should have show'd us
His marks of merit, wounds receiv'd for his country.

Sic. Why, so he did, I am sure.

All. No, no; no man saw 'em.

3 Cit. He said, he had wounds, which he could show
In private;

And with his hat thus waving it in scorn, "I would be consil,"] says he: "aged custom,
But by your voices, will not so permit me;
Your voices therefore? When we granted that, Here was.—"I thank you for your voices,—thank you,—Your most sweet voices:—now you have left your voices, I have no farther with you."—Was not this mockery?

Sic. Why, either, were you ignorant to see it, Or, seeing it, of such childish friendliness
To yield your voices?

Brut. Could you not have told him,
As you were less'd, when he had no power,
But was a petty servant to the state,
He was your enemy; ever spake against
Your liberties, and the charters that you bear
I the body of the weal: and now, arriving
A place of potency, and sway if the state,
If he should still malignantly remain
Fust foes to the plebeians, your voices might Excurses to yourselves. You should have said, That, as his worthy deeds did claim no less Than what he stood for, so his gracious nature
Would think upon you for your voices, and Translate his malice towards you into love,
Standing your friendly lord.

Sic. Thus to have said,
As you were fore-adviz'd, had touch'd his spirit, And tried his inclination; from him pluck'd Either his gracious promise, which you might,
As cause had call'd you up, have held him to,
Or else it would have gall'd his surly nature,

Which easily endures not article
Tying him to aught; so, putting him to rage
You should have taken the advantage of his choler,
And pass'd him unheeded.

Brut. Did you perceive,
He did solicit you in free contempt,
When he did need your loves, and do you think,
That his contempt shall not be bruising to you,
When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies
No heart among you? or had you tongues to cry
Against the rectorship of judgment?

Sic. Have you,
Ere now, denied the asker; and, now again,
Or him, that did not ask, but mock, bestow
Your sued-for tongues?

3 Cit. He's not confirmed; we may deny him yet.

2 Cit. And will deny him:
'I'll have five hundred voices of that sound.

1 Cit. Ay, twice five hundred, and their friends to piece 'em.

Brut. Get you hence instantly, and tell those friends,
They have chose a consul that will from them take
Their liberties; make them of no more voice
Than dogs, that are as often beat for barking,
As therefore kept to do so.

Sic. Let them assemble;

And on a safer judgment, all revoke
Your ignorant election. Enforce his pride,
And his old hate unto you: besides, forget not
With what contempt he wore the humble weeds,
How in his suit he scorn'd you; but your loves,
Thinking upon his services, took from you
The apprehension of his present portance,
Which most glibly, ungravelly, he did fashion
After the inveterate hate he bears you.

Brut. Lay
A fault on us, your tribunes; that we labour'd
(No impediment between) but that you must Cast your election on him.

Sic. Say, you chose him
More after our commandment, than as guided
By your own true affections; and that, your minds,
Pre-occupy'd with what you rather must do,
Than what you should, made you against the grain
To voice him consul. Lay the fault on us.

Brut. Ay, spare us not. Say, we read lectures to you,
How younly he began to serve his country,
How long continued, and what stock he springs of,
The noble house of the Marcians: from whence came
That Ancus Marcius, Numia's daughter's son,
Who, after great Hostilius, here was king.
Of the same house Publius and Quintus were,
That our best water brought by conduits hither,
And Censorinus, darling of the people?

And nobly nam'd so, twice being censor,
Was his great ancestor.

Sic. One thus descend'd,
That hath beside well in his person won't
To be set high in place, we did commend
To your remembrances; but you have found,
Scaling his present bearing with his past,
That he's your fixed enemy, and revoke
Your sudden approbation.

Brut. Say, you no'er had done't.

(Harp on that still) but by our putting on
And presently, when you have drawn your number,
Repair to the Capitol.

All. We will so: almost all
Repent in their election.

[Exeunt Citizens]
ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Same. A Street.

Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, COMINIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, Senators, and Patricians.

Cor. Titus Aufidius, then, had made new head? Lart. He had, my lord; and that it was, which caus'd our swifter composition.

Cor. So then, the Volscæs stand but as at first; Ready, when time shall prompt them, to make road Upon us again.

Com. They are worn, lord consul, so, That we shall hardly in our ages see Their banners wave again.

Cor. Saw you Aufidius?

Lart. On safe-guard he came to me: and did curse Against the Volscæs, for they had so vilely Yielded the town: he is retir'd to Antium.

Cor. Spoke he of me?

Lart. He did, my lord.

Cor. How? what? How often had he met you, sword to sword; That of all things upon the earth he hated Your person most; that he would pawn his fortunes To hopeless restitution, so he might Be call'd your vanquisher.

Cor. At Antium lives he?

Lart. At Antium.

Cor. I wish, I had a cause to seek him there, To oppose his hatred fully.—Welcome home.

[To LARTIUS.

Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Behold! these are the tribunes of the people. The tongues o' the common mouth. I do despise them, For they do prank them in authority, Against all noble suffersance.

Sic. Pass no farther.

Bru. It will be dangerous to go on: no farther.

Cor. What makes this change?

Men. The matter.

Com. Hath he not pass'd the nobles, and the commons?

Bru. Cominius, no.

Cor. Have I had children's voices?

Sen. Tribunes, give way: he shall to the market-place.

Bru. The people are incensed against him.

Sic. Or all will fall in broil.

Cor. Are these your herd?— Must these have voices, that can yield them now, And straight disclaim their tongues?—What are your offices? You being their mouths, why rule you not their teeth? Have you not set them on?

Men. Be calm, be calm.

Cor. It is a purpos'd thing, and grows by plot, To curb the will of the nobility: Suffer 't, and live with such as cannot rule, Nor ever will be rul'd.

Sic. The vantage of his anger.

Men. To the Capitol:

Cor. Why, this was known before.

Sic. Have you inform'd them since?

Bru. How! I inform them?

Com. You are like to do such business.

Men. Not unlike, Each way, to better yours.

Cor. Why, then, should I be consul? By yond' clouds, Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me Your fellow tribune.

Sic. You show too much of that, For which the people stir. If you will pass To where you are bound, you must inquire your way, Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit; Or never be so noble a consul, Nor yoke with him for tribune.

Men. Let's be calm.

Com. The people are abused: set on.—This paltering Becomes not Rome; nor has Corioli

Deserv'd this so dishonest' rub, laid falsely I' the plain way of his merit.

Cor. Tell me of corn!

Men. This was my speech, and I will speak't again—

Men. Not now, not now. Not in this heat, sir, now Cor. Now, as I live, I will.—My nobler friends, I crave their pardons:— For the mutable, rank-scented many, let them Regard me as I do not flatter, and Therein behold themselves. I say again, In soothing them we nourish 'gainst our senate The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition, Which we ourselves have plough'd for, sow'd, and scatter'd, By mingling with us the honour'd number; Who lack not virtue, no, nor power, but that Which they have given to beggars.

Men. Well, no more.

Sen. No more words, we beseech you.

Cor. How! no more?

Men. As for my country I have shed my blood, Not fearing outward force, so shall my lungs Coin words till they decay against those meazels, Which we disdain should tetter us, yet sought The very way to catch them.

Bru. You speak o' the people,

Men. As if you were a god to punish, not A man of their indifference.

Sic. 'T were well, We let the people know 't.

Men. What, what? his chol're?

Cor. Choler!

Were I as patient as the midnight sleep,
By Jove, 't would be my mind.

Sic. It is a mind,
That shall remain a poison where it is;
Not poison any farther. Cor.

Shall remain!—
Hear you this Triton of the minnows? mark you
His absolute "shall"?

Com. "T was from the canon.

Shall!"

O, good but most unwise patricians! why,
You grave but reckless senators, have you thus
Given Hydra 1st to choose an officer,
That with his peremptory "shall," being but
The horn and noise o' the monster, wants not spirit
To say, he'll turn your current in a ditch,
And make your channel his? If he have power,
Then vail your importance; if none, revoke* Your dangerous bounty. If you are learned,
Re not as common fools; if you are not,
Let them have eulogies by you. You are plebeians,
If they be senators; and they are no less.
When both your voices blended, the greatest taste
Most palates theirs. They choose their magistrate;
And such a one as he, who puts his "shall."
His popular "shall," against a graver bench.

Than ever frown'd in Greece. By Jove himself,
It makes the counsellors base; and my soul aches
To know, when two authorities are up,
Neither supreme, how soon confusion
May enter 'twixt the gap of both, and take
The one by the other.

Com. Well—on to the market-place.

Cor. Whoever gave that counsel, to give forth
The corn o' the store-house gratis, as 'twas used
Sometimes in Greece,—

Men. Well, well; no more of that.

Cor. Though there the people had more absolute
power,
I say, they nourish'd disobedience, fed
The ruin of the state.

Bru. Why shall the people give
One that speaks thus their voice?

Cor. I'll give my reasons,
More worthier than their voices. They know the corn
Was not their* recompense, resting well assured,
They ne'er did service for. Being press'd to the war,
Even when the navel of the state was touch'd,
They would not thread the gates: this kind of service
Did not deserve corn gratis: being 'tis the war;
Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they show'd
Most valour, spoke not for them. Th' ascension
Which they have often made against the senate,
All cause unborn, could never be the motive* Of our so frank donation. Well, what then?
How shall this bison? multitude? digest
The senate's courtesy? Let deeds express
What's like to be their words:—"We did request it;
We are the greater poll, and in true fear
They gave us our demands."—Thus we debase
The nature of our seats, and make the rabble
Call our cares, fears; which in time will break ope
The locks o' the senate, and bring in the crows
To peck the eagles.—

Men. Come, enough.

Bru. Enough, with over-measure.

Cor. No, take more:
What may be sworn by, both divine and human,
Seal what I end withal!—This double worship,—

Where one part does disdain with ease, the other
Result without all reason; where gentry, title, wisdom
Cannot conclude, but by the yea and no
Of general ignorance,—it must omit
Real necessities, and give way the while.
To unstable slightness. Purpose so hard'd, it follows
Nothing is done to purpose: therefore, beseech you,
You that will be less fearful than discreet,
That love the fundamental part of state
More than you doubt the change on't; that prefer
A noble life before a long, and wish
To jump* a body with a dangerous physic
That's sure of death without it, at once pluck out
The multidinous tongue: let them not lick
The sweet which is their poison. Your dishonour
Mangles true judgment, and bereaves the state
Of that integrity which should become it,
Not having the power to do the good it would,
For th' ill which both control it.

Bru. He has said enough

Sic. He has spoken like a traitor, and shall answer
As traitors do.

Cor. Thou wretch! despite overwhelm thee!—

What should the people do with these bald tribunes?
On whom, depending, their obedience falls
To the greater bench. In a rebellion
When what's not meet, but what must be, was law,
Then were they chosen: in a better hour,
Let what is meet be said, it must be meet,
And throw their power i' the dust.

Bru. Manifest treason.

Sic. This a consul? no.

Bru. The AEdiles, ho!—Let him be apprehended.

Enter an AEdile.

Sic. Go, call the people; [Exit AEdile.] in whose name, myself

Attach thee as a traitorous innovator,
A foe to the public weal. Obev, I charge thee,
And follow to thine answer.

Cor. Hence, old goat!

Sen. We'll surety him.

Com. Aged sir, hands off.

Cor. Hence, rotten thing, or I shall shake thy bones
Out of thy garments.

Sic. Help, ye citizens!

Re-enter the AEdile, with others, and a Rabble of Citizens.

Men. On both sides more respect.

Sic. Here's he, that would Take from you all your power.

Bru. Seize him, AEdiles.

Cit. Down with him! down with him! [Several speak.

2 Sen. Weapons! weapons! weapons!

[They all bustle about CORIOLANUS.

Tribunes, patricians, citizens!—what ho!

Sicinius, Brutus, Coriolanus, citizens!

Cit. Peace, peace, peace! stay, hold, peace!

Men. What is about to be?—I am out of breath;
Confusion's near: I cannot speak.—You, tribunes
To the people,—Coriolanus, patience:

Speak, good Sicinius.

Sic. Hear me! people, peace!

Cit. Let 's hear our tribune:—Peace! Speak, speak, speak.

Sic. You are at point to lose your liberties:

Marcius would have all from you; Marcius,
Whom late you have nam'd for consul.

Men. Fie, fie! This is the way to kindle, not to quench.
Sc. To unbuild the city, and to lay all flat.
Sic. What is the city, but the people?
Cit. True;
The people are the city.
Bru. By the consent of all, we were establish'd
The people's magistrates.
Cit. You so remain.
Men. And so are like to do.
Com. That is the way to lay the city flat;
To bring the roof to the foundation,
Andbury all, which yet distinctly ranges,
In heaps and piles of ruin.
Sic. This deserves death.
Bru. Or let us stand to our authority,
Or let us lose it.—We do here pronounce,
Upon the part of the people, in whose power
We were elected theirs, Marcus is worthy
Of present death.
Sic. Therefore, lay hold of him.
Bear him to the rock Tarpeian, and from thence
Into destruction cast him.
Bru. Ædiles, seize him.
Cit. Yield, Marcus, yield.
Men. Hear me one word.
Beseech you, tribunes, hear me but a word.
Ædi. Peace, peace!
Men. Be that you seem, truly your country's friend,
And temperately proceed to what you would
Thus violently redress.
Bru. Sir, those cold ways,
That seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous
Where the disease is violent.—Lay hands upon him,
And bear him to the rock.
Cor. No; I'll die here. [Drawing his Sword.
There's some among you that beheld me fighting:
Come, try upon yourselves what you have seen me.
Men. Down with that sword!—Tribunes, withdraw a while.
Bru. Lay hands upon him.
Men. Help Marcus, help,
You that be noble; help him, young and old!
Cit. Down with him! down with him!
[In this mutiny, the Tribunes, the Ædiles, and the People, are beat in.
Men. Go, get you to your house: be gone, away!
All will be naught else.
2 Sen. Get you gone.
Com. Stand fast;
We have as many friends as enemies.
Men. Shall it be put to that?
1 Sen. The gods forbid!
I pray thee, noble friend, home to thy house;
Leave us to cure this cause.
Men. For 'tis a sore upon us,
You cannot Tent yourself. Begone, 'beseech you.
Com. Come, sir, along with us.
Cor. I would they were barbarians, as they are,
Though in Rome litter'd, not Romans, as they are not,
Though cal'd i' the porch of the Capitol!
Men. Go be;
Put not your worthy rage into your tongue:
One time will owe another.
Cor. I could beat forty of them.
Men. I could myself.
Take up a brace of the best of them; yea, the two tribunes.
Com. But now 'tis odds beyond arithmetic;
And manhood is call'd folly, when it stands
Against a falling fabric.—Will you hence,
by many an ounce) he dropp'd it for his country;
And what is left, to lose it by his country,
Wore to us all, that do't and suffer it,
A brand to th' end of the world.

Sic. This is clean kam.

Bru. Merely awry. When he did love his country,
It honour'd him.

Men. The service of the foot.
Being once gangren'd, is not then respected
For what before it was.

Bru. We'll hear no more.—
Purse him to his house, and pluck him thence,
Lest his infection, being of catching nature,
Spread farther.

Men. One word more, one word.
This tiger-footed rage, when it shall find
The harm of unscan'd swiftness, will, too late,
Tie leaden pounds to his heels. Proceed by process;
Lest parties (as he is belov'd) break out,
And sack great Rome with Romans.

If it were so,—

Sic. What do ye talk?
Have we not had a taste of his obedience?
Our Aediles smote? ourselves resisted?—Come!—

Men. Consider this:—he has been bred 't the wars
Since he could draw a sword, and is ill school'd
In boulted language; meal and bran together
He throws without distinction. Give me leave,
I'll go to him, and undertake to bring him in peace
Where he shall answer, by a lawful form,
In peace, to his utmost peril.

Noble tribunes,
It is the humane way: the other course
Will prove too bloody, and the end of it
Unknown to the beginning.

Noble Menenius,
Be you, then, as the people's officer.
Masters, lay down your weapons.

Go not home.

Sic. Meet on the market-place.—We'll attend you there:
Where, if you bring not Marcius, we'll proceed
In our first way.

Men. I'll bring him to you.
Let me desire your company. [To the Senators.] He must come,
Or what is worst will follow.

Pray you, let's to him. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in Coriolanus's House.

Enter Coriolanus, and Patricians.

Cor. Let them pull all about mine ears: present me
Death on the wheel, or at wild horses' heels;
Or pile ten hills on the Tarpeian rock.
That the precipitation might down stretch
Below the beam of sight, yet will I still
Be true to them.

You do the noblest.

Cor. I muse my mother
Does not approve me farther, who was wont
To call them woollen vassals: things created
To buy and sell with groats; to show bare heads
In congregations, to yaw, be still, and wonder,
When one but of my ordinance stood up
To speak of peace, or war.

Enter Volumnia.

I talk of you:
Why did you wish me milder? Would you have me
False to my nature? Rather say, I play
The man I am.

Vol. O, son, son, son! I would have had you put your power well on,
Before you had worn it out.

Cor. Let go.

Vol. You might have been enough the man you are
With striving less to be so: lesser had been
The thwartings of your dispositions, if
You had not show'd them how you were dispos'd,
Ere they lack'd power to cross you.

Cor. Let them hang.

Vol. Ay, and burn too.

Enter Menenius, and Senators.

Men. Come, come: you have been too rough, some-thing too rough:
You must return, and mend it.

There's no remedy;

Unless, by not so doing, our good city
Cleave in the midst, and perish.

Pray, be counsel'd I have a heart as little apt as yours
To brook control without the use of anger,
But yet a brain, that leads my use of anger
To better vantage.

Men. Well said, noble woman!
Before he should thus stop o' the heart, but that
The violent fit o' the time craves it as physic
For the whole state, I would put mine armour on,
Which I can scarcely bear.

What must I do?

Men. Return to the tribunes.

Cor. Well, what then? what then?

Men. Repent what you have spoke.

Cor. For them?—I cannot do it to the gods;
Must I then do't to them?

You are too absolute;

Though therein you can never be too noble,
But when extremities speak. I have heard you say,
Honour and policy, like never'st friends,
I the war do grow together: grant that, and tell me.
In peace what each of them by th' other lose,
That they combine not there?

Tush, tush!

Men. A good demand

Vol. If it be honour in your wars to seem
The same you are not. (which for your best ends
You adopt your policy) how is it less, or worse,
That it shall hold companionship in peace
With honour, as in war, since that to both
It stands in like request?

Why force you this?

Vol. Because that now it lies you on to speak
To the people: not by your own instruction,
Nor by the matter which your heart prompts you,
But with such words that are but roset'd in
Your tongue, though but bastards, and syllables
Of no allowance to your bosom's truth.
Now, this no more dishonours you at all.
Than to take in a town with gentle words,
Which else would put you to your fortune, and
The hazard of much blood.—
I would dissemble with my nature, where,
My fortunes and my friends at stake, requir'd
I should do so in honour: I am in this,
Your wife, your son, these senators, the nobles;
And you will rather show our general botes
How you can frown, than spend a fawn upon 'em,
For the inheritance of their loves, and safeguard
Of what that want might ruin.

Men. Noble lady!—
Come, go with us: speak fair; you may salve so,
Not what is dangerous present, but the loss
Of what is past.

Vol. I pr'ythee now, my son,
Go to them, with this bonnet in thy hand;
And thus far having stretched it. (here be with them)
Thy knee bussing the stones, (for in such business
Action is eloquence, and the eyes of the ignorant
More learned than the ears) waving thy head,
Whence often, thus, correcting thy stout heart,
Now's humble as the ripen mulberry
That will not hold the handling. Or say to them,
Thou art their soldier, and being bred in brols,
Hast not the soft way, which thou dost confess,
Were fit for thee to use as they to claim,
In asking their good loves; but thou wilt frame
Thyself, forsooth, hereafter theirs, so far
As thou hast power, and person.

Men. This but done,
Even as she speaks, why, their hearts were yours;
For they have pardons, being ask'd, as free
As words to little purpose.

Vol. Pr'ythee now, say you will, and go about it.

Cor. Must I go show them my unbarred seence?
Must I with my base tonge give to my noble heart
A lie, that it must bear? Well, I will do't:
Yet were there but this single plot to lose,
Thus mould of Marcus, they to dust should grind it,
And throw't against the wind.—To the market-place!
You have put me now to such a part, which never
I shall discharge to the life.

Com. Cor. That be, we'll prompt you at.

Vol. I pr'ythee now, sweet son; as thou hast said,
My praises made thee first a soldier, so,
To have my praise for this, perform a part
Thou hast not done before.

Cor. Well, I must do't.

Away, my disposition, and possess me
Some harlot's spirit! My throat of war be turn'd,
Which quired with my drum, into a pipe
Small as an eunuch, or the virgin voice
That baby's humbles! The smiles of knaves
Tent in my cheeks; and school-boys' tears take up
The glasses of my sight! A beggar's tongue
Make motion through my lips; and my arm'd knees,
Who bow'd but in my stirrup, bend like his
That hath receiv'd an alms!—I will not do't,
Lest I surcase to honour mine own truth,
And by my body's action teach my mind
A most inherent baseness.

Vol. At thy choice, then:
To be or of thee it is my more dishonour,
Than they of them. Come all to ruin: let Thy mother rather feel thy pride, than fear

Thy dangerous stoutness; for I mock at death
With as big heart as thou. Do as thou list.
Thy valianstaff was mine, thou suck'dst it from me.
But ow'st' thy pride thyself.

Cor. Pray, be content:
Mother, I am going to the market-place;
Chide me no more. I'll mounteaback their loves,
Cog their hearts from them, and come home below'd
Of all the trades in Rome. Look, I am going.
Commend me to my wife. I'll return consul,
Or never trust to what my tongue can do
I' the way of flattery farther.

Vol. Do your will. [Exit.

Com. Away! the tribunes do attend you; arm yourself
To answer mildly; for they are prepar'd
With accusations, as I hear, more strong
Than are upon you yet.

Cor. The word is, mildly,—pray you, let us go.
Let them accuse me by invention, I
Will answer in mine honour.

Men. Ay, but mildly.

Cor. Well, mildly be it then; mildly. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. The Forum.

Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Bru. In this point charge him home; that he affect Tyraanical power: if he evade us there,
Enforce him with his envy to the people;
And that the spoil got on the Antiates
Was ne'er distributed.—

Enter an Adile.

What will he come?

Adil. He's coming.

Bru. How accompanied?

Adil. With old Menenius, and those senators
That always favour'd him.

Sec. Have you a catalogue
Of all the voices that we have procur'd,
Set down by the poll?

Adil. I have; 't is ready.

Sec. Have you collected them by tribes?

Adil. I have.

Sec. Assembly presently the people hither:
And when they hear me say, "It shall be so,
I' the right and strength of the commons" be it either for death, for fine, or banishment, then let them,
If I say, fine, cry; "fine"; if death, cry "death";
Judging on their old prerogative
And power 't the truth o' the cause.

Adil. I shall inform them.

Bru. And when such time they have begun to cry,
Let them not cease, but with a din confus'd
Enforce the present execution
Of what we chance to sentence.

Adil. Very well.

Sec. Make them be strong, and ready for this hint,
When we shall hap to give 't them.

Bru. Go; about it. [Exit Adile.

Put him to choler straight. He hath been us'd
Ever to conquer, and to have his mouth
Of contradiction: being once chaft'd, he cannot Be rein'd again to temperance; then he speaks
What 's in his heart; and that is there, which looks
With us to break his neck.

Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, Cominius, Senators, and Patricians.

Sec. Well, here he comes.

Men. Calmly, I do beseech you

\[note: 1. owe: in f. e 2. Hated: in f. e. 3. worth: in f. e.]\
Cor. Ay, as an eserler, that for the poorest piece
Will bear the knave by the volume.—The honour'd gods
Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice
Supplied with worthy men! plant love among us!
Thro' our large temples with the shows of peace,
And not our streets with war!
I Sen.
Amen, amen.

Men. A noble wish.

Re-enter Edile, with Citizens.

Sic. Draw near, ye people.

Ed. List to your tribunes. Audience: peace! I say.

Cor. First, hear me speak.

Both Tri. Well, say,—Peace, ho!

Cor. Shall I be charg'd no farther than this present?

Must all determine here?

Sic. I do demand,
If you submit you to the people's voices,
Allow their officers, and are content
To suffer lawful censure for such faults
As shall be prov'd upon you?

Cor. I am content.

Men. Lo! citizens! he says, he is content.
The warlike service he has done, consider:
Think upon the wounds his body bears, which show
Like graves i' the holy churchyard.

Cor. Scratches with briars;
Scars to move laughter only.

Men. Consider farther,
That when he speaks not like a citizen,
You find him like a soldier. Do not take
His rougher accents for malicious sounds,
But, as I say, such as become a soldier,
Rather than envy you.

Com. Well, well; no more.

Cor. What is the matter.
That being pass'd for consul with full voice,
I am so dishonour'd. that the very hour
You take it off again?

Sic. Answer to us.

Cor. Say then: 'tis true, I ought so.

Sic. We charge you, that you have contriv'd to take
From Rome all season'd office, and to wind
Yourself into a power tyrannical:
For which you are a traitor to the people.

Cor. How! Traitor?

Men. Nay, temperately; your promise.

Cor. The fires i' the lowest hell fold in the people?
Call me their traitor?—Thou injurious tribunal,
Within thine eyes sat twenty thousand deaths,
In thy hands clutch'd as many millions. in Thy lying tongue both numbers, I would say,
Thou liest, unt to thee, with a voice as free
As I do pray the gods.

Sic. Mark you thin, people?

Cit. To the rock! to the rock with him!

Sic. Peace! We need not put new matter to his charge:
What you have seen him do, and heard him speak,
Beating your officers, cursing yourselves,
Opposing laws with strokes, and here defy ing
Those whose great power must try him; even this,
So criminal, and in such capital kind,
Deserves th' extremest death.

Bru. But since he hath Serv'd well for Rome,—

Cor. What do you prate of service?

Bru. I talk of that, that know it.

Cor. You?

Men. Is this

The promise that you made your mother?

Com. Know.

I pray you,—

Cor. I'll know no farther.

Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian death,
Vagabond exile, flaying, pent to finger
But with a grain a day, I would not buy
Their mercy at the price of one fair word,
Nor check my carriage for what they can give,
To have 't with saying, good morrow.

For that he has
(As much as in him lies) from time to time
Envied against the people, seeking means
To pluck away their power; as now at last
Given hostile strokes, and that not in the presence
Of dreaded justice, but on the ministers
That do distribute it; in the name of the people,
And in the power of us, the tribunes, we,
Even from this instant, banish him our city,
In peril of precipitation
From off the rock Tarpeian, never more.
To enter our Rome gates. I, the people's name,
I say, it shall be so.

Cit. It shall be so, it shall be so: let him away.

He's banish'd, and it shall be so.

Com. Hear me, my masters, and my common

Men, his sentenc'd: no more hearing.

Sic. Let me speak
I have been consul, and can show for Rome,
Her enemies' marks upon me. I do love
My country's good, with a respect more tender,
More holy and profound, than mine own life,
My dear wife's estimate, her womb's increase,
And treasure of my loins; then, if I would Speak that—

Sic. We know your drift. Speak what?

Bru. There's no more to be said: but he is banish'd
As enemy to the people, and his country.
It shall be so.

Cit. It shall be so: it shall be so.

Cor. You common cry of curs! whose breath I hate
As reck o' the rotten fens, whose loves I prize
As the dead carcasses of unburied men
That do corrupt my air, I banish you;
And here remain with your uncertainty.
Let every feeble rumour shake your hearts!
Your enemies, with nodding of their plumes,
Fan you into despair! Have the power still
To banish your defenders; till, at length.
Your ignorance, (which finds not, till it feels)
Making not reservation of yourselves,
(Still your own foes) deliver you as most Abated captives, to some nation
That won you without blows! Despising,
For you, the city, thus I turn my back.
There is a world elsewhere.

[Exeunt Coriolanus, Cominius, Menenius,
Senators, and Patricians.

Edil. The people's enemy is gone, is gone!

Cit. Our enemy is banish'd! he is gone! Hoo! hoo
[The People shout, and throw up their Caps.

Sic. Go, see him out at gates; and follow him,
As he hath follow'd you, with all despite;
Give him deserv'd vexation. Let a guard
Attend us through the city.

Cit. Come, come; let us see him out at gates: come.—
The gods preserve our noble tribunes!—Come. [Exeunt.
ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same. Before a Gate of the City.

Enter CORIOLANUS, VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, MENENIUS, COMINUS, and several young Patricians.

Cor. Come, leave your tears: a brief farewell.—The beast.

With many heads butt me away.—Nay, mother, Where is your ancient courage? you were us'd To say, extremity was the trier of spirits: That common chances common men could bear; That, when the sea was calm, all boats alike Show'd mastership in floating: fortune's blows, When most struck home, being gentle minded' craves A noble cunning. You were us'd to load me With precepts, that would make invincible The heart that conn'd them.

Vir. O heavens! O heavens!

Cor. Nay, I pr'ythee, woman.—

Vol. Now, the red pestilence strike all trades in Rome, And occupations perish!

Cor. What, what, what! I shall be lov'd when I am lack'd. Nay, mother, Resume that spirit, when you were wont to say, If you had been the wife of Hercules.

Six of his labours you 'd have done, and sav'd Your husband so much sweat.—Cominus, Droop not: adieu.—Farewell, my wife! my mother! I'll do well yet.—Thou old and true Menenius, Thy tears are saltier than a younger man's.

And venomous to thine eyes.—My sometime general, I have seen thee stern, and thou hast oft beheld Heart-hardening spectacles; tell these sad women, T is fond to wail inevitable strokes.

As 't is to laugh at 'em.—My mother, you wot well, My hazards still have been your solace; and Believe 't not lightly, though I go alone, Like to a lovely dragon, that his fain Makes fear'd, and talk'd of more than seen, your son Will or exceed the common, or be caught With cautelous baits and practice.

Vol. My first son, Whither wilt thou go? Take good Cominian With thee a while: determine on some course More than a wild exposure to each chance, That startis' the way before thee.

Cor. I'll follow thee a month; devise with thee Where thou shalt rest, that thou may'st hear of us, And we of thee: so, if the time trust forth A cause for thy repeal, we shall not send O'er the vast world to seek a single man, And lose advantage, which doth ever cool, 't the absence of the needer.

Cor. Fare ye well:

That's worthily As any ear can hear.—Come; let's not weep.—

If I could shake off but one seven years From these old arms and legs, by the good gods, I'd with thee every foot.

Cor. Give me thy hand. —

SCENE II.—The Same. A Street near the Gate.

Enter Sicinius, Brutus, and an Edile.

Sic. Bid them all home: he's gone, and we'll ne farther. —

The nobility are vex'd, who, we see, have sided in his behalf.

Bru. Now we have shown our power, Let us seem humbler after it is done, Than when it was a doing.

Sic. Say, their great enemy is gone, and they Stand in their ancient strength.

Bru. Dismiss them home. {Exit Edile

Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Menenius.

Here comes his mother.

Sic. Let's not meet her.

Bru. Why?

Sic. They say, she's mad.

Bru. They have taken note of us: keep on your way, Vol. O! 't are well met. The hoarded plague of the gods Requite your love! Peace, peace! be not so loud. Vol. If that I could for weeping, you should hear, Nay, and you shall hear some.—Will you be gone? {To Brutus

Vir. You shall stay too. [To Sicinius,] I would, I had the power

To say so to my husband.

Sic. Are you mankind?

Vol. Ay, fool; is that a shame?—Note but this fool. Was not a man my father? Hadst thou foreshow To banish him that struck more blows for Rome, Than thou hast spoken words?

Sic. O, blessed heavens! Vol. More noble blows, than ever thou wise words. And for Rome's good.—I'll tell thee what:—yet go: Nay, but thou shalt stay too.—I would my son Were in Arabia, and thy tribe before him, His good sword in his hand.

Sic. What then?

Vir. What then?

He'd make an end of thy posterity.

Vol. Bastards, and all. —

Good man, the wounds that he does bear for Rome! Men. Come, come: peace! Sic. I would be had continued to his country, As he began; and not mknit himself The noble knot he made. Brutus. I would he had. Vol. I would he had. 'T was you ineens'd the rabble. Curs, that can judge as fitfully of his worth, As I can of those mysteries, which heaven Will not have earth to know.

Bru. Pray, let us go. Vol. Now, pray, sir, get you gone: You have done a brave deed. Ere you go, hear this. As far as doth the Capitol exceed The meanest house in Rome, so far my son.
This lady's husband here, this, do you see, Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you all.
Brut. Well, well; we'll leave you.
Serv. Why stay we to be baited With one that wants her wife?
Vol. Take my prayers with you.—[Exeunt Tribunes.
I would the gods had nothing else to do, But to confirm my curses. Could I meet 'em But once a day, it would unclose my heart.
Of what lies heavy to 't.
Men. You have told them home, And, by my troth, you have cause. You'll sup with me?
Vol. Anger's my meat: I sup upon myself, And so shall starve with feeding.—Come, let's go. Leave this faint piling, and lament as I do, In anger, Juno-like. Come, come, come.
Men. Fie, fie, fie!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Highway between Rome and Antium.

Enter a Roman and a Volsc. meeting.
Rom. I know you well, sir; and you know me. Your name, I think, is Adrian.
Vol. It is so, sir: truly, I have forgot you.
Rom. I am a Roman: and my services are, as you are, against 'em. Know you me yet?
Rom. The same, sir.
Vol. You had more heard, when I last saw you; but your favour is well approved by your tongue. What's the news in Rome? I have a note from the Volscian state, to find you out there: you have well sav'd me a day's journey.
Rom. There hath been in Rome strange insurrection: the people against the senators, patricians, and nobles.
Vol. Hath been! Is it ended then? Our state thinks not so: they are in a most warlike preparation, and hope to come upon them in the heat of their division.
Rom. The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again; for the nobles receive so to heart the banishment of that worthy, Coriolanus, that they are in a ripe aptness to take all power from the people, and to pluck from them their tribunes for ever. This lies glowing, I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out.
Vol. Coriolanus banished?
Rom. Banished, sir.
Vol. You will 'be welcome with this intelligence, Niecanor.
Rom. The day serves well for them now. I have heard it said, the fittest time to corrupt a man's wife is when she's fallen out with her husband. Your noble Tullius Aufidius will appear well in these wars, his great opposer, Coriolanus, being now in no request of his country.
Vol. He cannot choose. I am most fortunate, thus accidentally to encounter you: you have ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home.
Rom. I shall between this and supper tell you most strange things from Rome, all tending to the good of their adversaries. Have you an army ready, say you?
Vol. A most royal one: the centurions and their charges distinctly billeted, already in the entertainment, and to be on foot at an hour's warning.
Rom. I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the man, I think, that shall set them in present action. So, sir, heartily well met, and most glad of your company.
Vol. You take my part from me, sir: I have the most cause to be glad of yours.
Rom. Well, let us go together.
[Exeunt.

Enter Coriolanus, in mean Apparel, disguised and muffled.
Cor. A goodly city is this Antium.—Cit.
Tis I that made thy widows: many an heir Of these fair edifices 'fore my wars Have I heard groan, and drop: then, know me not, Lest that thy wives with spits, and boys with stones.
[Enter a Citizen.
In puny battle slay me.—Save you, sir.
Cit. And you.
Cor. Direct me, if it be your will, Where great Aufidius lies. Is he in Antium?
Cit. He is, and feasts the nobles of the state At his house this night.
Cor. Which is his house, beseech you?
Cit. This, here before you.
Cor. Thank you, sir. Farewell. [Exit Citizen.
O world, thy slippery turns! Friends now fast sworn, Whose double bosoms seem to wear one heart, Whose house, whose bed, whose meal, and exercise, Are still together, who twin, as 't were, in love Unseparable, shall within this hour, On a dissonance of a deal, break out, To bitterest enmity: so, fallest foes, Whose passions and whose plots have broken their sleep To take the one the other, by some chance. Some trick not worth an egg, shall grow dear friends, And interjoin their issues. So with me:—My birth-place hate I, and my love's upon This enemy town. I'll enter: if he slay me, He does fair justice; if he give me way, I'll do his country service.

SCENE V.—The Same. A Hall in Aufidius's House.

Music within.
Enter a Servant.
Serv. Wine, wine, wine! What service is here? I think our fellows are asleep.
[Exit.
Enter a second Servant.
Serv. Where's Cotonus? My master calls for him.—
Cotonus!
[Exit.

Enter Coriolanus.
Cor. A goodly house. The feast smells well; but I Appear not like a guest.
Re-enter the first Servant.
Serv. What would you have, friend? Whence are you? Here's no place for you: pray, go to the door.
Cor. I have deserv'd no better entertainment, In being Coriolanus.
Re-enter second Servant.
Serv. Whence are you, sir? Has the porter his eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to such companions? Pray, get you out.
Cor. Away!
Serv. Away! Get you away.
Cor. Now, th'art troublesome.
Serv. Are you so brave? I'll have you talked with anon.
[Enter a third Servant: the first meets him.
3 Serv. What fellow's this?
1 Serv. A strange one as ever I looked on: I cannot get him out o' the house. Pry'thee, call my master to him.
3 Serv. What have you to do here, fellow? Pray you, avoid the house.
Cor. Let me but stand; I will not hurt your hearth
3 Serv. What are you?
Cor. A gentleman.
3 Serv. A marvellous poor one.
Cor. True, so I am.
3 Serv. Pray you, poor gentleman, take up some other station; here's no place for you. Pray you, avoid some.
Cor. Follow your function; go,
And batt'ned on cold bits. [Pushes him away.
3 Serv. What, will you not? Pr'ythee, tell me your master what a strange guest he has here.
2 Serv. And I shall.
3 Serv. Where dwell'st thou? Cor. Under the canopy.
3 Serv. Under the canopy? Cor. Ay.
3 Serv. Where's that? Cor. It the city of kites and crows.
3 Serv. If the city of kites and crows?—What an ass it is!—Then, thou dwelwest with daws too?
Cor. No: I serve not thy master.
3 Serv. How, sir! Do you meddle with my master? Cor. Ay; 'tis an honest service than to meddle with thy mistress.
Thou art' st, and prat' st; serve with thy treacher. Hence! [Beats him.

Enter Aufidius and the second Servant.

Auf. Where is this fellow?
2 Serv. Here, sir. I 'd have beaten him like a dog, but for disturbing the lords within.

Auf. Whence com'st thou? what wouldst thou?
Thy name?
Why speak'st not? Speak, man: what's thy name?
Cor. If, Tullius, [Unmuffling.
Not yet thou know'st me, and seeing me, dost not Think me for the man I am, necessity Commands me name myself.

Auf. What is thy name? [Servants retire. Cor. A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears,
And harsh in sound to thine.

Auf. Say, what's thy name?

Cor. My name is Caius Marius, who hath done
To thee particularly, and to all the Volscians
Great hurt and mischief; thereunto witness may
My surname, Coriolanus. The painful service,
The extreme dangers, and the drops of blood
Shed for my thankless country, are requited
But with that surname; a good memory,
And witness of the malice and displeasure
Which thou shouldst bear me. Only that name remains:
The cruelty and envy of the people,
Permitted by our dastard nobles. who
Have all forsook me, hath devour'd the rest;
And suffered me, the voice of slaves to be Whoop'd out of Rome. Now, this extremity
Hath brought me to thy hearth: not out of hope,
Mistake me not, to save my life; for if
I had fear'd death, of all the men i' the world
I would have voided thee; but in mere spite,
To be full quit of those my banishers,
Stand I before thee here. Then, if thou hast
A heart of wreak in thee, that will revenge
Thine own particular wrongs, and stop those mains
Of shame seen through thy country, speed thee straight,
And make my misery serve thy turn: so use it,
That my revengeful services may prove
As benefits to thee; for I will fight
Against my country's country with the spleen
Of all the under fiends. But if so be
Thou dar'st not this, and that to prove more fortunes
Thou art tir'd; then, in a word, I also am
Longer to live most weary, and present
My throat to thee, and to thy ancient malice:
Which not to cut would show thee but a fool,
Since I have ever follow'd thee with hate
Drawn tunn of blood out of thy country's breast,
And cannot live but to thy shame, unless
It be to do thee service.

Auf. O Marcus, Marcus!
Each word thou hast spoke hath weeded from my heart
A root of ancient envy. If Jupiter
Should from yond cloud speak divine things,
And say, 'T is true,' I would not believe them more
Than thee, all noble Marcus.—Let me twine
Nine arns about that body, where against
My grained ash an hundred times hath broke.
And would I the mane with spilter's! Here I clip
The anvil of my sword; and do contest
As hotly and as nobly with thy love,
As ever in ambitious strength I did
Contend against thy valour. Know thou first,
I lov'd the maid I married: never man
Sighed truer breath: but that I see thee here,
Thou noble thing, more dances my rapt heart,
Than when I first my wedded mistress saw
Bostride my threshold. Why, thou Mars, I tell thee,
We have a power on foot; and I had purpose
Once more to hew thy target from thy brow,
Or lose mine arm for 't. Thou hast beat me out
Twelve several times, and I have nightly since
Dreamt of encounters 'twixt thyself and me:
We have been down together in my sleep,
Unbuckling helms, fasting each other's throat,
And wak'd half dead with nothing. Worthy Marcus.
Had we no other quarrel else to Rome, but that Thou art hence banish'd, we would muster all
From twelve to seventy; and, pouring war
Into the bowels of ungrateful Rome,
Like a bold flood o'er-bear.' O! come, go in,
And take our friendly senators by the hands,
Who now are here, taking their leaves of me,
Who am prepar'd against your territories,
Though not for Rome itself.

Cor. You bless me, gods!

Auf. Therefore, most absolute sir, if thou wilt have
The leading of thine own revenge, take
Til' one half of my commission; and set down,—
As best thou art experience'd, since thou know'st
Thy country's strength and weakness,—thine own ways;
Whether to knock against the gates of Rome,
Or rudely visit them in parts remote,
To fright them, ere destroy. But come in:
Let me commend thee first to those, that shall Say, 'tis to thy desires. A thousand welcomes!
And more a friend than e'er an enemy;
Yet, Marcus, that was much. Thy hand: most welcome!
[Exit Coriolanus and Auffidius.

2 Serv. [Advancing] Here's a strange alteration!

1 Serv. By my hand, I had thought to have stricken him with a cudgel; and yet my mind gave me, his clothes made a false report of him.

2 Serv. What an arm he has! He turned me about with his finger and his thumb, as one would set up a top.

2 Serv. Nay, I knew by his face that there was some thing in him: he had, sir, a kind of face, methought,—
I cannot tell how to term it.
1 Serv. He had so; looking as it were,—Would I were hanged, but I thought there was more in him than I could think.
2 Serv. So did I, I'll be sworn. He is simply the rarest man i' the world.
1 Serv. I think, he is; but a greater soldier than he,
you wot one.
2 Serv. Who? my master?
1 Serv. Nay, it's no matter for that.
2 Serv. Worth six on him.
1 Serv. Nay, not so neither; but I take him to be the greater soldier.
2 Serv. 'Faith, look you, one cannot tell how to say that: for the defence of a town, our general is excellent.
1 Serv. Ay, and for an assault too.
Re-enter third Servant.
3 Serv. O, slaves! I can tell you news; news, you ras-
3 Serv. I would not be a Roman, of all nations; I had as lieve be a condemned man.
1. 2. Serv. Wherefore? wherefore?
3 Serv. Why, here's he that was wont to thwack our general,—Caits Marcius.
1 Serv. Why do you say thwack our general?
3 Serv. I do not say, thwack our general; but he was always good enough for him.
2 Serv. Come, we are fellows, and friends: he was ever too hard for him; I have heard him say so himself.
1 Serv. He was too hard for him directly, to say the truth on 't: before Coriole, he scotched him and thocht him like a carbondot.
2 Serv. An he had been cannibally given, he might have broiled9 and eaten him too.
1 Serv. But, more of thy news?
3 Serv. Why, he is so made on here within, as if he were son and heir to Mars: set at upper end o' the both, a question asked him by any of the senators, but they stand bald before him. Our general himself makes a mistress of him; sanctifies himself with 's hand, and turns up the white o' the eye to his discourse.
But the bottom of the news is, our general is cut i' the middle, and but one half of what he was yesterday, for the other has half by the entray of the grant of the whole table. He'll go he says, and sowall the porter of Rome gates by the ears. He will mow down all over him, and leave his passage polled.
2 Serv. And he's as like to do 't, as any man I can imagine.
3 Serv. Do 't! he will do 't; for, (look you, sir) he has as many friends as enemies; which friends, sir, (as it were) durst not (look you, sir) now themselves (as we term it) his friends, whilst he's in dejectitude.
1 Serv. Dejectitude! what's that?
3 Serv. But when they shall see, sir, his crest up again, and the man in blood, they will out of their nerves, like conies after rain, and revel all with him.
1 Serv. But when goes this forward?
3 Serv. To-morrow; to-day: presently. You shall have the drum struck up this afternoon: 't is, as it were, aparl of their feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips.
2 Serv. Why, then we shall have a stirring world again. This peace is nothing, but to rust iron, increase tailors, and breed bale-makers.
1 Serv. Let me have war, say I; it exceeds peace, as far as day does night; it's spritely, waking, audible, and full of vaunt.' Peace is a very apoplexy, lethargy mudled, deaf, sleepy, inusible; a getter of more bas tard children, than wars a destroyer of men.
2 Serv. 'Tis so: and as wars in some sort may be said to be a ravisher, so it cannot be denied, but peace is a great maker of eneckolds.
1 Serv. Ay, and it makes men hate one another.
3 Serv. Reason; because they then less need one another. The wars, for my money. I hope to see Romans as cheap as Volscians.—They are rising, they are rising.
All. In, in, in, in. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Sic. We hear not of him, neither need we fear him.
His remedies are tamed by the present peace.
And quietness o' the people, which before
Were in wild hurry. Here do we make his friends
Blush that the world goes well; who rather had,
Though they themselves did suffer by 't, behold
Discreetious numbers pestering streets, than see
Our tradesmen singing in their shops, and going
About their function friendly.

Enter Menenius.

Bru. We stood to 't in good time. Is this Menenius?
Sic. 'Tis he, 'tis he. O! he is grown much kind
Of late.—Hail, sir! Men.

Men. Hail to you both!

Sic. Your Coriolanus is not much mis'd,
But with his friends: the common-wealth doth stand,
And so would do, were he more angry at it.

Men. All's well; and might have been much better, if
He could have temporiz'd.

Sic. Where is he, 'bear you?

Men. Nay, I hear nothing: his mother and his wife
Hear nothing from him.

Enter three or four Citizens.

Cit. The gods preserve you both!

Sic. Good-den, our neighbours.

Bru. Good-den to you all, good-den to you all.

1 Cit. Ourselvus, our wives, and children, on our knees.

Are bound to pray for you both.

Sic. Live, and thrive.

Bru. Farewell, kind neighbours. We wish'd Corio
Had lov'd you as we did.

[Exeunt Citizens.

Sic. This is a happier and more comely time,
Than when these fellows ran about the streets,
Crying confusion.

Bru. Caits Marcius was
A worthy officer i' the war; but insolent.
O'ercome with pride, ambitious and thinking,
Self-loving,—

Sic. And affecting one sole throne,
Without assistance.

Men. I think not so.

Sic. We should by this, to all our lamentation,
If he had gone forth consul, found it so.

Bru. The gods have well prevented it; and Rome
Sits safe and still without him.

Enter an Editor.

Ed. Worthy tribunes,
There is a slave, whom we have put in prison,
Reports the Volscian with two several powers
Are enter'd in the Roman territories;

1 A piece of meat cut and hacked for broiling
2 boiled: in folio.
3 Pull out.
4 Cleared.
5 directitude: in l. a.
6 vent: in f. e.
And with the deepest malice of the war
Dostroy what lies before them.

MEN. 'Tis Aufidius,
Who, hearing of our Marcus' banishment,
Thrusts forth his horns again into the world:
Which were incurreth when Marcus stood for Rome,
And durst not once peep out.

SIC. Come, what talk you
Of Marcus?

BRU. Go see this rumourer whipp'd.—It cannot be,
The Volscet dare break with us.

MEN. Cannot be!
We have record that very well it can;
And three examples of the like have been Within my age. But reason with the fellow,
Before you punish him, where he heard this,
Lest you shall chance to whip your information,
And beat the messenger who bids beware
Of what is to be dreaded.

SIC. I know, this cannot be.

BRU. Enter a Messenger.

MESS. The nobles in great earnestness are going
All to the senate house; some news is come in,
That turns their countenances.

SIC. 'Tis this slave.
Go whip him before the people's eyes:—his raising;
Nothing but his report.

MESS. Yes, worthy sir,
The slave's report is seconded; and more,
More fearful, is deliver'd.

SIC. What more fearful?

MESS. It is spoke freely out of many mouths,
How probable I do not know, that Marcus,
Join'd with Aufidius, leads a power against Rome,
And vows revenge as spaceous, as between
The youngst and eldest thing.

SIC. This is most likely!

BRU. Rais'd only, that the weaker sort may wish
God! Marcus home again.

SIC. This is unlikely:
He and Aufidius can no more alone,
Than violentest contrariety.

Enter another Messenger.

MESS. You are sent for to the senate.
A fearful army, led by Caius Marcus,
Associated with Aufidius, races
Upon our territories; and have already Debarred their way, consum'd with fire, and took What lay before them.

Enter Cominius.

COM. O! you have made good work.

MEN. What news? what news?

COM. You have holp to ravish your own daughters, and
To melt the city leads upon your pates:
To see your wives dishonour'd to your noses;—

MEN. What's the news? what's the news?

COM. Your temples burned in their cement; and Your franchises, whereon you stood, confin'd
Into an auger's bore.

MEN. Pray now, your news?—
You have made fair work, I fear me.—Pray, your news?
If Marcus should be join'd with Volscetians,—

COM. He is their god, he leads them like a thing
Made by some other deity than nature,
That shapes man better; and they follow him
Against us brats, with no less confidence
Than boys pursuing summer butterflies,
Or butchers killing flies.

MEN. You have made good work.

COM. He will shake
Your Rome about your ears.

MEN. As Herecles
Did shake down mellow fruit. You have made fair work

BRU. But is this true, sir?

COM. Ay; and you'll look pale
Before you find it other. All the legions
Do smilingly revolt, and who resist
Are mock'd for valiant ignorance,
And perish constant fools. Who is't can blame him?
Your enemies, and his, find something in him.

MEN. We are all undone unless
The noble man have mercy.

COM. Who shall ask it?

The tribunes cannot do for shame; the people
Deserve such pity of him, as the wolf
Does of the shepherds: for his best friends, if they Should say, 'Be good to Rome,' they charg'd him, even
As those should do that had deserv'd his hate,
And therein show'd like enemies.

MEN. 'Tis true: If he were putting to my house the brand
That should consume it, I have not the face
To say, 'Beseech you, cease!'—You have made fair
You, and your handy crafts have crafted fair, [hands,

COM. You have brought
A trembling upon Rome, such as was never
So incapable of help.

TRI. Say not, we brought it.

MEN. How! Was it we? We lov'd him; but, like beasts
And cowardly nobles, gave way unto your clusters,
Who did hoot him out of the city.

COM. But I fear
They'll roar him in again. Tullius Aufidius,
The second name of men, obey's his points
As if he were his officer. Desperation
Is all the policy, strength, and defence,
That Rome can make against them.

Enter a Troop of Citizens.

MEN. Here come the clusters.—
And is Aufidius with him?—You are they
That made the air unwholesome, when you cast
Your stinking, greasy caps, in hooting at Coriolanus' exile. Now he's coming;
And not a hair upon a soldier's head,
Which will not prove a whip: as many coxeoms,
As you throw caps up, will he tumble down,
And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no matter:
If he could burn us all into one coal,
We have deserv'd it.

CIT. Faith, we hear fearful news.

1 CIT. For mine own part;

When I said, banish him, I said, 't was pity.

2 CIT. And so did I.

3 CIT. And so did I; and, to say the truth, so did very many of us. That we did, we did for the best:
and though we willingly consented to his banishment,
yet it was against our will.

COM. Y are goodly things, you voices!

MEN. You have made
Good work, you and your cry.—Shall's to the Capitol?

Sir. Go, masters, get you home; be not dismay'd:
These are a side that would be glad to have
This true, which they so seem to fear. Go home,
And show no sign of fear.

1 Cit. The gods be good to us! Come, masters, let's home. I ever said, we were't the wrong, when we banished him.

2 Cit. So did we all. But come, let's home.

[Exeunt Citizens.

Br. I do not like this news.

Sir. Nor I.

Br. Let's to the Capitol.—Would half my wealth
Would buy this for a he!

Sir. Pray, let us go. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—A Camp; at a small distance from Rome.

Enter Aufidius, and his Lieutenant.

Auf. Do they still fly to the Roman?

Lieu. I do not know what witchcraft's in him, but
Your soldiers use him as the grace 'fore meat,
Their talk at table, and their thanks at end;
And you are darken'd in this action, sir,
Even by your own.

Auf. I cannot help it now,
Unless, by using means, I lame the foot
Of our design. He bears himself more proudlier,
Even to my person, than I thought he would
When first I did embrace him; yet his nature in that's no changing, and I must excuse
What cannot be amended.

Lieu. Yet I wish, sir,
(I mean, for your particular) you had not
Join'd in commission with him; but either
Had borne the action of yourself, or else
To him had left it solely.

Auf. I understand thee well; and be thou sure,
When he shall come to his account, he knows not What I can urge against him. Though it seems,
And so he thinks, and is no less apparent
To the vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly,
And shows good husbandry for the Volscian state,
Fights dragon-like, and does achieve as soon
As draw his sword; yet he hath left undone
That, which shall break his neck, or hazard mine,
Whene'er we come to our account.

Lieu. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry Rome?

Auf. All places yield to him ere he sits down;
And the nobility of Rome are his:
The senators and patricians love him too.
The tribunes are no soldiers; and their people
Will be as rash in the repeal, as hasty
To expel him thence. I think, he'll be to Rome,
As is the osprey to the fish, who takes it
By sovereignty of nature. First he was
A noble servant to them, but he could not Carry his honours even: whether 't was pride,
Which out of daily fortune ever taints
The happy man; whether defect of judgment,
To fall in the disposing of those chances
Which he was lord of; or whether nature,
Not to be other than one thing, not moving
From the casque to the cushion, but commanding peace.
Even with the same austerity and garb
As he controul'd the war; but one of these
(As he hath spices of them all, not all,
For I dare so far free him) made him fear'd,
So hated, and so banish'd: but he has a merit,
To choke it in the utterance. So our virtues
Live in the interpretation of the time,
And power, in itself most commendable,
Hath not a tomb so evident as a cheer
To extol what it hath done.
One fire drives out one fire; one nail, one nail;
Rights by rights suffer, strengths by strengths do fail.
Come, let's away.—When, Caius, Rome is thine,
Thou art poor'st of all; then, shortly art thou mine.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter Menenius, Cominius, Sicinius, Brutus, and
others.

Men. No, I'll not go; you hear what he hath said
To one sometime his general: who lov'd him
In a most dear particular. He call'd me father,
But what o' that? Go, you that banish'd him,
A mile before his tent fall down, and kneel
The way into his mercy. Nay, if he co'yd
To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home.

Com. He would not seem to know me.

Men. Do you hear?

Com. Yet one time he did call me by my name.
I urg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops
That have bled together. Coriolanus
He would not answer to; forbade all names:
He was a kind of nothing, titleless,
Till he had forg'd himself a name o' the fire
Of burning Rome.

Men. Why, so; you have made good work:
A pair of tribunes, that have wreck'd 'd for Rome,
To make coals cheap, a noble memory!

Com. I minded him, how royal 't was to pardon

When it was least expected: he replied,
It was a bare petition of a state
To one whom they had punish'd.

Men. Very well: could he say less?

Com. I offer'd to awaken his regard
For his private friends: his answer to me was,
He could not stay to pick them in a pile
Of noisome, musty chaff. He said, 'twas folly
For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt,
And still to nose th' offence.

Men. For one poor grain or two?
I am one of those; his mother, wife, his child,
And this brave fellow too; we are the grains:
You are the musty chaff, and you are smelt
Above the moon. We must be burnt for you.

Sir. Nay, pray, be patient: if you refuse your aid
In this so never-needed help, yet do not Uphold 's with our distress. But, sure, if you
Would be your country's pleader, your good tongue,
More than the instant army we can make,
Might stop our countryman.

Men. No; I'll not meddle.

Sic. Pray you, go to him.

Men. What should I do?
BRU. Only make trial what your love can do
For Rome towards Marcusius.

MEN. Well; and say that Marcus
Return me, as Cominius is return'd,
Unheard, what then?—
But as a discontented friend, grief-shot
With his unkindness? say't be so?

SIC. Yet your good will Must have that thanks from Rome, after the measure
As you intended well.

MEN. I'll undertake it:
I think, he'll hear me. Yet to bite his lip,
And hum at good Cominius, much unhearts me. He was not taken well; he had not dined;
The veins unfill'd, our blood is cold, and then
We put upon the morning, are unapt
To give or to forgive; but when we have stuff'd
These pipes, and these conveyances of blood
With wine and feeding, we have suppler souls
Than in our priest-like haste; therefore, I'll watch him
 Till he be dicted to my request,
And then I'll set upon him.
BRU. You know the very road into his kindess,
And cannot lose your way.

MEN. Good faith, I'll prove him,
Speed how it will. You shall ere long have knowledge
Of my success. [Exit.

CORN. He'll never hear him.

SIC. Not?

CORN. I tell you, he does sit in gold, his eye
Red as 't would burn Rome, and his injury
The gaoler to his pity. I kneel'd before him;
'T was very faintly he said, "Rise," dismissed me
Thus, with his speechless hand. What he would do,
He sent in writing after me: what he would not,
Bound with an oath to yield to his conditions:
So that all hope is vain,
Unless his noble mother, and his wife;
Who, as I hear, mean to solicit him
For mercy to his country. Therefore, let's hence,
And with our fair entreaties haste them on. [Exit.

SCENE II. —The Volscian Camp before Rome. The Guards at their Sations.

Enter to them, MENENIUS.

1 G. Stand! Whence are you?
2 G. Stand, and go back.

MEN. You guard like men: 'tis well; but, by your leave,
I am an officer of state, and come to speak with Coriolanus.

1 G. From whence?

MEN. From Rome.

1 G. You may not pass; you must return: our general
Will no more hear from hence.
2 G. You'll see your Rome embrac'd with fire, before
You'll speak with Coriolanus.

MEN. Good my friends,
If you have heard your general talk of Rome,
And of his friends there, it's lots to blanks,
I name hath touch'd your ears: it is Menenius.
1 G. Be it so; go back: the virtue of your name
Is not here passable.

MEN. I tell thee, fellow,
Thy general is my lover: I have been
The book of his good acts, whence men have read
His fame unparalleled, haply, amplifled;
For I have ever magnifid my friends,
Of whom he's chief) with all the size that verity
Would without lapsing suffer: nay, sometimes,
Like to a bowl upon a subite ground,
I have tumbled past the throw, and in his praise
Have almost stamp'd the leasing. Therefore, fellow,
I must have leave to pass.

1 G. 'Faith, sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalf, as you have uttered words in your own, you should not pass here: no, though it were as virtuous to lie, as to live chastely. Therefore, go back.

MEN. Pir'ythee, fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factionary on the party of your general.
2 G. Howsoever you have been his liar, as you say you have, I am one that, telling true under him, must say, you cannot pass. Therefore, go back.

MEN. Has he dined. Canst thou tell? for I would not speak with him till after dinner.

1 G. You are a Roman, are you?
MEN. I am, as thy general is.
1 G. Then you should hate Rome, as he does. Can you, when you have pushed out your gates the very defender of them, and, in a violent popular ignorance, given your enemy your shield, think to front his revenges with the queasy groans of old women, the virginal palms of your daughters, or with the palsied intercession of such a decayed dotard as you seem to be? Can you think to blow out the intended fire your city ready to flame in with such weak breath as this? No, you are deceived: therefore, back to Rome, and prepare for your execution. You are condemned, our general has sworn you out of reprieve and pardon.

MEN. Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were here, he would use me with estimation.

2 G. Come, my captain knows you not.

MEN. I mean, thy general.

1 G. My general cares not for you. Back, I say:
go, lest I let forth your half pint of blood,—back,— that's the utmost of your having:—back.

MEN. Nay, but fellow, fellow.—

Enter CORIOLANUS and AUFIDUS.

COR. What's the matter?

MEN. Now, you companion, I'll say an errand for you:
you shall know now that I am in estimation; you shall perceive that a Jack guardian cannot office me from my son Coriolanus: guess, but by my entertainment with him, if thou stand'st not i' the state of handing, or of some death more long in spectatorship, and crueler in suffering: behold now presently, and sworn for what's to come upon thee,—The glorious gods sit in hourly synod about thy particular prosperity, and love thee no worse than thy old father Menenius does! O, my son! my son! thou art preparing fire for us; look thee, here's water to quench it:
I was hardly moved to come to thee; but being assured, none but myself could move thee, I have been blown out of your gates with sighs, and conjure thee to pardon Rome, and thy petitioner countrymen. The good gods assuage thy wrath, and turn the dregs of it upon this varlet here; this, who, like a bleak, hath denied my access to thee.

COR. Away!

MEN. How? away?

COR. Wife, mother, child, I know not. My affairs
Are servanted to others: though I owe
My revenge properly, my remission lies
In Volscian breasts. That we have been familiar.
Ingrate forgetfulness shall poison, rather Than pity note how much.—Therefore, be gone:
Mine ears against your suits are stronger than Your gates against my force. Yet, for I lov'd thee.
SCENE III.

CORSIANUS.

Take this along; I writ it for thy sake, [Gives a Paper.] And would have sent it. Another word, Menenius, I will not hear thee speak. —This man, Aufidius, Was my belov'd in Rome; yet thou beholdest—

AUS. You keep a constant temper. [Exeunt CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS.

1 G. Now, sir, is your name Menenius?
2 G. 'Tis a spell, ye see, of much power. You know the way home again.

1 G. Do you know how we are shent¹ for keeping your greatness back?
2 G. What causes do you think, I have to swoon?

Men. I neither care for the world, nor your general: for such things as you, I can scarce think there's any, you are so slight. He that hath a will to die by himself, fears it not from another. Let your general do his worst. For you, be that you are, long; and your misery increase with your age. I say to you, as I was said to away!

1 G. A noble fellow. I warrant him.
2 G. The worthy fellow is our general: he is the rock, the oak not to be wind-shaken. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Tent of Coriolanus.

Enter CORIOLANUS, AUFIDIUS, and others.

Cor. We will before the walls of Rome to-morrow Set down our host. —My partner in this action, You must report to the Volscian lords, how plainly I have borne this business.

AUS. Only their ends You have respected: stopp'd your ears against The general suit of Rome; never admitted A private whisper, no, not with such friends That thought them sure of you.

Cor. This last old man, Whom with a crack'd heart I have sent to Rome, Loved me above the measure of a father; Nay, godded me, indeed. Their latest refuge Was to send him: for whose own love, I have (Though I show'd so shortly to him) once more offer'd The first conditions, which they did refuse, And cannot now accept. to grace him only That thought he could do more. A very little I have yielded, too: fresh embassies, and suits, Nor from the state, nor private friends, hereafter Will I lend ear to. —Ha! what shott² this is? [Shout within. Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow In the same time 'tis made? I will not.

[Enter, in mourning Habits, VIRGILIA, VOLUSIUS, leading young MARCUS, VALERIA, and ATTENDANTS. My wife comes foremost: then, the honour'd mould Whereto this trunk was framed; and in her hand The grand-child to her blood. But, out, affection! All bond and privilege of nature, break! Let it be virtuous, to be obstinate. —What is that curt'ly worth? or these doves' eyes, Which can make gods forsworn? —I melt, and am not Of stronger earth than others.—My mother bows, As if Olympus to a molehill should In supplication nod; and my young boy Hath an aspect of intercession, which Great nature cries, "Deny not."—Let the Volscian Plough Rome, and harrow Italy; I'll never Be such a gosling to obey instinct, but stand As if a man were author of himself, And knew no other kin.

VIR. My lord and husband!

Cor. These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.

Vir. The sorrow, that delivers us thus chang'd, Makes you think so.

Cor. Like a dull actor, now, I have forgot my part, and I am out, Even to a full disgrace. Best of my flesh, Forgive my tyranny; but do not say For that, "Forgive our Romans."—O! a kiss Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge! Now, by the jealous queen of heaven, that kiss I carried from thee, dear; and my true lip Hath virg'd it e'er since. —You gods! I pray, And the most noble mother of the world Leave unsalted. Sink, my knee, if the earth; [Kneels. Of thy deep duty more impresson show Than that of common sons.

Vol. O, stand up bless'd! Whilst, with no softer cushion than the flint, I kneel before thee, and improperly Show duty, as mistaking³ all this while Between the child and parent. [Kneels.

Cor. What is this? Your knees to me? to your corrected son? Then, let the pebbles on the hungry beach Fillip the stars; then, let the mutinous winds Strike the proud eddars against the fiery sun, Mur'dring impossibility, to make What cannot be slight work. [Rising and raising her Vol. Then art my warrior I help² to frame thee. Do you know this lady? —Cor. The noble sister of Publius.

The moon of Rome; chase as the icicle, That's er'deld by the frost from purest snow, And hangs on Dian's temple: dear Valeria!

Cor. This is a poor epitome of yours, Which, by the interpretation of full time, May show like all yourself.

Cor. Why, the god of soldiers, With the consent of supreme Jove, inform Thy thoughts with nobleness; that thou may'st prove To shame unvulnerable, and stick i' the wars Like a great sea-mark, standing every flaw And saving those that eye thee!

Vol. Your knee, sirrah.

Cor. That's my brave boy?

Vol. Even he, your wife, this lady, and myself, Are suitors to you.

Cor. I beseech you, peace; Or, if you'd ask, remember this before: The things I have forsworn to grant may never Be held by you denials. Do not bid me Dismiss my soldiers, or capitate Again with Rome's mechanics: tell me not Wherein I seem unnatural: desire not To allay my rages and revenges with Your colder reasons.

Vol. O! no more, no more! You have said, you will not grant us any thing For we have nothing else to ask, but that Which you deny already: yet we will ask: That, if we fail in our request, the blame May hang upon your hardness. Therefore, hear us.

Cor. Aufidius, and you Volscius, mark; for we'll Hear nought from Rome in private. [Takes his seat.

—Your request?

Vol. Should we be silent and not speak, our raiment And state of bodies, would bewray what life We have led since thy exile. Think with thyself, How more unfortunate than all living women

Are we come hither; since that thy sight, which should Make our eyes flow with joy, hearts dance with comfort,
Constrains them weep, and shake with tear and sorrow;
Making the mother, wife, and child, to see
The son, the husband, and the father, tearing
His country's bowels out; and so poor we,
Thine enemies most capital.1 Thou barr'st us
Our prayers to the gods, which is a comfort
That all but we enjoy; for how can we.
Alas! how can we, for our country pray,
Whereof we are bound, together with thy victory,
Whereof we are bound? Alack! or we must lose
The country, our dear nurse, or else thy person,
Our comfort in the country. We must find
An evident calamity, though we had
Our wish, which side should win; for either thou
Must, as a foreign recreant, be led
With manacles through our streets, or else
Triumphantly tread on thy country's ruin,
And bear the palm, for having bravely shed
Thy wife and children's blood. For myself, son,
I purpose not to wait on fortune, till
These wars determine: if I cannot persuade thee
Rather to show a noble grace to both parts,
Than seek the end of one, thou shalt no sooner
March to assault thy country, than to tread
(Trust to 't, thou shalt not) on thy mother's womb,
That brought thee to this world.

Vir. Ay, and mine,
That brought you forth this boy, to keep your name
Living to time.

Boy. He shall not tread on me:
I'll run away till I am bigger, but then I'll fight.

Cor. Not of a woman's tenderness to be,  [Aside.
Requires nor child nor woman's face to see.
I have sat too long.  [Rising.

Vol. Nay, go not from us thus.
If it were so, that our request did tend
To save the Romans, whereby to destroy
The Volscians whom you serve, you might condemn us,
As poisonous of your honour: no; our suit
Is, that you reconcile them: while the Volscians
May say, "This mercy we have shew'd;" the Romans,
"This we receiv'd;" and each in either side
Give all the-hail to thee, and cry, "Be bless'd
For making up this peace!" Thou know'st, great son,
The end of war's uncertain; but this certain,
That if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
Which thou shalt thereby reap is such a name,
Whose reputation shall be dought'd with curses,
Whose chronicle thus writ. — "The man was noble,
But with his last attempt he wip'd it out,
Destroy'd his country, and his name remains
To each ensuing age abhor'd."  [Aside.  I speak to me, son!
Thou hast affected the fine strains of honour,
To imitate the grace of the gods;
To bear with thunder the wide checks of the air,
And yet to change thy sulphur with a bolt
That should but rive an oak. Why dost not speak?
Think'st thou it honourable for a noble man
Still to remember wrongs? — Daughter, speak you;
He cares not for your weeping. — Speak thou, boy:
Perhaps, thy childishness will move him more
Than can our reasons. There is no man in the world
More bound to 's mother: yet here he lets me prate
Like one? the stocks. — Thou hast never in thy life
Shew'd thy dear mother any courtesy;

When she, (poor hen!) fond of no second brood,
Has cluck'd thee to the wars, and safely home,
Loaded with honour. Say, my request's unjust,
And spurn me back; but, if it be not so,
Thou art not honest, and the gods will plague thee,
That thou restrain'st from me the duty, which
To a mother's part belongs. — He turns away:
Down, ladies; let us shame him with our knees.

[All kneel.]
To his surname, Coriolanus. "Longs more pride,
Than pity to our prayers. Down: an end;
This is the last. — We will home to Rome,
And die among our neighbours. — Nay, behold us:
This boy, that cannot tell what he would have,
But kneels and holds up hands for fellowship,
Does reason our petition with more strength
Than thou hast to deny 't. Come, let us go.
This fellow had a Volscian to his mother;
His wife is in Corioli, and his child
Like him by chance. — Yet give us our despatch,
I am hush'd until our city be afire,
And then I'll speak a little.  [struggling.

[He holds Volumnia by the hand, long, and self.

Cor. O mother, mother!
What have you done? Behold! the heavens do ope,
The gods look down, and this unnatural scene
They laugh at. — O my mother! mother! O!
You have won a happy victory to Rome;
But, for your son, believe it, O! believe it,—
Most dangerously you have with him prevailed,
If not most mortal to him. But let it come.

Aufidius, though I cannot make true wars,
I'll frame convenient peace. — Now, good Aufidius,
Were you in my stead, would you have heard
A mother less, or granted less, Aufidius?

Cor. I was mov'd withal.

Auf. I dare be sworn, you were
And, sir, it is no little thing to make
Mine eyes to sweat compassion. But, good sir,
What peace you'll make, advise me. For my part,
I'll not to Rome, I'll back with you; and pray you,
Stand to me in this cause. — O mother! wife!

Auf. [Aside.] I am glad, thou hast set thy mercy
And thy honour
At difference in thee: out of that I'll work
Myself a firmer fortune.

[The Ladies make signs to Coriolanus.

Cor. Aye, by and by;

[To Volumnia, Virgilia, &c.
But we will drink together; and you shall bear
A better witness back than words, which we
On like conditions will have counter-seal'd.
Come, enter with us. Ladies, you deserve
To have a temple built you: all the swords
In Italy, and her confederate arms,
Could not have made this peace. *

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — Rome. A Public Place.

Enter Menenius and Sicinius.

Men. See you yond' eigion o' the Capitol; yond', corner-stone?

Sic. Why, what of that?

Men. If it be possible for you to displace it with your little finger, there is some hope the ladies of Rome, especially his mother, may prevail with him; but I say, there is no hope in't. Our throats are sentenced, and stay upon execution.

1 f. e. have:

* He holds Volumnia by the hand, silent. in i. 8
Sic. Is’t possible, that so short a time can alter the condition of a man?

Men. There is difference between a grub, and a butterfly; yet your butterfly was a grub. This Marcus is grown from man to dragon: he has wings; he’s more than a creeping thing.

Sic. He loved his mother dearly.

Men. So did he me; and he no more remembers his mother now, than an eight year old horse. The tautness of his face soon ripes grapes: when he walks, he moves like an engine, and the ground shrinks before his treading. He is able to pierce a corset with his eye: talks like a knell, and his hem is a battery. He sits in his state as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids be done, is finished with his bidding: he wants nothing of a god but eternity, and a heaven to throne in.

Sic. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.

Men. I paint him in the character. Mark what mercy his mother shall bring from him: there is no more mercy in him, than there is milk in a male tiger; that shall our poor city find: and all this is long of you.

Sic. The gods be good unto us!

Men. No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us. When we banished him, we respected not them, and he returning to break our necks, they respect not us.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Sir, if you’d save your life, fly to your house. The plebeians have got your fellow-troubler, and hate him up and down: all swearing, if the Roman ladies bring not comfort home, they’ll give him death by inches.

Enter another Messenger.

Sic. What’s the news?

Mess. Good news, good news!—The ladies have prevented the Volscians are dislodg’d, and Marcus gone. [vail’d, A merrier day did never yet greet Rome, No, not the expulsion of the Tarquins.

Sic. Friend, Art thou certain this is true? is it most certain?

Mess. As certain, as I know the sun is fire: Where have you luck’d, that you make doubt of it? Ne’er through an arch so hurried the blow tine, As the recomforted through the gates. Why, hark you! [Shouts, Trumpets and Haultboys sounded, and Drums beaten, all together. The trumpets, sackbuts, psalteries, and fifes, Tabors, and cymbals, and the shouting Romans, Make the sun dance. Hark you! [Shouting again.

Men. This is good news.

I will go meet the ladies. This Volumnia Is worth of consuls, senators, patricians, A city full: of tribunes, such as you, A sea and land-full. You have pray’d well to-day: This morning for ten thousand of your throats I’d not have given a doit. Hark, how they joy! [Shouting and Music.

Sic. First, the gods bless you for the tidings: next, Accept my thankfulness.

Mess. Sir, we have all

Great cause to give great thanks.

Sic. They are near the city.

Mess. Almost at point to enter.

Sic. We will meet them.

And help the joy. [Going.

Enter the Ladies, accompanied by Senators, Patricians, and People. They pass over the Stage.

1 Sen. Behold our patroness, the life of Rome! Call all your tribes together, praise the gods,

And make triumphant fires: strewn flowers before them Unshout the noise that banish’d Marcus; Repeal him with the welcome of his mother Cry,—Welcome, ladies, welcome! All. Welcome, ladies. Welcome! [A Flourish with Drums and Trumpets

SCENE V.—Antium. A Public Place.

Enter Tullus Aufidius, with Attendants

Auf. Go tell the lords of the city, I am hero. Deliver them this paper: having read it, Bid them repair to the market-place: where I, Even in theirs and in the commons’ ears, Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse The city ports by this hath enter’d, and Intends t’ appear before the people, hoping [Attendents To purge himself with words. Despatch. [Exeunt Enter Conspirators of Aufidius’ Faction. Most welcome!

1 Con. How is it with your general?

Auf. Even so, As with a man by his own alms empoison’d, And with his charity slain.

2 Con. Most noble sir, If you do hold the same intent, wherein You wish’d us parties, we’ll deliver you Of your great danger.

Auf. Sir, I cannot tell: We must proceed, as we do find the people. 3 Con. The people will remain uncertain, whilst ’Twixt you there ’s difference; but the fall of other Makes the survivor heir of all.

Auf. I know it; And my pretext to strike at him admits A good construction. I rais’d him, and I pawn’d Mine honour for his truth: who being so heighten’d, He water’d his new plants with dews of flattery, Seducing my friends; and to this end He bow’d his nature, never known before But to be rough, unswayable, and fierce.

3 Con. Sir, his stunness, When he did stand for consul, which he lost By lack of stooping,— That I would have spoke of Being banish’d for ’t, he came unto my heart; Presented to my knife his throat: I took him; Made him joint-servant with me: gave him way In all his own desires; nay, let him choose Out of my files, his projects to accomplish, My best and freshest men; serv’d his dispositions In mine own person; holp to reap the fame Which he did ear all his; and took some pride To do myself this wrong: till, at the last, I seem’d his follower, not partner; and He wager’d me with his countenance, as if I had been mercenary.

1 Con. So he did, my lord; The army marvel’d at it; and, in the last, When he had carry’d Rome, and that we look’d For no less spoil, than glory,— There was it; For which my sinews shall be stretch’d upon him At a few drops of women’s rheum, which are As cheap as lies, he sold the blood and labour Of our great action: therefore shall he die, And I’ll renew me in his fall. But, hark! [Drums and Trumpets sound, with great Shouts of the People.
2 Con. Your native town you enter'd like a post,
And had no welcomes home; but he returns,
Splitting the air with noise.

2 Con. And patient fools,
Whose children he hath slain, their base threats tear
With giving him glory.

3 Con. Therefore, at your vantage,
Ere he express himself, or move the people
With what he would say, let him feel your sword,
Which we will second. When he lies along,
After your way his tale pronounce'd shall bury
His reasons with his body.

Auf. Say no more.

Here come the lords.

Enter the Lords of the City.

Lords. You are most welcome home.

AUF. I have not deserv'd it.

But, worthy lords, have you with heed perus'd
What I have written to you?

Lords. We have.

1 Lord. And grieve to hear it.

What faults he made before the last, I think,
Might have found easy fines: but there to end,
Where he was to begin, and give away
The benefit of our levies, answering us
With our own charge, making a treaty where
There was a yielding; this admits no excuse.

AUF. He approaches; you shall hear him.

Enter Coriolanus, with Drums and Colours; a crowd of Citizens with him.

Cor. Hail, lords! I am return'd your soldier;
No more infect'd with my country's love,
Than when I parted hence, but still subsisting
Under your great command. You are to know,
That prosperously I have attempted, and
With bloody passage led your wars, even to
The gates of Rome. Our spoils we have brought home,
Do more than counterpoise, a full third part,
The charges of the action. We have made peace,
With no less honour to the Antines,
Than shame to the Romans; and we here deliver,
Subscribed by the consuls and patricians,
Together with the seal of the senate, what We have compounded on.

AUF. Read it not, noble lords;
But tell the traitor in the highest degree
He hath abus'd your powers.

Cor. Traitor!—how now!—

AUF. Ay, traitor, Marcius.
Cor. Marcius!
AUF. Ay, Marcius, Caius Marcius. Dost thou think
I'll grace thee with that robbery, thy stol'n name
Coriolanus in Coriol?—

You lords and heads of the state, perfidiously
He has betray'd your business, and given up
For certain drops of salt your city, Rome;
I say your city, to his wife and mother,
Breaking his oath and resolution, like
A twist of rotten silk; never admitting
Counsel o' the war, but at his nurse's tears
He whin'd and roar'd away your victory,
That pages blush'd at him, and men of heart
Look'd wondering each at other.

Cor. Hear'st thou, Mars?
AUF. Name not the god, thou boy of tears.
Cor.
AUF. No more

SCENE I.—Rome. Before the Capitol.

The Tomb of the Andronici appearing; the Tribunes and Senators aloft, as in the Capitol. Enter, below.

SATURNINUS and his Followers, on one side; and BASSIANUS and his Followers, on the other; with Drum and Colours.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right, Defend the justice of my cause with arms; And, countrymen, my loving followers, Plead my successive title with your swords. I am the first-born son, of him the last. That wore the imperial diadem of Rome: Then, let my father’s honours live in me, Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.

Bus. Romans,—friends, followers, favourers of my right, If ever Bassianus, Caesar’s son, Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome, Keep then this passage to the Capitol; And suffer not honour to approach Th’ imperial seat, to virtue consecrate, To justice, conscience,1 and nobility, But let desert in pure election shine: And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS, aloft, with the Crown.

Mar. Princes, that strive by factions, and by friends, Ambitiously for rule and empery, Knw. that the people of Rome, for whom we stand A special party, have by common voice In election for the Roman empery, Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius, For many good and great deserts to Rome: A nobler man, a braver warrior, Lives not this day within the city walls. He by the senate is acci2 home, From weary wars against the barbarous Goths, That, with his sons, a terror to our foes,

1 i.e. conscience 2 Sent for. 3 Confiade

Hath yok’d a nation strong, train’d up in arms. Ten years are spent since first he undertook This cause of Rome, and chastised with arms Our enemies’ pride: five times he hath return’d Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons In coffins from the field; And now at last, laden with honour’s spoils, Returns the good Andronicus to Rome, Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms. Let us entreat,—by honour of his name, Whom worthily you would have now succeed, And in the Capitol and senate’s right, Whom you pretend to honour and adore,— That you withdraw you, and abate your strength: Dismiss your followers, and, as suitors should, Plead your deserts in peace and humbleness.

Sat. How fair the tribune speaks to calm my thoughts

Bus. Marcus Andronicus, so do I aff2 In thy uprightness and integrity, And so I love and honour thee and thine, Thy noble brother Titus, and his sons, And her, to whom my thoughts are humbled all, Gracious Lavinia, Rome’s rich ornament, That I will here dismiss my loving friends; And to my fortunes, and the people’s favour, Commit my cause in balance to be weigh’d.

[Exeunt the Followers of Bassianus

Sat. Friends, that have been thus forward in my right, I thank you all and here dismiss you all; And to the love and favour of my country Commit myself, my person, and my cause.

[Exeunt the Followers of Saturninus.

Rome, be as just and gracious unto me, As I am confident and kind to thee.— Open the brazen gates, and let me in.

Bus. Tribunes, and me, a poor competitor.

Enter a Captain, and others.

Cap. Romans! make way! The good Andronicus, Patron of virtue, Rome's best champion.
Successful in the battles that he fights,
With honour, and with fortune, is return'd,
From where he circumscrib'd with his sword,
And brought to yoke, the enemies of Rome.

Sound Drums and Trumpets, &c. Enter Martius and Demetrius; after them, two Men bearing a Coffin covered with black; then Lucius and Quintus. After them, Titus Andronicus; and then Tamora, with Alarbus, Chiron, Demetrius, Aaron, and other Goths, prisoners; Soldiers and People, following.

The Bearers set down the Coffin.

Tit. Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning woods! Lo! as the bark that hath discharge'd her fraught Returns with previous lading to the bay,
From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage, Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs,
To re-salute his country with his tears;
Threes of true joy for his return to Rome
Thou great defender of this Capitol,
Stand gracious to the rites that we intend!
Romans, of five-and-twenty valiant sons,
Half of the number that King Priam had,
Behold the poor remains, alive, and dead!
These that survive let Rome reward with love;
These that I bring unto their latest home,
With burial amongst their ancestors:
Here Goths have given me leave to shroud my sword,
Titus, unkind, and careless of thine own,
Why suffer'st thou thy sons, unburied yet,
To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx?
—Make way to lay them by their brethren.

[The Tomb is opened.

There greet in silence, as the dead are wont,
And sleep in peace, stain in thy country's wars!
O sacred receptacle of my joys,
Sweet cell of virtue and nobility,
How many sons hast thou of mine in store,
That thou wilt never render to me more?

Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner of the Goths,
That we may hew his limbs, and on a pile
Ad manes fratrum sacrifice his flesh,
Before this earthy prison of their bones;
That so their shadows be not unappeas'd,
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.

Tit. I give him you; the noblest that survives,
The eldest son of this distrest queen.

Tam. Stay, Roman brethren!—Gracious conqueror,
Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed,
A mother's tears in passion for her son;
And, if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
I think my son to be as dear to me.
Suffice not, that we are brought to Rome,
To beautify thy triumphs, and return,
Captive to thee, and to thy Roman yoke;
But must my sons be slaughter'd in the streets,
For valiant doings in their country's cause?
O! if to fight for king and common weal
Were plying them, it is in these,
Andronicus, slain not thy tomb with blood,
Wilt thou draw near nature of the gods?
Draw near them, then, in being merciful:
Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge.

Thrice-noble Titus, spare my first-born son.

Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon me.
SCENE II.

TITUS ANDRONICUS.

629

And name thee in election for the empire,
With these our late-deceased emperor’s sons.

Be candidus then, and put it on,
And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her glorious body fits,

Than his that shakes for age and feebleness:
What! should I dion this robe, and trouble you?
Be chose with acclamations to-day;

To-morrow, yield up rule, resign my life,
And set abroad new business for you all?

Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,
And led my country’s strength successfully,
And buried one-and-twenty valiant sons,
Knighted in field, slain manfully in arms.
In right and service of their noble country.
Give me a staff of honour for mine age,
But not a sceptre to control the world:
Upright he held it, lords, that held it last.

Mar. Titus, thou shalt obtain the empery.

Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou tell?

Tit. Patience, prince Saturninus.

Sat. Romans, do me right.

Patricians, draw your swords, and sheath them not Till Saturninus be Rome’s emperor.

Andronicus, would thou wert shipp’d to hell,
Rather than rob me of the people’s hearts.

Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good
That noble-minded Titus means to thee!

Tit. Content thee, prince; I will restore to thee
The people’s hearts, and weaken them from themselves.

Bas. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee,
But honour thee, and will do till I die:
My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends,
I will most thankfully; and thanks, to men
Of noble minds, is honourable need.

Tit. People of Rome, and people’s tribunes, here
I ask your voices, and your suffrages:
Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus?

Trib. To gratify the good Andronicus,
And gratulate his safe return to Rome.

The people will accept whom he admits.

Tit. Tribunes, I thank you; and this suit I make,
That you create your emperor’s eldest son,
Lord Saturnine, whose virtues will, I hope,
Reflect on Rome, as Titian’s rays on earth,
And ripen justice in this common-wealth:
Then, if you will elect by my advice,
Crown him, and say,—“Long live our emperor!”

Mar. With voices and applause of every sort,
Patricians, and plebeians, we create
Lord Saturninus, Rome’s great emperor,
And say,—“Long live our Emperor Saturnine!”

[AMong FLOURISH. Shouts.

Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy favours done
To us in our election this day,
I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts
And will with deeds requite thy gentleness:
And, for an onset, Titus, to advance
Thy name and honourable family,
Lavinia will I make my empress,
Rome’s royal mistress, mistress of my heart,
And in the sacred Pantheon her spouse.

Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion please thee?

Tit. It doth, my worthy lord; and in this match
I hold me highly honour’d of thy grace:
And here, in sight of Rome, to Saturnine,
King and commander of our common-wealth,
The wide world’s emperor, do I consecrate
My sword, my chariot, and my prisoners;

Present well worthy Rome’s imperial lord:
Receive them, then, the tribute that I owe,
Mine honour’s ensigns humbled at thy feet.

Sat. Thanks, noble Titus, father of my life!
How proud I am of thee, and of thy gifts,
Rome shall record; and, when I do forget
The feast of these unspeakable deserts,
Romans, forget your fealty to me.

Tit. Now, madam, are you prisoner to an emperor,

[To TAMORA.

To him that for your honour and your state,
Will use you nobly, and your followers

Sat. A good lady, trust me; of the hue

[Aside. That I would choose, were I to choose anew.

[To her.] Clear up, fair queen, that cloudy countenance
Though chance of war hath wrought this change of cheer,

Thou com’st not to be made a scorn in Rome:
Princely shall be thy usage every way.
Rest on my word, and let not discontent
Daunt all your hopes: madam, he comforts you,
Can make you greater than the queen of Goths.—
Lavinia, you are not displeas’d with this?

Lav. Not I, my lord; sith true nobility
Warrants these words in princely courtesy.

Sat. Thanks, sweet Lavinia.—Romans, let us go.
Ransomless here we set our prisoners free:

Proclaim our honours, lords, with trump and drum.

Bas. Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid is mine.

[Seizing LAVINIA.

Tit. How, sir! Are you in earnest, then, my lord?

Bas. Ay, noble Titus: and resolv’d withal,
To do myself this reason and this right.

[The Emperor courts TAMORA in dumb show;

Mar. SuaM cuncta is our Roman justice:
This prince in justice seizeth but his own.

Luc. And that he will, and shall, if Lucius live.

Tit. Traitors, avante! Where is the emperor’s guard?
Treason, my lord! Lavinia is surpris’d.

Sat. Surpris’d! By whom?

Bas. By him that justly may
Bear his brothe’d from all the world away.

[Exeunt MARCUS and BASSIANUS, with LAVINIA.

Mut. Brothers, help to convey her hence away,
And with my sword I’ll keep this door safe.

[Exeunt LUCIUS, QUINTUS, AND MARTIUS.

Tit. Follow, my lord, and I’ll soon bring her back.

Mut. My lord, you pass not here.

Tit. What, villain boy?

Bar’st me my way in Rome? [Titus kills MUTIUS Mut.

Help, Lucius, help!

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. My lord, you are unjust; and more than so,
In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son.

Tit. Nor thou, nor he, nor any sons of mine:
My sons would never so dishonour me.

Traitor, restore Lavinia to the emperor.

Luc. Dead, if you will; but not to be his wife,
That is another’s lawful promis’d love.

Exeit Sat. No, Titus, no; the emperor needs her not.
Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock:
That trust by leisure him that mocks me once;
Thence never, nor thy traitorous haughty sons,
Confederates all thus to dishonour me.

Wsh was there none else in Rome to make a state;
But Saturnine? Full well, Andronicus,
Agree these deeds with that proud brag of thine,
That said’st, I begg’d the empire at thy hands.

Tit. O monstrous! what reproachful words are these?
Sat. But go thy ways; go, give that changing piece
To him that flourish'd for her with his sword.
A valiant son-in-law thou shalt enjoy;
One fit to handly with thy lawless sons,
To ruffle in the commonwealth of Rome.

Tit. These words are razors to my wounded heart.
Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, queen of Goths,
That, like the stately Phoebus 'mongst her nymphs,
Dost overshine the gallant's dames of Rome,
1 then be pleased with this my sudden choice,
Behold, I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride,
And will create thee empress of Rome.

Peak, queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice?
And here I swear by all the Roman gods,—
Sith priest and holy water are so near,
And tapers burn so bright, and every thing
In readiness for Hymeneus stand,—
I will not re-salute the streets of Rome,
Or climb my palace, till from forth this place
I lead espous'd my bride along with me.

Tam. And here, in sight of heaven, to Rome I swear,
If Saturnine advances the queen of Goths,
She will a handmaid be to his desires,
A loving nurse, a mother to his youth.

Sat. Ascend, fair queen, Panthecon.—Lords, accompany
Your noble emperor, and his lovely bride,
Sent by the heavens for prince Saturnine,
Whose wisdom hath her fortune conquer'd:
There shall we consummate our spousal rites.

[Exeunt Saturninus and his Followers; Tamora, and her sons; Aaron and Goths.

Tit. I am not bid to wait upon this bride.
Titus, when first thou wert to walk alone,
Dishonour'd thus, and challenged of wrongs?
Re-enter Marcus, Lucius, Quintus, and Martius.

Mar. O, Titus, see, O, see what thou hast done!
In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son.

Tit. No, foolish tribune, no; no son of mine,
Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the deed
That hast dishonour'd all our family:
Unworthy brother, and unworthy sons!

Luc. But let us give him burial, as becomes:
Give Mutius burial with our brethren.

Tit. Traitors, away! he rests not in this tomb.
This monument five hundred years hath stood,
Which I have sumptuously re-edified:
Here none but soldiers, and Rome's servitors,
Repose in fame; none basely slain in bravels,
Bury him where you can, he comes not here.

Mar. My lord, this is impiety in you.
My nephew Mutius' deeds do plead for him:
He must be buried with his brethren.

Quin. Mart. And shall, or him we will accompany.
Tit. And shall! What villain was it spoke that word?
Quin. He that would vouch't in any place but here.

Tit. What! would you bury him in my despi'te?

Mar. No, noble Titus; but entreat of thee
To pardon Mutius, and to bury him.

Tit. Marcus, even thou hast stuck upon my crest,
And, with these boys, mine honour thou hast wound'd:
My foes I do repute you every one;
So, trouble me no more, but get you gone.

Mar. He is not himself; let us withdraw awhile.
Quin. Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried.

[Exeunt Marcus, Lucius, Quintus, and Martius.

Mar. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead,
Quin. Father; and in that name doth nature speak.

Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed.

Mar. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul,—
Luc. Dear father, soul and substance of us all,—
Mar. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter
His noble nephew here in virtue's nest,
That died in honour and Lavinia's cause.
Thou art a Roman, be not barbarous:
The Greeks upon advice did bury Ajax,
That slew himself, and wise Laertes' son
Did graciously plead for his funerals.
Let not young Mutius, then, that was thy joy,
Be barr'd his entrance here.

Tit. Rise, Marcus, rise.—
The smallest' st day is this, that e'er I saw,
To be dishonour'd by my sons in Rome!—
Well, bury him, and bury me the next.

[ Mutius is put into the Tomb.

Luc. There lie thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends,
Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb!

All. No man shed tears for noble Mutius;
He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause.

Mar. My lord,—to step out of these dreary dumps,—
How comes it that the subtle queen of Goths
Is of a sudden thus advance'd in Rome?

Tit. I know not, Marcus, but I know it is;
Whether by device or no, the heavens can tell,
Is she not, then, beholding to the man
That brought her for this high good turn so far?
Yes, and will nobly him renumerant.

Flourish. Re-enter, at one side, Saturninus, attended,
Tamora, Demetrius, Chiron, and Aaron: at the other side, Bassianus, Lavinia, and others.

Sat. So Bassianus, you have play'd your prize
God give you joy, sir, of your gallant bride.

Bus. And you of yours, my lord. I say no more.
Nor wish no less; and so I take my leave.

Sat. Traitor, if Rome have law, or we have power
Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape.

Bus. Rape, call you it, my lord, to seize my own,
My true-betrothed love, and now my wife?
But let the laws of Rome determine all;
Mean while, I am possess'd of that I mean.

Sat. 'T is good, sir; you are very short with us;
But, if we live, we'll be as sharp with you.

Bus. My lord, what I have done, as best I may,
Answer must, and shall do with my life:
Only thus much I give your grace to know.
By all the duties that I owe to Rome,
This noble gentleman, lord Titus here,
Is in opinion, and in honour, wrong'd;
That in the rescue of Lavinia
With his own hand did slay his youngest son,
In zeal to you, and highly mov'd to wrath,
To be control'd in that he frankly gave
Receive him, then, to favour, Saturnine.
That hath express'd himself, in all his deeds,
A father, and a friend, to thee, and Rome.

Tit. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds.
'T is thou, and those, that have dishonour'd me.
Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge,
How I have lov'd and honour'd Saturnine.

Tam. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora
Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine,
Then hear me speak indifferently for all:
And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past.
Sat. What, madam! be dishonour'd openly,
And basely put it up without revenge?

Tam. Not so, my lord: the gods of Rome foreordain
I should be author to dishonour you!
But, on mine honour, dare I undertake
For good lord Titus' innocence in all.
Whose fury, not dissembled, speaks his griefs.
Then, at my suit look graciously on him;
Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose,
Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart.—
My lord, be rul'd by me, be you at last; [Aside to Sat.]
Dissemble all your griefs and discontents:
You are but newly planted in your throne;
Lest, then, the people, and patricians too,
Upon a just survey, take Titus' part,
And so suppliant you for ingratitude,
Which Rome reposes to be a heinous sin,
Yield at entreats, and then let me alone.
I'll find a day to massacre them all.
And raze their faction, and their family,
The cruel father, and his traitorous sons,
To whom I sued for my dear son's life;
And make them know what 'tis to let a queen
Kneel in the streets, and beg for grace in vain.
Come, come, sweet emperor,—come, Andronicus.—

[Aloud.]

Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart
That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.
Sat. Rise, Titus, rise; my emperor hath prevail'd.
Tit. I thank your majesty, and her. my lord.
These words, these looks, infuse new life in me.
Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,
A Roman now adopted happily,
And must advise the emperor for his good.
This day all quarrels die, Andronicus;

And let it be mine honour, good my lord,
That I have reconcile'd your friends and you.—
For you, prince Bassianus, I have pass'd
My word and promise to the emperor,
That you will be more mild and tractable.—
And fear not, lords,—and you, Lavinia.—
By my advice, all humbled on your knees,
You shall ask pardon of his majesty.

Luc. We do; and vow to heaven, and to his highness
That what we did was mildly, as we might. [They kneel.]—

Tendering our sister's honour, and our own.

Mar. That on mine honour here I do protest.
Sat. Away, and talk not: trouble us no more.—
Tam. Nay, nay, sweet emperor, we must all be friends.
The tribune and his nephews kneel for grace:
I will not be denied. Sweet heart, look back.
Sat. Marcius, for thy sake, and thy brother's here,
And at my lovely Tamora's entreats,
I do remit those young men's heinous faults.

[They stand up.]

Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,
I found a friend; and sure as death I swore,
I would not part a bachelor from the priest.
Come; if the emperor's court can feast two brides,
You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends.—
This day shall be a love-day, Tamora.
Tit. To-morrow, an it please your majesty,
To hunt the panther and the hart with me,
With horn and hound we'll give your grace bonjour.
Sat. Be it so, Titus, and gramercy too.

[Trumpets. Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter Aaron.

Aar. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top,
Safe out of fortune's shot; and sits aloof,
Secure of thunder's crack, or lightning flash,
Advance'd above pale envy's threatening reach.
As when the golden sun salutes the morn,
And having girt the ocean with his beams,
Gallop the zodiac in his glistering coach,
And over looks the highest-peering hills;
So Tamora.—

Upon her will doth earthly honour wait,
And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown.
Then, Aaron, arm thy heart, and fit thy thoughts,
To mount aloft with thy imperial mistress;
And mount her pitch, whom thou in triumph long
Hast prisoner held, fetter'd in amorous chains,
And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes,
Than was Prometheus tied to Caucassus.
Away with slavish weeds, and servile thoughts!
I will be bright, and shine in pear and gold,
To wait upon this new-made empress.
To wait, said I? to wanton with this queen,
This goddess, this Semiramis, this nympha,
This syren, that will charm Rome's Saturnine,
And see his shipwreck, and his commonweal's.
Holla! what storm is this?

Enter Demetrius and Chiron, braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge
And manners, to intrude where I am grace'd,
And may, for ought thou know'st, affected be.

Chi. Demetrius, thou dost over-ween in all,

And so in this, to bear me down with braves,
'Tis not the difference of a year, or two,
Makes me less gracious, thee more fortunate:
I am as able, and as fit, as thou,
To serve, and to deserve my mistress' grace;
And that my sword upon thee shall approve,
And plead my passions for Lavinia's love.

Aar. Clubs, clubs! these lovers will not keep the peace.

Dem. Why, boy, although our mother, unadvised,
Gave you a dancing rapier by your side,
Are you so desperate grown, to threat your friends?
Go to: have your lath glued within your sheath,
Till you know better how to handle it.

Chi. Mean while, sir, with the little skill I have,
Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare.

Dem. Ay, boy; grow ye so brave? [They draw

Aar. Why, how now, lords,
So near the emperor's palace dare you draw,
And maintain such a quarrel openly?
Full well I wot the ground of all this grudge:
I would not for a million of gold,
The cause were known to them it most concerns;
Nor would your noble mother for much more
Be so dishonour'd in the court of Rome.
For shame! put up.

Dem. Not I; till I have sheath'd
My rapier in his bosom, and, withal,
Thrust those reproachful speeches down his throat,
That he hath breath'd in my dishonour here.

Chi. For that I am prepar'd and full resolv'd,
Foul-spoken coward, that thunder'st with thy tongue,
And with thy weapon nothing da'st perform.
Aar Away, I say!
Now by the gods that warlike Goths adore,
This petty brabble will undo us all.—

Why, lords,—and think you not how dangerous
It is to jest upon a prince's right?
What! Lavinia then become so loose, or Bassianus so degenerate?
That for her love such quarrels may be broach'd,
Without controlment, justice, or revenge?
Young lords, beware!—an should the empress know
This discord's ground, the music would not please.

Chi. I care not, I, knew she and all the world:
love Lavinia more than all the world.

Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choices:
Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.

Aor. Why, are ye mad? or know ye not, in Rome
How furious and impatient they be,
And cannot brook competitors in love?
I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths
By this device.

Chi. Aaron, a thousand deaths
Would I propose, to achieve her whom I love.

Aor. To achieve her!—How?

Dem. Why mak'st thou it so strange?
She is a woman, therefore may be woe'd;
She is a woman, therefore may be won;
She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd.
What, man! more water glideth by the mill
Than wot the miller of; and easy 'tis
Of a cut loaf to steal a shive, we know:
Though Bassianus be the emperor's brother,
Better than he have worn Vulcan's badge.

Aor. Ay, and as good as Saturninus may. [Aside.

Dem. Then, why should he be despair, that knows to court it
With words, fair looks, and liberality?

What! hast thou not full often struck a doe,
And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose?

Aor. Why then, it seems, some certain snatch or so
Would serve your turns.

Chi. Ay, so the turn were serv'd.

Dem. Aaron, thou hast hit it.

Aor. Would you had hit it too;
Then should not we be tir'd with this ado.

Why, hark ye, hark ye,—and are you such fools,
To square for this? Would it offend you, then,
That both should speed? *

Chi. Faith, not me.

Dem. Nor me, so I were one.

Aor. For shame! be friends, and join for that you jar.
'Tis policy and stratagem must do
That you affect; and so must you resolve,
That what you cannot as you would achieve,
You must, perforce, accomplish as you may.
Take this of me: Lucrece was not more chaste
Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love.
A speedier laugh than bearing languishment
Must we pursue, and I have found the path.
My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand;
There will the lovely Roman ladies troop:
The forest walks are wide and spacious,
And many unfrequented plots there are,
Fitted by kind for rape and villainy.
Single you thither, then, this dainty doe,
And strike her home by force, if not by words:
This way, or not at all, stand you in hope.

Come, come; our empress, with her sacred wit,
To vilify and vengeance consecrate,
Will we acquaint with all that we intend;
And she shall file our engines with advice,
That will not suffer you to square yourselves,
But to your wishes' height advance you both.
The emperor's court is like the house of fame,
The palace full of tongues, of eyes, and cars:
The woods are ruthless, dastardly, deaf, and dull;
There speak, and strike, brave boys, and take your turns
There serve your lust, shadow'd from heaven's eye,
And revel in Lavinia's treasury.

Chi. Thy counsel, lad, smells of no cowardice.

Dem. Sit fas aut nefas, till I find the stream
To cool this heat, a charm to calm these fits,
Per Styga, per manes vehor. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Forest near Rome. Horns, and cry of Hounds heard.

Enter Titus Andronicus, with Hunters, &c. Marcus
Licius, Quintus, and Martinus.

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and gay
The fields are fragrant, and the woods are wide.

Uneouple here, and let us make a bay,
And wake the emperor and his lovely bride,
And resew the prince, and sing a hunter's round.
That all the court may echo with the sound.

Sons, let it be your charge, and so will I,
To attend the emperor's person carefully:—
I have been troubled in my sleep this night,
But dawning day brought comfort and delight.

They sing.
"The hunt is up."

Enter Saturninus, Bassianus, Lavinia, Demetrius, Chiron, and Attendants.

Tit. Many good morrows to your majesty:—
Madam, to you as many and as good.—

I promised your grace a hunter's peal.

Sat. And you have rung it lustily, my lords,
Somewhat too early for new-married ladies.

Bas. Lavinia, how say you?
Lav.
I say, no;
I have been abroad awake two hours and more.

Sat. Come on, then: horse and chariots let us have,
And to our sport.—Madam, now shall ye see
Our Roman hunting.

[To Tamara
Mar.
I have dogs, my lord,
Will runse the proudest panther in the chase,
And climb the highest promontor's top.

Tit. And I have horse will follow where the game
Makes way, and run like swallows over the plain.

Dem. Chiron, we hunt not we, with horse nor hound,
But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground.

[Extant.

SCENE III.—A desert Part of the Forest.

Enter Aaron, with a Bag of Gold.

Aor. He, that had wit, would think that I had none,
To buy so much gold under a tree,
And never after to inherit it.
Let him that think of me so abjectly,
Know that this gold must coin a stratagem,
Which, cunningly effected, will beget
A very excellent piece of villainy:
And so repose, sweet gold, for their unrest.

[Hides the Gold

That have their alms out of the empress' chest.

Enter Tamora.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou so
When every thing doth make a gleeing boast?
The birds chaunt melody on every bush;
The snake lies coiled in the cheerful sun;
The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind,
And make a chequer'd shadow on the ground.
Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit,
And, whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,
Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,
Let us sit down, and mark their yelling noise:
And—after conflict, such as was suppos'd
The wandering prince and Dido once enjoy'd,
When with a happy storm they were surpris'd,
And curtained with a counsel-keeping cave.—
We may, each wreathed in the other's arms,
Our pastimes done, possess a golden stumper;
While hounds, and horns, and sweet melodious birds,
Be unto us, as is a nurse's song
Of lullaby to bring her babe asleep.

Agr. Madam, though Venus govern your desires,
Saturn is dominator over mine.
What signifies my deadly-standing eye,
My silence, and my cloudy melancholy?
My fleece of woolly hair that now uncurls,
Even as an adder, when she doth unroll
To do some fatal execution?
No, madam, these are no venereal signs:
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.
Hark, Tamora, the empress of my soul,
Which never hopes more heaven than rests in thee,
This is the day of doom for Bassianus;
His Philomel must lose her tongue to-day:
Thy sons make pillage of her chastity,
And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood.
Seest thou this letter? take it up, I pray thee,
And give the king this fatal-plotted scroll.—
Now question me no more; we are espied:
Here comes a parcel of our hopeful booty,
Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction.
Agr. Ah, my sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life!
Agr. No more, great empress, Bassianus comes:
Be cross with him; and I'll go fetch thy sons
To back thy quarrels, whatsoe'er they be. [Exit.

Enter Bassianus and Lavinia.

Bas. Whom have we here? Rome's royal empress,
Unfurnish'd of her well-be-seeing troop?
Or is it Dian, habited like her;
Who hath abandoned her holy groves,
To see the general hunting in this forest?

Tum. Saucy controller of my private steps!
Had I the power, that, some say, Dian had,
Thy temples should be planted presently
With horns, as was Actaeon's; and the hounds
Should dine upon thy new-transformed limbs,
Unmannerly intruder as thou art!

Lav. Under your patience, gentle empress,
T is thought you have a goodly gift in horning;
And to be doubted, that your Moor and you
Are single forth to try experiments.
Jove shield your husband from his hounds to-day!
'Tis pity, they should take him for a stag.

Bas. Believe me, queen, your swarth Cimmerian
Doth make your honour of his body's hue,
Spotted, destitute, and abominable.
Why are you soquester'd from all your train,
Dismounted from your snow-white prudely steed,
And wander'd hither to an obscure plot,
Accompanied but with a barbarous Moor,
If foul desire had not conducted you?

Lav. And being intercepted in your sport,
Great reason that my noble lord be rated
For sauciness!—I pray you, let us hence,
And let her jot her raven-coloured love:
This valley fits the purpose passing well.

Bus. The king, my brother, shall have note of this.
Lav. Ay, for these slips have made him noted long,
Good kin's! to be so mightily abus'd.

Tam. Why have I patience to endure all this?

Enter Demetrius and Chiron.

Dem. How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother?
Why dost thou thy highness look so pale and wan?

Tam. Have I not reason, think you, to look pale?
These two have tie'd me hither to this place,
A barren detested vale, you see, it is:
The trees, though summer, yet forebode and lean,
O'ercome with moss, and baleful mistletoe.
Here never shines the sun; here nothing breeds.
Unless the nightly owl, or fatal raven.
And, when they show'd me this abhorred pit,
They told me, here, at dead time of the night,
A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes.
Ten thousand swelling toads, as many trebins,
Would make such fearful and confused cries,
As any mortal barely hearing it,
Should straight fall mad, or else die suddenly
No sooner had they told this hellish tale,
But straight they told me, they would bind me here
Unto the body of a dismal yew,
And leave me to this miserable death:
And then they call'd me, foul adulteress,
Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms
That ever ear did hear to such effect;
And, had you not by wondrous fortune come,
This vengeance on me had they executed.
Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,
Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children.

Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son.

Stab Bassianus.

Chi. And this for me, struck home to show my strength.
[Stabbing him likewise]

Lav. Ay, come, Semiramis!—nay, barbarous Ta-more;
For none fits thy nature but thy own.

Tam. Give me thy poniard: you shall know, my boys,
Your mother's hand shall right your mother's wrong.

Dem. Stay, madam; here is more belongs to her:
First, thrash the corn, then after burn the straw.
This minion stood upon her chastity,
Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty,
And with that painted shape she braves your might:
And shall she carry this unto her grave?

Chi. An if she do, I would I were an eunuch.
Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust.

Tam. But when ye have the honey ye desire,
Let not this wap outlive us both to sting.

Chi. I warrant you, madam, we will make that sure.—
Come, mistresse, now perforce, we will enjoy
That nice preserved honesty of yours.

Lav. O Tamora! thou hast a woman's face,—

Tam. I will not hear her speak: away with her!
Lav. Sweet lords, entertain her hear me but a word

Dem. Listen, fair madam: let it be your glory
To see her tears; but be your heart to them,
As unrelenting flint to drops of rain.

Lav. When did the tiger's young ones teach the dam?
O! do not learn her wrath; she taught it thee.
The milk, thou suck'st; from her, did turn to marble;
Even at her seat thou had'st thy tyranny.
Yet every mother breeds not sons alike:
Do thou entreat her show a woman pity. [To CHIRON.
Chi. What! wouldst thou have me prove myself a bastard?
Law. 'Tis true: the raven doth not hatch a lark:
Yet have I heard. O, could I find it now!
The lion, mov'd with pity, did endure
To have his princely claws par'd all away.
Some say that ravens foster forlorn children.
The whilst their own birds fasten in their nests:
O! be to me, though thy hard heart say no,
Nothing so kind, but something pitiful.
Tam. I know not what it means. Away with her!
Law. O! let me teach thee: for my father's sake.
That gave thee life, when well he might have slain thee,
Be not obdurate. O, thy deaf ears.
Tam. Hadst thou in person ne'er offended me,
Even for his sake am I pitiless.—
Remember, boys, I pour'd forth tears in vain,
To save your brother from the sacrifice;
But fierce Andronicus would not relent.
Therefore, away, and use her as you will:
The worse to her, the better love'd of me.
Law. O Tamora! be call'd a gentle queen. [Kneeling.
And with thine own hands kill me in this place;
For 't is not life that I have begg'd so long.
Poor I was slain when Bassianus died. [go.
Tam. What begg'st thou then? fond' woman, let me
Law. 'Tis present death I beg; and one thing more,
That womanhood denies my tongue to tell.
O! keep me from their worse than killing lust,
And tumble me into some lostsome pit.
Where never man's eye may behold my body:
Do this, and be a charitable murderer.
Tam. So should I rob my sweet sons of their fee:
No; let them satisfy their lust on thee.
Dem. Away! for thou hast stay'd us here too long.
Confusion fall.—
Chi. Nay, then. I'll stop your mouth.—Bring thou her husband: [Dragging off Lavinia.
This is the hole where Aaron bid us hide him. [Exeunt.
Tam. Farewell, my sons: see, that you make her sure.
Ne'er let my heart know merry cheer indeed,
Till all the Andronici be made away.
Now will I hence to see my lovely Moor.
And let my spleenful sons this trull deflour. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Same.

Enter Aaron, with Quintus and Martius.
Aar. Come on, my lords, the better foot before:
Straight will I bring you to the lonesome pit,
Where I esp'y'd the panther fast asleep.
Quin. My sight is very dull, whate'er it bodes.
Mart. And mine, I promise you: 'tis not for shame,
Well could I leave our sport to sleep awhile.
[Quin. and Martius falls into the Pit.
Quin. What! art thou fallen? What subtle hole is this,
Whose mouth is cover'd with rude-growing briers,
Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood.
As fresh as morning's dew distill'd on flowers?
A very fatal place it seems to me.—
Speak: brother, hast thou hurt thee with the fall?

Mart. [Under the stage.] O, brother! with the dis-mill of abject hurt.
That ever eye with sight made heart lament.
Aar. [Aside.] Now will I fetch the king to fit them here;
That he thereby may give a likely guess,
How these were they that made away his brother.
[Exit Aar.

Mart. Why dost not comfort me, and help me out
From this unhallow'd and blood-stained hole?
Quin. I am surprised with an uncouth fear:
A chilling sweat o'er-runs my trembling joints:
My heart suspects more than mine eye can see.
Mart. To prove thou hast a true-divining heart.
Aaron and thou look down into this den,
And see a fearful sight of blood and death.
Quin. Aaron is gone: and my compassionate heart
Will not permit mine eyes once to behold
The whereat it trembles by surmise.
O! tell me how? it is: for ne'er till now
Was I a child, to fear I know not what.
Mart. Lord Bassianus lies embrewed here,
All on a heap, like to a slaughter'd lamb,
In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.
Quin. If it be dark, how dost thou know 'tis he?
Mart. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear
A precious ring, that lighten's all the hole,
Which, like a taper in some monument,
Doth shine upon the dead man's earthly cheeks,
And shows the ragged entrails of the pit:
So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus.
When he by night lay bath'd in maiden blood.
O brother! help me with thy fainting hand,—
It fear hath made thee faint; as me it hath,— Oft of this fell devouring receptacle,
As hateful as Coetyus' misty mouth.
Quin. Reach me thy hand that I may help thee out,
Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good,
I may be pluck'd into the swallowing womb
Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus' grave.
I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.
Mart. Nor I no strength to climb without thy help.
Quin. Thy hand once more: I will not lose again,
Till thou art here aloft, or I below.—
Thou canst not come to me, I came to thee. [Falls in Enter Saturnines and Aaron.
Sat. Along with me:—I'll see what hole is here,
And what he is that now is leap'd into it.
Say, who art thou, that lately did descend
Into this gaping hollow of the earth?
Mart. The unhappy son of old Andronicus,
Brought hither in a most unlucky hour.
To find thy brother Bassianus dead.
Sat. My brother dead! I know, thou dost but jest
He and his lady both are at the lodze,
Upon the north side of this pleasant chase;
'T is not an hour since I left him there.
Mart. We know not where you left him all alive,
But, out alas! here have we found him dead.
Enter Tamora, with Attendants; Titus Andronicus and Lucius.
Tam. Where is my lord, the king?
Sat. Here, Tamora; though griev'd with killing grief.
Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus?
Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search my wound
Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.
Tam. Then, all too late I bring this fatal writ.

The complott of this timeless tragedy;
SCENE I.

TITUS ANDRONICUS.

635

Chi. Go home, call for sweet water, wash thy hands.
Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to wash;
And so let's leave her to her silent walks.
Chi. An't were my case, I should go hang myself
Dem. If thou hast hands to help thee knit the cord.

[Execut DEMETRIUS and CHIRON.

Wind Horns. Enter MARCUS, from hunting.

Mar. Who's this,—my niece, that flies away so fast?
Cousin, a word: where is your husband?
If I do dream, 'twould all my wealth would wake me.
If I do wake, some planet strike me down,
That I may slumber in eternal sleep.
Speak, gentle niece, what stern ungentle hands
Have lopp'd, and hew'd, and made thy body bare
Of her two branches; those sweet ornaments,
Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in
And might not gain so great a happiness.
As have thy love? Why dost not speak to me?
Alas! a crimson river of warm blood,
Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind,
Doth rise and fall between thy roseate lips,
Coming and going with thy honey breath.
But, sure, some Tereus hath desloured thee,
And, lest thou shouldst detect him, cut thy tongue
Ah! now thou turn'st away thy face for shame;
And, notwithstanding all this loss of blood,—
As from a conduit with three issuing spouts,—
Yet do thy cheeks look red, as Titon's face
Blushing to be encountered with a cloud.
Shall I speak for thee? shall I say, 'tis so?
O! that I knew thy heart; and knew the beast,
That I might rail at him to ease my mind.
Sorrow concealed, like an oven stopp'd,
Doth burn the heart to eindore where it is.
Fair Philomela, she but lost her tongue,
And in a tedious sampler sew'd her mind;
But, lovely niece, that mean is cut from thee:
A craftier Tereus, cousin, hast thou met,
And he hath cut those pretty fingers off,
That could have better sew'd than Philomel.
O! had the monster seen those lily hands
Tremble, like aspen leaves, upon a hute,
And make the silken strings delight to kiss them,
He would not then have touch'd them for his life,
Or, had he heard the heavenly harmony,
Which that sweet tongue hath made in minstrelsy,
He would have dropp'd his knife, and fell asleep,
As Cerberus at the Thraean poet's feet.
Come; let us go, and make thy father blind;
For such a sight will blind a father's eye.
One hour's storm will drown the fragrant meads;
What will whole months of tears thy father's eyes?
Do not draw back, for we will mourn with thee
O, could our mourning case thy misery!

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same.

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, with LAEVINA, ravished;
her Hands cut off, and her Tongue cut out.

Dem. So, now go tell, an if thy tongue can speak,
Who 't was cut out thy tongue, and ravish'd thee.

Chi. Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so;
And, if thy stumps will let thee, play the scribe.

Dem. See how with signs and tokens she can scrawl.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter Senators, Tribunes, and Officers of Justice, with MARTIUS and QUINTUS, bound, passing on to the Place of Execution; Titus going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers! noble tribunes, stay!
For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent
In danger's wars, whilst you securely slept;
For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed,
For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd,
And for these bitter tears, which now you see
Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks;
Be pitiful to my condemned sons,
Whose souls are not corrupted as it is thought.
For two and twenty sons I never wept,
Because they died in honour's lofty bed:

1 scowl: in folio. 2 them: in old copies. Rome made the change. 3 their: in old copies; Hamner's correction. 4 Not in folio. which adds "within" to the end of the line. 5 These two words are not in f, e.
For these, these, tribunes, in the dust I write

[Throwing himself on the ground.]

My heart's deep anguish in my soul's sad tears.
Let my tears staunch the earth's dry appetite;
My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush. [Exit Senators, Tribunes, &c., with the Prisoners.

O earth! I will befriend thee with more rain,
That shall distil from these two ancient urns,1
Than youthful April shall with all his showers:
In summer's drought I'll drop upon thee still;
In winter with warm tears I'll melt the snow,
And keep eternal spring-time on thy face,
So thou mayst drink my dear son's blood.

[Enter Lucius, with his Sword drawn.

O, reverend tribunes! gentle, aged men!
Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death;
And let me say, that never wept before,
My tears are now prevailing orators.

Luc. O, noble father! thou lament in vain:
The tribunes hear you not, no man is by,
And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

Tit. Ah, Lucius! for thy brothers let me plead—

Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you.

Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you speak.

Tit. Why, 'tis no matter, man: if they did hear,
They would not mark me; or if they did mark,
They would not pity me, yet plead I must,
And bootless unto them.2

Therefore, I tell my sorrows to the stones;
Who, though they cannot answer my distress,
Yet in some sort they are better than the tribune,
For that they will not interject my tale. [Rising.

When I do weep, they humbly at my feet
Receive my tears, and seem to weep with me;
And were they but attired in grave weeds,
Rome could afford no tribune like to these.
A stone is soft as wax, tribunes more hard than stones;
A stone is silent, and offendeth not
And tribunes with their tongues doom men to death.
But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon drawn?

Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their death;
For which attempt the judges have pronounc'd
My everlasting doom of banishment.

Tit. O happy man! they have befriended thee.
Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive,
That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers?
Tigers must prey; and Rome affords no prey,
But me and mine: how happy art thou, then,
From these devourers to be banished?
But who comes with our brother Marcus here?

[Enter Marcus and Lavinia.

Mar. Titus, prepare thy aged3 eyes to weep;
Or, if not so, thy noble heart to break:
I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.

Tit. Will it consume me? let me see it, then.

Mar. This was thy daughter.

Tit. Why, Marcus, so she is.

Luc. Ah me! this object kills me.

Tit. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon her.—

Speak, my Lavinia, what accursed hand
Hath made thee helpless in thy father's sight?

What foal hath added water to the sea,
Or brought a faggot to bright-burning Troy?
My grief was at the height before thou camest,
And now, like Nilus, it distaineth bounds.

Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too,
For they have fought for Rome, and all in vain,
And they have nurs'd this woel in feuding life:
In bootless prayer have they been held up,
And they have serv'd me to effectless use:
Now, all the service I require of them
Is, that the one will help to cut the other.—
'Tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands,
For hands to do Rome service are but vain.

Luc. Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd thee?

Mar. O! that delightful engine of her thoughts,4
That blabb'd them with such pleasing eloquence,
Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage,
Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung
Ridiculous notes, enchanting old and young.

Luc. O! say thou for her, who hath done this deed?

Mar. O! thus I found her straying in the park
Seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer,
That hath receiv'd some unrequiring wound.

Tit. It was my deer; and he that wounded her
Hath hurt me more, than had he kill'd me dead.
For now I stand as one upon a rock,
Environ'd with a wilderness of sea;
Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by wave,
Expecting ever when some curious surge
Will in his brinish bowels swallow him.
This way to death my wretched sons are gone,
Here stands my other son, a banish'd man,
And here my brother, weeping at my woes;
But that which gives my soul the greatest spurn
Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul,—
Had I but seen thy picture in this plight,
It would have madded me; what shall I do
Now I behold thy living body so?
Thou hast no hands to wipe away thy tears,
Nor tongue to tell me who hath martyr'd thee:
Thy husband he is dead; and for his death,
Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this.
Look, Marcus; ah! son Lucius, look on her:
When I did name her brothers, then fresh tears
Stood on her cheeks, as doth the honey dew
Upon a gather'd lily almost wither'd.

Mar. Perchance, she weeps because they kill'd her husband;
Perchance, because she knows them innocent.

Tit. If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful,
Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them.—
No, no, they would not do so foul a deed;
Witness the sorrow that their sister makes.—
Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips,
Or make some sign how I may do thee ease,
Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius,
And thou, and I, sit round about some fountain,
Looking all downwards, to behold our checks
How they are stain'd, as meadows yet not dry,
With miry slime left on them by a flood?
And in the fountain shall we gaze so long,
Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness,
And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears?
Or shall we eat away our hands, like thine?
Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shows
Pass the remainder of our hateful days?
What shall we do? let us, that have our tongues,
Plot some device of further misery,
To make us wonder'd at in time to come.

Luc. Sweet father, cease your tears; for at your grief,
See, how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.

Mar. Patience, dear niece.—Good Titus, dry those eyes.
Tit. Ah, Marcus, Marcus! brother, well I wot,
Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine,
For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine own.
Luc. Ah, my Lavinia! I will wipe thy cheeks.
Tit. Mark, Marcus, mark! I understand her signs
Had she a tongue to speak, now would she say
That to her brother which I said to thee:
His napkin, with his true tears all bewet,
Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks.
O! what a sympathy is this!
As far from help as limbo is from bliss.

Enter Aaron.

Aar. Titus Andronicus, my lord the emperor
Sends thee this word,—that, if thou love thy sons,
Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus,
Or any one of you, chop off your hand,
And send it to the king: he for the same,
Will send thee hither both thy sons alive,
And that shall be the ransom for their fault.
Tit. O, gracious emperor! O, gentle Aaron!
Did ever raven sing so like a lark
That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise?
With all my heart, I'll send my hand to him.
Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it off?
Luc. Stay, father! for that noble hand of thine.
That hath thrown down so many enemies,
Shall not be sent: my hand will serve the turn.
My youth can better spare my blood than you.
And therefore mine shall save my brothers' lives.

Mar. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome,
And wear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe,
Writing destruction on the enemy's castle?
O! none of both but are of high desert.
My hand hath been but idle: let it serve
To ransom my two nephews from their death,
Then, have I kept it to a worthy end.

Aar. Nay, come agree, whose hand shall go along,
For fear they die before their pardon come.

Mar. My hand shall go.

Luc. By heaven, it shall not go.

Tit. Sirs, strive no more: such with'rd herb as these Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.
Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy son,
Let me redeem my brothers both from death.

Mar. And, for our father's sake, and mother's care,
Now let me show a brother's love to thee.

Tit. Agree between you; I will spare my hand.
Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe.

Mar. But I will use it. [Exeunt Lucius and Marcus.

Tit. Come hither, Aaron: I'll deceive them both:
Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.

Aar. If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest. [Aside.
And never, whilst I live, deceive men so:
But I'll deceive you in another sort, and
That you'll say, ere half an hour pass.

[He cuts off Titus's Hand with his Sword.

Re-enter Lucius with an Axe, and Marcus.

Tit. Now, stay your stripes; what shall be is despatch'd.

Good Aaron, give his majesty my hand:
Tell him, it was a hand that warded him
From thousand dangers. Bid him bury it:
More hath it merited; that let it have.
As for my sons, say, I account of them
As jewels purchased at an easy price;
And yet dear too, because I bought mine own.

Aar. I go. Andronicus; and for thy hand,
Look by and by to have thy sons with thee.—

[Aside.] Their heads, I mean.—O, how this villainy

[Fr casquelet, a close helmet. * the words, "with an Axe," are not in f. e.
And make them blind with tributary tears;
Then, which way shall I find revenge's cave?
For these two heads do seem to speak to me,
And threaten, I shall never come to bliss,
Till all these mischiefs be return'd again,
Even in their throats that have committed them.
Come, let me see what task I have to do.—
You heavy people, circle me about,
That I may turn me to each one of you,
And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs.—
The vow is made.—Come, brother, take one head;
And in this hand the other will I bear:
Lavinia, thou shalt be employed in these things;
Bear thou my hand, sweet wench, between thy teeth.
As for thee, boy, go, get thee from my sight:
Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay.
Hie to the Goths, and raise an army there;
And, if you love me, as I think 'tis true,
Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do.
[Exit Titus, Marcus, and Lavinia.]

Luc. Farewell, Androicous, my noble father;
The woeful'st man that ever liv'd in Rome.
Farewell, proud Rome: till Lucius come again,
He leaves his pledges dearer than his life.
Farewell, Lavinia, my noble sister;
O, would thou wert as thou 'stofore hast been!
But now nor Lucius, nor Lavinia lives,
But in oblivion, and hateful griefs.
If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs,
And make proud Saturnine, and his empress,
Beg at the gates, like Tarquin and his queen.
Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power,
To be reveng'd on Rome and Saturnine.
[Exit.]

Enter Titus, Marcus, Lavinia, and young Lucius, a Boy.

Tit. So, so, now sit: and look, you eat no more
Than will preserve just so much strength in us
As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.
Marcus, unknot that sorrow-wracken knot:
Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our hands,
And cannot passionate our tenfold grief
With folded arms. This poor right hand of mine
Is left to tyrannize upon my breast;
And when my heart, all mad with misery,
Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh,
Then, thus I thump it down.
Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs,
[To Lavinia.]

When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beating,
Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still.
Wound it with sighing, girl, kill it with greans;
Or get some little knife between thy teeth,
And just against thy heart make thou a hole,
That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall,
May run into that sink, and soaking in,
Drown the lamenting foot in sea-salt tears.

Marcus, fie, brother, fie! teach her not thus to lay
Such violent hands upon her tender life.

Tit. How now! has sorrow made thee dote already?
Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I.

What violent hands can she lay on her life?
Ah! wherefore dost thou urge the name of hands?
To bid Æneas tell the tale twice o'er,
How Troy was burnt, and he made miserable?
O! handle not the theme, to talk of hands,
Lest we remember still, that we have none.
Fie, fie! how frantically I square my talk!
As if we should forget we had no hands,
If Marcus did not name the word of hands.—
Come, let's fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this!—
Here is no drink. Hark, Marcus, what she says;
I can interpret all her martyr'd signs:
She says, she drinks no other drink but tears,
Brew'd with her sorrow, mesh'd upon her cheeks.—
Speechless complainer, I will learn thy thought;
In thy dumb action will I be as perfect,
As begging hormits in their holy prayers:
Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stumps to heaven,
Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,
But I of these will wrest an alphabet,
And by still practice learn to know thy meaning.

Boy. Good grandsire, leave these bitter deet
Laments:
Make my aunt merry with some pleasing tale.

Marcus. Alas! the tender boy, in passion mov'd,
Doth weep to see his grandsire's heaviness.
Tit. Peace, tender sapling; thou art made of tears.
And tears will quickly melt thy life away.—
[Marcus strikes the Dish with a Knife.]

What dost thou strike at, Marcus, with thy knife?

Marcus. At that that I have kill'd, my lord—a fly.

Tit. Out on thee, murderer! thou kill'dst my heart:
Mine eyes are cloud'd with view of tyranny;
A deed of death, done on the innocent,
 Becomes not Titus's brother. Get thee gone;
I see, thou art not for my company.

Marcus. Alas! my lord, I have but kill'd a fly.

Tit. But how, if that fly had a father and mother,
How would he hang his slender gilded wings,
And buzz lamenting doings in the air?
Poor harmless fly!
That with his pretty buzzing melody,
Came here to make us merry; and thou hast kill'd him

Marcus. Pardon me, sir: it was a black ill-favour'd fly.
Like to the empress' Moor; therefore, I kill'd him.

Tit. O, O, O!

Then pardon me for reprehending thee,
For thou hast done a charitable deed.
Give me thy knife, I will insult on him;
Flattering myself, as if it were the Moor
Come hither purposely to poison me.
For 'tis for thyself, and that's for Tamora. Ah, sirrah!
Yet I think we are not brought so low,
But that between us we can kill a fly,
That comes in likeness of a coal-black Moor.

Marcus. Alas, poor man! grief has so wrought on him
He takes false shadows for true substances.

Tit. Come, take away.—Lavinia, go with me:
I'll to thy closet; and go read with thee
Sad stories chanced in the times of old.—
Come, boy; and go with me: thy sight is young,
And thou shalt read, when mine begins to dazzle.
[Exit]
ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same. Before Titus's House.

Enter Titus and Marcus. Then enter young Lucius,
Lavinia running after him.

Boy. Help, grandsire, help! my aunt Lavinia
Follows me everywhere, I know not why.—
Good uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes.
Alas! sweet aunt, I know not what you mean.

Mar. Stand by me, Lucius: do not fear thine aunt.
Tit. She loves thee, boy; too well to do thee harm.

Boy. Ay, when my father was in Rome, she did.

Mar. What means my niece Lavinia by these signs?
Tit. Fear her not, Lucius: somewhat doth she mean.

See, Lucius, see, how much she makes of thee:
Some whither would she have thee go with her.
Ah, boy! Cornelia never with more care
Read to her sons, than she hath read to thee,
Sweet poetry, and Tully's Orator.
Canst thou not guess wherefore she pites thee thus?

Boy. My lord, I know not, I, nor can I guess,
Unless some fit, or frenzy do possess her;
For I have heard my grandsire say full oft,
Extremity of griefs would make men mad;
And I have read that Hecuba of Troy
Ram mad through sorrow: that made me to fear.
Although, my lord, I know, my noble aunt
Loves me as dear as e'er my mother did,
And would not, but in fury, fright my youth;
Which made me down to throw my books, and fly,
Causeth, perhaps.—But pardon me, sweet aunt;
And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go,
I will most willingly attend your ladyship.

Mar. Lucius, I will.

[Lucius turns over the books which Lucius had let fall.

Tit. How now, Lavinia!—Marcus, what means this?

Some book there is that she desires to see,—
Which is it, girl, of these?—Open them, boy.—
But thou art deeper read, and better skill'd;
Come, and take choice of all my library,
And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens
Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed.

What book? Why lifts she up her arms in sequence thus?

Mar. I think, she means, that there was more than one
Confederate in the fact.—Ay, more there was;
Or else to heaven she heaves them to revenge.

Tit. Lucius, what book is that she posseth so?

Boy. Grandsire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphosis:
My mother gave it me.

Mar. For love of her that's gone,
Perhaps, she cull'd it from among the rest.

Tit. Soft! see how busily she turns the leaves!
Help her: what would she find?—Lavinia, shall I read?
This is the tragick tale of Philomel,
And treats of Tereus' treason, and his rape;
And I, fear, I was, root of thine annoy.

Mar. See, brother, see! note, how she quotes the leaves.

Tit. Lavinia, wert thou thus surpris'd, sweet girl,
Ravish'd and wrong'd, as Philomel was,
Forc'd in the ruthless, vast, and gloomy woods?—
See. see!—

Ay, such a place there is, where we did hunt,
(O, had we never, never hunted there!)

* No. in the quarto * Not in F. * Companion. * Not in F.
Lucius, I’ll fit thee: and withal, my boy
Shall carry from me to the empress’ sons
Presents, that I intend to send them both.
Come, come; thou’lt do thy message, wilt thou not?
Boy. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms, grandsire.
Tit. No, boy, not so; I’ll teach another course.
Lavinia, come.—Marcus, look to my house:
Lucius and I’ll go brave it at the court;
Ay, marry, will we, sir; and we’ll be waited on.
[Exeunt Titus, Lavinia, and Boy.

Mar. O heavens! can you hear a good man groan,
And not relent, or not compassion him?
Marcus, attend him in his ecstasy.
That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart,
Than foe-men’s marks upon his batter’d shield;
But yet so just, that he will not revenge.
Revenge, ye heavens, for old Andronicus! [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Aaron, Demetrius, and Chiron, at one Door;
at another door, young Lucius, and an Attendant, with a Bundle of Weapons, and Verses writ upon them.
Chi. Demetrius, here’s the son of Lucius;
He hath some message to deliver us.

Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather.

Boy. My lords, with all the hollowness I may,
I greet your honours from Andronicus:—
[Aside.] And pray the Roman gods, confound you both.
Dem. Gramercy, lovely Lucius. What’s the news?
Boy. [Aside.] That you are both decipher’d, that’s the news.

For villains mark’d with rape. [To them.] May it please you,
My grandsire, well advis’d, hath sent by me
The goodliest weapons of his armoury,
To gratify your honourable youth,
The hope of Rome; for so he bade me say,
And so I do, and with his gifts present
Your lordships, that whenever you have need,
You may be armed and appointed well.
And so I leave you both, [Aside.] like bloody villains.

[Exeunt Boy and Attendant.

Dem. What’s here? A scroll, and written round
Let’s see:—

 İnter leges, secerisque purus,
Non egens Matris jaculis, nec arcu.

Chi. O ! ’Tis a verse in Horace. I know it well:
I read it in the grammar long ago.

Aar. Ay, just!—a verse in Horace;—right, you have it.

Here’s no sound jest! the old man hath found their guilt,
And sends them2 weapons wrapp’d about with lines,
That wound, beyond their feeling, to the quick;
But were our witty empress well a-foot,
She would applaud Andronicus’ conceit:
But let her rest in her uneas’t awhile.—

To them.] And now, young lords, was’t not a happy star
Led us to Rome, strangers, and more than so,
Captives, to be advanced to this height?
It did me good, before the palace gate,
To brave the tribune in his brother’s hearing.
Dem. But me more good, to see so great a lord
Basely insinuate, and send us gifts.

Aar. Hath he not reason, lord Demetrius?
Did you not use his daughter very friendly?
Dem. I would, we had a thousand, Roman dames

At such a bay, by turn to serve our lust.

Chi. A charitable wish, and full of love.

Aar. Here lacks but your mother for to say amen.

Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand more.

Dem. Come, let us go, and pray to all the gods
For our beloved mother in her pains.

Aar. Pray to the devils; the gods have given us over.

[Trumpets sound

Dem. Why do the emperor’s trumpets flourish thus?

Chi. Belike, for joy the emperor hath a son.

Dem. Soft! who comes here?

Enter a Nurse, holding a Black-a-moore Child in her Arms.

Nur. Good morrow, lords. O! tell me, did you see
Aaron the Moor.

Aar. Well, more, or less, or ne’er a whit at all,
Here Aaron is; and what with Aaron now?

Nur. O, gentle Aaron, we are all undone!

Now help, or we bestrive the more evermore.

Aar. Why, what a caterwauling dost thou keep.

What dost thou wrap and fumble in thine arms?

Nur. O! that which I would hide from heaven’s eye,
Our empress’ shame, and stately Rome’s disgrace.
She is deliver’d; lords; she is deliver’d.

Aar. To whom?

Nur. I mean she’s brought to bed.

Aar. Well, God
Give her good rest! What hath he sent her?

Aar. Why, then she’s the devil’s dam: a joyful issue.

Nur. A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful issue.

Here is the babe, as last as it was [Showing it] amongst the fairest burdens of our emlne.

The empress sends it thee, thy stamp, thy seal,
And bids thee christen it with thy dagger’s point.

Aar. Zounds! ye whore, is black so base a hue?

Sweet blows, you are a beauteous blossom, sure.

Dem. Villain, what hast thou done?

Aar. That which thou canst not undo.

Chi. Thou hast undone our mother.

Aar. Villain, I have done thy mother.

Dem. And therein, hellish dog, thou hast undone.

Woe to her chance, and damn’d her loathed choice!

Accurs’d the offspring of so foul a fiend!

Chi. It shall not live.

Aar. It shall not die.

Nur. Aaron, it must: the mother wills it so.

Aar. What! must it, nurse? then let no man but I,
Do execution on my flesh and blood.

Dem. I’ll broach the tadpole on my rapier’s point.

Nurse, give it me: my sword shall soon despatch it.

Aar. Sooner this sword shall plow thy bowels up.

Stay, murderess villains! will you kill your brother?

Now, by the burning tapers of the sky,
That shin’d so brightly when this boy was got,
He dies upon my scimitar’s sharp point,
That touches this my first-born son and heir,
I tell you, younglings, not Eneas,
With all his threatening band of Typhon’s brood,
Nor great Aeneas, nor the god of war,
Shall seize this prey out of his father’s hands.
What, what, ye sanguine, shallow-hearted boys!
Ye white-limb’d vails! ye alkeno painted signs!
Cele-black is better than another hue,
In that it shorns to bear another hue;
For all the water in the ocean
Can never turn the swan’s black legs to white,
Although she have them hourly in the flood.

3 Not in f. o. 4 breeders: in f. o. 5 Not in folio. 6 limb’d: in old couples. Steevens made the change
Tell the empress from me, I am a man [To the Nurse.]
To keep mine own; excuse it how she can.
Dem. Wilt thou betray thy noble mistress thus?
Aar. My mistress is my mistress; this, myself;
The vigour, and the picture of my youth:
This, before all the world, do I prefer,
This, maugre all the world, will I keep safe,
Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome.
Dem. By this our mother is for ever shamed.
Nur. The emperor in his rage will doon her death.
Chi. I blush to think upon this ignomy.
Aar. Why, there's the privilege your beauty bears.
Fie! treacherous hue, that will betray with blushing
The close enacts and counsels of the heart:
Here's a young lad fram'd of another leer.
Look, how the black slave smiles upon the father,
As who should say, "Old lad, I am thine own."
He is your brother, lords, sensibly fed
Of that self-blood that first gave life to you;
And, from that womb, where you imprisoned'red,
He is enfranchised and come to light:
Nay, he is your brother by theurer side,
Although my seal be stamped in his face.
Nur. Aaron, what shall I say unto the empress?
Dem. Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be done,
And we will all subscribe to thy advice:
Save thou the child, so we may all be safe.
Aar. Then sit we down, and let us all consult.
My son and I will have the wind of you:
Keep there; now talk at pleasure of your safety.
[They sit at a distance.
Dem. How many women saw this child of his?
Aar. Why, so, brave lords: when we all join in league,
I am a lamb; but if you brace the Moor,
The chafed boar, the mountain lioness,
The ocean swells not so as Aaron storms.—
But say again, how many saw the child?
Nur. Contemn the midwife, and myself:
And no one else, but the deliver'd empress.
Aar. The empress, the midwife, and yourself:
Two may keep counsel, when the third's away.
Go to the empress; tell her, this I said.—
[Stabbing her: she screams.
Weke, weke!—so cries a pig, prepared to the spit.
Dem. What mean'st thou, Aaron? Wherefore dost not
Aar. O lord! sir, 'tis a deed of policy. [thou this?
Shall she live to betray this guilt of ours,
A long-tongu'd babbling gossip? no, lords, no
And now be it known to you my full intent.
Not far hence Muli lives, my countryman,
His wife but yesternight was brought to bed.
His child is like to her, fair as you are;
Go pack* with him, and give the mother gold,
And tell them both the circumstance of all;
And how by this their child shall be advance'd
And be received for the emperor's heir,
And substituted in the place of mine,
To calm this tempest whirling in the court,
And let the emperor dandle him for his own.
Hark ye, lords; ye see, I have given you physic.
[Pointing to the Nurse.
And you must needs bestow her funeral:
The fields are near, and you are gallant grooms.
This done, see that you make no long delays.
But send the midwife presently to me:
The midwife, and the nurse, well made away,
Then, let the ladiesattle what they may.

TITUS ANDRONICUS.

SCENE III.—The Same. A public Place.

Enter Titus, bearing Arrows, with Letters on the ends of them; with him Marcus, young Lucius, and other Gentlemen, with Bows.

Tit. Come, Marcus, come.—Kinsmen, this is the way.

Sir boy, now let me see your archery:
Look ye draw home enough, and 'tis there straight.

Terros Astraea reliquit:
Be you remember'd, Marcus, she's gone, she's fled
Sirs, take you to your tools. You, cousins, shall Go sound the ocean, and cast your nets;
Happily you may catch her in the sea,
Yet there's as little justice as at land.—
No; Publius and Sempronius, you must do it;
'Tis you must dig with mattock, and with spade,
And pierce the inmost centre of the earth:
Then, when you come to Pluto's region,
I pray you, deliver him this petition;
Tell him, it is for justice, and for aid,
And that it comes from old Andronicus,
Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.—
Ah, Rome!—Well, well; I made thee miserable,
What time I threw the people's suffrages
On him that thusly tyrannize o'er me.
Go, get you gone; and pray be careful all,
And leave you not a man of war unsearch'd:
This wicked emperor may have ship'd her hence,
And, kinsmen, then we may go pipe for justice.

Mar. O, Publius! is not this a heavy case,
To see thy noble uncle thus distracted?

Pub. Therefore, my lord, it highly us concerns,
By day and night t' attend him carefully;
And feed his humour kindly as we may,
Till time beget some careful remedy.

Mar. Kinsmen, his sorrows are past remedy.
Join with the Goths; and with revengeful war
Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude,
And vengeance on the traitor Saturnine.

Tit. Publius, how now! how now, my masters! What Have you met with her?

Pub. No, my good lord; but Pluto sends you word,
If you will have revenge from hell, you shall.

Marry, for Justice, she is so employ'd,
He thinks with Jove in Heaven, or somewhere else,
So that perforce you must needs stay a time.

Tit. He doth me wrong to feed me with delays.
I'll dive into the burning lake below,
And pull her out of Acheron by the heels.—
Marcus, we are but shrubs, no cedars we;
No big-bon'd men, fram'd of the Cyclops' size,
But metal, Marcus, steel to the very back;

---

1 Not in e. 2 Stein, or complexion. 3 Not far, one Maliteus lives: in e. 4 Contrive, agree. 5 take no longer days: is it.
Vest wrong with wrongs, more than our backs can bear:
And, silt no justice is in earth nor hell,
We will solicit heaven, and move the gods
To send down justice for to wreak our wrongs.
Come, to this gear. You are a good archer, Marcus.
[He gives them the Arrows.]

Ad Jovem, that's for you:—here, ad Apollinem:—
Ad Martem, that's for myself:—
Here, boy, to Pallas:—here, to Mercury.
To Saturn, Cenus, not to Saturnine;
You were as good to shoot against the wind.—
To it, boy: Marcus, loose when I bid.
Of my word, I have written to effect:
There's not a god left unsolicited.
Mar. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into the court:
We will afflict the emperor in his pride.
Tit. Now, masters, draw. [They shoot.] O, well said, Lucius!
Good boy, in Virgo's lap: give it Pallas.
Mar. My lord, I aim'd a mile beyond the moon:
Your letter is with Jupiter by this.

Tit. Ha! Publius, Publius, what hast thou done?
See, see! thou hast shot off one of Taurus' horns.
Mar. This was the sport, my lord: when Publius shot,
The bull, being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock
That down fell both the ram's horns in the court;
And who should find them but the empress' villain.
She laugh'd, and told the Moor, she should not choose
But give them to his master for a present.

Tit. Why, there it goes; God give his* lordship joy.
Enter the Clown, with a Basket and Two Pigeons.

News! news from heaven! Marcus, the post is come.
Sirrah, what tidings? have you any letters?
Shall I have justice? what says Jupiter?

Clo. Ho! the gibbet-maker? he says, that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hanged till the next week.

Tit. But what says Jupiter, I ask thee?

Clo. Alas, sir! I know not Jupiter: I never drank with him in all my life.

Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier?

Clo. Ay, my pigeons, sir; nothing else.

Tit. Nay, didst thou not come from heaven?

Clo. From heaven? alas, sir! I never came there,
God forbid, I should be bold to press to heaven in my young days. Why, I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal plebs, to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the emperor's men.

Mar. Why, sir, that is as fit as can be, to serve for your oration; and let him deliver the pigeons to the emperor from you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an oration to the emperor with a grace?

Clo. Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace in all my life.

Tit. Sirrah, come hither. Make no more ado,
But give your pigeons to the emperor;
By me thou shalt have justice at his hands.
Hold, hold: mean while, here's money for thy charges.
Give me pen and ink.—

Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver a supplication?

Clo. Ay, sir.

Tit. Then here is a supplication for you. And when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneel; then kiss his foot; then deliver up your pigeons, and then look for your reward. I'll be at hand, sir; see you do it bravely.

Clo. I warrant you, sir; let me alone.

Tit. Sirrah, hast thou a knife? Come, let me see it.—

Well done.

Your: in quarto, 1611, and folio.
as do the mighty gods: in f. e.
Not in f. s.
Knowing that with the shadow of his wing,
He can at pleasure stilt their melody:
Even so may'st thou the giddy men of Rome.
Then cheer thy spirit; for know, thou emperor,
I will enchant the old Andronics.
With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous,
Than baits to fish, or honey-stalks to sheep;
When as the one is wounded with the bait,
The other rotted with delicious food.

Sat. But he will not entertain his son for us.
Tam. If Tamora entertain him. then he will;
For I can smooth, and fill his aged ear
With golden promises, that were his heart
Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf.
Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue.—
Go thou before; be our ambassador: [To Æmilius
Say that the emperor requests a parley
Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting,
Even at his father's house, the old Andronics.
Sat. Æmilius, do this message honourably:
And if he stand on hostage for his safety,
Bid him demand what pledge will please him best.
Æmil. Your bidding shall I do effectually. [Exit Æmilius

Tam. Now will I to that old Andronics,
And temper him with all the art I have,
To pluck proud Lucius from the warlike Goths.
And now, sweet emperor, be blithe again,
And bury all thy fear in my devices.
Sat. Then go successfully, and plead 'fore him

[Exit

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Plains near Rome.

Enter Lucius, and an Army of Goths, with Drum and Colours.

Luc. Approved warriors, and my faithful friends,
I have received letters from great Rome,
Which signify what hate they bear their emperor,
And how desirous of our sight they are.
Therefore, great lords, be, as your titles witness,
Imperious, and impatient of your wrongs.
And, wherein Rome hath done you any scathe,
Let him make treble satisfaction.

1 Goth. Brave slay, sprung from the great Andronics,
Whose name was once our terror, now our comfort;
Whose high exploits, and honourable deeds,
Ingrateful Rome requites with foul contempt.
Be bold in us: we'll follow where thou lead'st,
Like stinging bees in hottest summer's day,
Led by their master to the flower'd fields,
And be aveng'd on cursed Tamora.

Goths. And, as he saith, so say we all with him.
Luc. I humbly thank him, and thank you all.
But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth?
Enter, Goths, leading Aaron, with his Child in his Arms.

2 Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troops I stray'd,
To gaze upon a ruinous monastery;
And as I earnestly did fix mine eye
Upon the wasted building, suddenly
I heard a child cry underneath a wall,
I made unto the noise; when soon I heard
The crying babe control'd with this discourse:—
"Peace, tawny slave; half me, and half thy dam!"

Did not thy hue bewray whose brat thou art,
Had nature lent thee but thy mother's look,
Villain, thou might'st have been an emperor:
But where the bull and cow are both milk-white.
They never do beget a coal-black calf.
Peace, villain, peace!"—even thus he rates the babe.—
"For I must bear thee to a trusty Goth;
Who, when he knows thou art the empress' babe,
Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's sake;"
With this, my weapon drawn, I rush'd upon him,
Surpris'd him suddenly, and brought him hither.
To use as you think needful of the man.

Luc. O worthy Goth! this is the incarnate devil,
That robb'd Andronics of his good hand:
This is the pearl that pleas'd your empress' eye.
And here's the base fruit of his burning lust.—
Say, wall-cy'd slave, whether wouldst thou convey
This growing image of thy fiend-like face?
Why dost not speak? What! deaf? no, not a word?
A halter, soldiers! hang him on this tree,
And by his side his fruit of bastardy.

Aar. Touch not the boy; he is of royal blood.

Luc. Too like the sire for ever being good.—
First, hang the child, that he may see it sprawl.
A sight to vex the father's soul withal.
Get me a ladder.

[A Ladder brought

Aar. Lucius, save the child;
And bear it from me to the empress.
If thou do this, I'll show thee wondrous things,
That highly may advantage thee to hear:
If thou wilt not, befall what may befall,
I'll speak no more; but vengeance rot you all!
Luc. Say on; and if it please me which thou speak'st,
Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish'd.
Aar. An if it please thee? why, assure thee, Lucius.

[Speaking on the Ladder!]
'Twill vex thy soul to hear what I shall speak;
For I must talk of murders, rapes, and massacres,
Acts of black night, abominable deeds,
Comploids of mischief, treason, villainies.
Ruthful to hear, dispietiously, perfidiously:
And this shall all be buried in my death.
Unless thou swear to me, my child shall live.
Luc. Tell on thy mind: I say, thy child shall live.
Aar. Swear that he shall, and then will I begin.
Luc. Whom should I swear by? thou believest no god:
That granted, how canst thou believe an oath?
Aar. What if I do not, as, indeed, I do no not;
Yet, for I know thou art religious,
And hast a thing within thee. called conscience,
With twenty populous tricks and ceremonies,
Which I have seen thee careful to observe,
Therefore I urge thy oath:—for that I know,
An idiot holds his bauble for a god,
And keeps the oath which by that god he swears,
To that I'll urge him.—Therefore, thou shalt vow
By that same god, what god soever it be,
That thou ador'st and hast in reverence,
To save my boy, to nourish, and bring him up.
Or else I will discover nought to thee.
Luc. Even by my god I swear to thee, I will.
Aar. First, know thou, I begot him on the empress.
Luc. O most inordinate, luxurious woman!
Aar. Tut! Lucius, this was but a deed of charity,
To that which thou shalt hear of me anon.
'Twas her two sons that murder'd Bassianus:
They cut thy sister's tongue, and ravish'd her,
Cut her—hands off, andtrimmed her as thou saw'st.
Luc. O, detestable villain! I call st thou that trimming?
Aar. Why, she was wash'd, and cut, and trimm'd;
and 'twas
Trim sport for them that had the doing of it.
Luc. O, barbarous, beastly villains, like thyself!
Aar. Indeed. I was their tutor to instruct them.
That coddling spirit had they from their mother,
As sure a card as ever won the set:
That bloody mind, I think, they learn'd of me,
As true a dog as ever fought at head.
Well, let my deeds be witness of my worth.
I train'd thy brethren to that guileful hole,
Where the dead corpse of Bassianus lay;
I wrote the letter that thy father found,
And hid the gold, within the letter mentioned,
Confederate with the queen, and her two sons;
And what not done, that thou hast came to rue,
Wherein I had no stroke of mischief in it?
I play'd the cheater for thy father's hand,
And, when I had it, drew myself apart,
And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter.
I pry'd me through the crevice of a wall,
When for his hand, he had his two sons' heads;
Beheld his tears, and laugh'd so heartily,
That both mine eyes were rainy like to his;
And when I told the empress of this sport,
She swooned almost at my pleasing tale,
And for my tidings gave me twenty kisses.
Goth. What! canst thou say all this, and never blush?
Aar. Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is.
Luc. Art thou not sorry for these heinous deeds?
Aar. Ay, that I had not done a thousand more.

[Exeunt]
Tit. I am not mad; I know thee well enough:
Witness this wretched stump, witness these crimson lines:
Witness these trenches made by grief and care;
Witness the tiring day, and heavy night;
Witness all sorrow, that I know thee well.
For our proud empress, mighty Tamora.
Is not thy coming for my other hand?
Tam. Know, thou sad man, I am not Tamora:
She is thy enemy, and I thy friend.
I am Revenge; sent from th' infernal kingdom,
To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind,
By working wanton vengeance on thy foes.
Come down, and welcome me to this world's light;
Confest with me of murder and of death.
There's not a hollow cave, or lurking-place,
No vast obscurity, or misty vale,
Where bloody murder, or detected rape,
Can cough for fear, but I will find them out;
And in their ears tell them my dreadful name,
Revenge, which makes the foul offender quake.
Tit. Art thou Revenge? and art thou sent to me,
To be a torment to mine enemies?
Tam. I am; therefore come down, and welcome me.
Tit. Do me some service, ere I come to thee.
Lo! by thy side where Rape, and Murder stand;
Now, give some assurance that thou art Revenge;
Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot wheels.
And then I'll come, and be thy waggoner,
And whirl along with thee about the globe.
Provide two proper palliars, black as jet,
To hide thy vengeful waggon swift away;
And find out murderers in their guilty caves:
And when thy ear is leaden with their heads,
I will dismount, and by the waggon wheel
Trot like a servile footman all day long,
Even from Hyperion's rising in the east,
Until his very downfall in the sea.
And day by day I'll do this heavy task,
So thou destroy Rape and Murder there.
Tam. These are my ministers, and come with me.
Tit. Are they thy ministers? what are they call'd?
Tam. Rape, and Murder; therefore called so,
'Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men.
Tit. Good lord! how like the empress' sons they are;
And you, the empress: but we worldly men
Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes.
O sweet Revenge! now do I come to thee;
And, if one arm's embrace will content thee,
I will embrace thee in it by and by. [Exit Titus above.
Tam. This closing with him fits his lunacy.
What'er I forge, to feed his brain-sick fits,
Do you uphold and maintain in your speecches,
For now he firmly takes me for Revenge;
And being credulous in this mad thought,
I'll make him send for Lucius, his son,
And, whi's? I at a banquet hold him sure,
I'll find some cunning practice out of hand,
To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,
Or, at the least, make them his enemies.
See! here he comes, and I must ply my theme.
[Enter Titus, below.
Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for thee.
Welcome, dread fury, to my woeeful house.—
Rapine, and Murder, you are welcome too—
How like the empress and her sons you are!—
Well are you fitted, had you but a Moor:
Could not all hell afford you such a devil?
For, well I wot, the empress never wags,
But in her company there is a Moor:
And would you represent our queen aright,
It were convenient you had such a devil.
But welcome as you are. What shall we do?
Tam. What wouldst thou have us do, Andronicus?
Dom. Show me a murderer, I'll deal with him.
Chi. Show me a villain that hath done a rape,
And I am sent to be revenged on him.
Tam. Show me a thousand that have done thee wrong
And I will be revenged on them all.
Tit. Look round about the wicked streets of Rome,
And when thou find'st a man that's like thyself,
Good Murder, stab him; he's a murderer.
Go thou with him; and when it is thy hap
To find another that is like to thee,
Good Rapine, stab him: he is a rascible.
Go thou with them; and in the emperor's court
There is a queen, attended by a Moor:
Well may'st thou know her by thine own proportion,
For up and down she doth resemble thee.
I pray thee, do on them some violent death;
They have been violent to me and mine.
Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us: this shall we do
But would it please thee, good Andronicus,
To send for Lucius, thy thrice valiant son.
Who leads towards Rome a band of warlike Goths,
And bid him come and banquet at thy house,
When he is here, even at thy solemn feast,
I will bring in the empress and her sons,
The emperor himself, and all thy foes,
And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel,
And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart.
What says Andronicus to this device?
Tit. Marcus, my brother,—it is sad Titus calls.
[Enter Marcus.
Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius;
Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths;
Bid him repair to me, and bring with him
Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths;
Bid him enempaugh his soldiers where they are.
Tell him, the emperor, and the empress too,
Feast at my house, and he shall feast with them.
This do thou for my love, and so let him,
As he regards his aged father's life.
Mar. This will I do, and soon return again. [Exit.
Tam. Now will I hence about thy business,
And take my ministers along with me.
Tam. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay with me,
Or else I'll call my brother back again,
And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.
Tam. [Aside to them.] What say you, boys? will you abide with him,
Whiles I go tell my lord the emperor,
How I have governed our determin'd jest?
Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him fair,
And tarry with him, till I turn again.
Tit. [Aside.] I know them all, though they sup
And will o'er-reach them in their own devices,
A pair of cursed hell-hounds, and their dam.
Dem. Madam, depart at pleasure; leave us here.
Tam. Farewell, Andronicus: Revenge now goes
To lay a compot to betray thy foes.
[Exit.
Tit. I know thou dost; and, sweet Revenge, farewell.
Chi. Tell us, old man, how shall we employ'd?
Tit. Tut! I have work enough for you to do—
Publius, come hither. Caius, and Valentine!
[Enter Publius, and others.
Pub. What's your will?
Tit. Know you these two?
Pub. The empress' sons.

I take them; Chiron, and Demetrius.

Tit. Fig, Publius, fie! thou art too much deceiv'd;
The one is Murder, Rape is the other's name:
And therefore bind them, gentle Publius;
Caius, and Valentine, lay hands on them.
Oh have you heard me wish for such an hour,
And now I find it: therefore, bind them sure,
And stop their mouths, if they begin to cry.

[Exit.]

Pub. And therefore do we what we are commanded.
Caius. Stop close their mouths; let them not speak a word.

Is he sure bound? look, that you bind them fast.

[Re-enter Titus Andronicus with Lavinia; she bearing a Bassoon, and he a Knife.]

Tit. Come, come, Lavinia; look, thy foes are bound.
Sirs, stop their mouths; let them not speak to me,
But let them hear what fearful words I utter.—

O villains! Chiron and Demetrius,
Here stands the spring whom you have stain'd with mud:
This goodly summer with your winter mix'd.
You kill'd her husband, and for that vile fault.
Two of her brothers were condemn'd to death,
My hand cut off, and made a merry jest:
Both her sweet hands, her tongue, and that more dear
Than hands or tongue, her spotless chastity,
Inhuman traitors, you constrain'd and forc'd.
What would you say, if I should let you speak?
Villains, for shame you could not beg for grace.
Hark, wretches, how I mean to martyr you.

This one hand yet is left to cut your throats,
Whilst that Lavinia 'tween her stumps hold
The bason, that receives your guilty blood.

You know, your mother means to feast with me,
And calls herself Revenge, and thinks me mad.
Hark, villains! I will grind your bones to dust,
And with your blood and it, I'll make a paste;
And of the paste a coffin I will rear,
And make two pasties of your shamefull heads;
And bid that stumpet, your unhallow'd dam,
Lick to the earth, swallow her own increase.
This is the feast that I have bid her to,
And this the banquet she shall surfeit on;
For worse than Philomel you us'd my daughter,
And worse than Progne I will be reveng'd.

And now prepare your throats. — Lavinia come,

[He eats their Throats, and she catches the Blood.]
Receive the blood: and when that they are dead,
Let me go grind their bones to powder small,
And with this hateful liquor temper it:
And in that paste let their vile heads be bak'd. —

Come, come, be every one officious
To make this banquet; which I wish may prove
More stern and bloody than the Centaurs' feast.
So, now bring them in, for I will play the cook,
And see them ready against their mother's home.

[Exit, beheading the dead Bodies.]

SCENE III. — The Same. A Pavillion, with Tables, &c.

Enter Lucius, Marcus, and Goths; with Aaron, Prisoner.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since 'tis my father's mind,
That I repair to Rome, I am content.

1 Goth. And ours, with thine, befall what fortune will.

Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous Mo terous tiger, this accursed devil.
Let him receive no sustenance; fetter him,
Till he be brought unto the empress' face,
For testimony of her foul proceedings.
And see the ambush of our friends be strong:
I fear the emperor means no good to us.

Aar. Some devil whisper curses in mine ear,
And prompt me, that my tongue may utter forth
The venomous malice of my swelling heart!

Luc. Away, inhuman dog! unhallow'd slave! —
Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in. —

[Exeunt.]

[Trumpeis sound.]

The trumpets sound the emperor is at hand.

Enter Saturninus and Tamora, with Tribunes, Senators, and others.

Sat. What! hath the firmament more sons than one?
Luc. What boats thee tele to call thyself a sun?
Mar. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break the peace;
These quarrels must be quietly debated.
The feast is ready, which the careful Titus
Hath ordain'd to an honourable end,
For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome.
Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your places

Sat. Marcus, we will.

[Hautboys sound. The Company sit down at table.

Enter Titus, dressed like a Cook, Lavinia, veiled young Lucius, and others. Titus places the dishes on the table.

Tit. Welcome, my gracious lord; welcome, dread queen:
Welcome, ye warlike Goths; and welcome, Lucius;
And welcome, all. Although the cheer be poor,
'Twill fill your stomachs: please you eat of it.

Sat. Why art thou thus attir'd, Andronicus?
Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well,
To entertain your highness, and your empress.

Tam. We are beholding to you, good Andronicus.
Tit. An if your highness knew my heart, you were.
My lord the emperor, resolve me this:
Was it well done of rash Virginius,
To slay his daughter with his own right hand,
Because she was enforc'd, stain'd, and deflower'd?

Sat. It was, Andronicus.

Tit. Your reason, mighty lord!
Sat. Because the girl should not survive her shame,
And by her presence still renew his sorrows.

Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual;
A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant,
For me, most wretched, to perform the like. —

Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee;

[He kills Lavinia.]
And with thy shame thy father's sorrow flee.

Sat. What hast thou done? unnatural and unkind!

Tit. Kill'd her, for whom my tears have made me blind
I am as woful as Virginius was,
And have a thousand times more cause than he
To do this outrage: — and it is now done. *

Sat. What! was she ravish'd? tell who did the deed.

Tit. Will 't please you eat? will 't please your highness feed?

Tam. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus?

Tit. Not t; 'twas Chiron, and Demetrius.
They ravish'd her, and eat away her tongue,
And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.

Sat. Go, fetch them hither to us presently.

Tit. Why, there they are both, baked in that pie;

Whereof their mother dauntly hath fed, 2
SCENE III

TITUS ANDRONICUS.

Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred
Tis true, 'tis true; witness my knife's sharp point.

Sat. Die, frantic wretch, for this accursed deed.

[Killing Titus.

Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father bleed?
There's need for meed, death for a deadly deed.

Mar. You sad-faced men, people, and sons of Rome,
By uproot sever'd, like a flight of fowl
Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts,
O! let me teach you how to knit again
This scatter'd corn into one mutual sheaf,
These broken limbs again into one body.

Lest Rome herself be bane unto herself,
And she, who mighty kingdoms court'sy to,
Like a forlorn and desperate cast-away,
Do shameful execution on herself.

If by my frosty signs and chaps of age,
Grave witnesses of true experience,
Cannot induce you to attend my words,
Speak, Rome's dear friend; as erst our ancestor,
When with his solemn tongue he did discourse,
To love-sick Didio's sad attending ear,
The story of that baleful burning night,
When subtle Greeks surprise'd king Priam's Troy.
Tell us, what Simon hath bewitch'd our ears,
Or who hath brought the fatal engine in.
That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil wound.
My heart is not compact of flint, nor steel,
Nor can I utter all our bitter grief;
But floods of tears will drown my oratory,
And break my very utterance, even 'tis the time
When it should move you to attend me most,
Lending your kind commiseration.

Here is a captain, let him tell the tale;
Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him speak.

Luc. Then, noble auditor, be it known to you,
That cursed Chiron and Demetrius
Were they that murdered our emperor's brother;
And they it was that ravished our sister,
For their fell faults our brothers were beheaded,
Our father's tears despit'd, and basely cozen'd
Of that true hand, that fought Rome's quarrel out,
And sent her enemies unto the grave.
Lastly, myself unkindly banished,
The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping out,
To beg relief among Rome's enemies;
Who drouth'd their enmy in my true tears,
And op'd their arms to embrace me as a friend:
And I am the 2 turn'd-dorth, be it known to you,
That have preserv'd her welfare in my blood;
And from her bosom took the enemy's point,
Sheathing the steel in my adventurous body.
Alas! you know, I am no vaunter, I;
My scars can witness, dumb although they are,
That my report is just, and full of truth.
But, soft! methinks, I do digress too much,
Citing my worthless praise. O! pardon me;
For when no friends are by men praise themselves.

Mar. Now is my turn to speak. Behold this child;
Of this was Tamora delivered;
The issue of an irreligious Moor,
Chief architect and plotter of these woes
The villain is alive in Titus' house,
And, as he is, to witness this is true.

Now judge what cause had Titus to revenge
These wrongs, unspeakable, past patience,
Or more than any living man could bear.

Sat. Now you have heard the truth, what say you, Romans:
Have we done aught amiss? Show us wherein,
And from the place where you behold us now,
The poor remainder of Andronici
Will, hand in hand, all heart-long east us down,
And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains,
And make a mutual closure of our house.

Speak, Romans, speak! and, if you say, we shall,
Lo! hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall.

Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans: may I govern so,
To heal Rome's harms, and wipe away her woe.
But, gentle people, give me an ear while,
For nature puts me to a heavy style.

Luc. Stand all aloof,—but, uncle, draw you near,
To shed obsequious tears upon this bier.

O! take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips,

[Kisses Titus.

These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain'd face.
These last duties of thy noble son!

Mar. Tear for tear, and loving kiss for kiss,
Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips:

O! were the sum of these that I should pay
Countless and infinite, yet would I pay them.

Luc. Come hither, boy: come, come, and learn of us,
To melt in showers. Thy grandsire lov'd thee well:
Many a time he danc'd thee on his knee,
Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow;
Many a matter hath he told to thee,
Meet and agreeing with thine intancy:
In that respect, then, like a loving child,
Shed yet some small drops from thy tender spring
Because kind nature doth require it so:

Luc. Friends should associate friends in grief and woe.
Did him farewell? expound him to the grave;
Do him that kindness, all that he can have.

Boy. O grandsire, grandsire! even with all my heart
Would I were dead, so did live again.

Luc. Enter Attendants, with Aaron.

Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish him,
There let him stand, and rave and cry for food:
If any one relieve, or pity him,
For the offence he dies. This is our doom:
Some stay to see him fasten'd in the earth.

Luc. O! why should wrath be mute, and fury dumb?
I am no baby, I, that with base prayers
I should repent the evils I have done.
Ten thousand worse than ever yet I did
Would I perform, if I might have my will:
If one good deed in all my life I did,

* The rest of this speech is usually given to a Roman lord. 2 Not in the folio. 3 and take leave of him: in f. o.
I do repent it from my very soul.

Luc. Some loving friends convey the emperor hence,
    And give him burial in his father's grave.
My father, and Lavinia, shall forthwith
    Be closed in our household's monument.
As for that ravenous tiger, Tamora,
    No funeral rite, nor man in mournful weeds
    No mournful bell shall wring her burial:

But throw her forth to beasts, and birds of prey
    Her life was beast-like, and devoid of pity;
And, being so, shall have like want of pity.
See justice done on Aaron, that damn'd Moor,
    By whom our heavy haps had their beginning:
Then, afterwards, to order well the state,
    That like events may ne'er it ruinate.

PROLOGUE.

CHORUS.

TWO households, both alike in dignity,
In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
From forth the fatal loins of these two foes
A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life;
Whose misadventur'd piteous overthrows
Do, with their death, bury their parents' strife.
The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,
And the continuance of their parents' rage,
Which, but their children's end, nought could remit:
Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage;
The which if you with patient ears attend,
What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A public Place.

Enter Sampson and Gregory, armed with Swords and Bucklers.

Sam. Gregory, on my word, we'll not carry coals.¹
Gre. No, for then we should be colliers.
Sam. I mean, an we be in choler, we'll draw,
Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out of the collar.
Sam. I strike quickly, being moved.
Gre. But thou art not quickly moved to strike.
Sam. A dog of the house of Montague moves me.
Gre. To move is to stir, and to be valiant is to stand;² therefore, if thou art mov'd, thou run'st away.
Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand,
I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.
Gre. That shows thee a weak slave; for the weakest goes to the wall.
Sam. 'Tis true; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall:—therefore,

¹ This was regarded as a low, degrading office.
² stand to it: therefore (of my word) if thou be mov'd, then 'tis run away: in quarto 1597

⁵ Salted and dried fish. ⁶ Only in the quarto, 1597.

I will push Montague's men from the wall, and thrust his maids to the wall.

Gre. The quarrel is between our masters, and us their men.
Sam. 'Tis all one, I will show myself a tyrant:
when I have fought with the men, I will be cruel³ with the maids; I will cut off their heads.
Gre. The heads of the maids?
Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maiden-heads; take it in what sense thou wilt.
Gre. They must take it in a sense, that feel it.
Sam. Me they shall feel, while I am able to stand;
and, 'tis known, I am a pretty piece of flesh.
Gre. 'Tis well, thou art not fish; if thou hast, thou hadst been poor John.⁴ Draw thy tool; here come two⁵ of the house of the Montagues.

Enter Abram and Balthasar.
Sam. My naked weapon is out: quarrel, I will back
thee.
Gre How! turn thy back, and run?
Have three disturb'd the quiet of our streets;
And made Verona's ancient citizens
Cast by their grave besoming ornaments,
To wield old partisans, in hands as old,
Canker'd with peace, to part your canker'd Hate.\footnote{11}
If ever you disturb our streets again,
Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace:\footnote{11}
For this time all the rest depart away.\footnote{12}
You, Capulet, shall go along with me;
And Montague, come you this afternoon,
To know our farther pleasure in this case,
To old Free-town, our common judgment-place.
Once more, on pain of death, all men\footnote{14} depart.
\footnote{\textit{Exeunt the Prince, and Attendants; CAPULET LADY CAPULET, TYBALT, CITIZENS, and SERVANTS}}

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroad?—
Speak, nephew, were you by when it began?—
Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary,
And yours, close fighting ere I did approach.\footnote{18}
I drew to part them: in the instant came
The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepar'd;
Which, as he breath'd defiance to my ear,
He swung and cut the wind, and out the wind,
Who, nothing hurt withal, hissed him in scorn.
While we were interchanging threats and blows,
Came more and more, and fought on part and part,
Till the prince came, who parted either part.

\textit{Le. Mon.} O! where is Romeo? saw you him to-day?—
Right glad I am he was not at this fray.
Ben. Madam, an hour before the worshipp'd sun
Peep'd forth\footnote{16} the golden windows of the east,
A troubled\footnote{19} mind drave me to walk abroad;
Where, underneath the grove of sycamore
That westward rooteth from the city's side,
So early walking did I see your son.
Towards him I made; but he was 'ware of me,
And stole into the covert of the wood:
I, measuring\footnote{20} his affections by my own,
Which then most sought where most might not be found,\footnote{20}
Being one too many by my weary self,\footnote{20}
Pursu'd my humour, not pursuing his,
And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me.

Mon. Many a morning hath he there been seen,
With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew,
Adding to clouds more cloaths with his deep sighs:
But all so soon as the all-cheering sun
Should in the farthest east begin to draw
The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,
Away from light steals home my heavy son,
And private in his chamber pens himself;
Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight out,
And makes himself an artificial night.
Black and portentous must this humour prove,
Unless good counsel may the cause remove.

Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?\footnote{Mon. I neither know it, nor can learn of him.}
Mon. Have you importun'd him by any means?\footnote{Mon. Both by myself, and many other friends; But he, his own affection's counsellor, Is to himself—I will not say, how true—}
But to himself so secret and so close,
So far from sounding and discovery,
As is the bud bit with the envious worm,
Scene II.  Romeo and Juliet.

Romeo. Well, in that hit you miss: she'll not be hit
With Cupid's arrow. She hath Dian's wit;
And in strong proof of chastity well arm'd.
From love's weak childish bow she lives enchant'd.10
She will not stay the siege of loving terms,
Nor bred th' encounter of assailing eyes,13
Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold:12
O! she is rich in beauty: only poor,
That when she dies with beauty dies her store.16

Ben. Then she hath sworn, that she will still live chastel.

Romeo. She hath and in that sparing makes huge waste
For beauty, starv'd with her severity,
Cuts beauty off from all posterity.
She is too fair, too wise; too wisely fair,
To merit bliss by making me despair;
She hath forsworn to love, and in that vow
Do I live dead, that live to tell it now.

Ben. Aruuld by me; forget to think of her.

Rome. O! teach me how I should forget to think.

Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes:
Examine other beauties.

Rome. 'Tis the way
To call hers, exquisite, in question more.
These happy masks, that kiss fair ladies' brows,
Being black, put us in mind they hide the fair:
He, that is stricken blind, cannot forget
The precious treasure of his eyesight lost.
Show me a mistress that is passing fair;
What doth her beauty serve, but as a note
Where I may read who pass'd that passing fair?

Farewell: thou canst not teach me to forget.

Ben. I'll pay that doctrine, or else die in debt.

Scene II.—A Street.

Enter Capulet, Paris, and Servant.

Cap. But Montague is bound as well as I,
In penalty alike; and 'tis not hard, I think,
For men so old as we to keep the peace.

Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both;
And pity 'tis, you liv'd at odds so long.
But now, my lord, what say you to my suit? Cap. But saying o'er what I have said before.
My child is yet a stranger in the world.
She hath not seen the change of fourteen years:
Let two more summers wither in their pride,
Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.

Par. Younger than she are happy mothers made
Cap. And too soon married are those so early married.

Earth up hath swallowed all my hopes but she,
She is the hopeful lady of my earth.

But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart,
My will to her consent is but a part;
An she agree, within her scope of choice
Lies my consent and fair according voice.

This night I hold an old acoustum'd feast,
Whereunto I have invited many a guest,
Such as I love: and you, among the store,
One more most welcome makes my number more.
At my poor house look to behold this night

May stand in number, though in reckoning none.
Come, go with me.—Go, sirrah, trudge about
Through fair Verona; find those persons out,
Whose names are written there, and to them say,
[ Giving a Paper.]

My house and welcome on their pleasant stay.
[Exeunt Capulet and Paris.

Serv. Find them out, whose names are written here?
It is written, that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard, and the tailor with his last, the fisher with his pen, and the painter with his nets: but I am sent to find those persons, whose names are here writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ. I must to the learned— in good time.

Enter Benvolio and Romeo.

Ben. Tut, man! one fire burns out another's burning,
One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish:
Turn giddy, and be holp by backward turning;
One desperate grief cures with another's languish:
Take thou some new infection to thy eye,
And the rank poison of the old will die.
Rom. Your plantain leaf is excellent for that.
Ben. For what, I pray thee?
Rom. For your broken shin.
Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad?
Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a madman is:
Shut up in prison, kept without my food,
Whipp'd, and tormented, and—Good-den, good fellow.
Serv. God gi' good den.—I pray, sir, can you read?
Rom. Ay, mine own fortune in my misery.
Serv. Perhaps you have learnt it without book; but,
I pray, can you read any thing you see?
Rom. Ay, if I know the letters, and the language.
Serv. Ye say honestly. REST you merry. [Going.
Rom. Stay, fellow; I can read.

Signior Martino, and his wife, and daughters;
Countess Anselme, and his beautious sisters; the lady widow of Vitruvio; Signior Placentio, and his lovely nieces; Mercutio, and his brother Valentine; mine uncle Capulet, his wife, and daughters; my fair niece
Rosaline; Liv a; Signior Placentio, and his cousin
Tybalt; Lucio, and the lively Helena."

A fair assembly; whither should they come?

Serv. Up.
Rom. Whither? to supper?
Serv. To our house.
Rom. Whose house?
Serv. My master's.
Rom. Indeed, I should have asked you that before.
Serv. Now, I'll tell you without asking. My master is the great rich Capulet; and if you be not of the house of Montagues, I pray, come and crush' a cup of wine.
Rest you merry.

Ben. At this same ancient feast of Capulet's
Sups the fair Rosaline, whom thou so lovest,
With all the admired beauties of Verona:
Go thither; and, with unattainted eye,
Compare her face with some that I shall show,
And I will make thee think thy swan a crow.
Rom. When the devout religion of mine eye
Maintains such falsehood, then turn tears to fires;
And these, who, often drown'd, could never die,
Transparent heretics, be burnt for liars.

One fairer than my love! the all-seeing sun
Ne'er saw her match since first the world began.
Ben. Tut! you saw her fair, none else being by;
Herself poised with herself in either eye;
But in those crystal scales let there be weigh'd
Your lady's love against some other maid,
That I will shew you shining at this feast,
And she shall scent show well, that now shows best.
Rom. I'll go along, no such sight to be shewn
But to rejoice in splendid of mine own. [Exeunt]

SCENE III.—A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter Lady Capulet and Nurse.

La. Cap. Nurse, where's my daughter? call her forth to me.

Nurse. Now, by my maiden-head at twelve years old,
I bade her come.—What, lamb! what, lady-bird?—

God forbid!—where's this girl?—what, Juliet?

Enter Juliet.

Jul. How now! who calls?

Nurse. Your mother.

Jul. Madam, I am here:

What is your will?

La. Cap. This is the matter.—Nurse, give leave a while.
We must talk in secret.—Nurse, come back again:
I have remember'd me, thou shalt hear our counsel.
Thou know'st my daughter's of a pretty age.

Nurse. 'Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.
La. Cap. She's not fourteen.

Nurse. I'll say fourteen of my teeth.

And yet to my teen' be it spoken I have but four.
She is not fourteen. How long is it now
To Lammas-tide?

La. Cap. A fortnight, and odd days.

Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year,
Come Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen.

Susan and she.—God rest all Christian souls!—

Were of an age.—Well, Susan is with God;
She was too good for me. But, as I said,
On Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen:
That shall she, marry? I remember it well,

'Tis since the earthquake now eleven years;
And she was wond'—I never shall forget it,—
Of all the days of the year, upon that day;
For I had then laid wormwood to my dog,

Sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall:
My lord and you were then at Mantua—

Nay, I do bear a brain—but, as I said,
When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple
Of my dog, and felt it bitter, pretty fool,
To see it tether, and fall out with the dog!
Shake, quoth the dove-house: 'twas no need, I trow,
To bid me trudge.

And since that time it is eleven years;

For then she could stand alone*; nay, by the rood,
She could have run and waddled all about,
For even the day before she broke her brow;
And then my husband—God be with his soul!
'A was a merry man*—took up the child:

"Yea," quoth he, "dost thou fall upon thy face? Thou wilt fall backward, when thou hast more wit
Wilt thou not, Jule? and, by my holy-dam,
The pretty wretch left crying, and said—"Ay.

To see, now, what a jest shall come about!

I warrant, an I should live a thousand years,
I never should forget it: "Wilt thou not Jule? quoth he
And, pretty fool, it stinted, and said—"Ay."

Nurse. Yes, madam. Yet I cannot choose but laugh,
To think it should leave revealing, and say—"Ay." And yet, I warrant, it had upon its brow
A bump as big as a young cockrel's stone,
A perils knock; and it cried bitterly.
"Yea, quoth my husband, "fall'st upon thy face?"
Thou wilt fall backward, when thou com'st to age;
Wilt thou not, Jul? It stinted, and said—"Ay."

Jul. And stint thou too, I pray thee, nurse, say I.

Nurse. Peace! I have done. God mark thee to his grace.
Thou wast the prettiest babe that e'er I nurs'd: An I might live to see thee married once,
I have my wish.

La. Cap. March, that marry is the very theme I came to talk of.—Tell me, daughter Juliet,
How stands your disposition to be married?

Jul. It is an honour that I dream not of.

Nurse. An honour! were not I thine only nurse,
I would say, thou hast suck'd wisdom from thy teat.

La. Cap. Well, think of marriage now; younger than you,
Here in Verona, ladies of esteem,
Are made already mothers: by my count.
I was your mother, much upon these years
That you are now a maid. Thus, then, in brief;—
The valiant Paris seeks you for his love.

Nurse. A man, young lady! lady, such a man,
As all the world—Why, he's a man of wax.

La. Cap. Verona's summer hath not such a flower.

Nurse. Nay, he's a flower; in faith, a very flower.

La. Cap. What say you? can you love the gentle-man?

This night you shall behold him at our feast:—
Read o'er the volume of young Paris' face,
And find delight writ there with beauty's pen.
Examine every married lineament,
And see how one an other lends content;
And what beauty's in this fair volume lies,
Fond written in the margin of his eyes.
This precious book of love, this unbound lover,
To beautify him only lacks a cover:
The fish lives in the sea; and 'tis much pride,
For fair without the fair within to hide.
That book in many's eyes doth share the glory,
That in gold clasps locks in the golden story;
So shall you share all that he doth possess
By having him, making yourself no less.

Nurse. No less? nay, bigger women grow by men.

La. Cap. Speak briefly, can you like of Paris' love?

Jul. I'll look to like, if looking like move;
But no more deep will I endart mine eye,
Than your consent gives strength to make it fly.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Madam, the guests are come, supper served up, you called, my young lady asked for, the Nurse curs'd in the pantry, and every thing in extremity. I must hence to wait; I beseech you, follow straight.

La. Cap. We follow thee. Juliet, the county stays.

Nurse. Go, girl, seek happy nights to happy days.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Street.

Enter ROMEO, MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, with five or six Maskers, Torch-Bearers, and others, preceded by a Drum.

Rom. What, shall this speech he spoke for our excuse,
Or shall we on without apology?

Ben. The date is out of such proximity;
We'll have no Cupid hood-wink'd with a scarf,
Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath,
Seeming the ladies like a crow-keeper1;
Nor without-book prologue, faintly spoke
After the prompter, for our entrance; 4
But, let them measure us by what they will,
We'll measure them a measure, and be gone.

Rom. Give me a torch; I am not for this ambling
Beguiling heavy, I will bear the light.

Mer. Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have you dance
Rom. Not I, believe me. You have dancing shoes.
Withumble soles: I have a soul of lead,
So stales me to the ground, I cannot move.
Mer. You are a lover: borrow Cupid's wings,10
And soar with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too sore enupierced with his shaft
To soar with his light feathers: and so11 bound,
I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe:
Under love's heavy burden do I sink.

Ben. And, to sink in it, should you burden love;
Too great oppression for a tender thing.

Rom. Is love a tender thing? it is too rough,
Too rude, too boisterous; and it pricks like thorn.

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with love
Prick love for prickling, and you beat love down.—
Give me a case to put my visage in;

[Putting on a Mask

A visor for a visor!—what care I,
What curious eye doth quote15 deformities?
Here are the beetle-brows shall blush for me.

Ben. Come, knock, and enter; and no sooner in,
But every man betake him to his legs.

Rom. A torch for me: let wanton, light of heart,
Tickle the senseless rushes16 with their heels;
For I am proverb'd with a grand sire phrase,—
I'll be a candle-holder, and look on:
The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done.

Mer. Tut! dun's14 the nuisance, the constable's own word.
If thou art dun, we'll draw thee from the mire16
Of this save-reverenced15 love, wherein thou stick'st
Up to the ears.—Come, we burn day-light, ho!

Rom. Nay, that's not so.

Mer. I mean, sir, in delay
We waste our lights in vain, like lamps by day.
Take our good meaning, for our judgment hits
Five times in that, ere once in our five wits.

Rom. And we mean well in going to this mask,
But 'tis no wit to go.

Mer. Why, may one ask?

Rom. I dreamt a dream to-night.

Mer. And so did I.

Rom. Well, what was yours?

Mer. That dreamers often lie
Rom. In bed asleep, while they do dream things true.

1 This and the next speech, not in the quarto, 1607. 3 This and the following lines to JULIET's speech, are not in the quarto, 1597. 4 Several: in quarto, 1600, and folio. 5 engage: in quarto, 1597. 6 The rest of this direction is not in f.s. 7 Like a person set to scare crows. 8 This and the previous line, are only in the quarto, 1597. 9 He is just like a torch-bearer to maskers; he wears good clothes, and is ranked in good company, but he doth nothing.—Ducker's Westward Hoe, 1607; quoted by Steevens. 10 This and the eleven lines following, are not in the quarto, 1607. 11 to: in folio. 12 Observe. 13 The ordinary covering for floors. 14 A phrase often met with; it may mean, "dumb as a mouse." 15 Dun is in the mire," is a game which consists in seeing who can 'fit a heavy log of wood.—Griffard 16 From single reverence, an old apologetic form of expression. 17 by night: in quarto, 1597.
Merc. O! then, I see, queen Mab hath been with you. She is the fairies’ midwife; and she comes in shape no bigger than an agate stone.

On the fore-finger of an alderman.

Drawn with a team of little atomies;

Over men’s noses as they lie asleep:

Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners’ legs;

The cover, of the wines of grasshoppers;

The traces, of the smallest spider’s web;

The collars, of the moonshine’s watery beams.*

Her whip, of cricket’s bone; the lash, of film:

Her waggoner, a small grey-coated gnat,

Not half so big as a round little worm

Pick’d from the lazy finger of a milkmaid.*

Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut,

Made in the joiner’squiring, or old grub.

Time out of the fairies’ bowl-makers.

And in this state she gallops night by night

Through lovers’ brains, and then they dream of love:

On courtiers’ knees, that dream on court’sies straight:

O’er lawyers’ fingers, who straight dream on fees:

O’er ladies’ lips, who straight kiss dream; which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues, Because their breaths with sweet-smells tainted are.

Sometime she gallops o’er a counsellor’s nose, And then dreams he of smelling out a suit:

And sometime comes she with a tighe-pig’s tail, Tickling a person’s nose as ‘a lies asleep;

Then he dreams of another benefice.

Sometime she driveth o’er a soldier’s neck,* And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats.

Of breaches, ambushadoes, Spanish blades, Of healths five fathom deep; and then anon

Drums in his ear, at which he starts, and wakes; And, being thus frighted, swears a prayer or two, And sleeps again. This is that very Mab,

That plucks the manes of horses in the night;

And makes the elf-locks in foul sluttish hairs, Which, once untangled, much misfortune bodes.

This is the hang, when maids lie on their backs, That presses them, and leaves them first to learn, Making them women of good carriage.

This, is she—•

Rom. Peace, peace! Mercutio, peace!

Thou talk’st of nothing.

Merc. True, I talk of dreams,

Which are the children of an idle brain,

Begot of nothing but vain fantasy;

Which is as thin of substance as the air,

And more inconstant than the wind, who woeis

Even now the frozen bosom of the north,

And, being anger’d, puffs away from thence,• Turning his tide• to the dew-dropping south.

Ben. This wind, you talk of, blows us from ourselves;

Supper is done, and we shall come too late.

Rom. I fear, too early; for my mind misgives,

Some consequence, yet hanging in the stars,

Shall bitterly begin his fearful date

With this night’s revels: and expire the term

Of a despised life, clos’d in my breath.

By some vile forfeit of uneven death:

But he, that hath the steerage of my course,

Direct my sail.—Oh, hasty gentlemen.

Ben. Strike, drum.

SCENE V.—A Hall in CAPULET’S House.

Musicians waiting. Enter Servants.

1 Serv. Where’s Potpan, that he helps not to take away? he shift a trowcher! he scrape a trowcher!

2 Serv. When good manners shall lie all in one or two men’s hands, and they unwashed too; ’tis a foul thing.

1 Serv. A way with the joint-stools, remove the court-cupboard, look to the plate.—Good thou, save me a piece of marchpane; and, as thou lovest me, let the porter let in Susan Grindstone, and Nell.—Antony! and Potpan!•

2 Serv. Ay, boy; ready.

1 Serv. You are look’d for, and called for, asked for, and sought for, in the great chamber.

2 Serv. We cannot be here and there too.—Cereely, boys; be brisk awhile, and the longer liver take all.

Enter²²  Capulet, &c., with the Guests, and the Maskers.

Cap. Welcome, gentlemen! ladies, that have their toes Unplugged with corns, will have a bout²² with you.—

Ah, ha, my mistresses! which of you all Will now deny to dance? she that makes dainty, she,

I’ll swear, hath corns. Am I come near you now? You are welcome, gentlemen! I have seen the day, That I have worn a visor, and could tell [To ROMEO, &c.,²²]

A whispering tale in a fair lady’s ear,

Such as would please.—’t is gone, ’t is gone, ’t is gone. You are welcome, gentlemen!—Come, musicians, play.

A hall! a hall! give room, and foot it, girls.²²

More light, ye knaves, and turn the tables up,

And quench the fire, the room is grown too hot.—

Ah! sirrah, this unlook’d-for sport comes well.

Nay, sit, nay, sit, good cousin Capulet,

For you and I are past our dancing²² days:

How long is ’t now, since last yourself and I

Were in a mask?²²

2 Cap. By ’r lady, thirty years.

1 Cap. What, man! ’t is not so much, ’t is not so much.

’Tis since the union of Lucentio,

Come pentecost as quickly as it will,

Some five and twenty years; and then we mask’d.

2 Cap. ’Tis more, ’t is more: his son is elder, sir.

His son is thirty.

1 Cap. Will you tell me that?²³

His son was but a ward two years ago.

Rom. What lady is that, which doth enrich the hand

Of yonder knight? [Pointing to JULIET.]

Serv. I know not, sir.

Rom. O! she doth-teach the torches to burn bright.

It seems she²³ hangs upon the cheek of night

Like a rich jewel in an Ethiop’s ear;

Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear!

So shows a snowy dove²³ troping with crows,

As yonder lady or her fellows shows.

The measure done, I’ll watch her place of stand.
And, touching hers, make blessed! my rude hand.
Did my heart love till now? forswear it, sight!
never saw true beauty till this night.
Tyb. This, by his voice, should be a Montague.
Fetch me my rapier, boy.—[Exit Boy.] What! dares
the slave
Come hither, cover’d with an antic face,
To fleer and scorn on our solemnity?
Now, by the stock and honour of my kin,
To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.
1 Cap. Why, how now, kinsman? wherefore storm you so?
Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe;
A villain, that is hither come in spite,
To scorn on our solemnity this night.
1 Cap. Young Romeo is it?
Tyb. 'Tis he, that villain Romeo.
1 Cap. Content thee, gentle coz: let him alone,
He bears him like a portly gentleman;
And, to say truth, Verona brags of him,
To be a virtuous and well-govern’d youth.
I would not for the wealth of all this town,
Here, in my house, do him disparagement;
Therefore, be patient, take no note of him:
It is my will; the which if thou respect,
Show a fair presence, and put off these frowns,
An ill-becoming semblance for a feast.
Tyb. It fits, when such a villain is a guest. I'll not endure him.
1 Cap. He shall be endur’d:
What, goodman boy*!—I say, he shall:—go to;
Go to: am I the master here, or you?
You'll not endure him!—God shall mend my soul—
You'll make a mutiny among our guests.
You will set cock-a-hoop: you'll be the man.
Tyb. Why, uncle, 'tis a shame.
1 Cap. Go to, go to,
You are a saucy boy.—Is’t so, indeed?—
This trick may chance to seath you.—I know what
You must contrive me! marry, 'tis time:
Well said, my hearts.—You are a prince; go be quiet, or—More light, more light!—for shame! I'll make you quiet: What?—Cheerly, my hearts!
Tyb. Patience perforce with wilful choleric meeting,
Makes my flesh tremble in their different greeting.
I will withdraw, but this intrusion shall,
Now seeming sweet, convert to bitter gall. [Exit.
Rom. If I profane with my unworthiest hand
[To Juliet.

This holy shrine, the gentle fine! this is,—
My lips, two blushing pilgrims, ready stand
To smooth that rough touch with a tender kiss.
Jul. Good pilgrim, you do wrong your hand too much,
Which mannerly devotion shows in this ;
For saints have hands that pilgrims’ hands do touch,*
And palm to palm is holy palmers’ kiss.
Rom. Have not saints lips, and holy palmers too?
Jul. Ay, pilgrim, lips that they must use in prayer.
Rom. O! then, dear saint, let lips do what hands do;
They pray, they grant thou, lest faith turn to despair.
Jul. Saints do not move, though grant for prayers' sake.
Rom. Then move not, while my prayer’s effect I take.

Thus from my lips, by thine, my sin is purg’d. [Kissing her.
Jul. Then have my lips the sin that they have took.
Rom. Sin from my lips? O, trespass sweetly urg’d! Give me my sin again.
Nurse. Madam, your mother craves a word with you.
[Juliet retires.
Rom. What is her mother?
Nurse. Marry, bachelor,
Her mother is the lady of the house,
And a good lady and a wise, and virtuous.
I nurs’d her daughter, that you talk’d withal;
I tell you—he that can lay hold of her
Shall have the chinks.
Rom. Is she a Capulet?
O, dear account! my life is my foe’s debt.11
Ben. Away, begone: the sport is at the best.
Rom. Ay, so I fear; the more is my unrest.11[Going
1 Cap. Nay, gentlemen, prepare not to be gone;
We have a trifling foolish banquet towards.—
Is it o’en so? Why then, I thank you all;
I thank you, honest gentlemen; good night.—
More torches here!—Come on, then let’s to bed.
Ah, sirrah, by my fay, it waxes late; I’ll to my rest. [Exit.
Jul. Come hither, nurse. What is your gentleman?
[The Guests retire severely.
Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio.
Jul. What’s he, that now is going out of door?
Nurse. Marry, that, I think, be young Petruchio.
Jul. What’s he, that follows here, that would not dance?
Nurse. I know not.
Jul. Go, ask his name.—If he be married,
My grave is like to be my wedding-bed.
Nurse. His name is Romeo, and a Montague:
[Going and returning.1
The only son of your great enemy.
Jul. My only love sprung from my only hate!
Too early seen unknown, and known too late! Prodigies of birth love it is to me,
That I must love a leathen enemy. [Exeunt all Guests.
Nurse. What’s this? what’s this?
Jul. A rhyme I learn’d even now
Of one I dance’d withal. [One calls within, Juliet:
Nurse. Anon, anon.—
Come, let’s away: the strangers all are gone. [Exeunt
Enter Chorus.18
Now old desire doth in his death-bed lie,
And young affection gapes to be his heir:
That fair, for which love groan’d for, and would die,
With tender Juliet match’d, is now not fair.
Now Romeo is below’d, and loves again,
Alike bewitched by the charm of looks;
But to his foe suppos’d he must complain,
And she steal love’s sweet balm from fearful hooks:
Being hold a foe, he may not have access
To breathe such vows as lovers use to swear:
And she as much in love, her means much less
To meet her new-beloved any where:
But passion lends them power, time means to meet.
Tempering extremities with extreme sweet. [Exit
SCENE I.—An open Place, adjoining CAPULET's Garden.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Can I go forward, when my heart is here?
Turn back, dull earth, and find thy centre out.
[He climbs the Wall, and leaps down within it.]

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.

Ben. Romeo! my cousin Romeo! Romeo!

Mer. He is wise, and, on my life, hath stolen him home to bed.

Ben. He ran this way, and leap'd this orchard wall.

Call, good Mercutio.

Mer. Nay, I'll conjure too.—

Romeo, humours, madman, passion, lover!—

Appear thou in the likeness of a sigh:
Speak but one rhyme, and I am satisfied;
Cry but—Ah me! I pronounce! but—love and dove;

Speak to my gossip Venus one fair word,
One nick-name for her pureblood son and heir,
Young Adam's Cupid, he that shot so true,

When king Cepheus lov'd the beggar-maid.—
He heareth not, he stirreth not, he moveth not;
The ape is dead, and I must conjure him—
I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes,
By her high forehead, and her scarlet lip,
By her fine foot, straight leg, and quivering thigh,
And the demesnes that there adjacent lie,
That in thy likeness thou appear to us.

Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him.

Mer. This cannot anger him: 't would anger him
To raise a spirit in his mistress' circle
Of some strange nature, letting it there stand
Till she had laid it, and conjur'd it down;
That were some spite. My invocation
Is fair and honest, and, in his mistress' name,
I conjure only but to raise up him.

Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among these trees.
To be consort'd with the humorous night:
Blind is his love, and best befits the dark.

Mer. If love be blind, love cannot hit the mark.
Now will he sit under a medlar tree,
And wish his mistress were that kind of fruit,
As maids call medlars when they laugh alone.—

O Romeo! that she were, O! that she were
An open at easter, thou a poppin pear!
Romeo, good night;—I'll to my truckle-bed;
This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep.

Come, shall we go?

Ben. Go, then; for 't is in vain
To seek him here, that means not to be found. [Exit.

SCENE II.—CAPULET's Garden.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. He jests at scars, that never felt a wound.—

[Juliet appears above, at a window.]

But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks?
It is the east, and Juliet is the sun.—

Aris, fair sun, and kill the envious moon,
Who is already sick and pale with grief,
That thou, her maid, art far more fair than she:
Be not her maid, since she is envious;
Her vestal livery is but white and green,
And none but fools do wear it; cast it off.——
It is my lady; O! it is my love:
O, that she knew what I am!——

She speaks, yet she says nothing: what of that?
Her eye disourses, I will answer it.—

I am too bold, 't is not to me she speaks;
Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,
Having some business, do entreat her eyes
To twinkle in their spheres till they return.
What if her eyes were there, they in her head?

The brightness of her cheek would shame these stars,
As daylight doth a lamp: her eyes in heaven
Would through the airy region stream so bright,
That birds would sing, and think it were not night.
See, how she leaseth her cheek upon her hand!
O! that I were a glove upon that hand,
That I might touch that cheek.

Jul. Ah me! She speaks

Romeo, speak again, bright angel! for thou art
As glorious to this night, being o'er my head,
As is a winged messenger of heaven
Unto the white-urned wand'ring eyes
Of mortals, that fall back to gaze on him,
When he bestrides the lazy-passing clouds,
And sails upon the bosom of the air.

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo?

Deny thy father, and refuse thy name;
Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,
And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this?

Jul. 'Tis but thy name that is my enemy:
Thou art thyself, 'tis not thy name: call thee Montague
What's Montague? it is nor hand, nor foot,
Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part
Belonging to a man. O! be some other name.

What's in a name? that which we call a rose,
By any other name it would smell as sweet;
So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd,
Retain that dear perfection which he owes
Without that title. — Romeo, dost thou
And for thy name, which is no part of thee,
Take all myself?

Rom. I take thee at thy word. —

[Starting forward.]

Call me but love, and I'll be new baptiz'd;
Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thou, that, thus beseechin' in night,
So stumblist on my counsel?

Rom. By a name

I know not how to tell thee who I am:
My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself,
Because it is an enemy to thee:

Had I it written, I would tear the word.

Jul. My ears have yet not drunk a hundred words
Of that tongue's utterance, 18 yet I know the sound.

Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague?

Rom. Neither, fair saint, if either thee displease.

1 Best thou hear? He, &c. in quarto, 1597. 2 comply: in folio (Closeup). 3 Abraham: in old copies. The allusion is supposed to be to the ballad of King Cepheus and the Beggar-maid. Dyce says the word is " corruption of odoam." or abode. 4 trim: in quarto, 1597. 5 He hears me not: in quarto, 1597; the rest of this and the next line, wanting. 4 trac: in folio, 1597. 7 fashion: in quarto, 1597. 8 ypp, daisy, earth: in folio, 1597. 9 e. 4 This and the previous line, are not in quarto, 1597. 10 aye: in later quarto and folio. 11 kie: in quarto, 1597. 12 lazy-saving: in folio, 1597. 13 though, not: in folio. 14 word: in later quarto and folio. 15 the divine: in quarto, 1597. 16 part: in quarto, 1597. 17 quarto, 1597. 18 Net in f. 16 thy tongue's utterance: in later quarto and folio.
Jul. How canst thou hither, tell me? and wherefore?

The orchard walls are high, and hard to climb,
And the place death, considering who thou art,
If any of my kinsmen find thee there.

Rom. With love’s light wings did I o’erperch these walls;
For stony limits cannot hold love out:
And what love can do, that dares love attempt;
Therefore, thy kinsmen are no let to me.

Jul. If they do see thee, they will murder thee.
Rom. Alack! there lies more peril in thine eye
Than twenty of their swords: look thou but sweet,
And I am proof against their enmity.

Jul. I would not for the world they saw thee here.
Rom. I have night’s o’erwatch, and is come to thine eyes;
And but thou love me, let them find me here:
My life was better ended by their hate,
Than death protracted, wanting of thy love.

Jul. By whose direction found’st thou out this place?
Rom. By love, that first did prompt me to inquire;
He lent me counsel, and I lent him eyes.
I am no pilot; yet, wert thou as far
As that vast shore wash’d with the farthest sea,
I would adventure for such merchandise.

Jul. Thou know’st the mask of night is on my face;
Else would a maiden blush beat up my cheek,
For which that thou hast heard me speak to-night.
Fain would I dwell on form, fair, fair deny
What I have spoke: but farewell compliment.
Dost thou love me? I know thou’lt will say—Ay:
And I will take thy word; yet, if thou swearst,
Thou mayst prove false: at lovers’ perjuries,
They say, Jove laughs. O, gentle Romeo!
If thou dost love, proclaim it faithfully;
Or if thou think’st I am too quickly won,
I’ll frown, and be severe; and say thee nay,
So thou wilt woo; but, else, not for the world.

In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond,
And therefore thou mayst think my haviour light;
But trust me, gentleman, I’ll prove more true
Than those that have more cunning to be strange.
I should have been more strange, I must confess,
But that thou over-heard’st, ere I was ware,
My true love’s passion: therefore, pardon me;
And not impute this yielding to light love,
Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear,
That tip with silver all these fruit-tree tops—

Jul. O! swear not by the moon, th’ inconstant moon,
That monthly changes in her circled orb,
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by?

Jul. Do not swear at all;
Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious elf,
Which is the god of my idolatry,
And I’ll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart’s dear love—

Jul. Well, do not swear. Although I joy in thee, have no joy of this contract to-night;
It is too rash, too unadvis’d, too sudden;
Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be,
Ere one can say it lightens. Sweet, good night!
This bud of love, by summer’s ripening breath,
May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet.
Good night, good night! as sweet repose and rest
Come to thy heart, as within that my breath!

Rom. O! wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?
Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have to-night?
Rom. Thy exchange of thy love’s faithful vow for mine,
Jul. I gave thee mine before thou didst request it:
And yet I would it were to give again.
Rom. Wouldst thou withdraw it? for what purpose love?
Jul. But to be frank, and give it thee again;
And yet I wish but for the thing I have.
My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep; the more! I give thee.
The more I have, for both are infinite. [Nurse calls within
Jul. I hear some noise within: dear love, adieu!—
Anon, good nurse!—Sweet Montague, be true.
Stay but a little, I will come again. [Exit
Rom. O blessed, blessed night! I am afeard,
Being in night, all this is but a dream,
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.

Re-enter Juliet above.

Jul. Three words, dear Romeo, and good night.

If that thy bent of love be honourable,
Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-morrow,
By one that I’ll procure to come to thee,
Where, and what time, thou wilt perform the rite;
And all my fortunes at thy foot I’ll lay,
And follow thee my lord throughout the world.

Nurse. [Within] Madam! Juliet. I come, anon.—But if thou mean’st not well,
I do beseech thee,—

Nurse. [Within] Madam! Juliet. By and by; I come.—

To cease thy suit, and leave me to my grief;
To-morrow will I send.

Rom. So thrive my soul,—
Jul. A thousand times good night. [Exit
Rom. A thousand times the worse, to want thy light.

Love goes toward love, as school-boys from their books:
But love from love, toward school with heavy looks.

[Going

Re-enter Juliet above.

Jul. Hist! Romeo, hist!—O, for a falconer’s voice.
To lure this terrorsome gentle back again!
Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud;
Else would I tear the cave where echo lies,
And make her airy voice more hoarse than mine
With repetition of my Romeo’s name.

Rom. It is my soul, that calls upon my name:
How silver-sweet sound lovers’ tongues by night,
Like softest music to attending ears!

Jul. Romeo!

Rom. My dear!—
Jul. At what o’clock to-morrow shall I send to thee?

Rom. By the hour of nine.
Jul. I will not fail: ’tis twenty years till then.
I have not forgot why I did call thee back.
Rom. Let me stand here, till thou remember it.
Jul. I shall forget to have thee still stand there,
Remembering how I love thy company.
Rom. And I will still stay, to have thee still forget.
Forgetting any other home but this.
Jul. ’Tis almost morning, I would have thee gone;
And yet no farther than a wanton’s bird,
Who lets it hop a little from her hand,
Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves,
And with a silk thread plucks it back again,
So loving-jalous of his liberty.
Rom. I would, I were thy bird.
Jull. Sweet, so would I:
Yet should I kill thee with much cherishing.
Good night, good night: parting is such sweet sorrow,
That I shall say good night, till it be morrow.
[Exit.
Rom. Sleep well until thine eyes, peace in thy breast.
Jull. Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest!
Hence will I to my ghostly father's cell:
His help to crave, and my good hope to tell.
[Exit.

SCENE III.—Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar Laurence, with a basket.

Fri. The grey-eyed morose smiles on the frowning night,
Chequering the eastern clouds with streaks of light;
And flecked darkness like a drunkard reels
From forth day's path and Titan's fiery wheels.
Now, ere the sun advance his burning eye
The day to cheer, and night's dank dew to dry,
I must up-fill this osier cage of ours,
With baleful weeds, and precious-juiced flowers.
The earth, that's nature's mother, is her tomb:
What is her burying grave, that is her womb;
And from her womb children of divers kind
We seek on her natural bosom find:
Many for many virtues excellent,
None but some, and yet all different.
O! miracle is the powerful grace that lies
In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities:
For nought so vile that on the earth doth live
But to the earth some special good doth give;
Nor sought so good, but strain'd from that fair use,
Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse;
Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied,
And vice sometime's by action dignified.
Within the infant rind of this weak flower
Poison hath residence, and medicine power:
For this, being smelt, with that act cheers each part;
Being tasted, slays all senses with the heart.
Two such opposed kings encamp them still
In man as well as herbs, grace, and rude will;
And where the worse is predominant,
Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. Good morrow, father.

Fri. Benedicite!
What early tongue so sweet saluteth me?—
Young son, it argues a distemper'd head,
So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed:
Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye
And where care lodges, sleep will never lie;
But where unbusied youth, with unstiff'd brain,
Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth reign.
Therefore, thy earliness doth me assure,
Thou art up-round by some distemper:
Or if not so, then here I hit it right—
Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.

Rom. That last is true; the sweeter rest was mine.

Fri. God pardon sin! wert thou with Rosaline?
Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father? no;
I have forgot that name, and that name's woe.

Fri. That's my good son: but where hast thou been, then?

Rom. I'll tell thee, ere thou ask it me again.
I have been feasting with mine enemy;
Where, on a sudden, one hath wounded me,
That's by me wounded: both our remedies
Within thy help and holy physic lies:
I bear no hatred, blessed man; for, lo!
My intercession likewise stands my foe.

Fri. Be plain, good son, and lonely in thy dryst
Riddling confession finds but riddling shift.

Rom. Then plainly know, my heart's dear love is set
On the fair daughter of rich Capulet:
As mine on hers, so here is set on mine;
And all combin'd, save what thou must combine
By holy marriage. When, and where, and how,
We met, we wou'd, and made exchange of vow,
I'll tell thee, as we pass: but this I pray,
That thou consent to marry us to-day.

Fri. Holy Saint Francis! what a change is here!
Is Rosaline, whom thou didst love so dear,
So soon forsaken? young men's love, then, lies
Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes.
Jesu Maria! what a deal of brine
Hath wash'd thy sallow cheeks for Rosaline!
How much salt water thrown away in waste
To season love, that of it doth not taste!
The sun not yet thy sights from heaven clears,
Thy old groans ring yet in my ancient ears;
Lo! here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit
Of an old tear that is not wash'd off yet.
If e'er thou wast thyself, and these woes thine,
Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline:
And art thou chang'd? pronounce this sentence, then—
Women may fall, when there's no strength in men.

Rom. Thou chid'st me oft for loving Rosaline.

Fri. For doing, not for loving, pupil mine.

Rom. And bad'st me bury love.

Fri. Not in a grave,
To lay one in, another out to have.
Rom. I pray thee, chide not: she, whom I love now
Doth grace for grace, and love for love allow:
The other did not so.

Fri. O! she knew well,
Thy love did read by rote, and could not spell.
But come, young waverer, come, go with me,
In one respect I'll thy assistant be,
For this alliance may so happy prove,
To turn your households' ramour to pure love.

Rom. O! let us hence; I stand on sudden haste.

Fri. Wisely, and slow: they stumble that run fast.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—A Street.

Enter Benvolio and Mercutio.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo be?
Came he not home to-night?

Ben. Not to his father's: I spoke with his man.

Mer. Why, that same pale hard-hearted wench, that Rosaline,
Torments him so, that he will sure run mad.

Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman to old Capulet,
Hath sent a letter to his father's house.

Mer. A challenge, on my life
Ben. Romeo will answer it.

Mer. Any man that can write may answer a letter.

Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's master, how he dares, being dared.
Mer. Alas, poor Romeo! he is already dead! stabbed with a white wench's black eye; run thorough the ear with a love-song; the very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt- shaft; and is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben. Why, what is Tybalt?

Mer. More than prince of cats, I can tell you. O! he is a courageous captain of compliments. He fights as you sing pricket-song, keeps time, distance, and proportion; rests me his minim rest, one, two, and the third in your bosom: the very butcher of a silk button, a duellist, a duellist; a gentleman of the very first house, of the first and second cause. Ah, the immortal passado! the punto rivero! the hay!—

Ben. The what?

Mer. The pox of such ane, lispings, affecting fantastiscions, these new turners of accents!—By Jeau, a very good blade!—a very tall man!—a very good whore!—Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grand- sire, that we should be afflicted with these strange flies, these fashion-mongers, these pardonnez-moi; who stand so much on the new form, that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench? O, their bawds, their bawds!

Enter Romeo.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.

Mer. Without his roe, like a dried herring.—O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified!—Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flowed in: Laura, to his lady, was a kitchen-wench;—merry, she had a better love to be-rhyme her: Dido, a dowdy; Cleopatra, a gipsy; Helen and Hero, holdings; Thisebe, a grey eye, or so, but not to the purpose.—Signior Romeo. bon jour! there's a French salutation to your French slop. You gave us the counterfeit fairly last night.

Rom. Good morrow to you both. What counterfeit did I give you?

Mer. The slip, sir, the slip; can you not conceive?

Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio, my business was great; and in such a case as mine, a man may strain courtesy.

Mer. That's as much as to say—such a case as yours constrains a man to bow in the hands.

Rom. Meaning—courtesy.

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.

Rom. A most courteous exposition.

Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

Rom. Pink for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why, then is my pump well flowered.

Mer. Well said: I'll follow me this jest now, till thou hast worn out thy pump; that, when the single sole of it is worn, the jest may remain, after the wearing, solely singular.

Rom. O single-soled jest! solely singular for the singleness.

Mer. Come between us, good Benvolio, for my wits fail.

Rom. Switch and spurs, switch and spurs; or I'll cry a match.

Mer. Nay, if our wits run the wild-goose chase, I have done for thou hast more of the wild-goose in one of thy wits, than, I am sure, I have in my whole five. Was I with you there for the goose?

Rom. Thou wast never with me for the goose, when thou wast not there for the goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest.

Rom. Nay, good goose, bite not.

Mer. Thy wit is a very bitter sweeting; it is a most sharp sauce.

Rom. And is it not well served in to a sweet goose?

Mer. O! here's a wit of cheverel, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad.

Rom. I stretch it out for that word—broad; which added to the goose, proves thee far and wide abroad—goose.

Mer. Why, is not this better now than groaning for love? now art thou sociable. now art thou Romeo: now art thou what thou art, by art as well as by nature: for this driveling love is like a great natural, that runs rolling up and down to hide his baulbe in a hole.

Ben. Stop there, stop there.

Mer. Thou desirest me to stop in my tale against the hair.

Ben. Thou wouldst else have made thy tale large.

Mer. O! thou art deceived. I would have made it short; for I was come to the whole depth of my tale, and meant, indeed, to occupy the argument no longer.

Rom. Here's goodly gear!

Enter Nurse and Peter.

Mer. A sail, a sail!

Ben. Two, two; a shirt, and a smock.

Nurse. Peter, p'rythee give me my fan.

Mer. Pr'ythee, do, good Peter, to hide her face; for her fan's the fairier of the two.

Nurse. God ye good morrow, gentlemen.

Mer. God ye good den, fair gentlewoman.

Nurse. Is it good den?

Mer. 'Tis no less, I tell you; for the bawdy hand of the dial is now upon the pricket of noon.

Nurse. Out upon you! what a man are you.

Rom. One, gentlewoman, that God hath made for himself to mar.

Nurse. By my troth, it is well said;—for himself to mar, quoth a?—Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?

Rom. I can tell you; but young Romeo will be older when you have found him, than he was when you sought him. I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worse.

Nurse. You say well.

Mer. Yea! is the worst well? very well took, I' faith; wisely, wisely.

Nurse. If you be he, sir, I desire some confidence with you.

Ben. She will invite him to some supper.

Mer. A bawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho!

Rom. What hast thou found?

Mer. No hare, sir; unless a hare, sir, in a lenten pie, that is something stale and hoar ere it be spent.

An old hare hoar, and an old hare hoar,[Singing.] Is very good meat in lent:

But a hare that is hoar, is too much for a score,

When it hoars ere it be spent.—

Romeo, will you come to your father's? we'll to dinner thither.

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell, ancient lady;

Farewell, lady, lady, lady,[Singing.]

[Exit Mercutio and Benvolio.

ROMEO and JULIET.
ACT II.

Nurse. Marry, farewell!—I pray you, sir, what saucy merchant was this, that was so full of his ropery?

Rom. A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk; and will speak more in a minute, than he will stand to in a month.

Nurse. An 'a speak any thing against me, I'll take him down, an 'a were luster than he is, and twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Sourvy knife! I am none of his flint-gills: I am none of his skains-mates. — And thou must stand by, too, and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure?

Pet. I saw no man use you at his pleasure; if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you. I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side.

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vexed, that every part about me quivers. — Sourvy knife! — Pray you, sir, a word: and as I told you, my young lady bade me inquire you out: what she bid me say, I will keep to myself; but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her in a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say, for the gentlewoman is young; and, therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly, it were an ill thing to be offered to any gentlewoman, and very wicked dealing.

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee, — Nurse. Good heart! and, if faith, I will tell her as much. Lord, lord! she will be a joyful woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, sir,—that you do protest; which, as I take it, is a gentlemanlike offer.

Rom. Bid her devise some means to come to shrift this afternoon; And there she shall at friar Lawrence' cell Be shriv'd, and married. Here is for thy pains.

Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny.

Rom. Go to; I say, you shall. [Giving her money.]

Nurse. This afternoon, sir? well, she shall be there. Rom. And stay; good nurse, behind the abbey-wall: Within this hour my man shall be with thee, And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair; Which to the top-gallant of my joy Must be my convey in the secret night. Farewell! — Be trusty, and I'll 'quite thy pains. Farewell! — Commend me to thy mistress.

Nurse. Now, God in heaven bless thee! — Hark you, sir.

Rom. What sayst thou, my dear nurse?

Nurse. Is your man secret? Did you ne'er hear say, Two may keep counsel, putting one away?

Rom. I warrant thee; my man is true as steel.

Nurse. Well, sir; my mistress is the sweetest lady— Lord, lord! —when 'twas a little prating thing, —O! There's a nobleman in town, one Paris, that would fain lay knife abroad; but she, good soul, had as lieve see a toad, as see him. I anger her sometimes, and tell her that Paris is the properer man; but, I'll warrant you, when I say so, she looks as pale as any clout in the varsel world. Both not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter.

Rom. Ay, nurse; What of that? both with an R.

Nurse. Ah, mocker! that's the dog's name. R is for thee? no. I know it begins with some other letter; and she hath the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it.

Rom. Command me to thy lady.

Nurse. Ay, a thousand times — Peter!

Pet. Anon?

Nurse. Peter, take my fan, and go before. [Exit.

SCENE V. — CAPULET'S Garden.

Enter Juliet.

Jul. The clock struck nine, when I did send the nurse; In half an hour she promis'd to return. Perchance, she cannot meet him: that's not so. — O! she is lame, 's love's heralds should be thought, Which ten times faster glide than the sun's beams Driving black shadows over lowering hills: Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw love, And therefore hath the wind-sift Cupid wings. Now is the sun upon the highest hill Of this day's journey; and from nine till twelve Is three long hours.—yet she is not come. Had she affections, and warm youthful blood, She'd be as swift in motion as a ball; My words would bandy her to my sweet love, And his to me: but old folks, seem as dead; Unwieldy, slow, heavy, and dull as lead.

Enter Nurse and Peter.

O God! she comes.—O honey nurse! what news? Hast thou met with him?* Send thy man away.

Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate. [Exit Peter.

Jul. Now, good sweet nurse.—O lord! why look'st thou sad? Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily; If good, thou shalt's the music of sweet news By playing it to me with so sour a face.

Nurse. I am weary, give me leave awhile.— Fie, how my bones ache! What a jaunt have I had! Jul. I would, thou hadst my bones, and I thy news: Nay, come, I pray thee, speak—good, good nurse, speak.

Nurse. Jut, what haste! can you not stay awhile? Do you not see, that I am out of breath? Jul. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath To say to me—that thou art out of breath? The excuse that thou dost make in this delay Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse. Is thy news good, or bad? answer to that; Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance. Let me be satisfied, is't good or bad?

Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice; you know not how to choose a man: Romeo! no, not he; though his face he better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's; and for a hand, and a foot, and a body,—though they be not to be talked on, yet they are past compare. He is not the flower of courtesy, — but, I'll warrant him, as gentle as a lamb.—Go thy ways, wenches: serve God. What, have you dined at home?

Jul. No, no: but all this did I know before. What says he of our marriage? what of that?

Nurse. Lord, how my head ache! what a head have I:

* This word was often used as a contemptuous term, as distinguished from "gentleman."
1 roperies: in quarto, 1597; both words mean, regency.
2 weak: in the e.
3 Tell her, I protest: in quarto, 1597.
4 The quarto, 1597, has in place of this speech: — Bid her get leave to-morrow morning.
5 Come to shrift at friar Lawrence's cell;
6 And omit all to, "And stay."
7 Not in fac.
8 The quarto, 1597, omits all to, "Commend me," &c.
9 * R, in the dog's letter and hireth is the sound. — Ben Jonson's Eng. Grammar.
10 Old copies read: " R is for the!" which Warburton changed to "thee." Some mod. eds.
11 read, with Tyrwhitt: " R is for the dog."
12 lazy: in quarto, 1597.
13 The quarto, 1597, has in place of this and the next twelve lines:
14 And run more swift, than hasty powder'll fed.
15 Both hurt by the fearless cannon's mouth.

The quarto, 1597, omits all to, "I am awry!"
It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.
My back! o' t' other side.—O, my back, my back!—
Beshrew your heart for sending me about,
To catch my death with jaining up and down.
Jul. I' faith, I am sorry that thou art not well.
Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what says my love?
Nurse. Your love says like an honest gentleman,
And a courteous, and a kind, and a handsome,
And, I warrant, a virtuous.—Where is your mother?
Jul. Where is my mother?—why, she is within:
Where should she be? How oddly thou repli'st;
'Your love says like an honest gentleman,—
Where is your mother?'
Nurse. O, God's lady dear!
Are you so hot? Marry, come up, I trow;
Is this the poultice for my aching bones?
Henceforward do your messages yourself.
Jul. Here's such a coe!—Come, what says Romeo?
Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shrift to-day?
Jul. I have.
Nurse. Then, hie you hence to friar Laurence's cell,
There stays a husband to make you a wife;
Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks;
They'll be in scarlet straightway at my news.
Hie you to church; I must another way,
To fetch a ladder, by which your love
Must climb a bird's nest soon, when it is dark:
I am the drudge, and toil in your delight,
But you shall bear the burden soon at night.
Go; I'll to dinner, hie you to the cell.
Jul. Hie to high fortune!—Honest nurse, farewell.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar Laurence and Romeo.
Fri. So smile the heavens upon this holy act,
That after-hours with sorrow chide us not!

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Public Place.

Enter Mercutio, Benvolio, Page, and Servants.
Ben. I pray thee, good Mercutio, let's retire:
The day is hot, the Capulets abroad,
And if we meet we shall not beare a brawl:
For now, these hot days, is the mad blood stirring.
Mer. Thou art like one of those fellows that, when he enters the confines of a tavern, claps me his sword upon the table, and says, "God send me no need of thee!" and, by the operation of the second cup, draws him on the drawer, when, indeed, there is no need.
Ben. Am I like such a fellow?
Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack, in thy mood, as any in Italy; and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.
Ben. And what to?
Mer. Nay, an there were two such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other. Thou! why thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more, or a hair less, in his beard, than thou hast. Thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason, but because thou hast hazel eyes: what eye,

1 In place of this question, the quarto, 1597, has:
Nay stay, sweet nurse; I do entreat thee, now,
What says my love, my lord, my Romeo?
2 straight: in i.e. 3 any: in i.e. 4 This scene was entirely reformed in the quarto, 1599. It may be found as it appears in the quarto, 1597, in the notes to Verplanck's edition. 5 sum up some: in folio. Stevens made the change. 6 This and the previous line, are not in quarto, 1597. 7 This and the next speech, are not in the quarto, 1597.

but such an eye, would spy out such a quarrel? Thy head is as full of quarrels, as an egg is full of meat:
and yet thy head hath been beaten asaddle as an egg for quarrelling. Thou hast quarrelled with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun. Dost thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter? with another, for tying his new shoes with old riband? and yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling!
Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter.
Mer. The fee-simple? O simple!
Ben. By my head, here come the Capulets.

Enter Tybalt, and others.

Mer. By my heel, I care not.
Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to them.—
Gentlemen, good den! a word with one of you.
Mer. And but one word with one of us? Couple it with something; make it a word and a blow.
Tyb. You will find me apt enough to that, sir, if you will give me occasion.
Merc. Could you not take some occasion without giving?

Tyb. Mercutio, thou consort'st with Romeo.—

Mer. Consort! what! dest thou make minstrels?
an thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords: here's my fiddlstick; here's that shall make you dance. 'Zounds, consort! [Striking his hilt.]

Ben. We talk here in the public haunt of men;
Either withdraw unto some private place,
And reason coldly of your grievances,
Or else depart; here all eyes gaze on us.

Mer. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze:
I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I.

Enter Romeo.

Tyb. Well, peace be with you, sir. Here comes my man.

Mer. But, I'll be hang'd, sir, if he wear your livery:
Marry, go before to field, he'll be your follower;
Your worship, in that sense, may call him—man.

Tyb. Romeo, the hate I bear thee, can afford
No better term than this—thou art a villain.

Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love thee
Doth much exceed the appertaining rage
To such a greeting:—villain am I none;
Therefore farewell: I see, thou know'st me not.

Tyb. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries
That thou hast done me; therefore, turn and draw.

Rom. I do protest, I never injur'd thee;
But love thee better than thou canst devise,
Till thou shalt know the reason of my love:
And so, good Capulet,—which name I tender
As dearly as mine own,—be satisfied.

Mer. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission!
A la stocata carries it away.

[Drews as Tybalt is going.

Tyb. What wouldst thou have with me?
Mer. Good king of cats, nothing, but one of your ineyes; that I mean to make bold withal, and, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of his pocketh by the ears? make haste, lest mine be about your ears erie it be out.

Tyb. I am for you. [Drawing.

Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapiers up.

Mer. Come, sir, your passado. [They fight.

Rom. Draw, Benvolio;

Beat down their weapons.—Gentlemen, for shame,
Forbear this outrage!—Tybalt—Mercutio—
The prince expressly hath forbid this bandying
In Verona streets.—Hold, Tybalt!—good Mercutio!

[Exit Tybalt and his Partisans.

Mer. I am hurt: [Romeo supports Merc.

A plague o' both the houses!—I am sped:—
Is he gone, and hath nothing?

Ben. What! art thou hurt?

Mer. Ay, ay, a scratch, a scratch; marry, 'tis enough.—

Where is my page?—go, villain, fetch a surgeon.

Rom. Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much.

Mer. No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church'd door; but 'tis enough, 'twill serve: ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man.
I am peppered, I warrant, for this world:—a plague o'
both your houses!—'Zounds! a dog, a rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! a braggart, a rogue, a villain, that fights by the book of arithmetic!—Why, the devil, came you between us? I was hurt under your arm.

Rom. I thought all for the best.

Mer. Help me into some house, Benvolio,
Or I shall faint.—A plague o' both your houses:
They have made worms' meat of me:
I have it, and soundly too:—your houses!

[Exit Mercutio and Benvolio.

Rom. This gentleman, the prince's near ally,
My very friend, hath got his mortal hurt
in my behalf;—my reputation stain'd
With Tybalt's slander, Tybalt, that an hour
Hath been my cousin. O sweet Juliet!
Thy beauty hath made me effeminate,
And in my temer way to vulture's steel.

Re-enter Benvolio.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo! brave Mercutio's dead;
That gallant spirit hath aspir'd the clouds,
Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.
Rom. This day's black fate on more days doth depend;
This but begins the woeful others must end.

Re-enter Tybalt.

Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt back again.

Rom. Alive! in triumph! and Mercutio slain!
Away to heaven, respective livery,
And fire-eyed fury be my conduct now!—
Now, Tybalt, take the villain back again,
That late thou gav'st me; for Mercutio's soul
Is but a little way above our heads,
Staying for thine to keep him company:
Either thou, or I, or both, must go with him.

Tyb. Thou, wretched boy, that didst conspire
here,

Shall with him hence.

Rom. This shall determine that.

[They fight; Tybalt falls.

Ben. Romeo, away! begone!
The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain:—
Stand not amaz'd:—the prince will doom thee death,
If thou art taken.—Hence!—be gone!—away!
Rom. O! I am fortune's fool.

Ben. Why dost thou stay? [Exit Romeo

Enter Citizens, &c.

1 Cit. Which way ran he that kill'd Mercutio?
Tybalt, that murderer, which way ran he?

Ben. There lies that Tybalt.

1 Cit. You, sir,—go with me.
I charge thee in the prince's name, obey.

Enter Prince, attended; Montague, Capulet, their Wives, and others.

Prin. Where are the vile beginners of this fray?

Ben. O noble prince! I can discover all
The unluckie manage of this fatal brawl:
There lies the man, slain by young Romeo,
That slew the kinman, brave Mercutio.
La. Cap. Tybalt, my cousin!—O my brother's child!
O prince! O cousin! husband! O, the blood is spild'p
Of my dear kinman!—Prince, as thou art true,
For blood of ours shed blood of Montague.
O cousin, cousin!

Prin. Who began this bloody fray?

Ben. Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo's hand dislay

Romeo, that spoke him fair, bade him bethink
How nice! the quarrel was; and urg’d withal
Your high displeasure:—all this, uttered
With gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly bow’d,
Could not take truce with the unruly spleen
Of Tybalt, deaf to peace, but that he its
With piercing steel at bold Mercutio’s breast;
Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to point.
And, with a martial scorn, with one hand beats
Cold death aside, and with the other sends
’t back to Tybalt, whose dexterity
Rectoris it home. Romeo he cries aloud.
"Hold, friends! friends, part!" and, swifter than his Husband arm beats down their fatal points,
And ‘twixt them rushes; underneath whose arm,
An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life
Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled;
But by and by comes back to Romeo.
Who had but newly entertain’d revenge,
And to’t they go like lightning; for ere I
Could draw to part them was stout Tybalt slain,
And as he fell did Romeo turn and fly.
This is the truth, or let Bevuolio die.

La. Capulet. He is a kinsman to the Montague.
Affection makes him false, he speaks not true:
Some twenty of them fought in this black strife,
And all those twenty could kill one life.
I beg for justice, which thou, prince, must give:
Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live.

Prin. Romeo slew him; he slew Mercutio;
Who now the price of his dear blood doth owe?

Montague. Not Romeo, prince, he was Mercutio’s friend:
This fault concludes but what the law should end,
The life of Tybalt.

Prin. And for that offense,
Immediately we do exile him hence:
I have an interest in your hate’s proceeding,
My blood for your rude brawls doth lie a bleeding:
But I’ll ancore you with so strong a fine,
That you shall all repent the loss of mine.
I will be deaf to pleading and excuses.
Nor tears, nor prayers, shall purchase out abuses;
Therefore, use none: let Romeo hence in haste.
Else, when he’s found, that hour is his last.
Bear hence this body, and attend our will;
Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in Capulet’s House.

Enter Juliet.

Juliet. Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds,
Towards Phoebus’ mansion: such a waggoner
As Phaeton would whip you to the west,
And bring in cloudy night immediately.—
Spread thy close curtain, love-performing night,
That enemies’ eyes may wink, and Romeo
Leap to these arms, untalk’d of, and unseen!—
Lovers can see to do their amorous rites
By their own beauties: or if love be blind,
It best agrees with night.—Come, civil night,
Thou sober-suited matron, all in black;
And learn me how to lose a winning match.
Play’d for a pair of stainless maidenheads:
Hood my unnam’d blood, batting’t in my cheeks,
With thy black mantle: till strange love, grown bold,
Think true rove acted simple modesty.
Come night, come Romeo, come thou night in day;
For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night.

Whiter than new snow on a raven’s back.—
Come, gentle night; come, lovely, black-brow’d night,
Give me my Romeo: and, when he shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars.
And he will make the face of heaven so fine,
That all the world will be in love with night,
And pay no worship to the garish sun.—
O, I have bought the mansion of a love,
But not possess’d it: and though I am sold,
Not yet enjoy’d. So tedious is this day,
As is the night before some festival
To an impatient child that hath new robes.
And may not wear them. O! here comes my nurse.

Enter Nurse, with a Ladder of Cords.

And she brings news; and ev’y tongue, that speaks
But Romeo’s name, speaks heavenly eloquence.—
Now, nurse, what news? What hast thou there? the cords

That Romeo bade thee fetch?

Nurse. Ay, ay, the cords. [Throws them down.

Juliet. Ah me! what news? why dost thou wring thy hands?

Nurse. Ah well-a-day! he’s dead, he’s dead, he’s dead!

We are undone, lady, we are undone!—
Alack the day!—he’s gone. he’s kill’d, he’s dead!

Juliet. Can heaven be so envious?

Nurse. Romeo can,
Though heaven cannot.—O Romeo, Romeo!—
Who ever would have thought it?—Romeo! Romeo! Romeo!—
What devil art thou, that dost torment me thus?

This torture should be roard in dismal hell.

Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou but I. And
That barest voice, I, shall poison more
Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice:
I am not I, if there be such an I;
Or those eyes shut, that make thee answer, I.
If he be slain, say,—; or if not—no:
Brief sounds determine or my weal or woe.

Nurse. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine eyes,—
God save the mark!—here on his manly breast:
A piteous corse, a bloody piteous corse:
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaub’d in blood,
All in gore blood!—I swooned at the sight.

Juliet. O break, my heart!—poor bankrupt, break at once!
To prison, eyes; ne’er look on liberty:
Yile earth, to earth resign; end motion here.
And thou, and Romeo, press one heavy bier!—

Nurse. O Tybalt, Tybalt! the best friend I had
Of courteous Tybalt, honest gentleman
That ever I should live to see thee dead!

Juliet. What storm is this that blows so contrary?

Nurse. Is Romeo slaughter’d? and is Tybalt dead?
My dear lov’d cousin, and my dearer lord?—
Thou, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom;
For who is living, if those two are gone?

Romeo. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished:
Romeo, that kill’d him, he is banished.

Juliet. O God!—did Romeo’s hand shed Tybalt’s blood?—

Nurse. It did, it did; alas the day! it did.

Juliet. O serpent heart, did with a flowering face!

Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave?

Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical!

Dove-feather’d raven! wolvish-ravening lamb!

Despised substance of divinest show!
Jul. O, find him! give this ring to my true knight,
And bid him come to take his last farewell.  [Exeunt

SCENE III.—Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar Laurence and Romeo.

Fri. Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou fearful
Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
And thou art wedded to calamity.

Rom. Father, what news? what is the prince's doom?
What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand,
That I yet know not?

Fri. Too familiar
Is my dear son with such sour company:
I bring thee tidings of the prince's doom.

Rom. What less than dooms-day is the prince's doom?

Fri. A gentle judgment parted from his lips,
Not body's death, but body's banishment.

Rom. Ha! banishment? be merciful, say—death;
For exile hath more terror in his look,
Much more than death: do not say—banishment.

Fri. Hence from Verona art thou banished:
Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.

Rom. There is no world without Verona walls,
But purgatory, torture, hell itself.

Hence banished is banish'd from the world,
And world's exile is death:—then, banish'd
Is death mis-term'd: calling death banishment,
Thou cut'st my head off with a golden axe,
And smil'st upon the stroke that murders me.

Fri. O deadly sin! O rude unthankfulness!
Thy fault our law calls death; but the kind prince,
Taking thy part, hath brush'd aside the law,
And turn'd that black word death to banishment:
This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not.

Rom. 'Tis torture, and not mercy: heaven is here,
Where Juliet lives: and every cat, and dog,
And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
Live here in heaven, and may look on her;
But Romeo may not.—More validity,
More honourable state, more tourist lives
In carrión flies, than Romeo: they may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand,
And steal immortal blessing from her lips;
Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin;
This may flies do, when I from this must fly,
And say'st thou yet, that exile is not death?
But Romeo may not; he is banished.
Flies may do this, but I from this must fly:
They are free men, but I am banished.

Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-ground knife,
No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so mean,
But—banished—to kill me; banished?
O friar! the dammed used that word in hell;
Howling attends it: how hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd,
To mingle me with that word—banished?

Fri. Thou fond mad man, hear me but speak a word
Rom. O! thou wilt speak again of banishment
Fri. I'll give thee armour to keep off that word;
Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy,
To comfort thee, though thou art banished.

Rom. Yet banished?—Hang up philosophy:
Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,
Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom,
It helps not, it prevails not. Talk no more
Fri. O! then I see that madmen have no ears.
Rom. How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?
Fri. Let me dispute with thee of thy estate.
Rom. Thou canst not speak of that thou dost not feel.
Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love,
An hour but married, Tybalt murdered,
Doting like me, and like me banished,
Then mightst thou speak, then mightst thou tear thy hair,
And fall upon the ground, as I do now,
Taking the measure of an unmade grave. [Falling.
Fri. Arise; one knocks: good Romeo, hide thyself.
[Nocking within.
Rom. Not I: unless the breath of heart-sick groans.
Mist-like, infold me from the search of eyes. [Nocking.
Fri. Hark, how they knock!—who's there?
—Romeo; arise;
Thon wilt be taken.—Stand a while.—Stand up:
[Nocking.
Run to my study.—By and by.—God's will!
What wilfulness is this!—I come, I come. [Nocking.
Who knocks so hard? whence come you? what's your will?
Nurse. [Within.] Let me come in and you shall know my errand:
I come from lady Juliet.
Fri. Welcome, then.
Enter Nurse.
Nurse. O holy friar! O! tell me, holy friar,
Where is my lady's lord? where's Romeo?
Fri. There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.
Nurse. O! he is even in my mistress' case;
Just in her case.
Fri. O woful sympathy!
Piteous predicament!
Nurse. Even so lies she,
Blubbering and weeping, weeping and blubbering.—
Stand up, stand up; stand. an you be a man;
For Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand;
Why should you fall into so deep an O? [Romeo groans.
Rom. Nurse. [Rising suddenly.
Nurse. Ah sir! ah sir!—Death is the end of all.
Rom. Spak'st thou of Juliet? how is it with her?
Doth she not think me an old murderer,
Now I have stain'd the childhood of our joy
With blood remov'd but little from her own?
Where is she? and how doth she? and what says
My conceall'd lady to our cancell'd love?
Nurse. O, she says nothing, sir, but weeps and weeps;
And now falls on her bed; and then starts up,
And Tybalt calls; and then on Romeo cries,
And then down falls again.
Rom. As if that name,
Shot from the deadly level of a gun,
Did murder her; as that name's cursed hand
Murder'd her kinsman.—O! tell me, friar, tell me,
In what vile part of this anatomy
Dost my name lodge? tell me, that I may sack
The hateful mansion.
Fri. Hold thy desperate hand!
Art thou a man? thy form cries out, thou art;
Thy tears are womanish; thy wild acts denote
The unreasonable fury of a beast;
Un-seemly woman, in a seeming man;
Or ill-seeming beast, in seeming both!
Thea hast amaz'd me; by my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd.
Hast thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thyself,
And slay thy lady, too, that lives in thee,
By doing damned hate upon thyself?
Why rais't thou on thy birth, the heaven, and earth
Since birth, and heaven, and earth, all three did meet
In thee at once, which thou at once wouldst lose,
Fie, fie! thou sham'st thy shape, thy love, thy wit,
Which, like an usurer, abound's in all,
And usest none in that true use indeed
Which should be deck'd thy shape, thy love, thy wit.
Thy noble shape is but a form of wax,
Digressing from the valour of a man:
Thy dear love, sworn, but hollow perjury,
Killing that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish,
Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love,
Mis-shapen in the conduct of them both,
Like powder in a skill-less soldier's flask,
Is set afire by thine own ignorance,
And thou dismember'd with thine own defence.
What! rouse thee, man: thy Juliet is alive,
For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead;
There art thou happy: Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou slew'st Tybalt: there art thou happy too:
The law, that threaten'd death, becomes thy friend,
And turns it to exile; there art thou happy:
A pack of blessings lights upon thy back;
Happiness courts thee in her best array:
But, like a mis-behav'd and sullen wench,
Thou poust'st upon thy fortune and thy love,
Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.
Go, get thee to thy love, as was agreed,
Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort her;
But, look, thou stay not till the watch be set,
For then thou canst not pass to Mantua;
Where thou shalt live, till we can find a time
To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends,
Beg pardon of the prince, and call thee back,
With twenty hundred thousand times more joy
Than thou went'st forth in lamentation.—
Go before, nurse: commend me to thy lady;
And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto:
Romeo is coming.
Nurse. O Lord! I could have stay'd here all the night,
To hear good counsel: O, what learning is!—
My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come.
Rom. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.
Nurse. Here is a ring she bid me give you, sir,
Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late. [Exit Nurse.
Rom. How well my comfort is reviv'd by this!
Fri. Go hence. Good night: and here stands all
Either be gone before the watch be set, [your state:—
Or by the break of day disquist'd from hence.
Sojourn in Mantua: I'll find out your man,
And he shall signify from time to time
Every good hap to you that chances here.
Give me thy hand: 'tis late: farewell; good night
Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out on me,
It were a grief so brief to part with thee:
Farewell. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, and Paris.
Cap. Things have fallen out, sir, so unluckily,
That we have had no time to move our daughter.
Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tybalt dearly,
And so did I:—well, we were born to die —
'Tis very late; she'll not come down to-night:
I promise you, but for your company,
I would have been a-bed an hour ago.
Par. These times of woe afford no time to woe.—
Ma'am, good night; commend me to your daughter.
Lc. Cap. I will, and know her mind early to-morrow;
To night she's mew'd up in her heaviness.
Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender
Of my child's love; I think, she will be rul'd
In all respects by me; say more, I doubt it not.
Vie, go you to her ere you go to bed;
Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love,
And bid her mark you me, on Wednesday next—
But, soft! what day is this?
Par. Monday, my lord.
Cap. Monday? ha! ha! Well, Wednesday is too
O' Thursday let it be:—o' Thursday, tell her, [soon;]
She shall be married to this noble earl.—
Will you be ready? do you like this haste?
We 'll keep no great ado:—a friend, or two:—
For hark you, Tybalt being slain so late,
It may be thought we held him carelessly,
Being our kinsman, if we revel much.
Therefore, you 'll have some half a dozen friends.
And there an end. But what say you to Thursday?
Par. My lord, I would that Thursday were to-morrow.
Cap. Well, get you gone: o' Thursday be it then.
Go you to Juliet, ere you go to bed,
Prepare her, wife, against this wedding-day—
Farewell, my lord.—Light to my chamber, ho!—
Adieu; it is so very late, that we May call it early by and by.—Good night. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Juliet's Chamber.

Enter Romeo and Juliet.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone? it is not yet near day:
It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
That pierc'd the fearful hollow of thine ear.
Nighly she sings on yon pomegranate tree
Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.
Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the morn.
No nightingale: look, love, what envious stroaks
Do fill the severing clouds in yonder east.
Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day
Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops:
I must be gone and live, or stay and die.
Jul. Yo' light is not day-light; I know it, I:
It is some meteor that the sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua:
Therefore, stay yet; thou needst not to be gone.
Rom. Let me be taken, let me be put to death;
I am content, so thou wilt have it so,
I'll say, you grey is not the morning's eye,
'T is but the pale reflex of Cynthia's bow,3
Nor that is not the lark, whose notes do beat
The vaunted heaven so high above our heads:
I have more care to stay, than will to go:—
Come, death, and welcome: Juliet willeth it so —
How is't, my soul? let's talk, it is not day.
Jul. It is, it is; be hence, be gone, away! It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords, and unpleasing sharps.
Some say, the lark makes sweet division;
This doth not so, for she divideth us:
Some say, the lark and loathed toad change eyes; O! now I would they had chang'd voices too,
To go with Paris to Saint Peter's church,
Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither
Out, you green-sickness carrion! out, you bag and baggage!
You tallow face!

La. Cap. Fie, fie! what, are you mad?

Jul. Good father, I beseech you on my knees,
Hear me with patience but to speak a word.

Cap. Hang thee, young baggage! disobedient wretch
I tell thee what,—get thee to church o' Thursday,
Or never after look me in the face.

Speak not, reply not, do not answer me;
My fingers itch.—Wife, we scarce thought us bles'd
That God had lent us but this only child;
But now I see this one is one too much,
And that we have a curse in having her.
Out on her, hiding!

Nurse. God in heaven bless her!

You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so.

Cap. And why, my lady wisdom? hold your tongue,
Good prudence; smatter with your gossip's; go.

Nurse. I speak no treason.

Cap. Nurse. May not one speak?

Cap. Peace, you mumbling fool!

Utter your gravity o'er a gossip's bowl,
For here we need it not.

La. Cap. You are too hot,

Cap. God's bread! it makes me mad.

Day, night, hour, tide, time, work, play,

Alone, in company, still my care hath been
To have her match'd; and having now provided
A gentleman of noble parentage,
Of fair descemees, youthful, and nobly train'd,
Stuff'd (as they say) with honourable parts,
Proportion'd as one's thought would wish a man,—
And then to have a wretched puling fool,
A whining marmet, in her fortunate tender,
To answer—"I'll not wed!"—"I cannot love."

I am too young,"—"I pray you, pardon me."

But, an you will not wed, I'll pardon you;
Grave where you will, you shall not house with me:
Look to't, think on't, I do not use to jest.

Thursday is near; lay hand on heart, advise.
An you be mine, I'll give you to my friend;
An you be not, hang, beg, starve, die! in the streets,
For, by my soul, I'll ne'er acknowledge thee,
Nor what is mine shall never do thee good.

Trust to't, both think you: I'll not be forsworn. [Exit.

Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds,
That sees into the bottom of my grief?—
O, sweet my mother, cast me not away!
Delay this marriage for a month, a week;
Or, if you do not, make the bridal bed
In that diminutive where Tyrball lies.

La. Cap. Talk not to me, for I'll not speak a word.
Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee. [Exit.

Jul. O God!—O nurse! how shall this be prevented?

My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven;
How shall that faith return again to earth,
Unless that husband send it me from heaven
By leaving earth?—Comfort me, counsel me.—
Alack! that heaven should practise stratagems
Upon so soft a subject as myself!—

What say'st thou? hast thou not a word of joy?

Some comfort, nurse.

Nurse. Faith, here 'tis. Romeo
Is banished, and all the world to nothing,
That he dares ne'er come back to challenge you;
Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth.
Then, since the case so stands as now it doth,
I think it best you married with the county.
O! he's a lovely gentleman;
Romeo's a dishevet to him: an eagle, madam,
Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye,
As Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart,
I think you are happy in this second match,
For it excels your first: or if it did not,
Your first is dead; or 't were as good he were,
As living here and you no use of him.

Juliet. Speak not thus to my heart?
Nurse. And from my soul too;
Or else beshrew them both.

Juliet.
Amen!

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar Laurence and Paris.

Friar. On Thursday, sir? the time is very short.
Par. My father Capulet will have it so;
And I am nothing slow to slack his haste.
Friar. You say, you do not know the lady's mind:
Uneven is the course; I like it not.
Par. Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's death,
And, therefore, have I little talk'd of love;
For Venus smiles not in a house of tears.
Now, sir, her father counts it dangerous,
That she doth give her sorrow so much way,
And in his wisdom hastens our marriage,
To stop the inundation of her tears;
Which, too much minded by herself alone,
May be put from her by society.
Now do you know the reason of this haste?
Friar. I would I knew not why it should be slow'd.

[Aside.

Look, sir, here comes the lady towards my cell.

Enter Juliet.

Par. Happily met, my lady, and my wife.
Juliet. That may be, sir, when I may be a wife.
Par. That may be, must be, love, on Thursday next.
Juliet. What must be shall be.

Friar. That's a certain text.

Par. Come you to make confession to this father?
Juliet. To answer that, I should confess to you.
Par. Do not deny him that you love me.
Juliet. I will confess to you that I love him.
Par. So will you, I am sure, that you love me.
Juliet. If I do so, it will be of more price.

Being spoke behind your back, than to your face.

Par. Poor soul, thy face is much abused with tears.
Juliet. The tears have got small victory by that;
For it was bad enough before their spite.

Par. Thou wrong'st it, more than tears, with that report.
Juliet. That is no slander, sir, which is a truth,
And what I spake, I spake to it my face.

Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slander'd it.

Juliet. It may be so, for it is not mine own.
Are you at leisure, holy father, now,
Or shall I come to you at evening mass?

Friar. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter, now.—
My lord, we must entreat the time alone.

Par. God shield, I should disturb devotion!—
Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse you:
Till then, adieu; and keep this holy kiss. [Exit Paris.

Juliet. O! shut the door; and when thou hast done so
Come weep with me; past hope, past cure, past help!

Friar. O Juliet! I already know thy grief;
It straitens me past the compass of my wits;
I hear thou must, and nothing must prologue it,
On Thursday next be married to this Count.

Juliet. Tell me not, friar, that thou hast ear'd of this,
Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it:
If in thy wisdom thou canst give no help,
Do thou but call my resolution wise,
And with this knife I'll help it presently. [Show ing it.
God join'd my heart and Romeo's, thou our hands;
And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo seal'd,
Shall be the label to another deed,
Or my true heart with treacherous revolt
Turn to another, this shall slay them both.
Therefore, out of thy long-experience'd time,
Give me some present counsel; or, behold,
Twixt my extremities and me this bloody knife
Shall play the umpire; arbitrating that,
Which the commission of thy years and art
Could to no issue of true honour bring.
Be not so long to speak; I long to die. [Offers to strike
If what thou speakest speak not of remedy.
Friar. Hold, daughter! I do say a kind of hope,
Which craves as desperate an execution
As that is desperate which we would prevent.
If, rather than to marry county Paris,
Thou wast the strength of will to slay thyself,
Then is it likely thou wilt undertake
A thing like death to elude away this shame,
That cop'd with death himself to scape from it,
And, if thou dar'st, I'll give thee remedy.

Juliet. O! bid me leap, rather than marry Paris,
From off the battlements of yonder tower;
Or walk in thiefish ways; or bid me lurk
Where serpents are; chain me with rearing bears;
Or hide me nightly in a charnel-house,
Over-throw'd with dead men's rattling bones,
With weary shanks, and yellow chapless skulls;
Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good on her:
A peevish self-will’d harlotry it is.
  Enter JULIET.

Nurse. See, where she comes from shift with merry look.

Cap. How now, my headstrong! where have you been gadding?

Jul. Where I have learn’d me to repent the sin
Of disobedient opposition
To you, and your behests; and am enjoin’d
By holy Laurence to fall prostrate here, [Kneeling.
And beg your pardon.—Pardon, I beseech you:
Henceforward I am ever mild by you.

Cap. Send for the County: go tell him of this.

I’ll have this knot knitt up to-morrow morning.

Jul. I met the youthful lord at Laurence’s cell:
And gave him what becoming? love I might,
Not stepping o’er the bounds of modesty.

Cap. Why, I am glad on’t; this is well,—stand up:
This is as ’tis should be.—Let me see the County;
Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither.

Now, afore God, this reverend holy friar,
All our whole city is much bound to him.

Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet,
To help me sort such needful ornaments
As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow?

La. Cap. No. not till Thursday: there is time enough.
Cap. Go, nurse, go with her.—We’ll to church tomorrow.
  [Exeunt JULIET and Nurse.

La. Cap. We shall be short in our provision:
’t is now near night.

Cap. Tush! I will stir about,
And all things shall be well, I warrant thee, my faith, and that to Juliet; help to deck up her:
I’ll not to bed to-night,—let me alone;
I’ll play the housewife for this once.—What ho!

They are all forth: well, I will walk myself
To county Paris, to prepare him up
Against to-morrow. My heart is won’t drowsy light,
Since this same wayward girl is so relain’d.
  [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—JULIET’S Chamber.

Enter JULIET and Nurse.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best;—but, gentle nurse,
I pray thee leave me to myself to-night;
For I have need of many orisons
To move the heavens to smile upon my state,
Which, well thou know’st, is cross and full of sin.

La. Cap. What, are you busy, lady? need you my help?

Jul. No, madam: we have e’er such necessary
As are behoveful for our state to-morrow:
So please you, let me now be left alone,
And let the nurse this night sit up with you;
For, I am sure, you have your hands full all,
In this so sudden business.

La. Cap. Good night:
Get thee to bed and rest; for thou hast need.
  [Exeunt Lady Capulet and Nurse.

Jul. Farewell!—God knows when we shall meet again.

* Or lay me in a tomb with one new dead: in quarto, 1597: the undated quarto has t abroad: the folio: grave.

* To keep myself a faithful, untrained wife: To my dear lord, my dearest Romeo: in quarto, 1597.

* A dull and heavy slumber, which shall seize, Each vital spirit: for no pulse shall keep His natural progress, but succumb to death: in quarto, 1597. So be the undated quarto: and, and folio: many.

* Forward, wilful: in quarto, 1597. Not in f. e. became: w e f

[1.597.]

I will not entertain so bad a thought.

What if I should be sitted in the tomb?

Awaite an hour before the appointed time.

Ah! then I fear I shall be lunatic.

And playing with my dead forsworn’s bones,

Dish out my frantic brains. Methinks I see

My cousin Tybalt, watering in his blood,

Seeking for Romeo: stay, Tybalt, stay,—

Romeo, I some, this do I drink to the—
have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins,
That almost freezes up the heat of life:
I'll call them back again to comfort me.—
Nurse!—What should she do here?
My dismal scene I needs must act alone.—
Come, phial,—
What if this mixture do not work at all,
Shall I be married, then, to-morrow morning?—
No, no,—this shall forbid it,—ie thou there.
[Leaving down a Dagger.
What if it be a poison, which the friar
Subtly hath minister'd to have me dead,
Lost in this marriage he should be dishonour'd,
Because he married me before to Romeo?
I fear, it is; and yet, methinks, it should not,
For he hath still been tried a holy man:
I will not entertain so bad a thought.—
Now if, when I am laid into the tomb,
I wake before the time that Romeo
Come to redeem me? there's a fearful point.
Shall I not, then, be stifled in the vault,
To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes in,
And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes?
Or, if I live, is it not very like,
The horrible conceit of death and night,
Together with the terror of the place.—
As in a vault, an ancient receptacle,
Where, for these many hundred years, the bones
Of all my buried ancestors are packed;
Where bloody Tybalt, yet green in earth,
Lies festering in his shroud; where, as they say,
At some hours in the night spirits resort:
Alack, alack! is it not like, that I,
So early waking,—what with loathsome smells,
And shrieks like mantrades' torn out of the earth.
That living mortals, hearing them, run mad;—
O! if I wake, shall I not be distraught,
Environed with all these hideous fears,
And madly play with my forfathers' joints,
And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud?
And, in this rage, with some great kinsman's bone,
As with a club, dash out my desperate brains?
O, look! methinks, I see my cousin's ghost
Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body
Upon a rapier's point.—Stay, Tybalt, stay!—
Romeo! Romeo! Romeo!—here's drink—I drink to thee.
[She throws herself on the bed.

SCENE IV.—Capulet's Hall.

Enter Lady Capulet and Nurse.

La. Cap. Hold; take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse.
Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry.

Enter Capulet.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock hath crow'd,
The curfew bell hath rung, 'tis three o'clock.—
Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica;
Spare not for cost.

Nurse. Go, go, you cot-queue, go.
Get you to bed: 'tis faith, you'll be sick to-morrow
For this night's watching.

Cap. No, not a whit. What! I have watch'd ere now
All night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.

La. Cap. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt in your
But I will watch you from such watching now. [Exit; time;

[Exeunt Lady Capulet and Nurse.

Cop. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!—Now, fellow
What's there?
Enter Servants, with Spits, Logs, and Baskets.
1 Serv. Things for the cook, sir; but I know not what.
Cop. Make haste, make haste. [Exit 1 Serv.]
Sirrah, fetch drier logs:
Call Peter, he will show thee where they are.
2 Serv. I have a head, sir, that will find out logs,
And never trouble Peter for the matter.
[Exeit.
Cop. 'Mass, and well said; a merry whorehouse, ha!
Thou shalt be logger-head.—Good faith! it is day:
The Country will be here with music straight,'

[Music within
For so he said he would.—I hear him near.—
Nurse!—Wife!—what, ho!—what, nurse, I say!

Enter Nurse.

Go, waken Juliet; go, and trim her up:
I'll go and chat with Paris,—He, make haste,
Make haste; the bridegroom he is come already.
Make haste, I say.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Juliet's Chamber; Juliet on the Bed

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Mistress!—what, mistress!—Juliet!—fast,
I warrant:—
Why, lamb!—why, lady!—is, you slug-a-bed!—
Why, love, I say!—madam! sweet-heart!—why, bride!—
What! not a word?—You take your pennyworths now:
Sleep for a week; for the next night, I warrant,
The county Paris hath set up his rest,
That you shall rest but little.—God forgive me,
Marry and amen, how sound is she asleep!
I needs must wake her.—Madam, madam, madam!
Ay, let the County take you in your bed:
He'll fright you up, if faith,—Will it not be?—
What, drest! and in your clothes! and dawn again!
I must needs wake you. Lady! lady, lady!—
Alas! alas!—Help! help! my lady's dead!—
O, well-a-day, that ever I was born!—
Some aqua-vite, ho!—my lord! my lady!—

Enter Lady Capulet.

La. Cap. What noise is here?—
Nurse.

La. Cap. What is the matter?
Nurse.

Look, look! O heavy day!—
La. Cap. O me! O me!—my child, my only life,
Revive, look up, or I will die with thee!—
Help, help!—call help.

Enter Capulet.

Cap. For shame! bring Juliet forth; her lord is come.
Nurse. She's dead, deceas'd: she's dead; alack the day!

La. Cap. Alack the day! she's dead, she's dead, she's dead.

Cap. Ha! let me see her.—Out, alas! she's cold!—
Her blood is settled, and her joints are stiff;
Life and these lips have long been separated:
Death lies on her, like an untimely frost
Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.
Nurse. O lamentable day!

La. Cap. A shameful day!—

Cap. Death, that hath ta'en her hence to make me wail,
Ties up my tongue, and will not let me speak.

Enter Friar Laurence and Paris, with Musician.

Fri. Come, is the bride ready to go to church?
Cap. Ready to go, but never to return.—
O son! the night before thy wedding day
Romeo deats lain with thy wife: there she lies,
Flower as she was, delivered by him.
Death is my son-in-law, death is my heir;
My daughter he hath wedded. I will die,
And leave him all; life, living, all is death's!
Par. Have I thought long to see this morning's face?
And doth it give me such a sight as this?
Lat. Cap. Accursed, unhappy, wretched, hateful day!
Most miserable hour, that e'er time saw
In lasting labour of his pilgrimage!
But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,
But one thing to rejoice and solace in,
And cruel death hath catch'd it from my sight.
Nurse. O woe, O woeful, woful, woful day!
Most lamentable day! most woful day;
That ever, ever, I did yet behold!
O day! O day! O day! O hateful day!
Never was seen so black a day as this:
O woful day, O woful day!
Par. Beggild, divorc'd, wrong'd, spited, slain!
Most detestable death, by thee beguil'd,
By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown!—
O love! O life!—not life, but love in death!
Cap. Despair'd, distressed, hated, martyred, kill'd!
Uncomfortable time, why cam'st thou now
To murder, murder our solemnity?—
O child! O child!—my soul, and not my child!—
Dead art thou!—alack! my child is dead;
And with my child my joys are buried.
Fri. Peace, ho! for shame! confusion's curse lives not
In these confusions. Heaven and yourself
Had part in this fair maid, now heaven hath all;
And all the better is it for the maid:
Your part in her you could not keep from death,
But heaven keeps his part in eternal life.
The most you sought was her promotion,
For 't was your heaven she should be advanc'd;
And weep ye now, seeing she is advanc'd
Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself?
O! in this love you love your child so ill,
That you run mad, seeing that she is well:
She's not well married that lives married long,
But she's best married that dies married young.
Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary
On this fair corse: and, as the custom is,
In all her best array bear her to church;
For though fond nature bids us all lament,
Yet nature's tears are reason'serriment.
Cap. All things, that we ordained festival,
Turn from their office to black funeral:
Our instruments to melancholy bells;
Our wedding cheer to a sad burial feast:
Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change;
Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse,
And all things change them to the contrary.
Fri. Sir, you go in,—and, madam, go with him;—
And go, sir Paris:—every one prepare
To follow this fair corse unto her grave.
The heavens do lower upon you, for some ill;
Move them no more, by crossing their high will.

[Exeunt Capulet, Lady Capulet, Paris, and Friar.]
1 Mus. 'Tis faith, we may put up our pipes, and be gone.
Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah! put up, put up,
For, well ye know, this is a pitiful case. [Exit Nurse]
1 Mus. Ay, by my troth, the case may be amended.
Enter Peter.
Pet. Musicians, O, musicians! "Heart's ease."
Heart's ease: O! an you will have me live, play—
"Heart's ease."
1 Mus. Why "Heart's ease?"
Pet. O, musicians! because my heart itself plays
"My heart is full of woe." O! play me some merry dump, to comfort me.
2 Mus. Not a dump we: 'tis no time to play now.
Pet. You will not, then?
Mus. No.
Pet. I will, then, give it you soundly.
1 Mus. What will you give us?
Pet. No money, on my faith; but the gleek: I will give you the minstrel.
1 Mus. Then, will I give you the serving-creature.
Pet. Then, will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate. I will carry no crotchets: I'll re you,
I'll fa you. Do you note me? [Drawing his Dagger.]
1 Mus. An you re us, and fa us, you note us.
2 Mus. Pray you, put up your dagger, and put out your wit.
Pet. Then have at you with my wit. I will dry-beat you with my iron wit, and put up my iron dagger.
—Answer me like men:
When wringing grief the heart doth wound,
And dolotiful dumps the mind oppress,
Then music, with her silver sound;
Why, "silver sound?" why, "music with her silver sound?"
What say you, Simon Catling?
1 Mus. Marry, sir, because silver hath a sweet sound.
Pet. Thou pratest:—What say you, Hugh Rebeck?
2 Mus. I say "silver sound," because musicians sound for silver.
Pet. Thou pratest too!—What say you, James Soundpost?
3 Mus. Faith, I know not what to say.
Pet. O! I cry you mercy; you are the singer: I will say for you. It is "music with her silver sound," because musicians have seldom gold for sounding:
Then music with her silver sound,
With speedy help doth lend redress.
[Exit

1 Mus. What a pestilent knave is this same.
2 Mus. Hang him, Jack! Come, we'll in here:
tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner. [Exeunt]
ACT V.

SCENE I.—Mantua. A Street.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering death of sleep, My dreams presage some joyous news at hand. My bosom’s lord sits lightly in his throne; And, all this day, an unaccustomed spring Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts. I dreamt, my lady came and found me dead; Strange dream! that gives a dead man leave to think, And breathe’d such life with kisses in my lips, That I reviv’d, and was an emperor. Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess’d! When but love’s shadows are so rich in joy?

Enter Balthasar.

News from Verona!—How now, Balthasar? Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar? How dost my lady? Is my father well? How fares my Juliet? That I ask again; For nothing can be ill if she be well. Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill: Her body sleeps in Capulet’s monument, And her immortal part with angel lives. I saw her laid low in her kindred’s vault, And presently took post to tell it you. O pardon me for bringing these ill news, Since you did leave it for my office, sir.

Rom. Is it even so? then, I defy you, stars! Thou know’st my lodging: get me ink and paper, And hire post horses; I will hence to-night. Bal. I do beseech you, sir, have patience: Your looks are pale and wild, and do import Some misadventure.

Rom. Tush! thou art deceiv’d Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do. Hast thou no letters to me from the friar? Bal. No, my good lord. And hire those horses: I’ll be with thee straight. [Exit Balthasar.

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night. Let’s see for means:—O, mischief! thou art swift! To enter in the thoughts of desperate men. I do remember an apothecary, And her shop dwells, I think late I noted In tatter’d weeds, with overwhelming brows, Culling of simples: meagre were his looks, Sharp misery had worn him to the bones: And in his needy shop a tortoise hung, An alligator stuff’d, and other skins Of ill-shap’d fishes: and about his shelves A beggarly account of empty boxes, Green earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds, Remnants of packthread, and old cakes of roses, Were thinly strew’d to make up a show. Noting this penury, to myself I said—An if a man did need a poison now, Whose sale is present death in Mantua, Here lives a calif’r wretch would sell it him. O! this same thought did but forerun my need, And this same needy man must sell it me. As I remember, this should be the house: Being holiday, the beggar’s shop is shut.— What, ho! apothecary!

Enter Apothecary.

Ap. Who calls so loud?

Rom. Come hither, man,—I see, that thou art poor. Hold, there is forty ducats: let me have A dram of poison; such soon-spreading ger As will dispense itself through all the veins, That the life-weary taker may fall dead; And that the trunk may be di斯harg’d of breath As violently, as nasty powder’d. Doth hurry from the fatal cannon’s womb. Ap. Such mortal drugs I have; but Mantua’s law Is death to any he that utters them. Rom. Art thou so bare, and full of wretchedness? And fear’st to die? famine is in thy cheeks, Need and oppression starveth in thy eyes, Contempt and beggary hang on thy back, The world is not thy friend, nor the world’s law: The world affords no law to make thee rich; Then, be not poor, but break it, and take this. Ap. My poverty, but not my will, consents.

Rom. I pay thy poverty, and not thy will. Ap. Put this in any liquid thing you will, And drink it off: and, if you had the strength Of twenty men, it would despatch you straight.

Rom. There is thy gold; worse poison to men’s souls, Doing more murders in this loathsome world, Than these poor compounds that thou may’st not sell: I sell thee poison, thou hast sold me none. Farewell; buy food, and get thyself in flesh.— Come, cordial, and not poison, go with me To Juliet’s grave, for there must I use thee. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Friar Laurence’s Cell.

Enter Friar John.

Lau. This same should be the voice of friar John.— Welcome from Mantua: what says Romeo? Or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter. John. Going to find a bare-foot brother out, One of our order, to associate me, Here in this city visiting the sick, And finding him, the searchers of the town, Suspecting that we both were in a house Where the infectious pestilence did reign, Seald’ up the doors, and would not let us forth; So that my speed to Mantua there was stay’d. Lau. Who bare my letter, then, to Romeo?
SCENE III.

ROMEO AND JULIET.

John. I could not send it,—here it is again.—[Giving it.] Nor get a messenger to bring it thee, So fearful were they of infection.

Lau. Unhappy fortune! by my brotherhood, The letter was not nice, but full of charge Of dear import; and the neglecting it May do much danger. Friar John, go hence; Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight Unto my cell.

John. Brother, I'll go and bring it. [Exit.

Lau. Now must I to the monument alone. Within this three hours will fair Juliet wake; She will beshrew me much, that Romeo Hath had no notice of these accidents; But I will write again to Mantua, And keep her at my cell till Romeo come: Poor living corse, clos'd in a dead man's tomb! [Exit.

SCENE III.—A Churchyard; in it the Monument of the Capulets.

Enter PARIS, and his Page, bearing Flowers, and a Torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy; hence, and stand Yet put it out, for I would not be seen. [aloud.— Under yond' yew-trees lay thee all along, Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground; So shall no foot upon the churchyard tread. Being loose, uniform with digging up of graves, But thou shalt hear it: whistle then to me, As signal that thou hear'st something approach. Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee; go. [Giving a basket. Page. I am almost afraid to stay alone Here in the churchyard; yet I will adventure. [Retires. Par. Sweet flower, with flowers thy bridal bed I O woe! thy canopy is dust and stones, [strewed. Which with sweet water nightly I will dew, Or wanting that with tears distill'd by morns: The obsequies, that I for thee will keep, Nightly shall be to strew thy grave and weep. [The Boy whistles. The boy gives warning something doth approach. What cursed foot wanders this way to-night, To truss my obsequies, and true love's rite? What! with a torch?—mingle me, night, a while. [Retires.

Enter ROMEO and BALTHASAR, with a Torch, Mattock, &c.

Rom. Give me that mattock, and the wrenching iron. Hold, take this letter: early in the morning See thou deliver it to my lord and father. Give me the light. Upon thy life I charge thee, Whate'er thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof, And do not interrupt me in my course. Why I descend into this bed of death Is partly to behold my lady's face; But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger A precious ring, a ring that I must use In dear employment. Therefore hence, be gone: But if thou, jealous, dost return to pry In what I farther shall intend to do, By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint, And strew this hungry churchyard with thy limbs. The time and my intents are savage, wild: More fierce, and more inexorable far, Than empty tigers, or the roaring sea.

Bal. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble you.

Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship.—Take then that: [Giving his Purse Live, and be prosperous; and farewell, good fellow Bal. For all this same, I'll hide me here about: His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt. [Exit

Rom. Thou dostetabish maw, thou wond of death, Gorg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth, Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open. [Breaking open the Monument

And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more food! Par. This is that banish'd haughty Montague, That murder'd my love's cousin,—with which grief, 'Tis supposed, the fair creature died. And here is come to do some villainous shame To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him:— [Advancing

Stop thy unhallow'd toil, vile Montague! Can vengeance be pursued farther than death? Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee: Obey, and go with me; for thou must die.

Rom. I must, indeed; and therefore came I hither.— Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man:Fly hence and leave me:—think upon these gone; Let them affright thee.—I beseech thee, youth, Put not another sin upon my head, By urging me to fury.—O! be gone.

By heaven, I love thee better than myself, For I come hither arm'd against myself. Stay not, be gone;—live, and hereafter say— A madman's mercy bade thee run away.

Par. I do defy commissation, And apprehend thee for a felon here. Rom. Will thou provoke me? then, have at thee, boy. [They fight. Pag. O Lord! they fight: I will go call the watch. [Exit Page. Par. O! I am slain. [Falls.—If thou be merciful, Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet. [Dies Rom. In faith, I will.—Let me peruse this face Mercutio's kinsman, noble county Paris!— What said my man when my betoss'd soul Did not attend him as we rode? I think He told me, Paris should have married Juliet: Said he not so? or did I dream it so? Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet, To think it was so?—O! give me thy hand; Toking it

One writ with me in sour misfortune's book! I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave,— A grave? O, no! a lantern, slaughter'd youth, For here lies Juliet; and her beauty makes This vault a feasting presence full of light. Death, lie thou there, by a dead man inter'd. [Laying Paris in the Monument. Death, that hath suck'd the honey of thy breath,
L Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty:
Thou art not conquer'd; beauty's ensign yet
Is crimson in thy lips, and in thy cheeks,
And death's pale flag is not advanced there.—
Thy Youth, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet?
O! what more favour can I do to thee,
Than with that hand that e'er thou youth in twain,
To sunder his that was thine enemy?
Forgive me, cousin!—Ah! dear Juliet,
Why art thou yet so fair? I will believe
That unsubstantial death is amorous;
And that the lean abhorred monster keeps
Thee here in dark to be his paramour.
For fear of that I still will stay with thee,
And never from this palace of dim night
Depart again: here, here will I remain
With worms that are thy chamber-muds; O! here
Will I set up my everlasting rest.
And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars
From this world-wearied flesh.—Eyes, look your last
Arms, take your last embrace; and lips, O! you!
The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss
A deathless bargain to ingrossing death.—
Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide!
Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on
The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark.
Here's to my love!—[Drinks.] O, true apothecary!
Thy drugs are quick.—Thus with a kiss I die.

[Dies near JULIET.]

Enter, at the other End of the Churchyard, Friar Laurence, with a Lantern, Crow, and Spade, and BALTHASAR following.

Fri. Saint Francis be my speed! how oft to-night
Have my old feet stumbled at graves?—Who's there?
Bal. Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well.
Fri. Bless be upon you! Tell me, good my friend,
What torch is yon?—That vainly lends his light
To grubs and eyeless skulls? as I discern,
It burneth in the Capulets' monument.
Bal. It doth so, holy sir; and there's my master,
One that you love.
Fri. Who is it?
Bal. Romeo.
Fri. How long hath he been there?
Bal. Full half an hour.
Fri. Go with me to the vault.
Bal. I dare not, sir.
My master knows not, but I am gone hence;
And fearfully did menace me with death,
If I did stay to look on his intents.
Fri. Stay, then, I'll go alone.—Fear comes upon me;
O! much I fear some ill unfirthing thing.
Bal. As I did sleep under this yew-tree here,
I dreamt my master and another fought,
And that my master slew him.
[Exit.]

Fri. Is Romeo!—[Advancing.
Alack! alack! what blood is this, which stains
The stony entrance of this sepulchre?—
What mean these masterless and gory swords
To lie discouer'd by this place of peace!
[Entering the Monument.
Romeo! O, pale!—Who else?—what, Paris too?
And steep'd in blood?—Ah! what an undkind hour
Is guilty of this lamentable chance!—
The lady stirs.

Jul. O, comfortable friar! where is my lord?
I do remember well where I should be,
And there I am.—Where is my Romeo? [Noise within.
Fri. I hear some noise.—Lady, come, from that nest
Of death, contageon, and unnatural sleep.
A greater power than we can contradict
Hath thwarted our intents: come, come away.
Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead;
And Paris too: come, I will dispose of thee
Among a sisterhood of holy nuns.
Stay not to question, for the watch is coming;
Come, go, good Juliet.—[Noise again.] I dare no longer stay.
[Exit.]

Jul. Go, get thee hence, for I will not away.
What's here? a cup, else'd in my true love's hand?
Poison, I see, hath been his endless end.
O churl! drink all, and left no friendly drop,
To help me after?—I will kiss thy lips;
Haply, some poison yet doth hang on them.
To make me die with a restorative.
[Drinks.]

Thy lips are warm!

1 Watch. [Within.] Lead, boy:—which way?
Jul. Yea, noise?—then I'll be brief.—O happy dag gar!

[Snatching ROMEO'S Dogger.
This is thy sheath: [Stabs herself] there rest;

and let me die.

[Dies.]

Enter Watch, with the Page of Paris.

Page. This is the place; there, where the torch doth burn.

1 Watch. The ground is bloody, search about the churchyard.
Go, some of you; whose'er you find, attach. [Exeunt some

Putful sight! here lies the County slain:—
And Juliet bleeding: warm, and newly dead,
Who here hath lain these two days buried.
Go, tell the Prince,—run to the Capulets,

Raise up the Montagues, some others search.

[Exeunt other Watchmen.

We see the ground whercen those woes do lie:
But the true ground of all these piteous woes

We cannot without circumstance descry.

Enter some of the Watch, with BALTHASAR.

2 Watch. Here's Romeo's man; we found him in the churchyard.

1 Watch. Hold him in safety, till the Prince come hither.

Enter another Watchman, with Friar Laurence.

3 Watch. Here's a friar, that trembles, sighs, and weeps;
We took this mattock and this spade from him,
As he was coming from this churchyard side.

1 Watch. A great suspicion: stay the friar too.

Enter the Prince and Attendants.

Prince. What misadventure is so early up,
That calls our person from our morning rest?

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, and others.

Cap. What should it be, that they so shriek abroad.

La. Cap. O! the people in the street cry Romeo,
Some Juliet, and some Paris; and all run

With open outcry toward our monument.

Prince. What fear is this which startles in your ears?

SCENE III.

1 Watch. Sovereign, here lies the county Paris slain; And Romeo dead; and Juliet, dead before,

Warm and new kill'd.

Prince. Search, seek and know how this foul murder comes,

1 Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd Romeo's man,

With instruments upon them, fit to open

These dead men's tombs.

Cop. 0, heaven! — O, wife! look how our daughter bleeds!

This dagger hath miss'neer, for, lo! his house is empty on the back of Montague, And is mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom.

La. Cop. O me! this sight of death is as a bell, That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter MONTAGUE and others.

Prince. Come, Montague; for thou art early up,

To see thy son and heir more early down.

Mon. Alas, my liege, my wife is dead to-night;

Grief of my son's exile has stop'd her breath.

What farther woe conspires against mine age?

Prince. Look, and thou shalt see.

Mon. O thou untainted! what manners is in this.

To press before thy father to a grave?

Prince. Seal up the mouth of outcry for a while,

Till we can clear these ambiguities,

And know their spring, their head, their true descent;

And then will I be general of your woes,

And lead you even to death. Mean time forbear,

And let mischance be slave to patience.

Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Fri. I am the greatest, able to do least,

Yet most suspected, as the time and place

Do make against me, of this direful murder;

And here I stand, both to impeach and purge

Myself condemned, and myself excus'd.

Prince. Then, say at once what thou dost know in this.

Fri. I will be brief, for my short date of breath

Is not so long as is a tedious tale.

Romeo, there dead, was husband to that Juliet;

And she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful wife:

I married them; and their stolen marriage-day

Was Tybalt's dooms-day, whose untimely death

Banish'd the new-made bridegroom from this city;

For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet pin'd:

You, to remove that siege of grief from her,

Betroth'd, and would have married her perforce,

To county Paris: then, comes she to me,

And, with wild looks, bid me devise some means

To rid her from this second marriage,

Or in my cell there would she kill herself.

Then gave I her, (so tutor'd by my art)

A sleeping potion; which so took effect

As I intended, for it wrought on her

The form of death. Meantime, I writ to Romeo,

That he should hither come, as this dire night,

To help to take her from her borrow'd grave,

Being the time the potion's force should cease:

But he which bore my letter, friar John,

Was stay'd by accident, and yesternight

Return'd his letter back. Then, all alone,

At the prefixed hour of her waking,

Came I to take her from her kindred's vault,

Meaning to keep her closely at my cell,

Till I conveniently could send to Romeo:

But, when I came, (some minute ere the time)

Of her awakening) here untimely lay

The noble Paris, and true Romeo, dead.

She wak'd; and I entreated her come forth,

And bear this work of heaven with patience:

But then a noise did scare me from the tomb,

And she, too desperate, would not go with me,

But, (as it seems) did violence on herself.

All this I know, and to the marriage

Her nurse is privy; and, if aught in this

Miscarried by my fault, let my old life

Be sacrificed some hour before the time,

Unto the rigour of severest law.

Prince. We still have known thee for a holy man —

Where's Romeo's man? what can he say in this?

Bal. I brought my master news of Juliet's death,

And then in post he came from Mantua.

To this same place, to this same monument.

This letter he early bid me give his father;

And threaten'd me with death, going in the vault,

If I departed not, and left him there.

Prince. Give me the letter, I will look on it —

Where is the county's page, that rais'd the watch?

Sire, what made your master in this place?

Page. He came with flowers to wear his lady's grave:

And bid me stand aloof, and so I did.

Anon, comes one with light to open the tomb,

And, by and by, my master drew on him;

And then I ran away to call the watch.

Prince. This letter doth make good the friar's words,

Their course of love, the tidings of her death:

And here he writes, that he did buy a poison

Of a poor potter; and therewithal

Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet —

Where be these enemies? Capulet! Montague!

See, what a scourge is laid upon your hate,

That heaven finds means to kill your joys with love;

And I, for winking at your discords too,

Have lost a brace of kinsmen:—all are punish'd.

Cap. O, brother Montague! give me thy hand:

This is my daughter's jointure; for no more

[They shake hands.

Can I demand.

Mon. But I can give thee more;

For I will raise her statue in pure gold,

That, while Verona by that name is known,

There shall no figure at such rate be set,

As that of fair and faithful Juliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his lady lie;

Poor sacrifices of our enmity.

Prince. A glooming peace this morning with it brings,

The sun for sorrow will not show his head.

Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things;

Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished:

For never was a story of more woe,

Than this of Juliet and her Romeo.

[Exeunt.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and others, at several Doors.

Poet. Good day, sir.

Pain. I am glad you’re well.

Poet. I have not seen you long. How goes the world?

Pain. It wears, sir, as it grows.

Poet. Ay, that’s well known; but what particular rarity? what strange, Which manifold record not matches? See, Magic of bounty! All these spirits thy power Hath conjur’d to attend. I know the merchant.

Pain. I know them both: th’ other’s a jeweller.

Mer. O! ’tis a worthy lord.

Jew. Nay, that’s most fix’d.

Mer. A most incomparable man; breath’d, as it were, To an uniritable and continuant goodness:

He passes.²

Jew. I have a jewel here— [Showing it.³

Mer. O! pray, let’s see ’t. For the lord Timon, sir?

Jew. If he will touch the estimate; but, for that—

Poet. When we for recompense have prais’d the vile, It stains the glory in that happy verse Which aptly sings the good.⁴

Mer. ’Tis a good form.

Jew. And rich: here is a water, look ye.

Pain. You are rapt, sir; in some work, some dedication.

To the great lord.

Poet. A thing slipp’d idly from me.

Our poets are as gum, which issues.² From whence ’tis nourish’d: the fire if the flint Shows not, till it be struck; our gentle flame

Provokes itself, and, like the current, flies Each bound it chafes. What have you there?

Pain. A picture, sir.—When comes your book forth?

Poet. Upon the heels of my presentment, sir.

Let’s see your piece.

Pain. ’Tis a good piece. [Showing it.⁴

Poet. So ’tis: this comes off well, and excellent.

Pain. Indifferent.

Poet. Admirable! How this grace Speaks his own standing; what a mental power This eye shoots forth: how big imagination Moves in this lip; to the dumbness of the gesture One might interpret.

Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life, Here is a touch; is’t good?

Poet. I’ll say of it,

It tutors nature: artificial strife Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain Senators, who pass over the Stage.

Pain. How this lord is follow’d!

Poet. The senators of Athens:—happy men!

Pain. Look, more!

Poet. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.

I have in this rough work shap’d out a man,

Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug With ampest entertainment: my free drift Halts not particularly, but moves itself In a wide sea of verse: ’tis no level’d malice Infects one comma in the course I hold,

But flies an eagle flight, bold, and forth on,

Leaving no tract behind.

Pain. How shall I understand you?

Poet. I will unbolt to you.

You see how all conditions, how all minds,

(As well of glib and slippery creatures, as

Inured by practice. ² Excels. ³ Not in f. e. ⁴ gown: in folio. Pope made the change. ⁵ oozes: in f. e. ⁶ Not in f. e. ⁷ wax: in f. e. ⁸

Their services to lord Timon: his large fortune,
Upon his good and gracious nature hanging;
Dissuas, and properties to his love and tendance,
All sorts of hearts: yes, from the glass'ed flatterer
To Apemantus, that few things does better
Than to abhor himself: even he drops down
The knee before him, and returns in peace
Most rich in Timon's nod.

Pain. I saw them speak together.

Poet. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill
Feign'd Fortune to be thron'd: the base o' the mount
Is rank'd with all deserts, all kind of natures,
That labour on the bosom of this sphere
To propagate their states: amongst them all,
Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix'd,
One do I personate of lord Timon's frame;
Whom Fortune with her ivory hand wafts to her,
Whose present grace to present slaves and servants
Translates his rivals.

Pain. 'T is conceiv'd to scope.
This throne, this Fortune, and this hill, methinks,
With one man beckon'd from the rest below,
Bowing his head against the steepy mount,
To clumb his happiness, would be well express'd in our condition.

Poet. Nay, sir, but hear me on.
All those which were his fellows but of late,
(Some better than his value) on the moment
Follow his strides: his lobbies fill with tendance,
Rain sacrificial whisperings in his ear,
Make sacred even his stirrup, and through him
Drink the free air.

Pain. Ay, marry, what of these?

Poet. When Fortune, in her shift and change of mood,
Spurns down her late belov'd, all his dependants,
Which labour'd after him to the mountain's top,
Even on their knees and hands, let him slip'd down,
Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Pain. 'T is common:
A thousand moral paintings I can show,
That shall demonstrate these quick blows of Fortune's
More pregnantly than words. Yet you do well,
To show lord Timon that; mean eyes have seen
The foot above the head.

Trumpets sound. Enter Timon, attended; the Servant of VENTIDIUS talking with him.

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you?

Vен. Serv. Ay, my good lord: five talents is his debt;
His means most short, his creditors most strait;
Your honourable letter he desires
To those have shut him up; which failing,
Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Ventidius! Well;
I am not of that feather, to shake off
My friend when he most needs me. I do know him
A gentleman that well deserves a help,
Which he shall have. I'll pay the debt, and free him.

Vен. Serv. Your lordship ever bounds him.

Tim. Commend me to him: I will send his ransom;
And, being enfranchis'd, bid him come to me.—
'T is not enough to help the feeble up,
But to support him after.—Fare you well.

Vен. Serv. All happiness to your honour! [Exit

Old Ath. Lord Timon, hear me speak.

Tim. Freely, good father.

Old Ath. Thou hast a servant nam'd Lucilius.

Tim. I have so: what of him?

Luc. Here, at your lordship's service. [creature

Old Ath. This fellow here, lord Timon, this thy

Old Ath. One only daughter have I; no kin else,
On whom I may confer what I have got:
The maid is fair, o' the youngest for a bride,
And I have bred her at my dearest cost
In qualities of the best. This man of thine
Attempts her love: I pr'ythee, noble lord,
Join with me to forbid him her resort;
Myself have spoke in vain.

Tim. The man is honest.

Old Ath. Therefore he will be, Timon:
His honesty rewards him in itself;
it must not bear my daughter.

Tim. Does she love him?

Old Ath. She is young, and apt;
Our own precedent passions do instruct us
What levity's in youth.

Tim. [To Lucilius.] Love you the maid?

Luc. Ay, my good lord; and she accepts of it.

Old Ath. If in her marriage my consent be missing,
I call the gods to witness, I will choose
Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world,
And dispossess her all.

Tim. How shall she be endow'd,
If she be mated with an equal husband?

Old Ath. Three talents on the present; in future all
Tim. This gentleman of mine hath serv'd me long:
To build his fortune I will strain a little,
For 't is a bond in men. Give him thy daughter;
What you bestow, in him I'll counterpoise,
And make him weigh with her.

Old Ath. Most noble lord,
Fawn me to this your honour, she is his.

Poet. Your labour, and long life your lordship.

Tim. I th. you; you shall hear from me anon.

Go not away.—What have you there, my friend?

Pain. A piece of painting, which I do beseech
Your lordship to accept.

Tim. Painting is welcome.
The painting is almost the natural man;
For since dishonour traffics with man's nature,
He is but outside: these penurious figures are Even such as they give out. I like your work,
And you shall find, I like it: wait attendance
Till you hear farther from me.

Pain. The gods preserve you.

Tim. Well fare you, gentleman: give me your hand:
We must needs dine together.—Sir, your jewel,
Hath suffered under praise.

Jew. What, my lord, dispraise?

Tim. A mere satiety of commendations.
If I should pay for it as 'tis extoll'd,
it would unclaw me quite.

Jew. My lord, 'tis rated
As those which sell would give: but you well know
TIMON OF ATHENS.

ACT I.

TIMON. Things of like value, differing in the owners, Are prized by their masters. Believe 't, dear lord, You mend the jewel by the wearing it.

TIMON. Well mock'd, then, shall that Flavius.

MERCHANT. No, my good lord; he speaks the common

Which all men speak with him.

TIMON. Look, who comes here. Will you be chid?

Enter APEMANTUS.

Jew. We'll hear, with your lordship.

MERCHANT. He'll spare none.

TIMON. Good Morrow to thee, gentle Apeamantus.

APEMANTUS. Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy good morrow;

When thou art Timon's dog, and these knives honest.

TIMON. Why dost thou call them knives? thou know'st not.

APEMANTUS. Are they not Athenians?

TIMON. Yes.

APEMANTUS. Then I repent not.

Jew. You know me, Apeamantus.

APEMANTUS. Thou know'st, I do; I call'd thee by thy name.

TIMON. Thou art proud, Apeamantus.

APEMANTUS. Of nothing so much, as that I am not like Timon. Whither art going?

APEMANTUS. To knock out an honest Athenian's brains.

TIMON. That's a deed thou'lt die for.

APEMANTUS. Right, if doing nothing be death by the law.

TIMON. How likest thou this picture, Apeamantus?

APEMANTUS. The best, for the innocence.

TIMON. Wrought he not well that painted it?

APEMANTUS. He wrought better that made the painter;

And yet he's but a filthy piece of work.

PAIN. 'V' are a dog.

APEMANTUS. Thy mother's of my generation: what's she,

If I be a dog?

TIMON. Wilt dine with me, Apeamantus?

APEMANTUS. No; I eat not lords.

TIMON. An thou should'st, thou'dst anger ladies.

APEMANTUS. O! they eat lords; so they come by great betimes.

TIMON. That's a lascivious apprehension.

APEMANTUS. So thou apprehend'st it. Take it for thy labour.

TIMON. How dost thou like this jewel, Apeamantus?

APEMANTUS. Not so well as plain-dealing, which will not cast a man a dot.

TIMON. What dost thou think 'tis worth?

APEMANTUS. Not worth my thinking. — How now, poet?

POET. Now, now, philosopher!

APEMANTUS. Thouliest.

POET. Art not one?

APEMANTUS. Yes.

POET. Then, I lie not.

APEMANTUS. Art not a poet?

POET. Yes.

APEMANTUS. Then, thou liest: look in thy last work, where thou hast feign'd him a worthy fellow.

POET. That's not feign'd; he is so.

APEMANTUS. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour: he that loves to be flattered is worthy of the flatterer. Heavens, that I were a lord!

TIMON. What wouldst do then, Apeamantus?

APEMANTUS. Even as Apeamantus does now, hate a lord with my heart.

TIMON. What, thyself?

APEMANTUS. Ay.

TIMON. Wherefore?

APEMANTUS. That I had so hung a wish to be a lord —

Art not thou a merchant?

MER. Ay, Apeamantus.

APEMANTUS. Traffic confound thee, if the gods do not!

MER. If traffic do it, the gods do it.

APEMANTUS. Traffic's thy god; and thy god confound thee

Trumpets sound. Enter a Servant.

Timon. What trumpet's that?

SERV. It is Alcibiades, and some twenty horse, all of companionship.

Timon. Pray, entertain them; give them guide to us.

[Exeunt some Attendants.

You must needs dine with me. — Go not you hence,

Till I have thank'd you; and when dinner's done

Show me this piece. — I am joyful of your sights.

[Exeunt Alcibiades, with his Company.

Most welcome, sir!

APEMANTUS. So, so, there —

Aches contract and starve your supple joints! —

knaves,

And all this courtesy. The strain of man's bred out

Into baboon and monkey.

ALCIB. Sir, you have sav'd my longing, and I feed

Most hungerly on your sight.

TIMON. Right welcome, sir: Ere we depart, we 'll share a bounteous time

In different pleasures. Pray you, let us in.

[Exeunt all but APEMANTUS.

Enter two Lords.

1 Lord. What time o' day is 't, Apeamantus?

APEMANTUS. Time to be honest.

1 Lord. That time serves still.

APEMANTUS. The more accursed thou, that still omit'st it.

2 Lord. Thou art going to lord Timon's feast.

APEMANTUS. Ay; to see meat fill knives, and wine heat fools.

2 Lord. Fare thee well; fare thee well.

APEMANTUS. Thou art a fool to bid me farewell twice.

2 Lord. Why, Apeamantus?

APEMANTUS. Shouldst have kept one to thyself, for I mean to give thee none.

1 Lord. Hang thyself.

APEMANTUS. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding: make thy requests to thy friend.

2 Lord. Away, unappeasable dog, or I'll spur thee hence.

APEMANTUS. I will fly, like a dog, the heels of the one. [Exit.]

1 Lord. He's opposite to humanity. Come, shall we in?

And taste lord Timon's bounty? he outgoes

The very heart of kindness.

2 Lord. He pours it out; Pluto, the god of gold,

Is but his steward: no meed but he repays

Sevenfold above itself: no gift to him,

But breeds the giver a return exceeding

All use of quittance.

1 Lord. The noblest mind he carries,

That ever govern'd man.

2 Lord. Long may he live in fortunes! Shall we in?

1 Lord. I'll keep you company. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. — The Same. A Room of State in Timon's House.

Hautboys playing loud Music. A great banquet served in; Flavius and others attendants: then, enter Timon, Alcibiades, Lucius, Lucullus, Sempronius, and other Athenian Senators, with Ventidius, whom Timon redeemed from prison, and Attendants: then comes, dropping after all, Apeamantus, discontentedly like himself.

VEN. Most honour'd Timon, it hath pleas'd the gods to remember

1 That I had no angry wit: in the 2 Merit.
SCENE II.

TIMON OF ATHENS.

My father's age, and call him to long peace.
He is gone happy, and hath left me rich:
Then, as in grateful virtue I am bound
To your free heart, I do return those talents,
Doubled with thanks and service, from whose help
I deriv'd liberty.

Tim. O! by no means,
Honest Ventidius: you mistake my love.
I gave it freely ever; and there's none
Can truly say, he gives, if he receives.
If our betters play at that game, we must not dare
To imitate them: faults that are rich are fair.
Ven. A noble spirit!

Tim. Nay, my lords,
Ceremony was but devisor'd at first,
To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes,
Reckoning goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown;
But where there is true friendship, there needs none.
Pray, sit: more welcome are ye to my fortunes,
Than my fortunes to me.

[They sit.

1 Lord. My lord, we always have confessed it.

Apem. Ho! ho! confess'd it! hang'd it, have you not?

Tim. O, Apeamanus!—you are welcome.

Apem. You shall not make me welcome:
I come to have thee thrust me out of doors.

Tim. Fie! thou'rt a churl: you have got a humour
Does not become a man: 'tis much to blame.—
They say, my lords, Ļora furor brevis est,
But yond' man is ever angry.

Go, let him have a table by himself;
For he does neither affect company,
Nor is he fit for't, indeed.

Apem. Let me stay at thine apert[ure], Timon:
I come to observe: I give thee warning on't.

Tim. I take no heed of thee; thou art an Athenian,
Therefore, welcome. I myself would have no power;
pray thee, let my meat make thee silent.

Apem. I scorn thy meat: 't would choke me, for I should not be flatter thee.—O you gods! what a number of men eat Timon, and he sees them not! It grieves me, to see so many dip their meat in one man's blood;
and all the madness is, he cheers them up too.

I wonder, men dare trust themselves with men:
Methinks, they should invite them without knives.

Good for their meat, and safer for their lives.
There's much example for't; the fellow, that sits next him now, par's bread with him, and pells the breath of him in a divided draught, is the readiest man to kill him: it has been proved. If I were a huge man, I should fear to drink at meals,

Lost they should spy my windpipe's dangerous notes:

Great men should drink with harness on their throats.

Tim. My lord, in heart; and let the health go round.

2 Lord. Let it how this way, my good lord.

Apem. Flow this way? A brave fellow!—he keeps his tides well. Those healths will make thee and thy state look ill, Timon.

Here's that, which is too weak to be a fire,

Honest water, which ne'er left man if the mine:
This and my food are equals, there's no odds;
Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the gods.

Apeamanus' Grace.

Immortal gods, I crave no pelf;
I pray for no man, but myself.

Grant I may never prove so fond,
To trust man on his oath or bond:
Or a harlot for her weeping;
Or a dog that seems a sleeping;

Or a keeper with my freedom;
Or my friends, if I should need 'em.

Amen. So fall to 't:
Rich men sin, and I eat root.

[Eds and drinks

Much good do'thy good heart, Apeamanus!

Tim. Captain Alebiades, your heart's in the field now.

Alcib. My heart is ever at your service, my lord.

Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of enemies than a dinner of friends.

Alcib. So they were bleeding now, my lord, there's no meat like 'em: I could wish my best friend at such a feast.

Apem. 'Would all those flatterers were thine enemies
then, that then thou might'st kill 'em, and bid me to 'em
I Lord. Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeal, we should think our selves for ever perfect.

Tim. O! no doubt, my good friends: but the gods themselves have provided that I should have much help from you: how had you been my friends else? why have you that charitable title from thousands, did you not chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to myself, than you can with modesty speak in your own behalf; and thus far I confirm you. O, you gods! think I, what need we have any friends, if we should ne'er have need of 'em? they were the most needless creatures living, should we ne'er have use for 'em; and would most resemble sweet instruments hung up in cases, that keep their sounds to themselves.

Why, I have often wished myself poorer, that I might come nearer to you. We are born to do benefits; and what better or proper can we call our own, than the riches of our friends? O! what a precious comfort it is, to have so many, like brothers, commanding one another's fortunes. O joy, e'en made away ere 't can be born! Mine eyes cannot hold out water, methinks:

to forget their faults, I drink to you.

Apem. Thou weep'st to make them drink, Timon.

2 Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eyes.

And at that instant, like a babe, sprung up.

Apem. Ho, ho! I laugh to think that babe a bastard.

3 Lord. I promise you, my lord, you mov'd me much.

Apem. Much! [Tocket sound'd.

Tim. What means that trumpet?—How now!

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies! What are their wills?

Serv. There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, which bears that office to signify their pleasures.

Tim. I pray, let them be admitted.

Enter Cupid.

Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon: and to all
That of his bounties taste!—The five best senses
Acknowledge thee their patron; and come freely
To gratulate thy plenteous bosom. The ear,
Taste, touch, smell, please'ry from thy table rise;
They only now come but to feast thine eyes.

Tim. They're welcome all. Let them have kind admittance:

Music. Make their welcome.

[Exit Cupid

1 Lord. You see, my lord, how amply y' are belov'd.

Music. Re-enter Cupid, with a mask of Ladies as Amazon, with Lutes in their Hands, dancing, and playing.
Timon. Hey day! what a sweep of vanity comes this way!

They dance: they are mad women. Like madness is the glory of this life, As this pomp shows to a little oil, and root. We make ourselves fools, to dispast ourselves; And spend our flatters, to drink those men, Upon whose age we void it up again, With poisonous spite, and envy. Who lives, that's not depraved, or depraves? Who dies, that bears not one spurn to their graves Of their friends' gift? I should fear, those, that dance before me now, Would one day stamp upon me: 'tis has been done. Men shut their doors against the setting sun.

The Lords rise from Table, with much adoring of Timon; and, to show their loves, each singles out an Amazon, and all dance, Men with Women, a lofty Strain or two to the Hautboys, and cease. Tim. You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies. Set a fair fashion on our entertainment, Which was not half so beautiful and kind: You have added worth unto 't, and lustre, And entertain'd me with mine own device; I am to thank you for it. 1 Lady. My lord, you take us ever at the best. Apen. Faith, for the worst is filthy; and would not hold taking, I doubt me. Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet Attends you: please you to dispose yourselves. All Lord. Most thankfully, my lord. 1 Lord. Where be our men? Serv. Here, my lord, in readiness. 2 Lord. Our horses! Tim. O, my friends! I have one word to say to you. Look you, my good lord, I must entreat you, honour me so much, As to advance this jewel; accept it and wear it, Kind my lord. 1 Lord. I am so far already in your gifts. All. So are we all. Enter a Servant. Serv. My lord, there are certain nobles of the senate newly alighted, and come to visit you. Tim. They are fairly welcome. Flav. I beseech your honour, Vouchsafe me a word: it does concern you near. Tim. Near? why then another time I'll hear thee: I pr'ythee, let's be provided to show them entertainment. Flav. I scarce know how. Enter another Servant. 2 Serv. May it please your honour, lord Lucius, Out of his free love, hath presented to you Four milk-white horses, trapp'd in silver. Tim. I shall accept them fairly: let the presents Enter a third Servant. Be worthily entertain'd.—How now! what news?

Apen. Please you, my lord, that honourable gentleman, lord Lucius, entreats your company to-morrow to hunt with him; and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds. Tim. I'll hunt with him; and let them be receiv'd Not without fair reward. Flav. [Aside.] What will this come to? He commands us to provide, and give great gifts, And all out of an empty coffer: Nor will he know his purse; or yield me this, To show him what a beggar his heart is, Being of no power to make his wishes good. His promises fly so beyond his state, That what he speaks is all in debt: he owes For every word: he is so kind, that he now pays interest for 't; his land 's put to their books. Well, would I were gently put out of office, Before I were for'd out! Happier is he that has no friend to feed Than such as do even enemies exceed. I bleed before my lord. Tim. You do yourselves Much wrong: you bate too much of your own merits. Here, my lord, a trifle of our love. 2 Lord. With more than common thanks I will receive it. 3 Lord. O! he's the very soul of bounty. Tim. And now I remember, my lord, you gave Good words the ether day of a bay courser I rode on: it is yours, because you lik'd it. 2 Lord. O! I beseech you, pardon me! my lord, in that. Tim. You may take my word, my lord: I know no man Can justly praise, but what he does affect: I weigh my friend's affection with mine own; I'll tell you true. I 'll call to you. All Lords. O! none so welcome Tim. I take all, and your several visitsations. So kind to heart, 'tis not enough to give: Methinks, I could deal kingdoms to my friends, And 'er be weary.—Alcibiades, Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich: It comes in charity to thee: for all thy living is amongst the dead, and all the lands thou hast Lio in a pitch'd field. Aleib. Ay, de'il'd land, my lord. 1 Lord. We are so virtuously bound,— And so Am I to you. 2 Lord. So infinitely endear'd,— Tim. All to you.—Lights! more lights! 1 Lord. The best of happiness, Honour, and fortunes, keep with you, lord Timon. Tim. Ready for his friends. [Exit Alcibiades, Lords, &c. Apen. What a coil's here Serving of beers, and putting out of buns! I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of dregs. Methinks, false hearts should never have sound legs. Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on court'sies. Tim. Now, Apenantus, if thou wert not sullen, I 'd be good to thee. Apen. No, I'll nothing: for if I should be hrib'd too, there would be none left to rail upon thee, and then thou wouldst sin the faster. Thou giv'est so long. Timon, I fear me, thou wilt give away thyself in paper shortly: what need these feasts, poms, and vain glories?
Nay, an you begin to rail on society once, I am sworn not to give regard to you. Farewell; and come with better music.

—Thou shalt not then; I'll look thy heaven from thee.

O, that men's ears should be to counsel deaf, but not to flattery!

[Exit.

[Scene II. — The Same. A Hall in Timon's House.

Enter Flavius, with many Bills in his Hand.

Flavius. No care, no stop; so senseless of expense, That he will neither know how to maintain it, Nor cease his flow of riot; takes no account How things go from him; no reserve; no care; What is to continue. Never mind Was surely so unwise, to be so kind. What shall be done? He will not hear, till I must be round with him, now he comes from hunting. Fie. fie. fie. fie!

Enter Caphis, and the Servants of Isidore and Varro.

Caphis. Good even, Varro. What! You come for money?

Var. Serv. Is't not your business too?

Caph. It is. — And yours too, Isidore?

Isid. Serv. It is so.

Caph. Would we were all discharge'd!

Var. Serv. I fear it.

Caph. Here comes the lord.

Enter Timon, Alcibiades, and Lords, &c., as from hunting.

Tim. So soon as dinner's done, we'll forth again.

My Alcibiades.—With me! what is your will?

Caph. My lord, here is a note of certain dues.

Tim. Dues! Whence are you?

Caph. Of Athens here, my lord.

Tim. Go to my steward.

Caph. Please it your lordship, he hath put me off.

To the succession of new days this month:

My master is awak'd great occasion To call upon his own, and humbly prays you, That with your other noble parts you'll suit, In giving him his right.

Tim. Mine honest friend,

I pr'ythee, but repair to me next morning.

Caph. Nay, my good lord.

Tim. Contain thyself, good friend

Var. Serv. One Varro's servant, good my lord.

Isid. Serv. From Isidore.

He humbly prays your speedy payment.—

Caph. If you did know, my lord, my master's wants,

Var. Serv. 'Twas due on forfeit, my lord, six weeks, And past. —

Isid. Serv. Your steward puts me off, my lord; And I am sent expressly to your lordship.

Tim. Give me breath. —

I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on;

To Alcibiades and Lords.

I'll wait upon you instantly. — Come hither; pray you, To Flavius.

How goes the world, that I am thus encountered With clamorous demands of debt, broken bonds, And the detention of long-ripe due debts, Against my honour?

Flavius. Please you, gentlemen, The time is disagreeable to this business: Your importunity cease till after dinner, That I may make his lordship understand Wherefore you are not paid.

Tim. Do so, my friends, See them well entertained

Flavius. Pray, draw near.

[Exit Timon. Flavius. Enter Apeamantus and a Fool.

Caph. Stay, stay: here comes the fool with Apemantus; let's have some sport with 'em.

Var. Serv. Hang him, he'll abuse us.

Isid. Serv. A plague upon him, dog!

Var. Serv. How dost, fool?

Apem. Dost dialogue with thy shadow?

—Come; in f. e. Theobald made the change. * nor remains no care, f. e. in f. e. $ Was to be so unwise: it; in f. e. % Plume The rest of this stage direction, is not in f. e. * Malone changes to "date-broken."
TIMON OF ATHENS.

ACT II.

Var. Serv. I speak not to thee.

Apen. No; 'tis to thyself.—Come away. [To the Fool.

Isid. Serv. [To Var. Serv.] There's the fool hangs on your back already.

Apen. No, thou stand'st single; thou'rt not on him yet.

Cap. Where's the fool now?

Apen. He last asked the question.—Poor rogues, and usurers' men; bawds between gold and want.

All Serv. What are we, Apemantus?

Apen. Asses.

All Serv. Why?

Apen. That you ask me what you are, and do not know yourselves.—Speak to 'em, fool.

Fool. How do you, gentlemen?

All Serv. Gramercies, good fool. How does your mistress?

Fool. She's 'len setting on water to seed such chickens as you are. Would, we could see you at Corinth!

Apen. Good: gramercy.

Enter Page.

Page. [To the Fool.] Why, now how, captain! what do you in this wise company?—How dost thou, Apemantus?

Apen. Would I had a rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably.

Page. Pr'ythee, Apemantus, read me the superscription of these letters: I know not which is which.

Apen. Canst not read?

Page. No.

Apen. There will little learning die, then, that day thou art hanged. This is to lord Timon; this to Alebiades. Go: thou wast born a bastard, and thou'rt die a bawd.

Page. Thou wast welphed a dog; and thou shalt famish, a dog's death. Answer not; I am gone. [Exit Page.

Apen. Even so thou out-run'st grace. Fool, I will go with you to lord Timon's.

Fool. Will you leave me there?

Apen. If Timon stay at home.—You three serve three usurers?

All Serv. I would they served us.

Apen. So would I,—as good a trick as ever hungman served thief.

Fool. Are you three usurers' men?

All Serv. Ay, fool.

Fool. I think, no usurer but has a fool to his servant: my mistress is one, and I am her fool. When men come to borrow of your masters, they approach sadly, and go away merrily; but they enter my mistress' house merrily, and go away sadly. The reason of this?

Var. Serv. I could render one.

Apen. Do it, then, that we may account thee a whoremaster, and a knave: which notwithstanding, thou shalt be no less esteemed.

Var. Serv. What is a whoremaster. fool?

Fool. A fool in good clothes; and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit: sometime, it appears like a lord; sometime like a lawyer; sometime like a philosopher, with two stoues more than his artificial one. He is very often like a knight; and generally in all shapes, that man goes up and down in from fourscore to thirteen, this spirit walks in.

Var. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool.

Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man: as much too-logy as I have, so much wit thou lackest.

Apen. That answer might have become Apemantus.

All Serv. Aside, aside! here comes lord Timon.

Re-enter Timon and Flavius.

Apen. Come, with me, fool: come.

Fool. I do not always follow lover, elder brother, and woman; sometime, the philosopher.

[Exeunt Apemantus, and Fool after him.

Flav. Pray you, walk near: I'll speak with you anon.

[Exeunt Serv.

Tim. You make me marvel. Wherefore, ere this time, Had you not fully laid my state before me, That I might so have rated my expense As I had leave of means?

Flav. You would not hear me:

At many leases I propos'd.

Tim. Go to:

Perchance, some single vantage you took, When my indisposition put you back; And that unaptness made you then, Thus to excuse yourself.

Flav. 'O, my good lord!

At many times I brought in my accounts. Laid them before you: you would throw them off; And say, you found them in mine honesty. When for some trifling present you had bid me return so much, I have shook my head, and wept; Yea, 'gainst the authority of manners, pray'd you To hold your hand more close: I did endure Not seldom, nor no slight checks, when I have Prompted you, in the ebb of your estate, And your great flow of debts. My loved lord, Though you hear now, yet now is a time too late, The greatest of your having lacks a half To pay your present debts.

Tim. Let all my land be sold.

Flav. 'Tis all engag'd, some forfeited and gone; And what remains will hardly stop the mouth Of present dues. The future comes apace; What shall defend the interim? and at length

How goes our reckoning?

Tim. To Lacedaemon did my land extend.

Flav. O, my good lord! the world is but a word; Were it all yours to give it in a breath, How quickly were it gone?

Tim. You tell me true.

Flav. If you suspect my husbandry, or falsehod, Call me before th' exactest auditors, And set me on the proof. So the gods bless me, When all our offices have been oppress'd With riotous feeders: when our vaults have wept With drunken spilth of wine; when every room Hath blazed with lights, and bray'd with minstrelsy, I have retir'd me to a wasteful nook; And set mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Pr'ythee, no more.

Flav. Heavens, have I said, the bounty of this lord? How many prodigal bits have slaves, and peasants, This night enl ought! Who is not Timon's? What heart, head, sword, force, means, but is lord Timon's? Great Timon's, noble, worthy, royal Timon's? Ah! when the means are gone that buy this praise, The breath is gone whereof this praise is made: Feast-woon, fast-lost; one cloud of winter shower, These flies are couched.

Tim. Come, sermon me no farther. No villainous bounty yet hath pass'd my heart; Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given;

Why dost thou weep? Canst thou the conscience lack.
To think I shall lack friends? Secure thy heart, if I would break the vessels of my love, and try the argument of hearts by borrowing, men, and men's fortunes, could I frankly use, as I can bid thee speak.

Flav. Assurance bless your thoughts!

Tim. And, in some sort, these wants of mine are crown'd, that I account them blessings; for by these shall I try friends. You shall perceive how you mistake my fortunes: I am wealthy in my friends. Within there!—Flaminius! Servilius! Enter Flaminius, Servilius, and other servants.

Serv. My lord, my lord,—

Tim. I will despatch you severally. —You, to lord Lucius;—to lord Lucullus you; I hunted with his honour to-day;—you, to Sempronius. Commend me to their loves; and, I am proud, say, that my occasions have found time to use them toward a supply of money: let the request be fifty talents.

Flam. As you have said, my lord:

Flav. Lord Lucius, and Lucullus, humph! —

Tim. Go you, sir, to another serv. to the senators, (Of whom, even to the state's best health, I have deserved this hearing) bid 'em send o' the instant a thousand talents to me.

Flav. I have been bold, (For that I knew it the most general way) to them to use your signet, and your name; but they do shake their heads, and I am here no richer in return.

Tim. Is't true? can't be?

Flav. They answer, in a joint and corporate voice, that now they are at full, want treasure, cannot do what they would; are sorry—you are honourable;—but yet they could have wish'd—they know not—something hath been amiss—a noble nature may catch a wrench—would all were well—it is pity—and so, intending other serious matters, after distasteful looks, and these hard fractions, with certain half-caps, and cold-moving nods, they froze me into silence.

Tim. You gods, reward them—

Pr'ythee, man, look cheery; these old fellows have their ingratitude in them hereditary:

Their blood is cold, it is cold, it seldom flows;

'Tis lack of kindly warmth they are not kind, and nature, as it grows again toward earth, is fashion'd for the journey, dull, and heavy.

Go to Ventidius,—[To a serv.]

Pr'ythee, [To Flam.], be not sad;

Thou art true, and honest: ingeniously I speak. No blame belongs to thee.—[To serv.] Ventidius lately barried his father; by whose death, he's stepp'd into a great estate: when he was poor, imprisoned; and in scarcity of friends, I clear'd him with five talents: grant him from me; but him suppose some good necessity. Touches his friend, which craves to be remember'd with these five talents:—that had, [To Flam.] give it these fellows to whom 'tis instant due. Ne'er speak, or think, that Timon's fortunes 'mong his friends can sink.

Flav. I would, I could not think it; that thought is bounty's foe:

Being free itself, it thinks all others so.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Same. A Room in Lucullus's House.

Flaminius waiting. Enter a Servant to him.

Serv. I have told my lord of you; he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you, sir.

Enter Lucullus.

Serv. Here's my lord.

Lucullus. [Aside.] One of lord Timon's men? a gift, I warrant. Why, this hits right; I dreamt of a silver basin and ewer to-night. —Flaminius, honest Flaminius, you are very respectably welcome, sir.—Fill me some wine. —[Exit Servant.] And how does that honourable, complete, free-hearted gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good lord and master?

Flam. His health is well, sir.

Lucullus. I am right glad that his health is well, sir; and what hast thou there under thy cloak, pretty Flaminius? —

Flam. 'Faith, nothing but an empty box, sir, which, in my lord's behalf, I come to entreat your honour to supply; who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him, nothing doubting your present assistance therein.

Lucullus. Ha, la, la, la,—nothing doubting, says he? alas, good lord! a noble gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often I have dined with him, and told him on't; and come again to supper to him of purpose to have him spend less, and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming. Every man has his fault, and honesty is his: I have told him on't, but I could not get him from it.

Re-enter Servant with Wine.

Serv. Please your lordship, here is the wine.

Lucullus. Flaminius, I have noted thee always were here's to thee.

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure.

Lucullus. I have observed thee always for a towardly prompt spirit. —Give thee thy due,—and one that knows what belongs to reason; and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well: good parts in thee. —Get you gone, sirrah —[To the Servant, who exit.] —Draw nearer, honest Flaminius. Thy lord's a bountiful gentleman; but thou art wise, and thou knowest well enough, although thou comest to me, that this is no time to lend money, especially upon bare friendship, without security. Here's three soldiers for thee: good boy, wink at me, and say, thou saw'st me not. Fare thee well.

Flam. Is't possible, the world should so much differ, and we alive that liv'd? Fly, damned baseness, to him that worships thee. —[Throwing the money away.]

Lucullus. Ha! now I see thou art a fool, and fit for thy master. —[Exit Lucullus.]

Flam. May these add to the number that may scold thee? Let molten coin be thy damnation, Thou disease of a friend, and not himself!
Has friendship such a faint and milky heart,
It turns in less than two nights? O you gods!
I feel my master's passion. This slave
Unto his humour has my lord's meat in him:
Why should it thrive, and turn to nutriment,
When he is turn'd to poison? O! may diseases only work on't,
And, when he's sick to death, let not that part of nature,
Which my lord paid for, be of any power
To expel sickness, but prolong his hour! [Exit.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Public Place.

Enter Lucius, with three Strangers.

Luc. Who? the lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

1 Stran. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumour: now lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

Luc. Fie! no, do not believe it; he cannot want money.

2 Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that not long ago one of his men was with the lord Lucullus, to borrow so many talents; nay, urged extremely on't, and showed what necessity belonged to it, and yet was denied.

Luc. How?

2 Stran. I tell you, denied, my lord.

Luc. What a strange case was that! now, before the gods, I am ashamed on't. Denied that honourable man? there was very little honour showed in't. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such like trifles, nothing comparing to his; yet, had he mistook him, and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents.

Enter Servilius.

Ser. See, by good hap, yonder's my lord; I have sweat to see his honour.—My honoured lord.

[To Lucius.

Luc. Servilius! you are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well: commend me to thy honourable-virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend.

Ser. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent—

Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord, he's ever sending: how shall I thank him, think'st thou? And what has he sent now?

Ser. He has only sent his present occasion now, my lord; requiring your lordship to supply his instant use with five hundred talents.¹

Luc. I know, his lordship is but merry with me: He cannot want five hundred talents.

Ser. But in the mean time he wants less, my lord. If his occasion were not virtuous, should not urge it half so faithfully.

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?

Ser. Upon my soul, 'tis true, sir.

Luc. What a wicked beast was I, to disfigure myself against such a good time, when I might have shown myself honourable! how unluckily it happened, that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and undo a great deal of honour!—Servilius, now before the gods, I am not able to do; the more beast I, I say.—I was sending to use lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness; but I would not, for the wealth of Athens, I had done it now. Commend me countifully to his good lordship; and I hope, his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind:—and tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions, say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend me so far, as to use mine own words to him?

Ser. Yes, sir, I shall.

Luc. I'll look you out a good turn, Servilius.—[Exit Servilius.

True, as you said, Timon is shrunk indeed; and he that's once denied will hardly speed.

[Exit Lucius.

1. Stran. Do you observe this, Hostilius?

2. Stran. Ay, too well.

1. Stran. Why this
Is the world's soul; and just of the same piece
Is every flatterer's port.² Who can call him
His friend, that dips in the same dish? for, in My knowing, Timon has been this lord's father,
And kept his credit with his purse,
Supported his estate; nay, Timon's money
Has paid his men their wages: he ne'er drinks,
But Timon's silver treads upon his lip;
And yet, (O, see the monstrousness of man,
When he looks out in an ungrateful shape!) he does deny him, in respect of his,
What charitable men afford to beggars.

1. Stran. For mine own part
I never tasted Timon in my life,
Nor came any of his bounties over me,
To mark me for his friend; yet, I protest,
For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue,
And honourable carriage,
Had his necessity made use of me,
I would have put my wealth into donation,
And the best half should have return'd to him,
So much I love his heart. But I perceive,
Men must learn now with pity to dispense:
For policy sits above conscience. [Exeunt

SCENE III.—The Same.—A Room in Sempronius' House.

Enter Sempronius, and a Servant of Timon's.

Sem. Must he needs trouble me in't, humph! 'bove all others?

He might have tried Lord Lucius, or Lucullus;
And now Ventidius is wealthy too,
Whom he redeem'd from prison: all these
Owe their estates unto him.

Serv. My lord,
They have all been touch'd, and found base metal;
For they have all denied him.

Sem. How have they denied him?
Have Ventidius and Lucullus denied him,
And does he send to me? Three! humph! It shows but little love or judgment in him:
Must I be his last refuge? His friends, like physicians
Thrive⁴ give him over; must I take the cure upon me?
He has much disgrace'd me in't: I am angry at him,
That might have known my place. I see no sense for't,
But his occasions might have wo'd me first;
For, in my conscience, I was the first man
That e'er received gift from him:
And does he think so backwardly of me now,
That I'll require it last? No: so it may prove
An argument of laughter to the rest,
And amongst lords I be thought a fool.
I had rather than the worth of this, the sum,
He had sent to me first, but for my mind's sake

¹ with so many talents: in s. e ² spirit: in s. e; changed from s. sport, of the folio. ³ Thrive: in folio. Johnson made the change
I'd such a courage to do him good. But now return, And with their faint reply to this answer join; Who bates mine honour shall not know my coin. [Exit. Serv. Excellent! Your lordship is a goodly villain. The devil know not what he did, when he made man politic; for he crossed himself by 't; and I cannot think, but, in the end, the villains of man will set him clear. How fairly this lord strives to appear foul? takes virtuous copes to be wicked; like those that, under hot ardent zeal, would set whole realms on fire. Of such a nature is his politic love.

This was my lord's best hope; now all are fled, Save only the gods. Now his friends are dead, Doors, that were ne'er acquainted with their wards Many a bounteous year, must be employ'd Now to guard sure their master: And this is all a liberal course allows; Who cannot keep his wealth must keep his house. [Exit.}

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Hall in Timon's House.

Enter two Servants of Varro, and the Servant of Lucius. meeting Titus, Hortensius, and other Servants to Timon’s Creditors, waiting his coming out. Var. Serv. Well met; good-morrow, Titus and Hortensius.

Tit. The like to you, kind Varro. Hor. Lucius? What, do we meet together? Luc. Serv. Ay; and I think, One business does command us all, for mine Is money. Tit. So is theirs, and ours. Enter Philotus. Luc. Serv. And, sir, Philotus too! Phi. Good day at once. Luc. Serv. Welcome, good brother.

What do you think the hour? Phi. Labouring for mine. Luc. Serv. So much? Phi. I wonder not; he was wont to shine at seven. Luc. Serv. Ay, but the days are waxed shorter with him: You must consider, that a prodigal course Is like the sun's; but not, like his, recoverable. I fear 'tis deepest winter in Lord Timon's purse; That is, one may reach deep enough, and yet Find little. Phi. I am of your fear for that. Tit. I'll show you how 't observe a strange event. Your lord sends now for money. Hor. Most true, he does. Tit. And he wears jewels now of Timon's gift, For which I wait for money. Hor. It is against my heart. Luc. Serv. Mark, how strange it shows, Timon in this should pay more than he owes: And e'vex as if your lord should wear rich jewels, And send for money 'em. Hor. I'm weary of this charge, the gods can witness: I know, my lord hath spent of Timon's wealth, And now ingratitude makes it worse than stealth. 1 Var. Serv. Yes, mine 's three thousand crowns; what 's yours? Luc. Serv. Five thousand mine. 1 Var. Serv. 'Tis much deep: and it should seem by the str

Your master's confidence was above mine; Else, surely, his had equal'd. Enter Flaminius.

Tit. One of lord Timon's men.

Luc. Serv. Flaminius! Sir, a word. Pray, is my lord ready to come forth? Flan. No, indeed, he is not.

Tit. We attend his lordship: pray, signify so much Flan. I need not tell him that; he knows, you are too diligent. [Exit Flaminius

Enter Flavius in a Cloak, muffled.

If money were as certain as your waiting, 't were sure enough. Why then prefer'd you not Your sums and bills, when your false masters ate Of my lord's meat? Then, they could smile, and fawn Upon his debts, and take down the interest Into their glutonous maws. You do yourselves but wrong,

To stir me up; let me pass quietly: Believe 't, my lord and I have made an end I have no more to reckon, he to spend. Luc. Serv. Ay, but this answer will not serve. Flav. 'T will not serve, 'T is not so base as you; for you serve knaves. [Exit. 1 Var. Serv. How! what does his cashier'd worship matter? 2 Var. Serv. No matter what: he's poor, and that a revenge enough. Who can speak broader than he that has no house to put his head in? such may rail against great buildings.

Enter Servilius.

Tit. O! here's Servilius; now we shall know some answer.

Ser. If I might beseech you, gentlemen, to repair some other hour, I should derive much from't, for, take 't of my soul, my lord leans wondrously to discontent. His comfortable temper has forsaken him he's much out of health, and keeps his chamber. Luc. Serv. Many do keep their chambers, are not sick And if he be so far beyond his health, Me thinks, he should the sooner pay his debts, And make a clear way to the gods.

Ser. Good gods! Tit. We cannot take this for an answer, sir. Flan. [Within.] Servilius, help!—my lord! my lord! Enter Timon, in a rage; Flaminides, following. Tim. What! are my doors oppos'd against my passage? Have I been ever free, and must my house Be my retentive enemy, my god? The place which I have feasted, does it now Like all mankind, show me an iron heart? Luc. Serv. Put in now, Titus. Tit. My lord, here is my bill. Luc. Serv. Here's mine. Hor. Serv. And mine, my lord. Both Var. Serv. And ours, my lord. Phi. All our bills. Tim. Knock me down with 'em; cleave me to the girdle! Luc. Serv. Alas! my lord,— Tim. Cut my heart in sums Tit. Mine. fifty talents

'A bill was also a weapon
TIMON OF ATHENS.

ACT III.

Tim. Tell out my blood.
Luc. Serv. Five thousand crowns, my lord.
Tim. Five thousand drops pays that.—
What yours?—and yours?
1 Var. Serv. My lord,—
2 Var. Serv. My lord,—
Tim. Tear me, take me; and the gods fall upon you! [Exit.

Hor. Faith, I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their money; these debts may well be called desperate ones, for a madman owes 'em. [Exeunt.

Re-enter Timon and Flavius.
Tim. They have e'en put my breath from me, the slaves:
Creditors?—devils!
Flav. My dear lord,—
Tim. What if it should be so?
Flav. My lord,—
Tim. I'll have it so.—My steward.
Flav. Here, my lord.
Tim. So fitly? Go, bid all my friends again.
Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius: all:
I'll once more teach the rascals.
Flav. O my lord!
You only speak from your distracted soul:
There is not so much left to furnish out
A moderate table.
Tim. Be't not in thy care: go,
I charge thee; invite them all: let in the tide
Of knaves once more; my cook and I'll provide.
[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same. The Senate-House.
The Senate sitting. Enter Alcibiades, attended.
1 Sen. My lord, you have my voice to 't: the fault's bloody; 't is necessary he should die.
Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.
2 Sen. Most true; the law shall bruise him.
Alcib. Honour, health, and compassion to the senate!
1 Sen. Now, captain?
Alcib. I am an humble suitor to your virtues;
For pity is the virtue of the law,
And none but tyrants use it cruelly.
It pleases time and fortune to lie heavy
Upon a friend of mine; who, in hot blood,
Hath step'd into the law, which is past depth
To those that without heed do plunge into 't.
He is a man, setting his fault aside,
Of comely virtues:
Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice;
(An honour in him which buys out his fault)
But, with a noble fury, and fair spirit,
Seeing his reputation touch'd to death,
He did oppose his foe:
And with such sober and unmooted passion
He did reprove his anger, ere 't was spent,
As if he had but mov'd an argument.
1 Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox,
Striving to make an ugly deed look fair:
Your words have took such pains, as if they laboured
To bring manslaughter into form, and set quarrelling
Upon the head of valor; which, indeed,
Is valor misbegot, and came into the world
When sects and factions were newly born.
He's truly valiant, that can wisely suffer
The worst that man can breathe, and make his wrongs
His outsides; to wear them like his raiment, carelessly;
And ne'er prefer his injuries to his heart,
To bring it into danger.
If wrongs be evils, and enforce us kill,
What folly 't is to hazard life for ill?
Alcib. My lord,—
1 Sen. You cannot make gross sins look clear
To revenge is no valour, but to bear.
Alcib. My lords, then under favour, pardon me,
If I speak like a captain.
Why do fond men expose themselves to battle,
And not endure all threats? sleep upon 't,
And let the foes quietly cut their throats,
Without repugnancy? if there be Such valour in the bearing, what make we Abroad? why then, women are more valiant,
That stay at home, if bearing carry it,
And the ass more captain than the lion; the fellow,
Loaden with irons, wiser than the judge.
If wisdom be in suffering. O, my lords!
As you are great, be pitifully good:
Who can condemn rashness in cold blood?
To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust;
But in defence, by merci, 't is most just.
To be in anger, is impiety;
But who is man, that is not angry?
Weigh but the crime with this.
2 Sen. You breathe in vain.
Alcib. In vain? his service done
At Lacedaemon, and Byzantium,
Were a sufficient briber for his life.
Sen. What's that?
Alcib. Why, say'st my lords, he has done fair service,
And slain in fight many of your enemies.
How full of valour did he bear himself
In the last conflict, and made plentiful wounds:
2 Sen. He has made too much plenty with 'em,
He's a sworn rister: he has a sin, that often
Drowns him, and takes his valour prisoner.
Were there no foes, that were itself enough
To overcome him: in that beastly fury
He has been known to commit outrages,
And cherish factions. 'Tis infer and to us,
His days are foul, and his drink dangerous.
1 Sen. He dies.
Alcib. Hard fate! he might have died in war.
My lords, if not for any parts in him,
Though his right arm might purchase his own time.
And be in debt to none, yet, more to move you,
Take my deserts to his, and join them both:
And for, I know, your reverend ages love
Security, I'll pawn my victories, all
My honour to you, upon his good returns.
If by this crime he owes the law his life,
Why, let the war receiv 't in valiant gore;
For law is strict, and war is nothing more.
1 Sen. We are for law: he dies; urge it no more,
On height of our displeasure. Friend, or brother,
He forfeits his own blood that spills another.
Alcib. Must it be so? it must not be.
My lords.
I do beseech you, know me.
2 Sen. How!
Alcib. Call me to your remembrances.
3 Sen. What!
Alcib. I cannot think, but your age has forgot me,
It could not else be, I should prove so base,
To sue, and be denied such common grace.
My wounds ache at you.
1 Sen. Do you dare our anger?
TIMON

t is in few words, but specious in effect:
We banish thee for ever.

_Alab._ Banish me!
Banish your dotage, banish usury,
That makes the senate ugly.

1 Sen. If, after two days' shine Athens contain thee, Attend our weightier judgment. And, not to swell our spirit.

He shall be executed presently. [Exit Senators.

_Alab._ Now the gods keep you old enough; that you may live

Only in bone, that none may look on you.

I am worse than mad: I have kept back their feet,
While they have told their money, and let out
Their coin upon large interest; I myself,
Rich only in large hurts—all those, for this?
Is this the balsam that the usurping senate
Pours into captains' wounds? Banishment!
It comes not ill; I hate not to be banish'd:
It is a cause worthy my spleen and fury,
That I may strike at Athens. I'll cheer up
My discontented troops, and lay1 for hearts.
'Tis honour with most lands to be odds;
Soldiers should brook as little wrongs as gods. [Exit.

SCENE VI.—A Banquet-hall in Timon's House.

_Musick._ Tables set out; Servants attending. Enter divers Lords, at several Doors.

1 Lord. The good time of day to you, sir.

2 Lord. I also wish it to you. I think, this honourable lord did but try us this other day.

1 Lord. Upon that were my thoughts tiring2 when we encountered. I hope, it is not so low with him, as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends.

2 Lord. It should not be, by the persuasion of his new feasting.

1 Lord. I should think so. He hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off; but he hath conjured me beyond them, and I must needs appear.

2 Lord. In like manner was I in debt to my import-unate business, but he would not hear my excuse.
I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my provision was out.

1 Lord. I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go.

2 Lord. Every man here's so. What would he have borrowed of you?

1 Lord. A thousand pieces.

2 Lord. A thousand pieces!

1 Lord. What of you?

3 Lord. He sent to me, sir.—Here he comes.

_E enter Timon, and Attendants._

_Tim._ With all my heart, gentlemen both:—And how fare you?

1 Lord. Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship.

2 Lord. The swallow follows not summer more willingly, than we your lordship.

_Tirn._ [Aside.] Nor more willingly leaves winter;
such summer-birds are men. [To them.] Gentlemen,
our dinner will not compensate this long stay; feast your ears with the music awhile, if they will fare so harshly o' the trumpet's sound; we shall to 't presently.

1 Lord. I hope, it remains not unkindly with your lordship, that I returned you an empty messenger.

Tim. O! sir, let it not trouble you.

2 Lord. My noble lord,—

_Tim._ Ah! my good friend, what cheer?

[The Banquet brought in

2 Lord. My most honourable lord, I am even sick of shame that, when your lordship this other day sent me, I was so unfortunate a beggar.

_Tim._ Think not on't, sir.

2 Lord. If you had sent but two hours before.—

_Tim._ Let it not cumber your better remembrance—
Come, bring in all together. [To the Servants.]

2 Lord. All covered dishes!

1 Lord. Royal cheer, I warrant you.

3 Lord. Doubt not that, if money, and the season can yield it.

1 Lord. How do you? What's the news?

3 Lord. Alcibiades isbanished: hear you of it?

1 & 2 Lord. Alcibiades banished!

3 Lord. 'Tis so; be sure of it.

1 Lord. How? now?

2 Lord. I pray you, upon what?

_Tim._ My worthy friends, will you draw near?

3 Lord. I'll tell you more anon. Here's a noble feast toward.

2 Lord. This is the old man still.

3 Lord. Will 't hold? will 't hold?

2 Lord. It does; but time will show.

3 Lord. I do conceive.

_Tim._ Each man to his stool, with that spur as he would to the lip of his mistress: your diet shall be all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place: sit, sit. The gods require our thanks.

"You great benefactors, sprinkle our society with thankfulness. For your own gifts make yourselves praised; but reserve still to give, lest your deities be despised. Lead to each man enough, that one need not lend to another; for, were your godheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved, more than the man that gives it.

Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains: if there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozens of them be—as they are. The rest of your foes.4 O gods! the senators of Athens, together with the common tag5 of people,—what is amiss in them, you gods make suitable for destruction. For these, my present friends,—as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing are they welcome.6

Unlover, dogs, and lap.

[The Dishes uncovered are full of warm water.

_Some speak._ What does his lordship mean?

_Some other._ I know not.

_Tim._ May you a better feast never behold,
You knot of mouth-friends! smoke, and Luke-warm water
Is your perfection. This is Timon's last;
Who stuck and spangled you with flatteries,
Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces

[Throwing water in their faces

Your reeking villainy. Live loath'd and long;
Most smiling, smooth, detested parasites,
Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek bears;
You fools of fortune, trencher-friends, time's flies.
Cap and knee slaves, vapours, and minute-jacks!
Of man, and beast, the infinite malady

Cruzt you quite o'er.—What! dost thou go?
Soft, take thy physic first—thou too,—and thou:—

[Throwes the Dishes at them, and drives them out
Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none.—

What, all in motion? Henceforth be no feast,

---

1 Lay out. To tire on, is to fasten on, like a bird of prey on its victim. Z. Jackson reads: stirring.
2 Not in f. 3 Some in f. 4 Peg. in f. 5 Altered from leg, in folio.
Whereat a villain's not a welcome guest.
Thou, house! sink, Athens! henceforth hated be.

SCENE I.—Without the Walls of Athens.

Enter Timon.

Tim. Let me look back upon thee; O thou wall,
That girdlest in those wolves! Dine in the earth,
And hence not Athens! Matrons, turn incontinent;
Sow the grave wrinkled senate from the bench,
And minister in their steads! I' th' general fills
A devoted green virility!

Enter Flavius, with two or three Servants.

Flav. All broken implements of a ruin'd house.

I am as poor as you. 1 Serv. Such a house broke!

SCENE II.—A Room in Timon's House.

Enter Flavius, with two or three Servants.

1 Serv. Hear you, master steward! where's our master?

And now he has beat it out of my hat;—did you see my jewel?

2 Serv. Did you see my cap?

3 Serv. Here's my gown.

Flav. Alack! my fellows, what should I say to you?

Whilst I have gold I'll be his steward still.

4 Serv. Lord. One day he gives us diamonds, next day stones.

1 LORD. Did you see my cap?

2 LORD. Here's my gown.

3 LORD. I feel it upon my bones.

4 LORD. Let's make no stay.

[Exit.
SCENE III.—The Woods.

Enter Timon, with a Spade.

Tim. O, blessed breeding sun! draw from the earth Rotten humidity; below thy sister's orb Infect the air. Twin'n a brother of one womb, Whose procreation, residence, and birth, Scarcely is dividend, touch them with several fortunes, The greater seerns the lesser: not nature, (To whom all sor's lay siege) can bear great fortune, But by contempt of nature. Raise me this bagger, and decline that lord; The senator shall bear contempt hereditary; The bagger native honour. It is the pasture lards the rother's sides. The want that makes him lean. Who dares, who dares, In purity of mankind stand upright, And say, "This man's a flatterer?" If one be, So are they all; for every grise of fortune Is smooth'd by that below: the learned pate Ducks to the golden fool. All is oblique; There's nothing level in our cursed natures, But direct villainy. Therefore, be abhor'd All feats, societies, and throns of me! His semblable, yea, himself, Timon disdains: Destruction fang mankind!—Earth, yield me roots! [Digging.

Who seeks for better of thee, sauce his palate With thy most operant poison—What is here? [Finding gold.

Gold? yellow, glittering, precious gold? No, gods, I am no idol votarist. Roots, you clear heavens! Thus much of this will make black, white: foul, fair; Wrong; right; base, noble; old, young; coward, valiant. Ha! you gods, why this? What this? You gods! why, this Will lug your priests and servants from your sides, Pluck Stout men's pillows from below their heads! This yellow slave. Will knit and break religions; bless th' accurs'd; Make the hoar leprosy ador'd; place thieves, And give them title, knee, and approbation, With senators on the bench: this is it, That makes the wappen'd widow wed again: She, whom the sitous-house, and ulcerous sores Would cast the gorge at, this embalm and spices To the April day again. Come, dammed earth, Thou common whore of mankind, that put'st odds Among the rest of nations, I will make thee Do thy right nature.—[March afar off.]—Ha! a drum?—Thou'rt quick, But yet I'll bury thee: thou'lt go, strong thief, When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand.— Nay, stay thou out for earnest. [Reserving some gold. Enter ALCIBIADES, with Drum and Fife, in warlike manner; and PHRYNIA and TIMANDRA.

Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker gnaw thy heart, For showing me again the eyes of man! Alcib. What is thy name? Is man so hateful to thee That art thyself a man? Tim. I am misanthropos, and hate mankind. For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog, That I might love thee something. Alcib. I know thee well; But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange.

Tim. I know thee too; and more, than that I know thee. I not desire to know. Follow thy drum; With man's blood paint the ground, gules, gules: Religious canons, civil laws are cruel: Then what should war be? This fell whereby of thine Hath in her more destruction than thy sword, For all her cherubic looks. Phry. Thy lips rot off! Tim. I will not kiss thee; then, the rot returns To thine own lips again. Alcib. How came the noble Timon to this change? Tim. As the moon does, by wanting light to give But then, renew, I could not, like the moon; There were no suns to borrow of. Alcib. Noble Timon, What friendship may I do thee? Tim. None, but to Maintain my opinion. Alcib. What is it, Timon? Tim. Promise me friendship, but perform none. If thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee, for thou art a man! If thou dost perform, confound thee, for thou art a man! Alcib. I have heard in some sort of thy miseries. Tim. Thou sav'rt them, when I had prosperity. Alcib. I see them now; then was a blessed time. Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of harriets Timon. Is this th' Athenian minion, whom the world Voic'd so regardfully? Tim. Art thou Timandra? Timon. Yes. Tim. Be a whore still! they love thee not, that use thee: Give them diseases, leaving with thee their lust. Make use of thy salt hours; season the slaves For tubs, and baths; bring down rose-cheek'd youth To the tub.-fast, and the diet. Timon. Hang thee, monster! Alcib. Pardon him, sweet Timandra, for his wits Are drown'd and lost in his calamities.— I have had but little gold of late, brave Timon, The want whereby doth daily make revolt In my penurious band: I have heard and griev'd, How cursed Athens, mindless of thy worth, Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour states, But for thy sword and fortune, tread upon them,— Tim. I pr'ythee, beat thy drum, and get thee gone. Alcib. I am thy friend, and pity thee, dear Timon. Tim. How dost thou pity him; whom thou dost trouble? I had rather be alone. Alcib. Why, fare thee well:

Here is some gold for thee.

Tim. Keep it. I cannot eat it

Alcib. When I have laid proud Athens on a heap,— Tim. Warr'st thou 'gainst Athens?

Alcib. Ay Timon, and have cause.

Tim. The gods confound them all in thy conquest. And thee after, when thou last conquered:

Alcib. Why me, Timon?

Tim. That, by killing of villains Thou wast born to conquer my country. Put up thy gold: go on,—here's gold,—go on; Be as a planetary plague, when love Will o'er some high-vied city hang his poison In the sick air: let not thy sword skip one. Pity not honour'd age for his white beard;
He is an usurper. Strike me the counterfeit matron;
It is her habit only that is honest,
Herself's a bawd. Let not the virgin's cheek
Make soft thy trenchant sword; for those milk-paps,
That through the window-bars bore at men's eyes,
Are not within the leaf of pity writ,
But set them down horrible traitors. Spare not the babe,
Whose dimpled smiles from foals exhaust their mercy:
Think it a bastard, whom the oracle
Hath doubtfully pronounc'd thy throat shall cut,
And mince it sans remorse; swear against abstracts,
Put armour on thine ears, and on thine eyes,
Whose proof, nor yells of mothers, maids, nor babes,
Nor sight of priests, in holy vestments bleeding,
Shall pierce a jot. There's gold to pay thy soldiers:
Make large confusion; and thy fury spent,
Confounded be thyself! Speak not: be gone.
Alcib. Hast thou gold yet? I'll take the gold thou giv'st me,
Not all thy counsel.
Tim. Dost thou, or dost thou not, heaven's curse
Upon thee?
Phr. & Timon. Give us some gold, good Timon:
Hast thou more?
Tim. Enough to make a whose forswear her trade,
And to make whose abhor'd. Hold up, you sluts,
Your aprons mountant: you are not oathable,—
Although I know, you'll swear, terribly swear,
Into strong studders, and to heavenly auge,
The immortal gods that hear you,—spare your oaths,
I'll trust to your conditions: be whose still,
And he whose pious breath seeks to convert you,
Be strong in whose, allure him, burn him up;
Let your close fire predominate his smoke,
And be no turneats. Yet may your pains, six months,
Be quite contrary: and thathez your poor thin roofs
With burdens of the dead;—some that were hang'd.
No matter,—wear them, betray with them; whose still;
Paint till a horse may mire upon your face:
A box of wrinkles!
Phry. & Timon. Well, more gold.—What then?—
Believe't, that we'll do any thing for gold.
Tim. Consumptions sow
In hollow bones of man; strike their sharp shins,
And mar men's spurring. Crack the lawyer's voice,
That he may never more false title plead,
Nor sound his quiv'lets shrilly: hear the flam'men,
That scolds against the quality of flesh,
And not believes himself: down with the nose,
Down with it flat; take the bridge quite away
Of him, that his particular to force,
Smells from the general weal: make curl'd-pate
ruffians bold;
And let the unsca'd braggarts of the war
Derive some pain from you. Plague all,
That your activity may defeat and quell
The source of all aperation. There's more gold:
[Throwing it.
Do you damn others, and let this damn you,
And ditches grave you all!
Phr. & Timon. More counsel with more money, bounteous Timon.
Tim. More where, more mischief first: I have given you earnest.
Alcib. Strike up the drum towards Athens! Fare well, Timon:
| If I thrive well, I'll visit thee again. |
| Tim. If I hope well, I'll never see thee more. |
| Alcib. I never did thee harm. |
| Tim. Yes, thou spok'st well of me. |
| Alcib. Call'st thou that harm? |
| Tim. Men daily find it. Get thee away, |
| And take thy bangles with thee. |
| Alcib. We but offend him. |

Strike!

[Drum beats. Enter Alcibiades, Phrynia, and Timandra.
Tim. That nature, being sick of man's unkindness,
Should yet be hungry!—Common mother, thou, [Digging.
Whose womb unmeasurable, and infinite breast,
Teems, and feeds all; whose self-same mettle,
Whereof thy proud child, arrogant man, is puff'd,
Engenders the black toad, and adder bite,
The gilded newt, and eyeless venom'd worm,
With all the abhorred births below erip heaven
Whereon Hyperion's quickening fire doth shine;
Yield him, who all the human sons doth hate,
From forth thy plantes bosom, one poor root!
Ensear thy fertile and conceived womb;
Let it no more bring out ingratitude man!
Go great with tigers, dragons, wolves, and bears;
Teem with new monsters, whom thy upward face
Hath to the marbled mansion all above.
Never presented!—O! a root:—dear thanks!
Dry up thy meadow's vines, and plough-torn leas
Whereof ingratitude man, with liquorous drafts,
And morsels unctuous, greases his pure mind,
That from it all consideration slips.—

Enter Apemantus. More man? Plague! plague! Plague!
Apem. I was directed hither: men report,
Their dost affect my manners, and dost use them.
Tim. 'Tis, then, because thou dost not keep a dog
Whom I would imitate. Consumption catch thee!
Apem. This is in thee a nature but infected;
A poor unmanly melancholy, sprung
From change of fortune. Why this spade? this place?
This slave-like habit, and these looks of care?
Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft,
Hug their diseas'd perfumes, and have forgot
That ever Timon was. Shame not these woods,
By putting on the cunning of a carper.
Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive
By that which has undone thee: hinge thy knee,
And let his very breath, whom thou 'lt observe,
Blow off thy cap; praise his most vicious strain,
And call it excellent. Thou wast told thus;
Thou gav'st thine ears, like taggers that bade welcome,
To knives, and all approchers; it is most just,
That thou turn rascal! hast thou wealth again,
Rascals should have 't. Do not assume my likeness.
Tim. Were I like thee, I'd throw away myself.
Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself;
A madman so long, now a fool. What! think'st
That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain,
Will put thy shirt on warm? Will these moist trees
That have outliv'd the eagle, page thy heels,
And skip when thou point'st out? Will the cold brook
Candid with ice, candle thy morning taste,
To eure thy o'er-night's surfeit? call the creatures,—
Whose naked naturals live in all the spite
Of wreakful heaven, whose bare unhoused trunks,
To the conflicting elements expos'd,
Answer mere nature,—bid them fatter thee;
O thou shalt find—

Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did.
Tim. I hate thee worse.

Apem. Why?
Tim. Thou fatter'st misery.
Apem. I fatter not, but say thou art a catiff.
Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?
Apem. To vex thee.
Tim. Always a villain's office, or a fool's.
Dost please thyself in't?

Apem. Ay.
Tim. What! a knave too?
Apem. If thou dost put this soured habit on
To castigate thy pride, 't were well; but thou
Dost it enforc'dly: thou'st courtier be again,
Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery
Oultives uncertain pomp, is crown'd before:
The one is filling still, never complete:
The other, at high wish, best state, contentless,
Hath a distracted and most wretched being,
Worse than the worst content.
Thou shouldst not be, being miserable.
Tim. Not by his breath, that is more miserable.
Thou art a slave, whom Fortune's tender arm
With favour never claspt, but bred a dog.
Hadst thou, like us, from our first swath, proceeded
The sweet degrees that this brief world affords
To such as may the passive dugs1 of it
Freely command, thou wouldst have plung'd thyself
In general riot; melted down thy youth
In different beds of lust; and never learn'd
The icy precepts of respect, but follow'd
The sugar'd game before thee. But myself,
Who had the world as my confectionary;
The mouths, the tongues, the eyes, and hearts of men
At duty, more than I could frame employment;
That numberless upon me stuck, as leaves
Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush
Fall from their boughs, and left me open, bare
For every storm that blows:—I, to bear this,
That never knew but better, is some burden:
They should desire to die in suffrance, time
Hath made thee hard in't. Why shouldst thou hate men?
They never fatter'd thee: what hast thou given?
If thou wilt curse, thy father, that poor rag.
Must be thy subject; who, in spite, put stuff
To some she beggar, and compass'd thee
Poor rogue hereditary. Hence! be gone!—
If thou hast not been born the worst of men,
Thou hast not been a knave, and flatterer.

Apem. Art thou proud yet?

Tim. Ay, that I am not thee.

Apem. I, that I was

No prodigal.

Tim. I, that I am one now:
Were all the wealth I have shut up in thee,
I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone.—
That the whole life of Athens were in this!
Thus would I eat it. [Eating a root.

Apem. Here; I will mend thy feast.

Tim. First mend my company, take away thyself.
Apem. So shall I mend mine own, by the lack of thee.

Tim. 'Tis not well mended so, it is but botch'd;
If not, I would it were.

Apem. What wouldst thou have to Athens?
Tim. Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt,
Tell thou there I have gold: look, so I have.
Apem. Here is no use for gold.
Tim. The best, and truest
For here it sleeps, and does no hired harm.
Apem. Where ly'st o' nights, Timon?
Tim. Under that's above me
Where feed'st thou o' days, Apemantus?
Apem. Where my stomach finds meat; or, rather,
where I eat it.

Tim. Would poison were obedient, and knew my mind!
Apem. Where wouldst thou send it?
Tim. To sauce thy dishes.
Apem. The middle of humanity thou never knowest, but the extremity of both ends. When thou wast in thy gilt, and thy perfume, they mocked thee for too much curiosity: in thy rags thou knowest none, but art despised for the contrary. There's a medlar for thee; eat it.

Tim. On what I hate I feed not.

Apem. Do'st hate a medlar?

Tim. Ay, though it look like thee.

Apem. An thou hast hated meddlers sooner, thou shouldest have loved thyself better now. What man didst thou ever know unthrift, that was beloved after his means?

Tim. Who, without those means thou talkest of, didst thou ever know beloved?

Apem. Myself.

Tim. I understand thee: thou hast some means to keep a dog.

Apem. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers?

Tim. Women nearest; but men, men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy power?

Apem. Give it the beasts, to be rid of the men.

Tim. Wouldst thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts?

Apem. Ay, Timon.

Tim. A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee to attain to: If thouwert the lion, the fox would beggar thee: if thouwert the lamb, the fox would eat thee: if thouwert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, when, peradventure, thou wast accused by the ass: if thouwert the ass, thy dulness would torment thee, and still thou livest but as a breakfast to the wolf: if thouwert the wolf, thy greediness would afflicthe thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner: wilt thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee, and make thine own self the conquest of thy fury: wilt thou a bear, thou wouldst be killed by the horse: wilt thou a horse, thou wouldst be seized by the leopard: wilt thou a leopard, thou wert germane to the lion, and the spots of thy kindred were jurors on thy life; all thy safety were remotion, and thy defence, absence. What beast couldst thou be, that were not subject to a beast? and what a beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss in transformation.

Apem. If thou couldst please me with speaking to me, thou mightst have hit upon it here: the commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts.

Tim. How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city?

Apem. Yonder comes a poet, and a painter. The plague of company light upon thee! I will fear it caten it, and give way. When I know not what else do, I'll see thee again.

Tim. When there is nothing living but thee, thou shalt be welcome. I had rather be a beggar's dog, than Apemantus.

Apem. Thou art the cap of all the fools alive.
Tim. Would thou wert clean enough to spit upon.

Apem. A plague on thee, thou art too bad to curse.
Tim. All villains, that do stand by thee, are pure.

Apem. There is no leprosy but what thou speak'st.
Tim. If I name thee,—
'd beat thee, but I should infect my hands.
Apem. I would, my tongue could rot them off.
Tim. Away, thou issue of a mangy dog!

Choler does kill me, that thou art alive;
I swoon to see thee.

Apem. Would thou wouldst burst!

Tim. Thou tedious rogue! I am sorry, I shall lose
A stone by thee.

[Throwing a stone at him.]

Tim. Beast!

Apem. Slave! Toad!

Tim. Rogue, rogue, rogue!

[APEMANTUS retreats backward, as going,
I am sick of this false world, and will live nought
But even the mere necessities upon't.

Then, Timon, presently prepare thy grave:
Lie where the light foam of the sea may beat
Thy grave-stone daily; make thine epitaph,
That death in me at others' lives may laugh.
O, thou sweet king-killer, and dear divorcee

[Looking on the gold.
'Twixt natural son and sire! thou bright defiler
Of Hymen's purest bed! thou valiant Mars!
Thou ever young, fresh, lov'd, and delicate woorer,
Whose blush doth thaw the consecrated snow
That lies on Dian's lap! thou visible god,
That soldier's close impossibilities,
And mak'st them kiss! that speak'st with every tongue,
To every purpose! O thou touch'd of hearts!
Think, thy slave man rebels; and by thy virtue
Set them into confounding odds, that beasts
May have the world in empire!

Apem. Would 't were so;
But not till I am dead.—I'll say, thou best gold:
Thou wilt be throng'd to shortly.

Tim. Throng'd to?

Apem. Thry back, I pr'ythee.

Apem. Live, and love thy misery!

Tim. Long live so, and so die!—I am quit=

[Exit APEMANTUS.]

More things like men?—Eat, Timon, and abhor them.

Enter BANDIT.

1 Band. Where should he have this gold? It is some poor fragment, some slender ort of his remainder.
The mere want of gold, and the falling from him of his friends, drove him into this melancholy.

2 Band. It is noisy, he hath a mass of treasure.

3 Band. Let us make the assay upon him: if he care not for't, he will supply us easily; if he covetously reserve it, how shall's get it?

2 Band. True, for he bears it not about him; 'tis hid.

1 Band. Is not this he?

All. Where?

2 Band. 'Tis his description.

3 Band. He; I know him.

All. Save thee, Timon.

---

Tim. Now, thieves?

All. Soldiers, not thieves.

Tim. Both two; and women's sons.

All. We are not thieves, but men that much do want.

Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat.

Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath roots.

Within this mile break forth a hundred springs;
The oaks bear mast, the briars scarlet hips;
The bounteous housewife, nature, on each bush
Lays her full mess before you. Want! why want?

1 Band. We cannot live on grass, on berries, water.

As beasts, and birds, and fishes.

Tim. Nor on the beasts themselves, the birds, and fishes;

You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you con,
That you are thieves profess'd, that you work not.

In holier shapes; for there is boundless theft
In limited professions. Rascal thieves,
Here's gold. Go, suck the subtle blood o' the grape.

[Throwing gold.]

Till the high fever seethe your blood to froth,
And so 'scape hanging: trust not the physician;
His antidotes are poison, and he slays
More than you rob: take wealth and lives together;

Do villainy, do, since you protest to do't.

Like workmen: I'll example you with thievry:
The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction
Rob's the vast sea; the moon's an arrant thief,
And her pale fire she snatches from the sun;
The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves
The moon into salt tears: the earth's a thief,
That feeds and breeds by a compostrate stolen
From general excrement: each thing's a thief.
The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough power
Have uncheck'd their'fath: love not yourselves, away;

Rob one another. There's more gold: cut throats.

[Throwing it.]

All that you meet are thieves. To Athens, go:

Break open shops; nothing can you steal,
But thieves do lose it. Steal no less for this
I give you; and gold confound you howsoever! Amen

[Timon retires to his Cave.]

3 Band. He has almost charmed me from my profiss sion, by persuading me to it.

1 Band. 'T is in the malice of mankind, that he thu advises us; not to have us thrive in our mystery.

2 Band. I'll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade.

1 Band. Let us first see peace in Athens; there is no time so miserable, but a man may be true.

---

Enter FLAVIUS.

Flav. O you gods!

Is yond? despis'd and ruinous man my lord?

Full of decay and failing? O monument,
And wonder of good deeds evilly bestow'd!

What an alteration of honour has desperate want made?

What viler thing upon the earth, than friends

Who can bring nobiest minds to basest ends?

How rarely does it meet with this time's guise,

When man was wish'd to love his enemies:

Grant, I may ever love, and rather woo

Those that would mischiefe me, than those that do

He has caught me in his eye: I will present
My honest grief unto him; and, as my lord,

Still serve him with my life.—My dearest master!

Timon comes forward from his Cave.

Tim. Away! what art thou?

Flav. Have you forgot me, sir?
Scene I. — The Same. Before Timon's Cave.

Enter Poet and Painter.

Pain. As I took note of the place, it cannot be far where he abides.

Poet. What's to be thought of him? Does the rumour hold for true, that he is so full of gold?

Pain. Certain: Acielidases reports it; Phrynia and Timandra had gold of him: he likewise enriched poor straggling soldiers with great quantity. 'Tis said, he gave unto his steward a mighty sum.

Poet. Then this breaking of his has been but a try for his friends.

Pain. Nothing else; you shall see him a palm in Athens again, and flourish with the highest. Therefore, 'tis not amiss we tender our loves to him in this supposed distress of his: it will show honestly in us, and is very likely to load our purses: with what we travail for, if it be a just and true report that goes of his having.

Poet. What have you now to present unto him?

Pain. Nothing at this time but my visitation; only, I will promise him an excellent piece.

Poet. I must serve him so too; tell him of an intent that's coming toward him.

Pain. Good as the best. Promising is the very air of the time: it opens the eyes of expectation; performance is ever the duller for his act; and, but in the planer and simpler kind of people, the deed of saying

Upon their first lord's neck. But tell me true;
(For I must ever doubt, though ne'er so sure)
Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous,
Is't not a usurping kindness as rich men deal gifts,
Expecting in return twenty for one?

Flav. No, my most worthy master; in whose breast
Doubt and suspect, alas! are plac'd too late.
You should have fear'd false times, when you did feast
Suspect still comes when an estate is least.
That which I show, heaven knows, is merely love,
Duty and zeal to your unmatched mind,
Care of your food and living: and, believe it,
My most honour'd lord,
For any benefit that points to me,
Either in hope, or present, I'd exchange
For this one wish,—that you had power and wealth
To requite me by making rich yourself.

Tim. Look thee, 'tis so.—Thou singly honest man,
Here, take:—the gods out of my misery [Giving gold,]
Have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich, and happy;
But thus condition'd:—thou shalt build from men;
Hate all, curse all; show charity to none,
But let the famish'd flesh slide from the bone,
Ere thou relieve the beggar: give to dogs
What thou deny'st to men; let prisons swallow 'em,
Debits wither 'em to nothing. Be men like blasted woods,
And may diseases lick up their false bloods!
And so, farewell, and thrive.

Flav. O! let me stay,
And comfort you, my master.

If thou hast'st
Curses, stay not: fly, whilst thou 'rt bless'd and free.
Ne'er see thou man, and let me ne'er see thee.
[Exit Flavius; and Timon into his Cave.]

Act V.
Fit I meet them.

Poet. Hail, worthy Timon!

Tim. Have I once liv'd to see two honest men?

Poet. Sir, having often of your open bounty tasted,

Hearing you were retir'd, your friends fall'n off,

Whose thankless natures—O, abhorred spirits! What! to you,

Whose star-like nobleness gave life and influence

To their whole being? I am rapt, and cannot cover

The monstrous bulk of this ingratitude

With any size of words.

Tim. Let it go naked, men may see 't the better:

You, that are honest, by being what you are,

Make them best seen, and known.

Pain. Have travell'd in the great shower of your gifts,

And sweetly felt it.

Tim. Ay, you are honest men.

Pain. We are hither come to offer you our service.

Tim. Most honest men! Why, how shall I requite you?

Can you eat roots, and drink cold water? no.

Both. What can we do, we'll do, to do you service.

Tim. You are honest men. You have heard that I have gold:

I am sure you have; speak truth; you are honest men.

Pain. So it is said, my noble lord; but therefore

Came not my friend, nor I.

Tim. Good honest men!—Thou draw'st a counterfeit

Best in all Athens: thou art, indeed, the best;

Thou counterfeit'st most lively.

Pain. So, so, my lord.

Tim. Even so, sir, as I say.—And for thy fiction,

Why, thy verse swells with stuff so fine and smooth,

That thou art even natural in thine art.—

But, for all this, my honest-natur'd friends,

I must needs say, you have a little fault:

Marry, 'tis not monstrous in you; neither wish I,

You take much pains to mend.

Both. Beseech your honour,

To make it known to us.

Tim. You'll make it ill.

Both. Most thankfully, my lord.

Tim. Doubt it not, worthy lord.

Both. There's never a one of you but trusts a knave,

That mightily deceives you.

Both. Do we, my lord?

Tim. Ay, and you hear him cog, see him dissemble,

Know his gross patchery, love him, feed him,

Keep in your bosom; yet remain assur'd,

That he's a made-up villain.

Pain. I know none such, my lord.

Poet. Nor I.

Tim. Look you, I love you well; I'll give you gold,

Rid me these villains from your companies:

Hang them, or stab them, drown them in a draught,

Confound them by some course, and come to me

'I'll give you gold enough.

Both. Name them, my lord; let's know them.

Tim. You that way, and you this; but two is com-

Each man apart, all single and alone. [pany:

Yet an arch-villain keeps him company,

If, where thou art, two villains shall not be.

To the Pointer.

Come not near him.—If thou wouldst not reside

To the Poet.

But where one villain is, then him abandon.—

Hence! pack! there's gold; ye name for gold, ye slaves

You have done' work for me, there's payment: hence!

You are an alchemist, make gold of that.

Out, rascal dogs! [Exit, beating them out.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter Flavius, and two Senators.

Flavius. It is in vain that you would speak with Timon.

For he is set so only to himself,

That nothing but himself, which looks like man,

Is friendly with him.

1 Sen. Bring us to his cave:

It is our part, and promise to the Athenians,

To speak with Timon.

2 Sen. At all times alike

Men are not still the same. 'T is time, and griefs,

That fram'd him thus: time, with his fairer hand

Offering the fortunes of his former days,

The former man may make him. Bring us to him,

And chance it as it may.

Flavius. Here is his cave.

Peace and content be here! Lord Timon! Timon!

Look out, and speak to friends. 'Th' Athenians,

By two of their most reverend senate, greet thee:

Speak to them, noble Timon.

Enter Timon.

Tim. Thou sun, that comfort'st, burn!—Speak, and be hang'd:

For each true word, a blister; and each false

Be as a cautery to the root o' the tongue,

Consuming it with speaking:

1 Sen. Worthy Timon—

Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon.

2 Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee, Timon.

Tim. I thank them; and would send them back the plague,

Could I but catch it for them.

1 Sen. O! forget

What we are sorry for ourselves in thee.

The senators, with one consent of love,

Entreat thee back to Athens; who have thought

On special dignities, which vacant lie

For thy best use and wearing.

2 Sen. They confess

Toward thee forgetfulness, too general, gross;

Which now the public body, which doth seldom

Play the recantor, feeling in itself

A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal

Of its own fall, restraining aid to Timon;

And send forth us, to make their sorrowed render,

Together with a recompense, more fruitful

Than their offence can weigh down by the dram;

Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and wealth,

As shall to thee blot out what wrongs were theirs,

And write in thee the figures of their love,

Ever to read them thine.

Tim. You witch me in it:

Surprise me to the very brink of tears:

Lend me a fool's heart, and a woman's eyes,

And I'll beweep these comforts, worthy senators.

1 Sen. Therefore, so please thee to return with us

And of our Athens, thine and ours, to take

The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks,

Allow'd with absolute power, and thy good name

Live with authority:—so, soon we shall drive back

Of Alcibiades the approaches wild;

Who, like a boar too savage, doth root up

His country's peace.

[im in f.e. * Not in folio * Added by Malone.
Scene V.

Timon of Athens.

695

2 Sen. And shakes his threat'ning sword
Against the walls of Athens.
1 Sen. Therefore, Timon,—
Tim. Well, sir, I will; therefore, I will, sir; thus, if Alcibiades kill my countrymen,
Let Alcibiades know this of Timon,
That Timon cares not. But if he sack fair Athens,
And take our goodly aged men by the beards,
Giving our holy virgins to the stain
Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd war,
Then, let him know,—and tell him, Timon speaks it,
In pity of our aged, and our youth,
I cannot choose but tell him,—that I care not.
And let him take't at worst; for their knives care not,
While you have threats to answer: for myself,
There's not a whittle in th' unruled camp,
But I do prize it at my love, before
The reverend'st threat in Athens. So I leave you
To the protection of the prosperous gods,
As thieves to keepers.

Flav. Stay not: all's in vain.
Tim. Why, I was writing of my epitaph,
It will be seen to-morrow! My long sickness
Health, and my life begins to mend.
And nothing brings me all things: Go: live still Be Alcibiades your plague, you his,
And last so long enough!

1 Sen. We speak in vain.
Tim. But yet I love my country; and am not
One that rejoices in the common wreck,
As common brut doth put it.

1 Sen. That's well spoke.
Tim. Command me to my loving countrymen.—
1 Sen. These words become your lips as they pass through them.
2 Sen. And enter in our ears, like great triumphers
In their applauding gates.

Tim. Command me to them;
And tell them, that to case them of their griefs,
Their fears of hostile strokes, their aches, losses,
Their rages of love, and other incident throes
That nature's fragile vessel doth sustain.
In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kindness do them.
I'll teach them to prevent wits Alcibiades' wrath.

2 Sen. I like this well: he will return again.
Tim. I have a tree, which grows here in my close,
That mine own use invites me to eat down,
And shortly must I fell it: tell my friends,
Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree,
From high to low throughout, that whoso please
To stop affliction, let him take his halter.
Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe.
And hang himself.—I pray you, do my greeting.

Flav. Trouble him no farther; thus you still shall find him.

Tim. Come not to me again; but say to Athens,
Timon hath made his everlasting mansion
Upon the beached verge of the salt flood;
Whom once a day with his embossed froth
The turbulent surge shall crown: 'tis here come,
And let my grave-stone be your oracle.—
Lips, let your words go by, and language end:
What is mine plague, plague and infection mend:
Graves only bear man's works, and death their gain.
Sun, hide thy beams: Timon hath done his reign.

[Exit Timon.

And strain what other means is left unto us
In our dear^ peril.

1 Sen. It requires swift foot. [Exeunt

Scene III.—The Walls of Athens.

Enter Two Senators, and a Messenger.

1 Sen. Thou hast painfully discover'd: are his files
As full as they report?

Mess. I have spoke the least:
Besides, his expedition promises
Present approach.

2 Sen. We stand much hazard, if they bring not Timon.

Mess. I met a courier, one mine ancient friend,
Whom, though in general part we were oppos'd,
Yet our old love made a particular force,
And made us speak like friends: this man was riding
From Alcibiades to Timon's cave,
With letters of entreaty, which imported
His fellowship to the cause against your city,
In part for his sake mov'd.

[Enter Senators from Timon.

1 Sen. Here come our brothers.

3 Sen. No talk of Timon; nothing of him expect.—
The enemies' drum is heard, and fearful securing Doth choke the air with dust. In, and prepare:
Ours is the fall, I fear, our foes the snare.

Scene IV.—The Woods.

Timon's Cave, and a Tomb-stone seen.

Enter an Soldier, seeking Timon.

Sold. By all description this should be the place
Who's here? speak, ho!—No answer?—What is this?
Timon is dead, who hath outstript his span.
Some beast rear'd this; there does not live a man.
Dead, sure, and this his grave.—What's on this tomb
I cannot read; the character I'll take with wax:
Our captain hath in every figure skill;
An ag'd interpreter, though young in days.
Before proud Athens he's set down by this,
Whose fall the mark of his ambition is.

Scene V.—Before the Walls of Athens.

Trumpets sound. Enter Alcibiades, and Forces

Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious town
Our terrible approach. [A Parley sound'ed

Enter Senators on the Walls.

Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the time
With all licentious measure, making your wills
The scope of justice: till now myself, and such
As slept within the shadow of your power,
Have wander'd with our travers'd arms, and breath'd
Our suffrance vainly. Now the time is flush,
When erouch'ing marrow, in the bearer strong,
Cries of itself, "No more!" now breathless wrong
Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease;
And pursy insolence shall break his wind
With fear, and horrid flight.

1 Sen. Noble, and young,
When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit,
Ere thou hadst power, or we had cause of fear,
We sent to thee, to give thy rage's balm,
To wipe out our ingratitude with loves
Above their quantity.

2 Sen. So did we woo
Transformed Timon to our city's love,
By humble message, and by promises' means:
We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
The common stroke of war.
These walls of ours
Were not erected by their hands, from whom
You have receiv'd your grief: nor are they such,
That these great towers, trophies, and schools should fall
For private faults in them.

Nor are they living,
Who were the motives that you first went out:
Shame, that they wanted cunning in excess
Hath broke their hearts. March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners spread:
By decimation, and a tithed death
(If thy revenges hunger for that food
Which nature loathes) take thou the destin'd tenth;
And by the hazard of the spotted die
Let die the spotted.

All have not offended;
For those that were, is't not severe to take,
On those that are, revenge? crimes, like lands,
Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman,
Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy rage:
Spare thy Athenian cradle, and those kin,
Which in the bluster of thy wrath must fall
With those that have offended. Like a shepherd,
Approach the fold, and call th' infected forth,
But kill not all together.

What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile,
Than hew to't with thy sword.

Set but thy foot
Against our rampir'd gates, and they shall ope,
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before,
To say, thou 'lt enter friendly.

Throw thy glove,
Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress,
And not as our confusion, all thy powers.
Shall make their harbour in our town, till we
Have seal'd thy full desire.

Then, there's my glove
Descend, and open your uncharged ports.
Those enemies of Timon's, and mine own,
Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof,
Fall, and no more; and,—to stone your fears
With my more noble meaning,—not a man
Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream
Of regular justice in your city's bounds,
But shall be remedied by your public laws
At heaviest answer.

Both. 'Tis most nobly spoken.

Alcib. Descend, and keep your words.

[The Senators descend, and open the Gates]

Enter a Soldier.

Sold. My noble general, Timon is dead,
Entomb'd upon the very hem of the sea;
And on his grave-stone this inscription, which
With wax I brought away, whose soft impression
Interprets for my poor ignorance.

Alcib. [Reads.] "Here lies a wretched corse, of wretched soul bereft:
Seek not my name. A plague consume you wicked caitiffs left! Here lie I Timon; who, alive, all living men did hate. Pass by, and curse thy fill; but pass, and stay not here thy gait." These well express in thee thy later spirits:
Though thou abhor'dst in us our human griefs,
Seem'dst our brain's flow, and those our droplets, which
From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye
On thy low grave on faults forgiven. Dead
Is noble Timon; of whose memory
Hereafter more.—Bring me into your city,
And I will use the olive with my sword:
Make war breed peace; make peace stint war; make each
Prescribe to other, as each other's leech.—

Let our drums strike.

Exeunt.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter Flavius, Mārellus, and a Body of Citizens.

Flav. Hence! home, you idle creatures, get you home.

Is this a holiday? What! know you not, Being mechanical, you ought not walk Upon a laboring day without the sign Of your profession?—Speak, what trade art thou?

1 Ėt. Why, sir, a carpenter.

Mar. Where is thy leather apron, and thy rule?

What dost thou with thy best apparel on?— You, sir; what trade are you?

2 Ėt. Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.

2 Ėt. A trade, sir; that, I hope, I may use with a safe conscience; which is, indeed, sir, a mender of bad soles.

Flav. What trade, thou knave? thou naughty knave, what trade?

2 Ėt. Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend you.

Mar. What mean'st thou by that? Mend me, thou saucy fellow?

2 Ėt. Why, sir, cobble you.

Flav. Thou art a cobbler, art thou?

2 Ėt. Truly, sir, all that I live by is, with the awl; I meddle with no tradesman's matters, nor women's matters, but with all. I am, indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes; when they are in great danger, I re-cover them. As proper men as ever trod upon neate-leather have gone upon my handywork.

Flav. But wherefore art not in thy shop to-day? Why dost thou lead these men about the streets?

2 Ėt. Truly, sir, to wear out their shoes, to get myself into more work. But, indeed, sir, we make holiday, to see Ėsær, and to rejoice in his triumph.

Mar. What conquest brings me home?

What tributaries follow him to Rome, To grace in captive bonds his chariot wheels?

You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things! O! you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome,

Knew you not Pompey? Many a time and oft Have you climb'd up to walls and battlements, To towers and windows, yea, to chimney-tops, Your infants in your arms, and there have sat The live-long day, with patient expectation, To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome:

And when you saw his chariot but appear, Have you not made an universal shout, That Tyber trembled underneath her banks,

To hear the replication of your sounds Made in her concave shores?

And do you now put on your best attire? And do you now pull out a holiday?

And do you now stretch flowers in his way, That comes in triumph over Pompey's blood? Be gone!

Run to your houses, fall upon your knees, Pray to the gods to intermit the plague That needs must light on this ingratitude.

Flav. Go, go, good countrymen; and for this fault Assemble all the poor men of your sort:

Draw them to Tyber banks, and weep your tears into the channel, till the lowest stream

Do kiss the most exalted shores of all. [Exeunt Citizens

See, wh'er their basest metal be not mov'd; They vanish tongue-tied in their guiltiness.

Go you down that way towards the Capitol; This way will I. Disrobe the images, If you do find them deck'd with ceremonies.

Mar. May we do so? You know, it is the feast of Lupercal.

Flav. It is no matter; let no images

697
Be lung with Caesar's trophies. I'll about,
And drive away the vulgar from the streets:
So do you too, where you perceive them thick.
These growing feathers pluck'd from Caesar's wing,
Will make him fly an ordinary pitch,
Who else would soar above the view of men,
And keep us all in servile fearfulness. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Public Place.

Enter, in Procession, with Trumpets and other Music. Caesar; Antony, for the course; Calphurnia, Portia, Decius, Cicero. Brutus, Cassius, and Casca; a Soothsayer, and a crowd following them.

Cas. Calphurnia.—

Cal. Here, my lord.

Cas. Stand you directly in Antonius' way,
When he doth run his course.—Antonius.

Ant. Caesar, my lord.

Cas. Forget not, in your speed, Antonius,
To touch Calphurnia; for our elders say,
The barren, touched in this holy chase,
Shake off their stolid curse.

Ant. I shall remember:
When Caesar says, 'Do this,' it is perform'd.

Cas. Set on; and leave no ceremony out. [Music. Sooth. Caesar!

Sooth. Caesar! Ha! who calls?

Cas. Bid every noise be still.—Peace yet again! [Music ceases.

Cas. Who is it in the press that calls on me?
I hear a tongue, shriller than all the music,
Cry, Caesar! Speak; Caesar is turn'd to hear.

Sooth. Beware the ides of March.

Cas. What man is that?

Brut. A soothsayer bids you beware the ides of March.

Cas. Set him before me; let me see his face.

Sooth. Fellow, come from the throng: look upon Casar.

Cas. What say'st thou to me now? Speak once again.

Sooth. Beware the ides of March.

Cas. He is a dreamer; let us leave him.—Pass. [Scene. Exeunt all but Brutus and Cassius.

Cas. Will you go to see the order of the course?

Brut. Not I.

Cas. I pray you, do.

Brut. I am not game some; I do lack some part
Of that quick spirit that is in Antony.
Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires;
I'll leave you.

Cas. Brutus, I do observe you now of late;
I have not from your eyes that gentleness,
And show of love, as I was wont to have;
You bear too stubborn and too strange a hand
Over your friend that loves you.

Bru. Cassius,
Be not deceiv'd: if I have veil'd my look,
I turn the trouble of my countenance
Merely upon myself. Vexed I am
Of late with passions of some difference,
Conceptions only proper to myself,
Which give some soil, perhaps, to my behaviours;
But let not therefore my good friends be griev'd,
(Among which number, Cassius, be you one)
Nor construe any farther my neglect,
Than that poor Brutus, with himself at war
Forgets the shows of love to other men.

* * * * *

Cas. Then Brutus, I have much mistook your passion;
By means whereof, this breast of mine hath buried
Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations.
Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face?

Brut. No, Cassius; for the eye sees not itself,
But by reflection, by some other things.

Cas. 'T is just;

And it is very much lamented, Brutus,
That you have no such mirrors, as will turn
Your hidden worthiness into your eye,
That you might see your shadow. I have heard,
Where many of the best respect in Rome,
(Except immortal Caesar) speaking of Brutus,
And groaning underneath this age's yoke,
Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes.

Brut. Into what dangers would you lead me, Cassius,
That you would have me seek into myself
For that which is not in me?

Cas. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepar'd to hear.

And, since you know you cannot see yourself
So well as by reflection, I your glass,
Will modestly discover to yourself
That of yourself, which you yet know not of.
And be not jealous on me, gentle Brutus:

Were I a common laughter, or did use
To state with ordinary oaths my love
To every new protestor; if you know
That I do fawn on men, and hug them hard,
And after scandal; or if you know
That I profess myself in banqueting,
To all the rout, then hold me dangerous.

Cas. What means this shouting? I do fear the people
Choose Caesar for their king.

Brut. What do you fear it?

Then, must I think you would not have it so.

Brut. I would not, Cassius; yet I love him well.
But wherefore do you hold me here so long?
What is it that you would impart to me?

If it be aught toward the general good,
Set honour in one eye, and death in the other,
And I will look on both indifferently:
For, let the gods so speed me, as I love
The name of honour more than I fear death.

Cas. I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus,
As well as I do know your outward favour.

Well, honour is the subject of my story,—
I cannot tell what you and other men
Think of this life; but for my single self
I had as lief not be, as live to be
In awe of such a thing as I myself.

I was born free as Caesar, so were you;
We both have fed as well, and we can both Endure the winter's cold as well as he:
For once, upon a raw and gusty day,
The troubled Tyber chafing with her shores,
Cassius said to me, "Dar'st thou, Cassius, now
Leap in with me into this angry flood,
And swim to yonder point?"—Upon the word,
Accorded as I was, I plunged in,
And bade him follow: so, indeed, he did.
The torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it
With lusty sinews, throwing it aside,
And stemming it, with hearts of controversy;
But ere we could arrive the point propos'd.
Cassius cried, "Help me, Cassius, or I sink!" I,
as JEnaeas, our great ancestor,
Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder
The old Anchises bear, so from the waves of Tyber
Did I the tired Caesar. And this man
Is now become a god; and Cassius is
A wretched creature, and must bend his body,
If Caesar carelessly but nod on him.
He had a fever when he was in Spain,
And, when the fit was on him, I did mark
How he did shake: 'tis true, this god did shake:
His coward lips did from their colour fly;
And that same eye, whose bend doth awe the world,
Did lose his lustre. I did hear him groan:
Ay, and that tongue of his, that bade the Romans
Mark him, and write his speeches in their books!
Alas! it cried, 'Give me some drink, Titinius,'
As a sick girl. Ye gods, it doth amaze me,
A man of such a feeble temper should
So get the start of the majestic world,
And bear the palm alone. [Shout, Flourish.]

Bru. Another general shout! I do believe that these applause are
For some new honours that are heaped on Caesar.
Cas. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world,
Like a Colossus: and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
To find ourselves dishonourable graves.
Men at some time are masters of their fates:
The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings.
Brutus, and Caesar: what should be in that Caesar?
Why should that name be sounded more than yours?
Write them together, yours is as fair a name;
Sound them, it doth become the mouth as well;
Weigh them, it is as heavy; conjure with them,
Brutus will start a spirit as soon as Caesar.
Now, in the names of all the gods at once,
Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed,
That he is grown so great? Age, thou art sham’d:
Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods.
When went there by an age, since the great flood,
But it was fam’d with more than with one man?
When could they say, till now, that talk’d of Rome,
That her wide walls1 encompass’d but one man?
Now is it Rome indeed, and room enough,
When there is in it but one only man.
O! you and I have heard our fathers say,
There was a Brutus once, that would have brook’d
Th’ eternal devil to keep his state in Rome,
As easily as a king.

Bru. That you do love me, I am nothing jealous;
What you would work me to, I have some aim;
How I have thought of this, and of these times,
I shall recount hereafter: for this present,
I would not, so with love I might entreat you,
Be any farther mov’d. What you have said,
will consider; what you have to say,
I will with patience hear, and find a time
Both meet to hear, and answer, such high things.
Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this:
Brutus had rather be a villager,
Than to gratulate himself a son of Rome
Under such hard conditions, as this time
Is like to lay upon us.

Cas. I am glad, that my weak words
Have struck but this much show of fire from Brutus.

Bru. The games are done, and Caesar is returning.

Re-enter Caesar, and his Train.

Cas As they pass by pluck Casca by the sleeve;
And he will, after his sour fashion, tell you
What hath proceeded worthy note to-day.

Bru. I will do so.—But, look you, Cassius;
The angry spot doth glow on Caesar’s brow,
And all the rest look like a children train.
Calphurnia’s cheek is pale; and Cicero
Looks with such ferret and such fiery eyes,
As we have seen him in the Capitol,
Being cross’d in conference by some senators.
Cas. Casca will tell us what the matter is.
Ant. Caesar.

Cas. Let me have men about me that are fat;
Sleek-headed men, and such as sleep o’ nights.
You’ll Cassius has a lean and hungry look;
He thinks too much: such men are dangerous.
Ant. Fear him not, Caesar, he’s not dangerous
He is a noble Roman, and well given.
Cas. ’Would he were fatter; but I fear him not:
Yet if my name were liable to fear,
I do not know the man I should avoid
So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much,
He is a great observer, and he looks
Quite through the deeds of men: he loves no plays,
As thou dost, Antony; he hears no music:
Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort,
As if he mock’d himself, and scorn’d his spirit.
That could be mov’d to smile at any thing.
Such men as he be never at heart’s ease,
Whilest they behold a greater than themselves,
And therefore are they very dangerous.
I rather tell thee what is to be fear’d,
Than what I fear, for always I am Caesar.
Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf,
And tell me truly what thou think’st of him.

Casca. You purl’d me by the cloak: would you speak with me?

Bru. Ay, Casca; tell us what hath chanc’d to-day.

That Caesar looks so sad.

Casca. Why you were with him, were you not?

Bru. I should not, then, ask Casca what hath chanc’d.

Casca. Why, there was a crown offered him: and,
Being offer’d him, he put it by with the back of his hand,
thus; and then the people fell a shouting.

Bru. What was the second noise for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Cas. They shouted thrice: what was the last cry for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Bru. Was the crown offer’d him thrice?

Casca. Ay, marry, was’t, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler than other; and at every putting by mine honest neighbours shouted.

Cas. Who offer’d him the crown?

Casca. Why, Antony.

Bru. Tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca.

Casca. I can as well be hanged, as tell the manner of it: it was mere foolery, I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown:—yet ’t was not a

1. walks: i. e. 2 these: i. e.
I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips, and receiving the bad air.

Cas. But, soft, I pray you. What! did Caesar swoon?

Casca. He fell down in the market-place, and foamed at mouth, and was speechless.

Bru. 'Tis very like he hath the falling-sickness.

Cas. No, Caesar hath it not; but you, and I, and honest Casca, we have the falling-sickness.

Casca. I know not what you mean by that; but, I am sure, Caesar fell down. If the rag-tag people did not clap him, and hiss him, according as he pleased, and displeased them, as they use to do the players in the theatre, I am no true man.

Bru. What said he, when he came unto himself?

Casca. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceived the common herd was glad he refused the crown, he plucked me ope his doublet, and offered them his throat to cut.—An I had been a man of any occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell amongst the rogues:—and so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, if he had done or said any thing amiss, he desired their worship to think it was his infirmity. Three or four wenchers, where I stood, cried, "Alas, good soul!"—and forgave him with all their hearts. But there's no heed to be taken of them: if Caesar had stabbed their mothers, they would have done no less.

Bru. And after that he came thus sad away?

Casca. Ay.

Casca. Did Cicero say any thing?

Casca. Ay, he spoke Greek.

Cas. To what effect?

Casca. Nay, an I tell you that, I'll ne'er look you in the face again: but those that understood him smiled at one another, and shook their heads; but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news, too: Marullus and Flavins, for pulling scarfs off Caesar's images, are put to silence. Fare you well: there was more foolery yet, if I could remember it.

Cas. Will you sup with me to-night, Casca?

Casca. No, I am promised forth.

Cas. Will you dine with me to-morrow?

Casca. Ay, if I be alive, and your mind hold, and your dinner worth the eating.

Cas. Good; I will expect you.

Casca. Do so. Farewell, both. [Exit Casca.]

Bru. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be. He was quick netted when he went to school.

Cas. So is he now, in execution: Of any bold or noble enterprise, However he puts on this tardy form. This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit, Which gives men stomach to digest his words With better appetite.

Bru. And so it is. For this time I will leave you: To-morrow, if you please to speak with me, I will come home to you; or, if you will, Come home to me, and I will wait for you.

Cas. I will do so:—till then, think of the world. [Exit Brutus.

[As if they came from several citizens, Writing, all tending to the great opinion That Rome holds of his name; wherein obscurely Caesar's ambition shall be glanced at: And after this, let Caesar set him sure, For we will shake him, or worse days endure. [Exit]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter, from opposite sides, CASCA, with his Sword drawn, and CICERO.

Cic. Good even, Casca. Brought you Caesar home? Why are you breathless, and why stare you so? Casca. Are not you mov'd, when all the sway of earth Shakes like a thing unfirm? O, Cicero! I have seen tempests, when the scolding winds Have riv'd the knotty oaks; and I have seen The ambitious ocean swell, and rage, and foam, To be exalted with the threatening clouds; But never till to-night, never till now, Did I go through a tempest dropping fire. Either there is a civil strife in heaven, Or else the world, too saucy with the gods, Inseems them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you any thing more wonderful? Casca. A common slave (you know him well by sight Held up his left hand, which did flame, and burn Like twenty torches join'd; and yet his hand, Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscor'd.) Besides, (I have not since put up my sword) Against the Capitol I met a lion, Who glar'd upon me, and went surly by, Without annoying me; and there were drawn Upon a heap a hundred ghostly women, Transformed with their fear, who swore they saw Men, all in fire, walk up and down the streets, And yesterday the bird of night did sit, Even at noon-day, upon the market-place, Hooting, and shrieking. When these prodigies Do so conjointly meet, let not men say, "These are their seasons,—they are natural;" For, I believe, they are portentous things Unto the climate that they point upon.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time: But men may construe things after their fashion, Clean from the purpose of the things themselves. Comes Caesar to the Capitol to-morrow? Casca. He doth; for he did bid Antonius Send word to you, he would be there to-morrow. Cic. Good night then, Caesar: this disturbed sky Is not to walk in.

Casca. Farewell, Cicero. [Exit Cicero]

Enter Cassius.

Cas. Who's there?

Casca. A Roman.

Cas. Cassca, by your voice Casca. Your ear is good. Cassins, what night is this? Cas. A very pleasing night to honest men. Cassia. Who ever knew the heavens menace so? Cas. Those that have known the earth so full of faults For my part, have walk'd about the streets, Submitting me unto the perilous night; And, thus unbraided, Cassia, as you see, Have bar'd my bosom to the thunder-stone: And, when the cross blue lightning seem'd to open The breast of heaven, I did present myself Even in the aim and very flash of it.

Casca. But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?

It is the part of men to fear and tremble,
When the most mighty gods by tokens send
Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.
Cas. You are dull, Casca; and those sparks of life,
That should be in a Roman, you do want,
Or else you use not. You look pale, and gaze,
And put on fear, and cast yourself in wonder,
To see the strange impatience of the heavens;
But if you would consider the true cause,
Why all these fires, why all these glowing ghosts,
Why birds, and beasts, from quality and kind;
Why old men, fools, and children calculate;
Why all these things change from their ordinance,
Then natures, and pre-formed faculties,
To monstrous quality; why, you shall find,
That heaven hath infused them with these spirits,
To make them instruments of fear, and warning,
Unto some monstrous state.
Now could I, Casca, name to thee a man
Most like this dreadful night;
That thunders, lightenings, opens graves, and roars
As doth the lion in the Capitol:
A man no mightier than thyself, or me,
In personal action; yet prodigious grown,
And fearful, as these strange irritations are.
Casca. 'Tis Caesar that you mean; is it not, Cassius?
Cas. Let it be who it is: for Romans now
Have threescore and limbs like to their ancestors,
But, woe the while! our fathers' minds are dead,
And we are govern'd with our mothers' spirits;
Our yoke and suffrance show us womanish.
Casca. Indeed, they say, the senators to-morrow
Mean to establish Caesar as a king:
And he shall wear his crown by sea, and land,
In every place, save here in Italy.
Cas. I know where I will wear this dagger then;
Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius.
Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most strong;
Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeating:
Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit;
But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.
If I know this, know all the world besides,
That part of tyranny, that I do bear,
I can shake off at pleasure.
Casca. So can I:
So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity.
Cas. And why should Caesar be a tyrant, then?
Poor man! I know, he would not be a wolf,
But that he sees the Romans are but sheep:
He were no lion, were not Romans hinds.
Those that with haste will make a mighty fire,
Begin it with weak strawds: what trash is Rome,
What rubbish, and what o'faff, when it serves
For the base matter to illuminate
So vile a thing as Caesar?—But, O grief!

Where hast thou led me? I, perhaps, speak this Before a willing bondman: then I know
My answer must be made; but I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent.
Casca. You speak to Casca; and to such a man,
That is no feeing tell-tale. Hold, my hand:
Be factious for redress of all these griefs,
And I will set this foot of mine as far,
As who goes farthest.
Cas. There's a bargain made.
Now know you, Cassia, I have move'd already
Some certain of the noblest-minded Romans,
To undergo with me an enterprise
Of honourable, dangerous consequence;
And I do know, by this, they stay for me
In Pompey's porch: for now, this fearful night,
There is no stir, or walking in the streets,
And the complexion of the element
In favour's like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible.

Enter Cinna.
Cinna. Stand close awhile, for here comes one in haste
Cas. 'Tis Cinna, I do know him by his gait:
He is a friend.—Cinna, where haste you so?
Cinna. To find out you. Who's that? Metellus Cimber.
Cas. No, it is Cassia; one incorporate
To our attempts. Am I not stay'd for, Cinna?
Cinna. I am glad on't. What a fearful night is this:
There's two or three of us have seen strange sights.
Cas. Am I not stay'd for? Tell me.
Cinna. Yes, you are.
Cas. O, Cassius! if you could but win the noble Brutus
To our party—
Cas. Be you content. Good Cinna, take this paper.
And look you lay it in the praetor's chair.
Where Brutus may but find it, and throw this
In at his window; set this up with wax
Upon old Brutus' statue: all this done.
Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find us.
Is Decius Brutus, and Trebonius, there?
Cinna. All but Metellus Cimber, and he's gone
To seek you at your house. Well, I will hie,
And so bestow these papers as you bade me.
Cas. That done, repair to Pompey's theatre.
[Exit Cinna.

Come, Cassia, you and I will yet, ere day,
See Brutus at his house: there parts of him
Is ours already: and the man entire,
Upon the next encounter, yields him ours.
Casca. O! he sits high in all the people's hearts;
And that which would appear offence in us,
His countenance, like richest alchemy,
Will change to virtue, and to worthiness.
Casca. Him, and his worth, and our great need of him
You have right well conceived. Let us go,
For it is after midnight; and, ere day,
We will awake him, and be sure of him.
[Exeunt.

ACT II.
Luc. I will, my lord. [Exit.

Brutus. It must be by his death; and, for my part, I know no personal cause to spur him; but for the general, he would be crown'd: how that might change his nature, there's the question. It is the bright day that brings forth the adder, and that craves wary walking. Crown him?—that; and then, I grant, we put a sting in him, that at his will he may do danger with. This abuse of greatness is, when it disjoins Remorse from power; and, to speak truth of Caesar, I have not known when his affections sway'd more than his reason. But 'tis a common proof, that lowliness is young ambition's ladder, Whereon the climber-upward turns his face; But when he once attains the upmost round, He then unto the ladder turns his back. Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees By which he did ascend. So Caesar may:

Then, lest he may, prevent: and, since the quarrel Will bear no colour for the thing he is, Fashion it thus; that what he is, augmented, Would run to these, and those extremities; And therefore think him as a serpent's egg, Which, hatch'd, would, as his kind, grow mischievous, And kill him in the shell.

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. The taper burneth in your closet, sir. Searching the window for a flint, I found This paper, thus seal'd up; and, I am sure, It did not lie there when I went to bed.

[Give him the paper. Brutus. Get you to bed again; it is not day. Is not to-morrow, boy, the ides of March?

Luc. I know not, sir.

Brutus. Look in the calendar, and bring me word.

Luc. I will, sir. [Exit. Brutus. The exhalations, whizzing in the air, Give so much light that I may read by them.

"Brutus, thou sleepest: awake, and see thyself. Shall Rome, &c. Speak, strike, redress! Brutus, thou sleepest: awake!—Such instigations have been often dropp'd Where I have took them up. "Shall Rome, &c. Thus must I piece it out; Shall Rome stand under one man's awe? What! Rome? My ancestors did from the streets of Rome The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a king. 'Speak, strike, redress!'—An I entreated To speak, and strike? O Rome! I make thee promise, If the redress will follow, then receiv'st Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!"

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fourteen days. [Knocking within.

Brutus. 'Tis good. Go to the gate: somebody knocks. [Exit Lucius.

Since Cassius first did whet me against Caesar, I have not slept. Between the acting of a dreadful thing, And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma, or a hideous dream: The Genius, and the mortal instruments, Are then in council; and the state of a man, Like to a little kingdom, suffers then The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, 'tis your brother Cassius at the door, Who doth desire to see you.

Brutus. Is he alone?

Luc. No, sir, there are more with him.

Brutus. Do you know them?

Luc. No, sir; their hats are pluck'd about their ears, And half their faces buried in their cloaks, That by no means I may discover them By any mark of favour.

Brutus. Let them enter. [Exit Lucius

They are the faction. O conspiracy! Shall we杜thou to show thy dangerous brow by night, When evils are most free? O! then, by day— Where will thou find a cavern dark enough To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none, conspiracy, Hide it in smiles, and affability: For if thou put'st thy native semblance on, Not Erebus itself were dim enough To hide thee from prevention.

Enter Cassius, Casca, Decius, Cinna, Metellus Cimber, and Trebonius.

Cas. I think we are too bold upon your rest: Good morrow, Brutus; do we trouble you?

Brutus. I have been up this hour; awake, all night. Know I these men that come along with you?

Cas. Yes, every man of them; and no man here, But honours you: and every one doth wish, You had but that opinion of yourself, Which every noble Roman bears of you, This is Trebonius.

Brutus. He is welcome hither.

Cas. This Decius Brutus.

Brutus. He is welcome too.

Cas. This Cassius; this Cinna;
And this Metellus Cimber.

They are all welcome. What watchful cares do interpose themselves Betwixt your eyes and night?

Cas. Shall I entreat a word? [They whisper. Decius. Here lies the east: doth not the day break here?

Casius. No. Cinna. O, I pardon, sir, it doth; and yond' grey lines, That rest the clouds, are messengers of day. Cassius. You shall confess that you are both deceiv'd Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises; Which is a great way growing on the south, Weighing the youthful season of the year. Some two months hence, up higher toward the north He first presents his fire; and the high east Stands, as the Capitol, directly here.

Brutus. Give me your hands all over, one by one. [He takes their hands.

Cas. And let us swear our resolution. Brutus. No, not an oath: if not the face of men, The sufferance of our souls, the time's abuse, If these be motives weak, break off betimes, And every man hence to his idle bed; So let high-sighted tyranny range on, Till each man drop by lottery. But if these, As I am sure they do, bear fire enough To kindle cowards, and to steel with valour The melting spirits of women; then, countrymen, What need we any spur, but our own cause, To prick us to redress? what other sound Than secret Romans, that have spoke the word, And will not palter? what other oath, Than honesty to honesty engag'd? That this shall be, or we will fall for it?

JULIUS CAESAR.

Scene I.

Swear priests, and cowards, and men cautious, Old feeble carrions, and such suffering souls That welcome wrongs: unto bad causes swear Such creatures as men doubt; but do not stain The even virtue of our enterprise, Nor th' insuppressible metre of our spirits, To think that, or our cause, or our performance, Did need an oath, when every drop of blood, That every Roman bears, and nobly bears, Is guilty of a several bastardy, If he do break the smallest particle Of any promise that hath pass'd from him. Cas. But what of Cicero? Shall we sound him? I think he will stand very strong with us.

Cas. Let us not leave him out.

Cin. No, by no means.

Met. O! let us have him; for his silver hairs Will purchase us a good opinion, And buy men's voices to commend our deeds: It shall be said, his judgment rul'd our hands; Our youths, and wildness, shall no whit appear, But all be buried in his gravity.

Bru. O! name him not; let us not break with him, For he will never follow any thing That other men begin.

Cas. Then, leave him out.

Cas. Indeed he is not fit.

Dec. Shall no man else be touch'd, but only Caesar? Cas. Decius, well urg'd.—I think it is not meet, Mark Antony, so well belov'd of Caesar, Should outlive Caesar: we shall find of him A shrewd contriver; and, you know, his means, If he improve them, may well stretch so far As to annoy us all; which to prevent, Let Antony and Caesar fall together.

Bru. Our course will seem too bloody, Caius Cassius, To cut the head off, and then hack the limbs, Like wrath in death, and envy' afterwards; For Antony is but a limb of Caesar. Let us be sacrificers, but not butchers, Cassius. We all stand up against the spirit of Caesar, And in the spirit of men there is no blood: O, that we then could come by Caesar's spirit, And not dismember Caesar! But, alas! Caesar must bleed for it. And, gentle friends, Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully; Let's crave him as a dish fit for the gods, Not hew him as a carcase fit for hounds. And let our hearts, as subtle masters do, Stir up their servants to an act of rage, And after seem to chide 'em. This shall mark* Our purpose necessary, and not envious; Which so appearing to the common eyes, We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers. And for Mark Antony, think not of him, For he can do no more than Caesar's arm, When Caesar's head is off.

Cas. Yet I fear him: For in the ingraven love he bears to Caesar—

Bru. Alas! good Cassius, do not think of him. If he love Caesar, all that he can do Is to himself: take thought, and die for Caesar; And that were much he should: for he is given To sports, to wildness, and much company.

Treb. There is no fear in him; let him not die, For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter. [Clock strikes.

Bru. Peace! count the clock.

Cas. The clock hath stricken three.

Treb. 'Tis time to part.

Cas. But it is doubtful yet.

Whether Caesar will come forth to-day, or no; For he is superstitious grown of late, Quite from the main opinion he held once Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies. It may be, these apparent prodigies, The unaccustomed terror of this night, And the persuasion of his augurers, May hold him from the Capitol to-day.

Dec. Never fear that: if he be so resold'd, I can oversway him; for he loves to hear, That unicorns may be betrayed with trees, And bears with glasses, elephants with holes, Lions with toils, and men with flatterers; But, when I tell him, he hates flatterers. He says, he does, being then most flattered. Let me work; For I can give his humour the true bent, And I will bring him to the Capitol.

Cas. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch him

Bru. By the eighth hour: is that the uttermost?

Cin. Be that the uttermost, and fail not then.

Met. Caius Ligarius doth bear Caesar hard, Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey: I wonder, none of you have thought of him.

Bru. Now, good Metellus, go along by him. He loves me well, and I have given him reasons, Send him but hither, and I'll fashion him.

Cas. The morning comes upon's: we'll leave you Brutus— And, friends, disperse yourselves; but all remember What you have said, and show yourselves true Romans.

Bru. Good gentlemen, look fresh and merry. Let not our looks put on our purposes; But bear it as our Roman actors do, With undr'd spirits, and formal constancy: And so, good-morrow to you every one.

Boy! Lucius!—Fast asleep. [Exeunt all but Brutus. Enjoy the heavy honey-dew^ of slumber: Thou hast no figures, nor no fantasies, Which busy care draws in the brains of men; Therefore, thou sleep'st so sound.

Enter Portia.

Por. Brutus, my lord!

Bru. Portia, what mean you? Wherefore rise you now? It is not for your health thus to commit Your weak condition to the raw cold morning.

Por. Nor for yours neither. You have ungently Stole from my bed: and yesternight, at supper, You suddenly arose, and walk'd about, Musing and sighing with your arms across; And when I ask'd you what the matter was, You stared upon me with ungentle looks. I urg'd you farther; then, you scratch'd your head, And too impatiently stamp'd with your foot: Yet I insisted, yet you answer'd not; But, with an angry wak'fure of your hand, Gave sign for me to leave you. So I did, Fearing to strengthen that impatience. Which seem'd too much entwined: and, withal, Hoping it was but an effect of humour, Which sometime hath his hour with every man. It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep; And, could it work so much upon your shape, As it hath much prevait'd on your condition, I should not know you, Brutus. Dear my lord, Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.

Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all
Brave son, deriv’d from honourable loins,
Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjur’d up
My mortified spirit. Now bid me run,
And I will strive with things impossible;
Yea, get the better of them. What’s to do?

Bru. A piece of work that will make sick men whole
Lig. But are not some whole that we must make sick?

Bru. That must we also. What it is, my Caius,
I shall unfold to thee, as we are going,
To whom it must be done.

Lig. Set on your foot,
And with a heart new-ri’d I follow you,
To do I know not what; but it sufficeth,
That Brutus leads me on.

Bru. Follow me, then. [Exeunt

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in Caesar’s Palace
Thunder and Lightning. Enter Caesar, in his Night-gown.

Cas. Nor heaven, nor earth, have been at peace to-night:
Thrice hath Calphurnia in her sleep cried out,
“Help, ho! They murder Caesar!”—Who’s within?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord.

Cas. Go bid the priests do present sacrifice,
And bring me their opinions of success.

Serv. I will, my lord.

Enter CALPHURNIA.

Cal. What mean you, Caesar? Think you to walk forth?
You shall not stir out of your house to-day.
Cas. Caesar shall forth: the things that threaten’d me,
Ne’er look’d but on my back; when they shall see
The face of Caesar, they are vanished.

Cas. Caesar, I never stood on ceremonies,
Yet now they fright me. There is one within,
Besides the things that we have heard and seen,
Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch.
A lioness hath whelped in the streets;
And graves have yawn’d, and yield’d up their dead;
Fierce fiery warriors fight upon the clouds
In ranks, and squadrons, and right form of war,
Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol:
The noise of battle hurtled in the air;
Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan;
And ghosts did shriek, and squeal about the streets.
O Caesar! these things are beyond all use,
And I do fear them.

Cas. What can be avoided,
Whose end is purpose’d by the mighty gods?
Yet Caesar shall go forth; for these predictions
Are to the world in general, as to Caesar.

Cal. When beggars die there are no comets seen
The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes
Cas. Cowards die many times before their deaths,
The valiant never taste of death but once.
Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
It seems to me most strange that men should fear,
Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come, when it will come.

Re-enter a Servant.

Serv. They would not have you to stir forth to-day.
Plucking the entrails of an offering forth,
They could not find a heart within the beast.
Cas. The gods do this in shame of cowardice:
Cesar should be a beast without a heart,
If he should stay at home to-day for fear
Enter Publius. Brutus, Ligarius, Metellus, Casca, Trebonius, and Cinna.

And look where Publius is come to fetch me.

Pub. Good morrow, Caesar.

Cas. Welcome, Publius:—

What, Brutus. are you stirr'd so early too?—

Good-morrow, Caesar.—Caius Ligarius,

Cæsar was ne'er so much your enemy,

As that same ague which hath made you lean.—

What is 't o'clock?

Brut. Caesar, 'tis stricken eight.

Cas. I thank you for your pains and courtesy.

Enter Antony.

See! Antony, that reveals long o' nights,

Is notwithstanding up.—Good morrow, Antony.

Ant. So to most noble Cæsar.

Cas. Bid them prepare within.

I am to blame to be thus waited for.—

Now, Cinna:—Now, Metellus:—What, Trebonius:—

I have an hour's talk in store for you.

Remember that you call on me to-day:

Be near me, that I may remember you.

Trebonius. Caesar, I will:—and so near will I be, [Aside]

That your best friends shall wish I had been farther.

Cas. Good friends, go in; and taste some wine with me,

And, we, like friends, will straightway go together.

Brut. That every like is not the same. O Cæsar!! [Aside]

The heart of Brutus yearns to think upon. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street near the Capitol.

Enter Artémidorus, reading a Paper.

Art. "Cæsar, beware of Brutus; take heed of Cassius; come not near Cæsar; have an eye to Cinna, trust not Trebonius; mark well Metellus Cimber; Decius Brutus loves thee not; thou hast wronged Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Cæsar. If thou be'st not immortal; look about you; security gives way to conspiracy. The mighty gods defend thee! Thy lover,"

"Artémidorus."

Here will I stand till Cæsar pass along,

And as a suitor will I give him this,

My heart laments that virtue cannot live

Out of the teeth of emulation.

If thou read this, O Cæsar! thou may'st live;

If not, the fates with traitors do contrive. [Exit."

SCENE IV.—The Same. Another Part of the same Street, before the House of Brutus.

Enter Portia and Lucius.

Por. I pr'ythee, boy, run to the senate-house:—

Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone.

Why dost thou stay?

Luc. To know my errand, madam.

Por. I would have had thee there, and here again.

 Ere I can tell thee what thou should'st do there.—

O constancy! be strong upon my side:

Set a huge mountain 'twixt my heart and tongue!

I have a man's mind, but a woman's might.

How hard it is for women to keep counsel!—

Art thou here yet?

Luc. Madam, what should I do?

Run to the Capitol, and nothing else,

And so return to you, and nothing else?

Por. Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord look well.

For he went sickly forth:— and take good note,

What Cæsar doth, what suitors press to him.

Hark, boy! what noise is that?

Luc. I hear none, madam.
ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Same. The Capitol; the Senate sitting.

A crowd of People in the Street leading to the Capitol; among them ARTEMIDORUS, and the Soothsayer.
Flourish. Enter CAESAR, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIMUS, METELLUS, TREBONIUS, CINNA, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POPILSUS, PUBlius, and others.

CAESAR. The ide of March are come.
Sooth. Ay, Caesar; but not gone.

Art. Hail, Caesar! Read this schedule.

Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to o'er-read,

At your best leisure, his humble suit.

Art. O. Caesar! read mine first; for mine's a suit

That touches Caesar nearer. Read it, great Caesar.

CASCA. That touches us? ourself shall be last serv'd.
Art. Delay not, Caesar; read it instantly.

Cas. What! is the fellow mad?

Pub. Sirrah, give place.

Cas. What! urge you your petitions in the street?

Come to the Capitol.

CAESAR enters the Capitol, the rest following. All the Senators rise.

Pop. I wish, your enterprise to-day may thrive.

Cas. What enterprise, Popilius?

Pop. Fare you well. [Advances to Caesar.

Bru. What said Popilius Lena?

Cas. He wish'd, to-day our enterprise might thrive.

I fear, our purpose is discovered.

Bru. Look, how he makes to Caesar: mark him.

Cas. Cassius, be sudden, for we fear prevention.—

Brutus, what shall be done? If this be known,

Cassius or Caesar never shall turn back,

For I will slay myself.

Bru. Cassius, be constant:

Popilius Lena speaks not of our purposes;

For, look, he smiles, and Caesar doth not change.

Cas. Trebonius knows his time; for, look you, Brutus,

He draws Mark Antony out of the way.

[Exit Antony and Trebonius. Caesar and the Senators take their Seats.

Dec. Where is Metellus Cimber? Let him go, And presently prefer his suit to Caesar.

Bru. He is address'd; press near, and second him.

Cas. Cassius, you are the first that rears your hand.

Por. Why, know'st thou any harm's intended towards him?

Sooth. None that I know will be, much that I fear may chance.

Good morrow to you. Here the street is narrow:

The throng that follows Caesar at the heels,

Of senators, of preators, common suitors,

Will crowd a feeble man almost to death:

I'll get me to a place more void, and there

Speak to great Caesar as he comes along.

Por. I must go in. — Ah me! how weak a thing

The heart of woman is. O Brutus!

The heavens speed thee in thine enterprise!

Sure, the boy heard me: — Brutus hath a suit,

That Caesar will not grant. — O! I grow faint.

Run, Lucius, and commend me to my lord;

Say, I am merry: come to me again,

And bring me word what he doth say to thee. [Exit

Casca. Are we all ready?

Cas. What is now amiss?

That Caesar and his senate must redress?

Met. Most high, most mighty, and most puissant Caesar,

Metellus Cimber throws before thy seat

An humble heart.— [Kneeling

Cas. I must prevent thee, Cimber

These crouchings, and these lowly courtesies,

Might fire the blood of ordinary men,

And turn pre-ordinance, and first decree,

Into the law of children. Be not fond,

To think that Caesar bears such rebel blood,

That will be thaw'd from the true quality

With which meltest fools; I mean, sweet words

Low-crouched courtesies, and base spaniel fawning.

Thy brother by decree is banished:

If thou dost bend, and pray, and fawn for him,

I spurn thee like a cur out of my way.

Know, Caesar doth not wrong; nor without cause

Will he be satisfied.

Met. Is there no voice, more worthy than my own,

To sound more sweetly in great Caesar's ear,

For the repealing of my banish'd brother?

Bru. I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery, Caesar;

Desiring thee, that Publius Cimber may

Have an immediate freedom of repeal.

Cas. What, Brutus!

Cas. Pardon, Caesar; Caesar, pardon;

As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall,

To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber.

Cas. I could be well mov'd, if I were as you;

If I could pray to move, prayers would move me;

But I am constant as the northern star,

Of whose true, fix'd, and resting quality,

There is no fellow in the firmament.

The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks,

They are all fire, and every one doth shine;

But there's but one in all doth hold his place.

So, in the world: 'tis furnish'd well with men,

And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive;

Yet in the number I do know but one

That unassailable holds on his rank,

Unshak'd of motion: and, that I am he,

Let me a little show it, even in this,

That I was constant Cimber should be banish'd.
E.L. Davenport.
JULIUS CAESAR.

707

And constant do remain to keep him so.

Cin. O Cesar!—

Ces. Hence! Wilt thou lift up Olympus?

Dec. Great Caesar,—

Ces. Doth not Brutus bootless kneel?

Cas. Speak, hands, for me.

[Caesar stabs Caesar in the Neck. Caesar catches hold of his Arm. He is then stabbed by several other Conspirators, and last by Marcus Brutus.

Cas. Et tu, Brute?—Then fall, Caesar.

[Dies. The Senators and People retire in confusion.

Cin. Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead!—

Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets.

Cas. Some to the common pulpit, and cry out, "Liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement!"

Bru. People, and senators! be not affrighted.

Fly not; stand still,—ambition's debt is paid.

Cas. Go to the pulpit, Brutus.

Dec. And Cassius too.

Bru. Where's Publius?

Cin. Here, quite confounded with this mutiny.

Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Caesar's should chance—

Bru. Talk not of standing.—Publius, good cheer:

There is no harm intended to your person,

Nor to no Roman else; so tell them, Publius.

Cas. And leave us, Publius; lest that the people,

Rushing on us, should do your age some mischief.

Bru. Do so:—and let no man abide this deed,

But we, the doors.

Re-enter Trobius.

Cas. Where's Antony?

Tre. Fled to his house amaz'd.

Men, wives, and children, stare, cry out, and run,

As it were doomsday.

Bru. Fates, we will know your pleasures,—

That we shall die, we know; 'tis but the time,

And drawing days out, that men stand upon.

Casca. Why, he that cuts off twenty years of life,

Cuts off so many years of fearing death.

Bru. Grant that, and then is death a benefit:

So are we Caesar's friends, that have abridg'd

His time of fearing death.—Stoop, Romans, stoop,

And let us bathe our hands in Caesar's blood

Up to the eyebrows, and besmear our swords;

Then walk we forth, even to the market-place,

And, waving our red weapons o'er our heads,

Let's all cry, Peace! Freedom! and Liberty!

Cas. Stoop then, and wash.—How many ages hence,

Shall this our lofty scene be act'd over,

In states unborn, and accents yet unknown?

Bru. How many times shall Caesar bleed in sport,

Then now on Pompey's basis lies alone,

No worthier than the dust?

Cas. So oft as that shall be,

So often shall the knot of us be call'd

The men that gave their country liberty.

Dec. What! shall we forth?

Cas. Ay, every man away:

Brutus shall lead; and we will grace his heels

With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel;—

Kneeling.

Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down,

And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say.

Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest;

Cesar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving:

But, oh! I love Brutus, and I honour him;

Say, I fear'd Caesar, honour'd him, and lov'd him.

If Brutus will vouchsafe, that Antony

May safely come to him, and be resolve'd,

How Caesar hath deserve'd to lie in death,

Mark Antony shall not love Caesar dead;

So well as Brutus living; but will follow

The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus,

Thorough the hazards of this untro'd state,

With all true faith. So says my master Antony. [Rises

Bru. Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman.

I never thought him worse.

Tell him, so please him come unto this place,

He shall be satisfied; and, by my honour,

Depart untouch'd.

Serv. I'll fetch him presently. [Exit Servant.

Bru. I know, that we shall have him well to friend,

Cas. I wish, we may; but yet have I a mind,

That fears him much, and my misgiving still

Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Enter Antony.

Bru. But here comes Antony.—Welcome, Mark Antony.

Ant. O mighty Caesar! dost thou lie so low?

Kneeling over the Body.

Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils,

Shrunken to this little measure? Fare thee well.—

I know not, gentlemen, what you intend,

Rising.

Who else must be let blood, who else is rank:

If I myself, there is no hour so fit

As Caesar's death hour:—nor no instrument

Of half that worth, as those your swords, made rich

With the most noble blood of all this world.

I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard,

Now, whilst your purpled hands do rack and smoke,

Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years,

I shall not find myself so apt to die;

No place will please me so, no mean of death,

As here by Caesar, and by you cut off,

The choice and master spirits of this age.

Bru. O Antony! beg not your death of us.

Though now we must appear bloody and cruel,

As, by our hands, and this our present act,

You see we do; yet see you but our hands,

And this the bleeding business they have done.

Our hearts you see not: they are pitiful;

And pity to the general wrongs of Rome

[As fire drives out fire, so pity, pity]

Hath done this deed on Caesar. 'For your part,

To you our swords have leaden points, Mark Antony.

Our arms, in strength of welcome, and our hearts,

Of brothers' temper, do receive you in

With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence.

Cas. Your voice shall be as strong as any man's,

In the disposing of new dignities.

Bru. Only be patient, till we have appear'd

The multitude, beside themselves with fear,

And then we will deliver you the cause,

Why I, that did love Caesar when I struck him,

Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom

Let each man render me his bloody hand:

[One after the other.

First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you:—

Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand:—

Now, Decius Brutus, yours:—now yours, Metellus:—

Yours, Cinna:—and, my valiant Cassia, yours:—

Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebonius.

Gentlemen all,—alas! what shall I say?
My credit now stands on such slippery ground,
That one of two bad ways you must conceit me,
Either a coward, or a flatterer.—

That I did love thee, Caesar! 'Tis true:

[Turning to the Body, and bending over it.]

It, then, thy spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee, dearer than thy death,
To see thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,
Most noble! in the presence of thy corpse?

Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds,
Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood,
It would become me better, than to close
In terms of friendship with thine enemies.

Pardon me, Julius! Here was thou bay'd, brave hart;

Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters stand,
Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy death.
O world! thou wast the forest to this hart;
And this, indeed, O world! the heart of thee.—
How like a deer, stricken by many princes,

Dost thou here lie?

Cas. Mark Antony!

Ant. Pardon me, Caius Cassius:
The enemies of Caesar shall say this;
Then, in a friend it is cold modesty.

Cas. I blame you not for praising Caesar so,
But what compact mean you to have with us?
Will you be prick'd in number of our friends,
Or shall we on, and not depend on you?

Ant. Therefore I took your hands; but was, indeed,
Sway'd from the point by looking down on Caesar.
Friends am I with you all, and love you all,
Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons,
Why, and wherein, Caesar was dangerous.

Bru. Or else were this a savage spectacle.

Our reasons are so full of good regard,
That were you, Antony, the son of Caesar,
You should be satisfied.

Ant. That's all I seek:
And am moreover suitor, that I may
Produce his body to the market-place;
And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend,
Speak in the order of his funeral.

Bru. You shall, Mark Antony.

That Antony speak in his funeral,
Know you how much the people may be mov'd
By that which he will utter?

Bru. By your pardon; I will myself into the pulpit first,
And show the reason of our Caesar's death:
What Antony shall speak, I will protest
He speaks by leave and by permission;
And that we are contented, Caesar shall
Have all due rites, and lawful ceremonies.
It shall advantage more, than do us wrong.

Cas. I know not what may fall: I like it not.

Bru. Mark Antony, here, take you Caesar's body
You shall not in your funeral speech blame us,
But speak all good you can devise of Caesar;
And say, you do't by our permission,
Else shall you not have any hand at all
About his funeral: and you shall speak
In the same pulpit where I am going,
After my speech in ended.

Ant. I do desire no more.

Bru. Prepare the body, then, and follow us.  [Exeunt all but Antony

Ant. O! pardon me, thou bleeding piece of earth,
That I am meek and gentle with these butchers.
Thou art the ruins of the noblest man,
That ever lived in the tide of times.
Woe to the hand that shed this costly blood!
Over thy wounds now do I proplyse.
(Which, like dumb mouths, do ope their ruby lips,
To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue)
A curse shall light upon the loins of men;
Domestic fury, and fierce civil strife,
Shall cumber all the parts of Italy:
Blood and destruction shall be so in use,
And dreadful objects so familiar,
That mothers shall but smile, when they behold
Their infants quarter'd with the hands of war,
All pity chok'd with custom of fell deeds;
And Caesar's spirit, ranging for revenge,
With Até by his side, come hot from hell,
Shall in these confines, with a monarch's voice,
Cry "Havock!" and let slip the dogs of war,
That this foul deed shall swell above the earth
With carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter a Servant.

You serve Octavius Cæsar, do you not?

Serv. I do, Mark Antony.

Ant. Cæsar did write for him to come to Rome.

Serv. He did receive his letters, and is coming,
And bid me say to you by word of mouth,——

O Cæsar!  [Seeing the Body.

Ant. Thy heart is big, get thee apart and weep.
Passion. I see, is catching; for mine eyes,
Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine,
Began to water. Is thy master coming?

Serv. He lies to-morrow within seven leagues of Rome.

Ant. Post back with speed, and tell him what hath chanc'd.

Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
No Rome of safety for Octavius yet:
His hence, and tell him so. Yet, stay a while;
Thou shalt not back, till I have borne this corpse
Into the market-place: there shall I try,
In my oration, how the people take
The cruel issue of these bloody men;
According to the which, thou shalt discourse
To young Octavius of the state of things.

Lend me your hand.  [Exeunt, with Caesar's Body

SCENE II.—The Same. The Forum.

Enter Bruts and Cassius, and a throng of Citizens.

Cit. We will be satisfied: let us be satisfied.

Bru. Then follow me, and give me audience, friends——

Cassius, you go into the other street,
And part the numbers——

Those that will hear me speak, let them stay here;
Those that will follow Cassius, go with him;
And public reasons shall be rendered
Of Caesar's death.

1 Cit. I will hear Brutus speak.

2 Cit. I will hear Cassius; and compare their reasons,
When severally we hear them rendered.

[Exit Cassius, with some of the Citizens

Bru. Brutus goes into the Rostrum.

3 Cit. The noble Brutus is ascended. Silence!

Bru. Be patient till the last.

Romans, countrymen, and lovers! hear me for my cause, and be silent that you may hear: believe me for mine honour, and have respect to mine honour; that you may believe. censure me in your wisdom, and awake your senses that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Cæsar's, to him I say, that Brutus' love to Cæsar was
